Q. What arrangements, if any, did you make with him in regard to board? A. My conversation with him was a preliminary discussion in Buffalo, where I met him by appointment, and I told him that we would work out a contract with him to fill his bags with his brand of plaster, to load mixed cars for him containing various products, including board; and made arrangements, as I recall it, wherein we took in a car of his own lime which we stored and reloaded for him so that he would have the advantage of mixed car shipments of his own brand of material. I told him that we could not give him a discount or a commission on board, gypsum board and gypsum lath, that there was not sufficient margin in it to warrant that.

Q. Did you know at that time what Mr. Spease's prior source of board was? A. I did after I had visited 5138 with him, he told me what it was. I don't know that I knew before unless it had developed in a telephone conversation before the actual meeting. I am not clear on that.

Q. Where had he been buying board before? A. From the American Gypsum Company.

Q. Was he then, did you understand, able to buy board further from them?

Mr. Bromley: I object to this as incompetent because hearsay. . .

Mr. Steffen: I am not offering it for the purpose of proving that he did or did not buy board from American, your Honor, but I am offering it simply to show what Mr. Hansen's understanding of the situation was at the time.

The Witness: I wouldn't know that—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) Just a moment, please, let the Court rule before you answer.

Mr. Steffen: He has already answered that he doesn't know.

Justice Stephens: Very well.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Mr. Hansen, did you ever have a complaint made against your company, and by "your" I mean the Oakfeld Gypsum Products Corporation—concerning bids on Government jobs? A. Not to me.

Q. I am speaking of the Oakfield Gypsum Products
5139 Corporation. Do you know of any such complaint?

A. Not to the best of my knowledge, no. I don't know of any complaint made to Oakfield about Oakfield bidding on Government jobs.

Q. About Oakfield and the three parent companies, all four of you, bidding on Government jobs?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that question in so far as it covers the three companies other than Oakfield, as immaterial.

Justice Stephens: Well, now, didn't we go into that subject, Mr. Steffen, through another witness?

Mr. Steffen: Yes, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: Which witness was that?

Mr. Steffen: Mr. Spease.

Justice Stephens: Under what theory did the proof come in at that time? Can you refresh our recollection?

Mr. Steffen: I think it came in under the theory of control or regulation of the Oakfield Gypsum Products Corporation. The testimony developed that a complaint had been made and that Oakfield wrote to Spease saying that such a complaint had been made, and that they were not permitted to put in a series of bids of that sort.

I am asking Mr. Hansen whether that is true, or whether he remembers that occasion, and I want to ask him some further questions.

As I understand it, the United States Gypsum Com-
5140 pany was reported to have made a complaint against that thing called "multiple bidding", I believe, according to Mr. Bromley.

Justice Stephens: Well, if the question is preliminary to asking the witness about a complaint, the objection is overruled.

Justice Garrett: I understood Mr. Bromley to object to that question in so far as it referred to the companies other than the Oakfield Gypsum Company. Wasn't that your objection?

Mr. Bromley: Yes, your Honor.

Justice Garrett: That of course has been ruled on. I don't wish to criticize Government counsel, but it does seem to me that Government counsel should not keep trying to get in about these two Paragon companies and the American Hardwall Plaster Company questions that have been ruled on—of course Government counsel has the right to make offers of proof, but is scarcely fair to the Court, having ruled again and again, to keep trying to bring in those Paragon companies and the American Hardwall Plaster Company.

I don't wish to be critical of Government counsel but it is very wearisome to have to pass again and again on those questions.

Justice Stephens: I share Judge Garrett's view. I think the record of the Government has been fully protected so that in the event of an adverse decision it can raise 5141 these matters on appeal with respect to the right to go into the Paragon question.

But I thought—I may say informally to Judge Garrett—that if the complaint had to do with both Oakfield and the other companies, perhaps the question would have to be phrased with respect to all four of them, or otherwise the complaint couldn't be referred to effectually.

What is the last question asked of the witness?

Mr. Steffen: I think the witness has answered that he doesn't remember.

Justice Stephens: Then we can dispense with this discussion.

Mr. Steffen: I would say, in reply to Judge Garrett, that there were two witnesses who might have known about some of these transactions. One was Mr. Merriman, who died about a month ago, and the other is Mr. Eldred who has been in the hospital and is now confined to his home, and he is the man that probably knows most about them.

We are endeavoring to get from Mr. Hansen what we can, and I regret that we were not able to get more evidence than we did. I regret it probably more than defendants' counsel do.

I think I am substantially finished with this witness, but I may have a question or two in the morning.

Justice Stephens: I say this in entire good part 5142 towards Government counsel, as we realize that the case is long and complicated and rests upon circumstances to a large extent, but there have been so many attempts today, when we have had to rule and rule and rerule on the same questions, leading questions and questions about Paragon, that it approaches in fact—although I am sure not in intent—an invasion of our rulings.

The remedy, if the case should ultimately go against the Government, is by appeal and not by invasion.

Mr. Steffen: Your Honor, may I ask one question at this point?

Justice Stephens: Yes.

Mr. Steffen: Perhaps I shouldn't ask the Court this, but we have Mr. Stromquist under subpoena. Mr. Stromquist can identify Government's Exhibit 560, which has been excluded. Now, on the theory of showing that what Mr. Stromquist meant may have been quite different from what Mr. Hansen understood, that exhibit might be admissible as a declaration. That is to say, you have heard the testimony so far, and have heard that there was very close dealing between Oakfield and the Paragon companies and the American Hardwall Company, and if Mr. Stromquist writes a letter and understands by it that Oakfield in its sales shall sell at resale prices, we would consider that material.

I raise that for the reason that I don't want to be 5143 accused of subterfuge here if I should again offer Exhibit 560.

Justice Stephens: We are not assuming at all to foreclose you from making any offers that you feel you must make to prove your case or to make a record in the event of an adverse decision. We will rule on Mr. Stromquist's testimony when you present him.

The court will now take a recess until tomorrow morning.

(Whereupon, at 4:05 p. m., a recess was taken until 10:00 o'clock a.m., Thursday, March 23, 1944.)

5144 IN THE

DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Civil Action No. 8017

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

Plaintiff,

v.

UNITED STATES GYPSUM COMPANY; NATIONAL GYPSUM COMPANY; CERTAIN-TEED PRODUCTS CORPORATION; THE CELOTEX CORPORATION; EBSARY GYPSUM COMPANY, INC.; NEWARK PLASTER COMPANY; SAMUEL M. GLOYD, doing business under the name of TEXAS CEMENT PLASTER COMPANY; SEWELL L. AVERY; OLIVER M. KNODE; MELVIN H. BAKER; BROR H. DAHLBERG; HENRY J. HARTLEY; FREDERICK G. EBSARY; and FREDERICK TOMKINS,

Defendants.

Seventh Floor,
Internal Revenue Building,
Washington, D. C.,
Thursday, March 23, 1944.

The above-entitled cause came on for further hearing at 10:00 o'clock a.m., pursuant to adjournment, before Honorable Harold M. Stephens, Honorable Finis J. Garrett, and Honorable Joseph R. Jackson, sitting as the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

APPEARANCES:

(Same as heretofore noted.)

5153 You may take the witness stand, Mr. Hansen.

Thereupon, EMIL HANSEN the witness on the stand at the time of adjournment, resumed his testimony as follows:

Direct Examination (resumed)

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. You were asked the question, Mr. Hansen, referred to by the Presiding Justice just now, on page 5353 of the transcript:

"Q. And in making sales by Oakfield, at what prices would the Oakfield Gypsum Products Corporation resell to dealers?"

This applies, as you understand, I take it, to the time when Oakfield was buying board and was reselling it; and the question was as to where they were selling to dealers, at what prices were they selling.

And your answer was:

5154 "A. Would resell to dealers—unless you called the American Hardwall Plaster Company, the Paragon Plaster of Syracuse, and the Paragon Plaster and Supply Company, dealers—they were the only three customers for the gypsum products other than gypsum rock, that Oakfield had."

In the first place, that was not a responsive answer, Mr. Hansen. Did you have any other sales besides those three?

Mr. Bromley: Just a moment. I object to the question as incompetent because assuming facts not in evidence.

Mr. Bromley: Page 5353.

Counsel, instead of merely reading the question beginning at line 2, read it and then tried to interpret it. His interpretation was inaccurate, because the question referred to the time when Oakfield was buying from Universal.

Mr. Steffen: I am very glad to have it more carefully explained. I thought the witness understood the reference.

Justice Stephens: Suppose you just read the answer which he did give there.

Mr. Bromley: I suggest, in the interest of saving time, that we let the witness see a copy of his testimony.

Mr. Steffen: I would be very glad to.

Justice Stephens: Yes, that would help.

(Copy of transcript of testimony handed to the 5155 witness.)

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Beginning with page 5353, Mr. Hansen, and carrying over to page 5356, will you look at that? A. I want to get the time factor in there.

Q. Then read preceding that, if you wish.

Justice Stephens: Take your time and read it.

I call the attention of counsel to the answer on page 5356 beginning at line 15, and running to the bottom of the page. I think probably that clears the whole thing up, and it may not be necessary to take any further time, if counsel will agree that that clears it up.

Mr. Steffen: If Your Honor feels that it is clear, we have no desire to ask any further questions.

Justice Stephens: I feel that it is clear if the answers on page 5356, commencing with line 15 and running to the bottom of the page, are agreed upon as correct answers.

Mr. Bromley: I agree they are. I think that clears it all up.

Mr. Steffen: I would like to ask Mr. Hansen:

You have now read your testimony, I take it, so far as page 5356 is concerned?

The Witness: Yes.

By Mr. Steffen:

5156 Q. And the answers appearing on the latter half of that page, are they correct? A. That is right, they are.

Justice Stephens: That takes care of it. Thank you, Mr. Steffen.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. While you have your testimony before you, look at page 5365, Mr. Hansen, line 15; the question there was put two ways, and you answered "No". A. That is incorrect.

Q. "No" could be an answer to either question. Which did you mean it to be an answer to? A. The answer should be, "No, we had no arrangement with Universal concerning Oakfield's sales to Paragon."

Q. Look at page 5406, now, line 20—you had better read from the middle of the page to get the gist of it.

Justice Stephens: Commence at line 6, Mr. Hansen.

The Witness: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. The question, Mr. Hansen, has to do with your answer there on lines 19 and 20. The preceding question had to do with the policy of the Oakfield Company in obtaining top market prices, and the question was:

"Q. Obtain from whom?"

A. Well, now, if you will go back to Judge Stephens'
5157 question as to the prices, my answer to the question, as indicated on line 12, was intended to be that the policy of the Oakfield Company was—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) That answer is clear.

The answer that puzzled me, Mr. Hansen, is in lines 19 and 20. You see, I had asked you at line 6, and following:

"Ask the witness what the policy, if any, of Oakfield, was, if he knows, with respect to its own prices and the prices of its competitors."

And Mr. Steffen said:

"Can you answer the Court's question?"

You said:

"The policy of the Oakfield Company was to obtain the top market price that it could find, that its competitors were selling at.

"Q. And when you say 'obtain', you mean obtain from dealers? A. Pardon me?

"Q. Obtain from whom? A. Well, obtain from dealers or obtain from the company from whom Oakfield was purchasing, and distributing."

I don't understand what that means, that is all.

The Witness: There apparently was confusion in my mind on that question. If I had said as my intent was, in my answer on line 12, it would be: "The policy of the company was to sell at"—I used the word "obtain" there in the sense of the price that we hoped to receive for our goods.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Now, Mr. Hansen, that policy has to do with the Oakfield's sales to dealers? A. That is right.

Q. And did that same policy obtain in your transactions between Oakfield and Paragon?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as immaterial.

Mr. Steffen: I think that is highly material, as I will develop later, Your Honor.

Mr. Bromley: This is going into Paragon again, isn't it?

Justice Stephens: I don't see the materiality of that. But I still don't understand, Mr. Hansen, what you mean by your answer, even if you used the word "obtain" as meaning to "sell at". I can understand what you sell at, but I still don't understand this answer in lines 19 and 20:

"Well, obtain from dealers or obtain from the company from whom Oakfield was purchasing, and distributing."

I don't see how you can sell to people from whom you are purchasing.

The Witness: That is where my confusion came in. I thought that Mr. Steffen then was asking me where we got the information as to the price that we might secure from the customer, and I changed the entire sense of it.

5159 In one case I was talking about obtaining value for my merchandise, shall I say; and then we went on to where I thought he was asking, "Well, where did you find out what that competitive price was?"

Justice Stephens: Just give us an answer to that question now, in your own way.

The Witness: The answer to that, of where I found the competitive price, or where Oakfield found the competitive price, was from the company from whom Oakfield was purchasing, and from dealers.

Justice Stephens: I see.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. That is, you mean you wanted to get the best price possible when you were buying from Universal? A. Pardon me?

Q. Do you mean that you wanted to get the best or lowest price possible when you were buying from Universal, or your supplier? A. That wasn't the intent of the answer.

Q. Your answer had to do strictly with sales by Oakfield? A. That is right.

Q. And you wanted to get the best price possible, is that correct? A. That is right.

5160 Q. Now, I want to ask you whether that applied also in Oakfield's sales to both Paragon companies and the American Hardwall?

Mr. Bromley: I renew my objection. It seems to me that that is immaterial, on the Court's ruling.

Mr. Steffen: Your Honor, this answer will be utterly misleading if it is left this way. Oakfield did sell to the Paragon companies and to American Hardwall, and we have to know on what basis. The answer says that Oakfield sold on the best price obtainable.

Justice Stephens: Do you mean that it goes to the bona fides of the sale as between Oakfield and Paragon?

Mr. Steffen: No. I want to develop the fact that—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) What the Court has to rule on is whether or not it is material under the issues, and I ask whether or not it goes to the attempt to show that there was not really a bona fide sale between Oakfield and Paragon—

Mr. Steffen: (Interposing) No, I don't want to show that it was not bona fide, but I want to show the extent of it, that is all. He has testified as to the policy in selling to dealers generally. Now, the status of Paragon is ambiguous, whether as a jobber, a dealer, or what. And I am asking him the question, which I should think would 5161 be extremely material—did Oakfield's general policy apply in sales to Paragon?

Mr. Bromley: If that is offered to sustain the charge that Oakfield's resale prices were controlled, then I do not object to it. But if it is offered to go back to this old theory of trying to pierce the corporate veil—

Mr. Steffen: (Interposing) It is not, Your Honor.

Justice Stephens: I think it may come in, then, with the understanding that it is not on the theory of piercing the corporate veil. The objection is overruled.

The Witness: Oakfield's sales to Paragon were at lesser prices, at a discount from dealer's prices.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. And did that apply also to the plaster sales?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that is immaterial.

Mr. Steffen: It is simply to round out the testimony, Your Honor.

Mr. Bromley: It is still immaterial.

Justice Stephens: Objection sustained.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Please refer now, Mr. Hansen, to pages 5407 and 5409 of the transcript. A. Yes, sir.

Q. On page 5409, beginning with line 16—

I didn't know, I may say to counsel, that this is of any materiality, and if you don't think it is, you need not take the time to clear it up. But if it is regarded by the Government as important under the issues, it would be helpful to me if, as was done with Mr. Lenci, it might be spelled out in concrete terms.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Could you explain in more detail what you meant by your answer beginning on line 19, page 5407?

Justice Stephens: Mr. Steffen, does this involve basing points and the like?

Mr. Steffen: I think it involves the whole matter of conformance, on the part of Oakfield, with the Kelley prices and terms and conditions of sale.

Mr. Bromley: I don't think it has any relation to basing points.

Mr. Steffen: And in so far as basing points are involved, it does have a relation to basing points.

Justice Stephens: I was confused, I confess, yesterday afternoon, as to what this was offered for. The only charge we were dealing with, I thought, was a charge of resale price fixing by Oakfield as a manufacturing distributor. For some reason or other, I didn't get the relationship of it.

Mr. Steffen: May I state the Government's purpose?

5163 The purpose was to show that the Oakfield people bought from Kelley, bought board, and they resold it to dealers, in general. And they resold it, as I understand this testimony, according to the prices which Kelley furnished them, and according to the trucking conditions and the general sales conditions which obtained in Kelley's sales to dealers; and I understand Mr. Hansen's testimony to be that. But I would be very glad to have him amplify it, if that is not correct.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. What would you say on that, Mr. Hansen? A. I said, on page 5407, in line 15:

"To the best of my experience, they were based on Kelley's prices, because that was the way we bought our material."

Then I was asked to explain that clause, I assume.

Q. All right. Do you have any further explanation? A. No, I think that answer is complete.

Justice Stephens: Very well, the Court will not labor the matter. Perhaps it is due to the inexperience of the Judge with the details of commercial transactions.

Mr. Steffen: Well, it may very well be the fault of Government counsel in not asking intelligent questions, Your Honor. I wanted simply to develop the conformance.

5164 Justice Stephens: I am sure it will come out eventually before we get through. Perhaps it will be brought out on cross-examination, and perhaps it is not important to take any more time on it.

Thank you for taking up these matters.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. I have a few questions, Mr. Hansen, regarding the period in 1932 and 1933 when Oakfield was buying board from Kelley. Do you recall the period? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And I think yesterday we showed you Government's Exhibit 568 for Identification, and Government's Exhibit 569 for Identification, and Government's Exhibit 570 for Identification, the first one being minutes of the Executive Committee, and the second being a letter from Mr. Krumholz, and the third also being minutes of the Executive Committee meeting of the Oakfield Gypsum Products Corporation.

Mr. Steffen: I suggest this, Your Honor, at this point: Government's Exhibit 568, which appears as being a copy of the minutes on one side,—inasmuch as there are minutes on the other side of the original, I suggest that we designate the reverse side as Government's Exhibit 568-A.

Justice Stephens: That may be done. In other words, what we have been treating as the rear of Exhibit 568, will now be marked as Exhibit 568-A?

Mr. Steffen: Yes. And the same should be done
5165 with Exhibit 570. On the rear of Exhibit 570 are the minutes of June 21, and they should be designated as Exhibit 570-A.

Justice Stephens: That may be done.

(The documents referred to were marked as Government's Exhibits Nos. 568-A and 570-A, respectively, for Identification.)

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Let me ask you this question: From your information in the industry, and from your conversation with Mr. Spease, or from any other sources, what would you say as to the attitude of the gypsum industry concerning the use of jobbers?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as immaterial.

Mr. Steffen: The materiality, I think, will show up, Your Honor. I would like to ask the question.

Mr. Bromley: It is immaterial to any charge in the pleadings.

Mr. Steffen: We have, Your Honor, Government's Exhibit 570-A, which speaks of the fact that at a meeting of the Gypsum Association there was a threat to withdraw—

Mr. Bromley: (Interposing) I don't think counsel ought to read these things into the record before he gets them in evidence.

Mr. Steffen: I have no desire to do that. It is merely for the purpose of saving time.

5166 Justice Stephens: Just let us look at it.

(The Court examined Exhibit 570-A.)

Mr. Steffen: May I make a little more explicit—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) You are referring to the second paragraph, I suppose, the first sentence in the second paragraph?

Mr. Steffen: That is right.

Justice Stephens: What puzzled the Judges is as to how the attitude of the industry can be material.

Mr. Steffen: Concerning jobbers.

Justice Stephens: Yes. The charge here is the elimination of jobbers. You are entitled to try to prove the elimination of jobbers. But what the general attitude of the industry is, is something that can hardly be material.

Mr. Steffen: May I make that very clear?

Justice Stephens: Yes.

Mr. Steffen: In this case, we have the Oakfield Gypsum Products Corporation, which is a manufacturing distributor; we have testimony already by Mr. Hansen that the Oakfield Gypsum Products Corporation, after it purchased board from Kelley, sold it to the Paragon Company and to the other constituent companies, at a discount, substantially as a jobber.

Now the attitude of the industry, as has been developed here already rather fully, in 1932 and following, was 5167 to get rid of jobbers, or as Mr. Bromley would say, level off the price at which the jobbers bought so that their price would be the same as the dealer's price.

So you have a situation where the Oakfield people are buying at a manufacturer's discount, and are making use, in effect, of jobbers; and I want to develop the question whether that may not have been one reason why the source of board supply which the Oakfield people had, was being threatened.

Justice Stephens: Well, what troubles me, Mr. Steffen, is—suppose the witness answers, first, that he knows what the attitude of the industry toward jobbers was; and, second, that it was unfavorable to the jobbers,—what does that prove? What does it prove with reference to the charge of jobber elimination?

Mr. Steffen: There are two charges here, Your Honor. One is jobber elimination, and the other is Paragraph 45(e). Paragraph 45(e) is to the effect that manufacturing distributors were being coerced and induced to resell at prices, and in effect were being induced not to sell to jobbers because the jobber price had been put at the same level as the dealer prices. And I think this evidence is very material to show the situation, that the industry wouldn't allow, or was unwilling to allow, the manufacturing distributors to sell to jobbers while they, the licensees, were not permitted to do so.

5168 I am stating that as a circumstance from which I think the Court could find that there was a threat to the continued sale by the Oakfield Gypsum Products Corporation, or the continued purchase of board by the Oakfield Gypsum Products Corporation.

Justice Jackson: I don't see why you can't bring that out by proper questions, though. Why don't you ask him what it was?

Mr. Steffen: I have asked him that.

Justice Jackson: You have asked him what the general attitude of the industry was. Why don't you ask him what they did, why were they complained against? Ask him, "According to the minutes on Exhibit 570-A, was that the reason that you thought you were threatened, because you employed men on commission, or that you wouldn't eliminate jobbers, that you continued to sell to Paragon and the other two companies?"

5169 Mr. Steffen: I was leading up to that, your Honor.

Justice Jackson: I think you can do that by specific questions.

Justice Stephens: We will overrule the objections. You may interrogate the witness concerning the attitude of the industry as a circumstance which may tend to be a part of the picture in which these operations were being carried on.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Mr. Hansen, did you understand the attitude of the industry as respects sales by licensees through jobbers?

Justice Stephens: Just answer that yes or no, first, whether you did know what the industry's attitude was.

The Witness: No.

Justice Stephens: The answer is no?

The Witness: That is right.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Did you know whether there were jobbers in the industry at that time? A. In 1931, 1932 and 1933?

Q. Yes. A. Yes.

Q. Were there as many jobbers then as there were in 1928, 1929 and 1930?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as incompetent, because calling for a conclusion.

5170 Justice Stephens: Do you know?

The Witness: No, I do not.

Justice Stephens: The objection is sustained.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Was the attitude of the industry concerning jobbers the same as the attitude of the suppliers of other materials which were handled on a distributor basis by Paragon?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as incompetent because calling for a conclusion.

Justice Stephens: The witness has stated that he doesn't know what the attitude of the industry was. That being true, it would seem useless to proceed. Sustained, unless you can develop that he knows about it.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. You testified that the Paragon people were buying a number of types of masons' supplies and reselling as a distributor, did you not? A. That is right.

Q. And you, for a period, were buying gypsum board as a distributor, were you not? A. A distributor, or a jobber, I don't know which.

Q. And there was a time when that was discontinued, was there not? A. That is right.

Q. When was that? A. I think it was about 1930,

5171 it might have been 1931.

Q. And do you know why it was discontinued? A. No, I do not. That notification to us, as I recall, was first from the Universal Gypsum Company.

Mr. Bromley: You mean the notification that you could no longer get a discount?

Justice Stephens: Is that what you mean?

The Witness: That is correct.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. That is you had to buy board at dealer prices or not at all? A. That is right.

Q. Now, coming to this matter of Exhibit 570-A, Mr. Hansen—Let me ask you first, did you know the attitude of the industry regarding the hiring of commission men to sell board? A. When you speak of the "industry", you mean all the companies involved in the industry?

Q. What I want to get is the industry policy or the industry practice— A. (Interposing) I know the policy as related to us by any particular company, sir.

Q. Did you have any knowledge as to what Ebsary or National or any of these other companies were doing by way of employing jobbers, or commission men? A.
5172 I don't believe so.

Q. Do you know whether or not National employed jobbers? A. Whether National employed jobbers? Now, you are referring—Justice Jackson: (Interposing) Employed jobbers?

Mr. Steffen: Employed or sold to jobbers.

Justice Jackson: Oh.

The Witness: You are referring to this particular date?

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Along in 1932. A. I don't know.

Q. Do you know whether or not they did at a later date? A. Well, I know that from 1938 on I wasn't able to obtain a discount on the purchase of board.

Justice Jackson: And when you say "I", you mean Paragon?

The Witness: Paragon, sir.

Justice Jackson: Paragon of Syracuse?

The Witness: That is right. Oakfield ceased to exist in 1938.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Did you try to get a discount? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And who did you talk to when you tried to get a 5173 discount? A. The officers of the National Gypsum Company.

Q. Which ones? Did you see Mr. Baker or Mr. Burley? A. Oh, I think it was Mr. Baker.

Q. What did Mr. Baker tell you?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as immaterial. Isn't it perfectly plain that National's price to a jobber as of 1938 was fixed by the bulletins at the same figure as the dealer price? That has been established here time after time after time.

Mr. Steffen: I should like to have that developed, your Honor.

Mr. Bromley: What possible good can repetition of a fact that is so plain do in this case? National had no power to give a discount to a jobber because, under our bulletins, its price to a jobber was fixed at the same figure as the price to the dealer, on board.

Justice Stephens: It has been so clearly demonstrated in the case that the bulletins were drawn in a manner which forbade, after a given time, discounts, that it would seem to us useless to keep proving it.

Mr. Steffen: If I were offering it simply to prove that, I think your Honor would be correct; but I would like to ask this witness the question in order to determine what his information was at that time, and if he received in-5174 formation from Mr. Baker at that time indicating that their policy had been for some time not to employ jobbers, that would go perhaps back to 1932.

Mr. Bromley: The bulletin was issued in 1930.

Mr. Steffen: But Mr. Hansen doesn't know anything about the bulletins.

Justice Stephens: What does Mr. Hansen's information on the subject, whatever it may be, tend to prove under the issues of this case, which has not already been proved?

Mr. Steffen: It ought to tend to develop the position of the Oakfield Gypsum Products Corporation in the industry, and whether they were being coerced.

Mr. Bromley: Oakfield was out of business then.

Mr. Steffen: I want to find out Mr. Hansen's information concerning the employment of jobbers in the industry, and he went to Mr. Baker and had a conversation. Maybe Mr. Baker didn't tell him anything other than "we can't sell to you." But I think it is perfectly appropriate to ask him one or two questions on that.

Justice Stephens: Well, we will hear the answer and see if there is anything in it that relates to the issues. If there isn't, you may move to strike, Mr. Bromley.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. What did Mr. Baker say to you in regard to the possibility of selling to jobbers? A. He said that it was 5175 not National's policy to sell gypsum board and gypsum lath to jobbers.

Q. Did he tell you how long that policy had existed? A. I don't recall that.

Q. Following this meeting of your Executive Committee on June 21, 1933, did you negotiate with Mr. Kelley for a contract, and by "you", I mean Oakfield? A. Mr. Eldred negotiated a contract with Kelley.

Q. Did you attend the conference at which that was negotiated? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And why did you seek a contract at that time?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as immaterial and incompetent.

Justice Stephens: I don't quite see the force of that objection, Mr. Bromley.

What are you attempting to prove by this, Mr. Steffen?

Mr. Steffen: I am attempting to prove that Mr. Hansen's company, the Oakfield Gypsum Products Corporation, was being coerced, and that in order to get around the coercion, they thought they could negotiate a 5-year contract with Mr. Kelley.

Justice Stephens: You mean coerced to sell at the prices fixed by Kelley?

Mr. Steffen: That they felt insecure as to their purchase of board, and that one ground of their insecurity was that there was a jobber situation existing in the Oak-5176 field organization, and there were complaints against that company; and that following the complaints they proceeded to make a 5-year contract, and I wanted to ask why.

Justice Stephens: The objection is overruled.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Why did you negotiate a 5-year contract with Mr. Kelley? A. As I recall, and I think you will find it correct, that contract was a reciprocal contract.

Q. That is right. A. It involved the sale of board and lath to the Oakfield Gypsum Products Corporation, and the sale of stucco, and I think also heat plaster by Oakfield to Kelley—

Q. (Interposing) I show you, Mr. Hansen—

Mr. Bromley: (Interposing) I don't think he had finished.

Mr. Steffen: I thought he had. Finish your answer, Mr. Hansen.

Justice Stephens: If you had not completed your answer, finish it. The question was why you had entered into this contract.

Mr. Steffen: I was going to show him the contract.

Justice Stephens: Let him finish his answer.

The Witness: It was our desire to assure ourselves first of a constant supply of board; second, secure a good customer for our manufactured material; and third, to 5177 get the maximum profit out of it because of the reciprocal arrangement.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. And you wanted that arrangement for a 5-year period or as long as possible, or what? A. I think that was just good business judgment.

Justice Stephens: We will take the morning recess at this time.

(Whereupon, a 5-minute recess was taken, after which the trial was resumed as follows:)

Justice Stephens: Proceed, gentlemen.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. I now show you, Mr. Hansen, what has been marked as Government's Exhibit 571, which appears to be a contract in the form of a letter, between the Oakfield Gypsum Products Corporation and the Kelley Plasterboard Company, dated December 1, 1933.

(The letter referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 571, for identification.)

(Government's Exhibit No. 571 for identification was handed to the witness.)

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Can you identify that, Mr. Hansen, as being Mr. Eldred's signature? A. Yes, sir.

5178 Justice Stephens: Is this the one that bears the exhibit number 208 in the upper right-hand corner, dated December 1, 1933?

Mr. Bromley: Yes, your Honor.

Mr. Steffen: Yes, it is dated December 1, 1933. I don't see the exhibit number 208 on my copy.

Mr. Bromley: It is on my copy.

Justice Stephens: It bears at the top the words: "Letter to—Copy to—E. L. Merriman—T. P. Eldred—Emil Hansen—H. W. Olmsted—728 Broad St., Utica, N. Y."?

Mr. Steffen: That is right.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Is Government's Exhibit 571, Mr. Hansen, the contract which you referred to just a moment ago, which was negotiated with the Kelley Plasterboard Company? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you stated that you attended a preliminary conference with Mr. Kelley concerning that matter, did you not? A. That is right.

Q. Can you tell us anything that took place at that conference with Mr. Kelley, at which there was a discussion of a possible threat to your loss of a source of supply?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as repetitious and incompetent.

5179 Justice Stephens: Overruled.

The Witness: I don't recall any specific reference to loss of source of supply. It may have been in our minds, but I don't remember a specific mention of it.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Could you say that it was in your mind?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as incompetent.

Mr. Steffen: We feel that it is highly material, your Honor, the attitude of the distributors concerning whether they were being coerced or not.

Justice Stephens: He has already testified that they felt insecure in their source of supply. It is repetitive. The objection is sustained.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. That is true, is it not?

Justice Jackson: What is true?

Mr. Steffen: That you felt insecure in your source of supply.

Justice Stephens: That has been testified to.

The Witness: Yes.

Mr. Bromley: I move to strike out the answer.

Justice Stephens: It may go out as repetitive. It is quite unnecessary to have the same witness say the same thing twice.

By Mr. Steffen:

5180 Q. Now, Mr. Hansen, did you renew this contract at the end of the 5-year period? A. No.

Q. What change in your circumstances had occurred during that time, if any? A. The Oakfield Gypsum Products Corporation had ceased to exist.

Q. Was Kelley in the business any longer? A. No, he was out of business.

Q. And what became of the Oakfield Gypsum Products Corporation?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as repetitious. We have had it testified a dozen times that it was sold to National.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. What became of the plant of the Oakfield Gypsum Products Corporation? Is it still running—that is what I am getting at. A. No, it is not running.

Q. It was dismantled? A. Yes it was dismantled.

Mr. Steffen: We offer in evidence, your Honor, Government's Exhibits 568, 568-A, 569, 570, 570-A and 571, and we offer them with this statement, your Honor.

The witness was unable to remember some of the things appearing in these minutes of the Executive Com-5181 mittee meetings as, for example, the threat to the board supply, and the reasons for the threat; but they appear in the documents of the Oakfield Gypsum Products Corporation, and they, coupled with the letter of Mr. Krumholz concerning commission men, coupled with the effort for the first time to get a long term 5-year contract with the Kelley Plasterboard Company, are all circumstances, as we see it, which tend to confirm Mr. Hansen's insecurity or feeling of insecurity, and therefore to establish what we charge in Paragraph 45(e) that the defendants concertedly induced and coerced the manufacturing distributors to maintain resale prices and to continue to conform to the practices or the sales terms of the defendant companies.

Justice Stephens: Is there any objection?

Mr. Bromley: I object to Exhibits 568, 568-A, 570 and 570-A, being minutes of the meetings of the Executive Committee of the Oakfield Gypsum Products Corporation, on the ground that they are incompetent because they are not declarations of a co-conspirator under the pleadings. It has already been held by your Honors that Oakfield is not charged as a co-conspirator, and therefore its minutes are not competent under any theory.

I object to Exhibit 569 for identification, being the Krumholz letter to Hansen of November 14, 1932, on the ground that it appears at page 5413 of this record 5182 that that letter had reference to Paragon of Syracuse and Paragon of Scranton, and it therefore is immaterial.

As to Exhibit 571 for identification, the Kelley-Oakfield contract of December 1, 1933, I make only the usual objection.

Justice Stephens: Well, Exhibit 571 is received in evidence, subject to the usual reservation with respect to declarations of alleged co-conspirators.

(Government's Exhibit No. 571 was received in evidence.)

Justice Stephens: Do you wish to be heard, Mr. Steffen, on the objections to Exhibits 568, 568-A, 570 and 570-A on the ground that they are mere declarations of the Oakfield Gypsum Products Corporation, and Oakfield, not being charged as a co-conspirator they can't be binding on anyone?

Mr. Steffen: Yes, I do, your Honor.

We are not offering them on the theory that they are declarations of a co-conspirator. We are offering them on the theory that they are documents, made in the usual course, the most formal documents that could be made, to show the state of mind and the attitude of the Oakfield Gypsum Products Corporation on the matters that are very important to determine coercion, or whether they were being induced to conform to a particular action.

These show, I think as clearly as could be, circumstantially, that the Oakfield Gypsum Products Corporation was feeling insecure as respects its source of supply of board; that there were apparently complaints made both as to commission men and as to the possibility of a loss of this source of supply of board—which appears particularly in Exhibit 570-A—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) First as to Exhibit 568—what, in Exhibit 568 for identification, shows anything concerning commission men, or jobber elimination, or insecurity with respect to source of supply?

Mr. Steffen: May I make the point that this is relevant only if you can show circumstantially that this, taken with other evidence which your Honors have heard in the case, as respects the attitude of the industry concerning commission men—we have discussed that already and introduced bulletins which show what the attitude was—taking that, together with all the other evidence that we have in the case you have a situation where the matter of commission men is being brought up before the Oakfield Gypsum Products Corporation in 1932. That, together with the reverse side, Exhibit 568-A, which has to do with the consideration by the Board of the Oakfield Gypsum Products Corporation at this time, as to whether they should or should not make a board plant, it seems to me is material.

Then following that, in Exhibit 570, with reference to the fact that Mr. MacLeish might be invited to look at their books, which would be an outrageous thing 5184 because Mr. MacLeish is counsel for the United States Gypsum Company; and following that with Exhibit 570-A, in which they say that following the Chicago meeting there was a threat of withdrawal of their source of supply—those things, added together, and viewed in the light of the other evidence in the case, it seems to me rather make out a case, circumstantially, that the attitude or state of mind of the Oakfield Gypsum Products Corporation at this time, was definitely insecure, in other words, that they were feeling the pressure.

I think the issue simply is as to what weight these are to be given. They are, I think, clearly admissible, so far as the rules of evidence are concerned.

Mr. Bromley: Since your Honor has asked a question with respect to the first exhibit offered, Exhibit 568 for identification, I think it should be stated that there obviously is nothing in it about insecurity.

So far as the second paragraph is concerned, the reference to commission salesmen, it was testified to by this witness at page 5415, that that discussion had to do with the Paragon companies and American Hardwall.

So that under no theory is there anything contained in Exhibit 568 for identification that has any materiality on any theory of this case.

Justice Stephens: What about Exhibit 568-A, the paragraph that has reference to data concerning a com-5185 plete board plant? What do you say as to that, Mr. Bromley?

Mr. Bromley: I say that that is nothing but the declaration of Oakfield which is not competent, because Oakfield is not a co-conspirator, and that at any rate the whole subject matter of the attitude of the Oakfield Gypsum Products Corporation toward building a board plant has been fully testified to by this witness. He has given the reasons, and the period of time during which they felt as they did.

Mr. Steffen: A circumstance that comes up again very definitely in 1932, which as your Honors appreciate was the time when the most pressure was being put on the industry to conform to prices, is, as we see it, very material.

Justice Stephens: The problem is one not merely of materiality, but of competence. These are, on their face, hearsay statements; unless they are made in some manner which brings them in as an exception to the hearsay rule, they are not competent.

They are not declarations of a co-conspirator, and they cannot come in on that theory as admissions, that is to say, as declarations of a co-conspirator, because Oakfield is not a co-conspirator and is not charged as such.

Now, the only other exception to the hearsay rule, to which you seem to relate them, is utterances offered not for their truth but to show the existence of an attitude of mind or a state of mind in the person who wrote 5186 them, Mr. Hansen, and his company.

I don't see anything on the face of Exhibit 568 which has anything to do with the item of insecurity. The reference there in the second paragraph to commission men, Mr. Hansen said related to Paragon and not to Oakfield.

What is the attitude of my colleagues?

Justice Stephens: Exhibit 568 is excluded from evidence. Now, as to Exhibit 568-A.

(The Justices conferred.)

Justice Stephens: We wish to give the Government every opportunity to put in any circumstances which, taken together with other circumstances, may have any relevance to any of the issues, but there is no use of receiving into the record repeated proof of the same item.

Now, you have offered this witness, you have called him as a witness on whose truth and correctness you rely, and he has testified fully that there was insecurity concerning the source of supply, and that the company had considered building a board plant.

Exhibit 568-A is merely a repetition of that testimony, and we are all agreed that it ought to be excluded as purely repetitive. It proves nothing that you have not already proven.

Now, Exhibit 569, it was testified by this witness, 5187 related only to the two Paragon companies. This is your witness, and he described that exhibit as relating only to the Paragon companies.

Mr. Steffen: I think that is right.

Justice Stephens: So that is excluded on the ground that it is an item relating to a matter not within the issues.

Now, as to Exhibits 570 and 570-A—

Mr. Steffen: (Interposing) I might point out, your Honor, that the witness was unable to remember in detail either as to why Mr. MacLeish may have been referred to, or what was the threat at the Chicago meeting of the Gypsum Association because he did not attend. Therefore this offer is not repetitive.

Justice Stephens: Let us look at those exhibits again.

(Government's Exhibits 570 and 570-A were handed up to the Bench for the Court's examination.)

Justice Stephens: What theory of admissibility have you with respect to Exhibit 570? Obviously the only paragraph in that upon which you rely is the first main paragraph referring to the decision that Eldred would write to Mr. MacLeish offering to open the books. Now what does that prove or tend to prove, either alone or in connection with other evidence offered, or that you expect to offer—what does it tend to prove in respect of any issue in the case? That is what we have to keep 5188 in mind at all times in making these rulings.

Mr. Steffen: Well, I would say this, your Honor, that it is impossible, perhaps, to introduce only such paragraphs as say, "We feel insecure." You have to introduce this and read it in the light of the rest of the testimony in the case.

Justice Stephens: We are doing that, it is perfectly clear to us that you have a right to put in various items of evidence, which, though one alone might not constitute proof of anything, yet taken together do. But we have to be given some argument or assurance that each exhibit, when related to others, has some relevance to an issue here.

Now, what does this item, this paragraph concerning Eldred writing to MacLeish offering to open the books at any time—what do you expect to prove by that?

Mr. Steffen: I expect to prove—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) In connection with other testimony.

Mr. Steffen: In connection with other testimony, yes, that there was a threat against the Oakfield Gypsum Products Corporation, and that they had felt that their position was so insecure that they were prepared to offer their books to MacLeish, who was counsel for the United States Gypsum Company, to let him see whether or not the affairs of the company were being handled satisfactorily from the point of view of the United States Gypsum Company.

5189 Justice Stephens: And you are going to call other witnesses to testify that there was a complaint made by the United States Gypsum Company against Oakfield?

Mr. Steffen: We don't know whether Mr. Eldred is going to be well enough to testify, or not. Mr. Eldred is the man who knew about that.

Justice Garrett: Well, it is a very far inference that you ask us to draw, or that you will ask us to draw I suppose, that this paragraph relates at all to any apprehension about supply of board.

Mr. Steffen: Or to terms of and conditions of sales which the Oakfield people were making. The obvious reason why Mr. MacLeish might be interested was that they might be making improper sales, sales at improper prices; and the testimony here has shown that you had a jobber situation in the industry at a time when they were trying to get rid of jobbers, "jobber" in the sense that Oakfield was selling to Paragon at a lower price and Paragon in turn was selling to dealers.

Justice Stephens: We will rule that on the present record, on the present showing, the exhibit is not admissible in evidence, but that ruling is without prejudice to your right to reoffer it if, in connection with other testimony which you produce, it appears then to have some relationship to some issue in the case.

5190 Mr. Steffen: That is Exhibit 570?

Justice Stephens: Yes.

Now, let's look at Exhibit 570-A.

Do you object to 570-A, Mr. Bromley?

Mr. Bromley: Yes, sir, on the same ground.

Justice Stephens: What do you say with respect to the statement there that Mr. Kelley had given assurance of "his cooperation in preventing any change from the present arrangement", and the reference with respect to the withdrawal of the "Board and Gypsum Lath Sales Arrangement"?

Mr. Bromley: I don't understand the legal theory on which the declaration of Oakfield, not a co-conspirator, can be offered in this case anyway. This, if it comes in at all, would come in under utterances forming a verbal part of an act. Now, what is the act that this utterance forms a part of? How can you get it in under any exception to the hearsay rule?

Mr. Steffen: The Hillmon case—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) What does it show, Mr. Steffen, with respect to someone's state of mind under the Hillmon case—whose state of mind and the state of mind with respect to what?

Mr. Steffen: The Oakfield Gypsum Products Corporation's state of mind, and I suppose also that of the three members of the Executive Committee.

5191 Justice Stephens: You mean with respect to insecurity?

Mr. Steffen: With respect to insecurity and with respect to what they should do about it, and with respect to the nature of the insecurity, that is, that it grew out of a threat apparently at a meeting of the Gypsum Association in Chicago, which relates it to these defendants.

Justice Stephens: That refers to the position of the Gypsum Association under the National Industrial Recovery Act—you are not relying on the National Industrial Recovery Act, Mr. Steffen, are you?

Mr. Steffen: No, your Honor. It is my understanding that the Gypsum Association was not just a NRA product.

Mr. Bromley: It seems to me to be so far fetched—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) You need not reply further, Mr. Bromley. We think that if it proves anything at all it proves a state of insecurity on the part of Oakfield, and that has already been fully testified to and the exhibit is excluded as repetitive.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. I would like to show you what has been marked as Government's Exhibit 403.

(Government's Exhibit No. 403 for identification was handed to the witness.)

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. I want you to look at the first page only, Mr.
5192 Hansen. Do you recognize that as Mr. Stromquist's signature? A. I am not a handwriting expert, but it looks to me like the signature that I was familiar with.

Mr. Steffen: We now offer in evidence, your Honor, Government's Exhibit 403. It has already been stipulated, I think, by Mr. Finck, that this letter was received by them, and the only question is as to who it was signed by.

Justice Stephens: Is there any objection to this, now that Mr. Stromquist's signature has been identified?

Is this being introduced in connection with this witness' testimony?

Mr. Steffen: Oh, no, your Honor. This is simply to cure the thing that I thought was preventing its admission.

Mr. Bromley: I would like to ask some questions of this witness about the signature, if I may, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: You may.

Mr. Bromley: How long has it been since you have seen Stromquist's signature?

The Witness: Three or four months.

Mr. Bromley: I show you Exhibit 559 for identification and ask you whether you can identify that as—

Mr. Steffen: (Interposing) I think, in order to make this fair, your Honor, we would like to have him see several of the signatures of Mr. Stromquist.

Justice Stephens: You may show them to him later. Let Mr. Bromley ask him on voir dire now.

Mr. Steffen: Will you show him also Exhibits 560 and 561?

(Government's Exhibits 559 for identification, 560 for identification and 561 for identification were handed to the witness.)

Mr. Bromley: You will notice a considerable difference between the two signatures on Exhibits 559 and 560?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

Mr. Bromley: You will notice that there is a considerable difference between the signature on Exhibit 559 and the signature on Exhibit 403?

The Witness: There is a difference.

Mr. Bromley: Wouldn't you say that Stromquist's signature was as it appears on Exhibit 559 and not as it appears on Exhibit 403?

The Witness: I could not tell you; I am not a handwriting expert.

Mr. Steffen: Will you also look at Exhibits 560 and 561 to make a fair comparison?

Justice Stephens: We will have to do this alternately. Two lawyers cannot examine the same witness at the same time. Let Mr. Bromley finish, and then you will have your chance, Mr. Steffen.

Justice Garrett: Did I understand Mr. Steffen to say yesterday that he had Mr. Stromquist under subpoena?

5194 Mr. Steffen: Yes, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: Is he in the room?

Mr. Steffen: Oh, no.

Justice Stephens: Then why take time over this if you can get him here—why can't he identify these signatures?

Justice Jackson: You said you were going to call him anyway.

Mr. Steffen: We were debating that, and I think we probably will.

Justice Stephens: If you are going to call him we might as well save all this time. He will know his own signature.

Mr. Steffen: Very well, your Honor. I would like to make this point, however, your Honor. We don't know whether Mr. Stromquist will be alive ten days from now, and this witness is a man who, I think, can—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) Well, the probability that both Mr. Stromquist and this witness will not be alive ten days from now is remote. If you can't get Mr. Stromquist, then you can recall this witness if you must have this testimony, but this debate about a signature, which can be definitely established by Mr. Stromquist, takes much time which we really ought to save, Mr. Steffen, if we can.

Mr. Steffen: Very well.

Justice Stephens: So that exhibit is not received at the present time, but it may be reoffered when Mr.

5195 Stromquist is called on to identify his signature.

Mr. Steffen: We have no further questions, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: You may cross examine, Mr. Bromley.

Cross Examination

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. May it please th Court—Mr. Hansen, you have testified that Oakfield had no arrangements with the Universal Gypsum Company as to the prices which Oakfield should charge its dealer-customers on the resale of board purchased from Universal. Is it not likewise the fact that Oakfield had no arrangement, no agreement or understanding with the Kelley Plasterboard Company, or with any other supplier of board as to the prices which Oakfield should charge its dealer-customers when it resold board purchased from the supplier? A. You ask—is it not likewise so?

Q. Yes. A. The answer is yes.

5196 And isn't it the fact that the Kelley Company continued to supply board to the Oakfield Company at all times subsequent to the date of the contract, December 1, 1933, which is Exhibit 571, right down to the time Oakfield went out of business?

Justice Stephens: Read the question. I am not sure you said what you wanted to, Mr. Bromley.

(The question was read by the reporter.)

Justice Stephens: I misunderstood you.

The Witness: The answer is yes.

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. And isn't it likewise the fact that no one ever complained about Oakfield's resale prices or practices in connection with the sale of board?

Mr. Steffen: That is a very broad question.

Justice Jackson: You mean at any time?

Mr. Bromley: At any time.

Justice Stephens: Well, if the witness knows, the breadth of the question can't be an objection.

The Witness: Not to me.

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. Isn't it the fact, likewise, that so far as you are concerned, you never heard, even, that there was such an organization as the Board Survey Company? A. Never heard? You mean right up to this date?

5197 Q. No, right up to 1938 when the Oakfield Gypsum Products Corporation went out of business. A. I couldn't fix the time when I first heard of the Board Survey organization, but I would say it was along in 1938.

Q. Whenever you heard of it, isn't it the fact that you never had any dealings with it, or any communications from it? A. That is correct.

Q. And isn't it the fact, likewise, that you never saw a license agreement between USG and anybody? A. That is right.

Q. You never attended any meeting of USG and its licensees at any time, did you? A. No, sir.

Q. And you never received any USG licensee bulletins, did you? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever have any knowledge that any conditions had been attached by USG, or anyone else, to USG's consent to your suppliers to sell you board at a discount? A. No.

Q. And it is the fact, isn't it, Mr. Hansen, that the Oakfield Company always bought board at a discount 5198 during the entire period of its existence? A. That is correct.

Q. Will you look at your testimony at page 5407, please?

(Copy of testimony handed to the witness.)

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. Do you see in line 9, that the Presiding Justice said: "Ask the witness what his prices were and what relationship, if any, they bore to Kelley's prices."

Do you see that? A. Yes.

Q. Now the fact is, isn't it, that the price which Kelley charged you, Oakfield, was the price which Kelley charged its dealers, less a discount? A. That is correct.

Q. So that, in order for you to know what the board was going to cost the Oakfield Company, which Oakfield bought from Kelley, you had to know what Kelley's dealer price was at all times, didn't you? A. That is correct.

Q. Because the board would cost you, Oakfield I mean, Kelley's dealer price less a 15 or 12-1/2 percent discount; isn't that right? A. That is right.

Q. So you wanted to know what Kelley's dealer
5199 price was, prior to the time that Oakfield sold to its customers, didn't you? A. That is correct.

Q. Because you wanted to know what your cost was before Oakfield sold its board to the customers; is that right? A. That is right.

Q. Now, you said that the cost of the board which Oakfield bought from Kelley, being Kelley's dealer price less a discount, gave the Oakfield Company a very small margin of profit, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when you said "profit", you meant gross profit? A. That is right, and I so testified.

Q. And beginning in line 19 on page 5407, where you said:

"We would have no way of knowing what margin of profit we were making unless we knew what the delivered price was in any particular market."

you meant that you had to know what Kelley's delivered price was in order to determine what your cost would be, didn't you? A. That is correct.

Q. Now, you wanted to sell the board which you bought from Kelley, at as high a price as you could get, 5200 did you not? A. That is right.

Q. It was the fact, was it not, that Oakfield could not get, for the board, any higher price than Kelley was getting from the same class of customers? A. That is true.

Justice Stephens: We will take the noon recess at this time.

(Thereupon, at 12:15 o'clock p.m., a recess was taken until 1:45 o'clock p.m., of the same day.)

5201 AFTERNOON SESSION

(The trial was resumed at 1:45 o'clock p.m., pursuant to recess.)

Justice Stephens: You may proceed.

Thereupon, EMIL HANSEN, the witness on the stand at the time of recess, resumed his testimony as follows:

Cross Examination (resumed)

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. You testified, Mr. Hansen, that it was Oakfield's policy to sell board to dealers at the same prices as appeared on Kelley's price lists, didn't you? A. I think so.

Q. Now, the prices which appeared on Kelley's price lists were the prices which Kelley charged for board, to dealers? A. I would assume that that was so.

Q. And if Oakfield sold board at the same price that Kelley sold it to dealers, you would take a loss on that business, wouldn't you? A. The Oakfield Company?

Q. Yes. A. We would in the case of reshipment from Oakfield.

Q. And that was because your margin of profit 5202 was only 15 percent on board, gross profit? A. That is correct.

Q. And that was not enough to enable you to pay the cost of doing business, in the instances to which you have referred? A. That is correct.

Q. And isn't it so that the Oakfield Company could not get more for its board from its dealer-customers, than they could buy that same board for from Kelley? A. That is right.

Q. And it was the fact, wasn't it, that the Oakfield Company did not want to take any less for the board than it could get? A. Yes.

Q. So that resulted, as a matter of fact, generally, in the Oakfield Company being able to get for the board which it bought from Kelley, not any more than the price at which Kelley sold the board to dealers? A. That is right.

Q. And wasn't that all you meant when you said, on page 5409, that it was Oakfield's policy to sell at the same prices that appeared on the Kelley price lists? A. That is right.

Q. That policy was determined by Oakfield not as the result of any agreement, but as a matter of inde-5203 pendent business judgment, wasn't it? A. That is correct.

Q. Mr. Spease has testified in this case, and he said in his testimony that he had a talk with you about the contract which was subsequently entered into between Oakfield and the Fairmont Wall Plaster Company. In his testimony, Mr. Spease said that you told him you, meaning Oakfield, could not divide the discount which Oakfield got, because if USG found out they would refuse to sell board to Oakfield.

Now, did you say that, or anything like that, to Spease? A. No, sir.

Q. It is the fact that Spease asked you if Oakfield wouldn't sell Fairmont, board at a discount, isn't it? A. I didn't quite get that?

Mr. Bromley: Will you read the question?

(The question was read by the reporter.)

The Witness: He did ask.

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. And you said no, you wouldn't? A. That is right.

Q. And you told him the reason you wouldn't, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the reason? A. The reason was that 5204 there was no profit to us in the sale of board in that way, and as a matter of fact we would be taking some loss on it.

Q. And that was because the price that you had to pay Kelley for that board was the dealer's price less only 15 percent, wasn't it? A. That is correct.

Q. You told him, however, that you would give him a liberal discount on plaster, did you not? A. That is right.

Q. And in the written contract thereafter entered into, Exhibit 357, it was provided that Oakfield would sell Fairmont plaster at a discount, wasn't it? A. That is correct.

Mr. Bromley: May the witness be shown Exhibit 356?

(Exhibit No. 356 handed to the witness.)

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. Will you look at the first sentence of the last paragraph, please? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you mean by that sentence: "Due to the license agreement among the board manufacturers, we have no way of making the sale of this product profitable to you."? A. Well, under that agreement, a price had been fixed to us, or Kelley had been granted permission, as I understand it, to sell us board at a discount 5205 of 15 percent for the board, and 12-1/2 percent for the gypsum lath. Therefore, it was not profitable to us.

Q. But you did not mean to intimate to the Fairmont Wall Plaster Company, in that letter, that this license agreement you referred to was binding on you, or that you were a party to it, or had anything to do with it, other than as you have stated, did you? A. Other than that it was the fact that established the low price for us.

Q. Yes. That is to say, under the license agreement between USG and Kelley— A. (Interposing) I should say the "low discount".

Q. That is to say, under the license agreement between USG and Kelley, Kelley could not give you any more than a 15 percent discount off the dealer's price, could he? A. That is right.

Q. So that, again, all you meant to say was that since your gross profit was 15 percent, you could not resell the board to Fairmont and give him a discount? A. That is correct.

Q. With respect to Exhibit 357, the Oakfield-Fairmont contract, my recollection is that Mr. Spease, in his testimony, inferred, at least, that it was entered into to get around some prohibition by USG—is that the fact, Mr. Hansen?

5206 (Exhibit No. 357 handed to the witness.)

Mr. Steffen: I would object to that, Your Honor, if it is asking for what was in Mr. Spease's mind, or what his testimony is about. If the question is directed to the contract, that is another matter.

Justice Stephens: The question is directed to the purpose of entering into the contract, and I think it is proper.

The Witness: May I have the question again?

Mr. Bromley: Will you read the question?

(The pending question was read by the reporter.)

The Witness: No.

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. Exhibit 357, the Fairmont contract, was not entered into as any device of any kind, was it?

Mr. Steffen: I think that that is asking for a conclusion and ought not to be permitted, Your Honor. The word "device" is ambiguous.

Justice Stephens: It seems to me, Mr. Steffen, it is the kind of a conclusion that any witness can be asked. After all, psychologically speaking, everything is an inference. Whether a thing is a trick or a device or a subterfuge is something that we all know about. I think that objection is not well taken.

The Witness: No, this was an ordinary contract to protect both the seller and the buyer.

5207 By Mr. Bromley:

Q. There was nothing secret about it? A. No, sir.

Q. And it didn't have any hidden meaning or any hidden purpose behind it, did it? A. No, sir, none whatsoever.

Q. You testified that the Oakfield Gypsum Products Corporation sold out to National in 1938. Wasn't the reason that you sold out because you got what you considered was an advantageous offer for the company from National? A. That was one of the reasons.

Q. Well, you didn't sell out because you had any difficulty, or rather, because Oakfield had any difficulty in buying board from any supplier, did you? A. Not difficulty in buying board, but difficulty in buying it so we could operate profitably.

Q. Because you still were not making money on board, is that right? A. That is correct.

Q. But you didn't sell out because anybody threatened to stop your supply of board, did you? A. No, sir.

Q. Now, you have testified that the Oakfield Company, although considering the matter, never did build a plant to manufacture board. Oakfield's failure to build a 5208 plant was not because it could not get a license from USG, was it? A. I don't believe so. I think that that was discussed by Mr. Eldred, although I don't know. I have nothing but recollection on that score.

Q. Well, wasn't the reason that you didn't build a plant that the Executive Committee of Oakfield thought that it required too large an investment? A. That is correct.

Q. And wasn't that the only reason? A. Yes, that is right.

Q. And it is the fact, isn't it, that after Oakfield sold out to National, while the Oakfield Gypsum Products Corporation manufacturing plant was dismantled, it was moved by National to another location and has been in operation ever since? A. Well, I was told by Mr. Baker, and by Mr. Tarbell, who was the production man, that it was the intention to move the mechanical equipment to Savannah. I never saw it moved, and I haven't seen it in Savannah, and couldn't identify it there, but that was what they stated their purpose was, or one of their reasons, for buying the plant, to get the machinery immediately available for their Savannah plant. Whether it was moved or not, I do not know.

Q. The Oakfield Gypsum Products Corporation also sold its gypsum mines, didn't it, to National? A.
5209 Yes.

Q. Now, at the time of the sale, there was plenty of raw gypsum up there in the Oakfield Gypsum Products Corporation's mines, wasn't there? A. Yes.

Mr. Bromley: May the witness be shown page 5353 of his testimony?

(Copy of testimony handed to the witness.)

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. You understand, don't you, that the question beginning at line 2 on that page, which reads:

"Q. And in making sales by Oakfield, at what prices would the Oakfield Gypsum Products Corporation resell to dealers?"

was speaking about board purchased by Oakfield from Universal? A. That was my understanding.

Q. Now regardless of your answer as it stands there in the record, from line 4 to line 8, inclusive, isn't it the fact that a correct answer to that question would be:

"Oakfield would not resell Universal board to dealers, unless you called its three parents dealers"?

A. That is what I intended to say.

Q. Was it your understanding at all times, Mr. Hansen, while Oakfield was in existence, that if Oakfield wanted to build a board-manufacturing plant, it could get a 5210 license to manufacture and sell, from USG? A. Well, Mr. Eldred, who made those contacts for us, stated that he understood we could.

Mr. Bromley: That is all.

Justice Stephens: Is there any further cross examination by any other defendant?

(No response.)

Justice Stephens: Any redirect?

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Did you have any understanding, yourself, Mr. Hansen, concerning whether USG would grant a license to the Oakfield people? A. I never had a contact with the USG, asking that question.

Q. And your only information is a statement that at some time Mr. Eldred made that statement? A. That is right.

Q. And did you know what he based that on? Did he say that he was sure, or did he say he thought, or what? A. Well, I would say that he based it on conferences he had with Mr. Henning.

Q. And there was an assumption that he could? A. That is right.

Mr. Steffen: I move to strike that answer, Your 5211 Honor, on the ground that it is based purely upon hearsay statements.

Justice Jackson: You ask to have this answer stricken?

Mr. Steffen: I ask to have the answer to Mr. Bromley's last question stricken, in which the witness stated that he thought Mr. Eldred had said something.

Justice Stephens: Do you resist the motion?

Mr. Bromley: Yes, I do. It seems to me his state of mind, in connection with his testimony about the fact that the company never built a plant, makes—

Justice Jackson: (Interposing) That is not the answer that Mr. Steffen wants stricken.

Justice Stephens: I see your point. In other words, you say that regardless of the truth of Mr. Eldred's statements, or accuracy of Mr. Eldred's statements, concerning the possibility of ta ing a license from USG, if this witness had information to that effect it was a circumstance which might have a bearing upon his state of mind as to the necessity of building a plant? Is that your point?

Mr. Bromley: As to why he didn't.

Justice Stephens: As to why he did not build a plant?

Mr. Bromley: Yes.

(The Justices conferred.)

Justice Stephens: My two colleagues think it ought to be stricken as pure hearsay. I should be inclined, myself, to think, Mr. Bromley, that it could stay in, provided 5212 it was shown that the same information was brought to the attention of the other members of the Executive Committee so that it would influence them. I should think it might be a material circumstance bearing upon this man's state of mind, but I defer to the views of my colleagues, and it is stricken.

Mr. Bromley: I would merely like to state, for the benefit of the entire Court, that the testimony now is that this information was in the possession of the majority of the Executive Committee of Oakfield Gypsum Products, because there were only three on the Committee, and Mr. Eldred and Mr. Hansen had that understanding.

Justice Stephens: Who was the third member?

Mr. Bromley: Mr. Merriman.

Justice Stephens: Was that statement by Mr. Eldred brought to the attention of the other two of you?

The Witness: It was, sir.

Mr. Steffen: Do you remember about when that was, Mr. Hansen?

The Witness: I would say sometime between 1932 and 1935, when we were giving the most serious consideration to building the plant.

Justice Stephens: In view of that, do you move to strike it?

Mr. Steffen: I think it would be immaterial one way or the other, Your Honor.

5213 Justice Stephens: Then we will let it stand.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. I want to call your attention again to your testimony on page 5353.

(Copy of testimony handed to the witness.)

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. I think you corrected your testimony again on that, and I should like to have your statement as made to Mr. Bromley, in his last question upon that point.

(The record was read by the reporter as follows:

"Q. Now regardless of your answer as it stands there in the record, from line 4 to line 8, inclusive, isn't it the fact that a correct answer to that question would be:

"'Oakfield would not resell Universal board to dealers, unless you called its three parents dealers'?

"A. That is what I intended to say.")

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Do you regard that, Mr. Hansen, as a different answer than appears in the record as it stands? A. It was the intent that I had when I said this: "Would resell to dealers"—I meant that as repeating the question, sir, and it does not make sense—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) Well, it doesn't make sense unless you read it as a question; and unless, also, you add the word "no".

The Witness: That is right.

Justice Stephens: That is to say—

The Witness: (Interposing) "Would resell to dealers?—no, unless you call", and so forth. That is what I meant to answer, and it is the fact.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. As I understand it, the fact is that Oakfield, at this time, was not selling to dealers except as it might be selling to the three parent companies? A. That is right.

Q. Now, in regard to your property there at Oakfield, when you sold to National the machinery was dismantled, you assume? A. That is right.

Q. And has the mine been operated? A. I believe not.

Q. Now, in regard to your selling to the National Gypsum Company, I think you stated that one of your reasons was that the Oakfield Gypsum Products Corporation business was unprofitable, is that true? A. It was becoming unprofitable.

Q. And will you state why it was becoming unprofitable, in more detail? A. Yes, sir. There were two definite reasons,—a more limited market for neat plaster, which was our principal product of manufacture; and the inability to secure gypsum board and gypsum lath, which it was necessary to market with gypsum plaster, at a discount sufficient to make that business profitable to us.

Q. Did that apply particularly on mixed cars? A. That is right.

Q. And will you explain why that would be true? A. Because of the necessity of taking the gypsum board and lath into the warehouse at Oakfield, rehandling it, and shipping it out, plus the selling expense.

Q. Was there a change in your business, looking to a larger number of mixed car shipments? A. That would be difficult for me to answer, sir.

Q. Well, your business was more unprofitable in 1938 than it had been back in 1930; is that correct? A. That is right.

Q. And can you attribute that to any change in conditions? A. Because we were selling very much more neat plaster in 1930, 1931 and 1932, than we were in 1936 and 1937.

Q. And you were selling more board in 1936 and 1937? A. We were selling more board in 1936 and 1937.

Q. Proportionately? A. That is correct.

5216 Q. And inasmuch as you were losing more money on your board, and you were selling more board, your business was less profitable; is that right? A. That is right.

Q. Now, in regard to this contract between your company and Fairmont, Exhibit No. 357, it is true that you gave what you said was a liberal discount to Mr. Spease? A. I think so.

Q. By "liberal", do you mean that it was unusually large, or what? A. No, it was a good, fair margin.

Q. And you didn't feel free to make him any concession on your board price?

Mr. Bromley: I object to "didn't feel free". I think that that is incompetent and calls for a conclusion.

Justice Stephens: If that is intended as a characterization of the witness' testimony, I think it is not correct, Mr. Steffen. He didn't say that.

Mr. Steffen: I didn't so intend it.

Justice Stephens: You may bring out what he meant by it, if you wish to, on redirect—if there is any doubt about it.

Mr. Steffen: I think that is all, Your Honor.

Mr. Bromley: I have one matter before this witness is excused. I should like to have an understanding that if, after he leaves the jurisdiction, they decide to offer in evidence Exhibits 565, 566 and 567 for Identification.

5217 the Government will recall him for cross examination

Justice Stephens: Were those offers excluded with a reserved right to re-offer on some condition?

Mr. Bromley: No, those were never offered at all. Those were Kelley-Hansen letters.

Justice Stephens: That is right.

Mr. Steffen: I would like now to offer those three letters, Your Honor.

Mr. Bromley: And I object to each one of them as immaterial, because this witness has testified, at page 5399, that they all applied to the Paragon Plaster Company.

Justice Stephens: You mean commencing at line 15?

Mr. Bromley: Yes, sir.

Justice Stephens: That is as to Exhibit 565.

Mr. Steffen: Exhibits 566 and 567 are related.

Justice Stephens: That is right.

Mr. Steffen: Our contention would be that they were addressed to Emil Hansen at 300 West Water Street; that those were also the offices of the Oakfield Gypsum Products Corporation that these were price bulletins furnished by Kelley which may have had to do, as testified on page 5218 5397, with sales by Paragon, but that they were also sales by Oakfield in the sense that Oakfield would sell to Paragon, and Paragon would sell to the dealer.

Justice Stephens: Since the Government's own witness testified that the exhibits related only to Paragon, and testified at the time that he was being examined with the distinction between Paragon and Oakfield in mind, we think the objection is well taken.

Moreover, the exhibits are almost meaningless, on their face, because they are not complete. At least, Exhibit 565 is lacking a bulletin, and 567 refers to 565, apparently, which lacked a bulletin. The two letters are not explanatory on their face. But apart from that, we think the witness himself has testified that they are related only to Paragon, and therefore, under the ruling of the Court with respect to Paragon not being charged with resale price fixing under the pleadings, those exhibits are excluded.

Mr. Bromley: No questions.

Justice Stephens: Mr. Hansen, you are excused, and we thank you for coming here to help the Court.

The Witness: Thank you.

(Witness excused.)

Mr. Knuff: Shall I proceed with the next witness?

Justice Stephens: Yes, do.

Mr. Knuff: Ezra Sensibar, please!

5219 Thereupon, EZRA SENSIBAR, called as a witness for and on behalf of the United States, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Justice Stephens: Have you been a witness before, Mr. Sensibar?

The Witness: Not in this hearing.

Justice Stephens: I don't mean in this case, but in any court.

The Witness: Yes, I have.

Justice Stephens: You are probably familiar with the duties of a witness. Since a case has to be tried according to the issues raised by the complaint and answer, the lawyers are expected to ask questions which are related to those issues, and you should confine your answers, so far as you accurately can, strictly to the questions asked. Don't volunteer any answers, unless it is necessary to make a truthful and accurate answer. If you see adverse counsel rise to make an objection, don't answer until the Court has ruled upon the objection.

The Witness: I will do my best.

Justice Stephens: If you can't answer a question "Yes" or "No", of course, you are not required to. You may feel at ease and free about testifying truthfully and accurately.

5220 The Witness: Thank you.

Direct Examination

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Your name is Ezra Sensibar, is that correct? A. Yes, sir.

Q. At present you are a resident of Mexico City? A. Yes, sir, I am.

Q. And how long have you been in Mexico City, Mr. Sensibar? A. As a resident, since June, 1942.

Q. Were you formerly connected with the Cardiff Gypsum Company? A. Yes, sir, and I still am.

Q. You still are connected with the Cardiff Gypsum Company? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you first become employed by the Cardiff Gypsum Company? A. Along about 1930 or 1931.

Q. In what capacity, at that time? A. As Vice President.

Q. And what is your present capacity with the Cardiff Gypsum Company? A. I am President of the company.

Q. And have been President of the company for 5221 how long? A. Since the summer or fall of 1935.

Q. The Cardiff Gypsum Company's plant is located, if I understand correctly, at Fort Dodge, Iowa, is that correct? A. That is correct, just outside of the city.

Q. Will you explain to the Court the various items that the Cardiff Gypsum Company manufactures? A. The principal product is wall plaster, such as would be used in a room like this. There are a number of other products, in a general way somewhat similar, that are used for special purposes, such as finishing walls; and another product that is called manufacturer's stucco, which is casting material, something used to cast statuary, for example, and other objects.

Q. Do you manufacture any gypsum block? A. No, sir, we do not.

Q. Where are your products sold, Mr. Sensibar—and by "your", I mean the products of the Cardiff Gypsum Company? A. Generally speaking, in the territory bounded on the west by the Rocky Mountains; on the east by Indiana; and on the north by the Canadian line; and toward the south by Texas and the Gulf States.

Q. The products that you manufacture at Fort Dodge are sold throughout that area, is that correct? A. That is right.

5222 Who are the other officers of the Cardiff Gypsum Company, at present? A. Mr. Maurice J. Breen, of Fort Dodge—

Q. (Interposing) Is that "Green" or "Breen"? A. Breen. He is Vice President of the company. Mr. Ira J. MacConnell.

Q. The two men that you have mentioned, in addition to yourself, are the officers of the Cardiff Gypsum Company; is that correct? A. That is right.

Q. Around about 1934 or the beginning of— A. (Interposing) Pardon me. To be perfectly accurate, I should say that Mr. MacConnell resigned some time ago, and has not been replaced.

Q. So that, with that correction, then, Mr. MacConnell was formerly an officer, but recently has resigned? A. That is right.

Q. In 1930, did your company attempt to purchase gypsum board and gypsum lath from any other company?

Mr. Bromley: Just a moment. I object to that as immaterial to any charge in the complaint, the charge, as I understand it, being that the manufacturing distributors named in the bill of particulars were coerced into reselling gypsum board at bulletin prices. There is no charge in the complaint having to do with the inability of 5223 Cardiff Gypsum Company to get gypsum board.

Justice Stephens: Is Cardiff named in the bill of particulars as a manufacturing distributor?

Mr. Bromley: No, sir.

Mr. Knuff: If Your Honor pleases, Cardiff couldn't be named as a manufacturing distributor for the reason that they were never able to purchase board. They couldn't have been named as a manufacturing distributor.

Justice Stephens: Well, I am not saying that you were obliged to. I was just trying to find out what the fact was, and trying to see what the theory of the evidence was, under the pleadings.

What do you intend to prove by this witness, and to what charge in the complaint is it related?

Mr. Knuff: I intend to prove by this witness two principal things: first, that the defendants have conspired to control plaster prices; and, second, that the defendants have conspired to eliminate from the distributive system wholesale distributors who might fail to maintain prices.

Justice Stephens: Read that statement, will you?

(The record was read by the reporter.)

Mr. Knuff: Now, apropos of the first, that is covered by Paragraph 45(c) of the complaint, which appears on page 10; and as to the second, it is covered by Paragraph 121 of the complaint, which appears on page 31 of the complaint.

5224 Justice Stephens: Well, won't you briefly outline, so that the Court can get the theory of relevancy and materiality, how you intend to relate Cardiff to that charge?

Mr. Knuff: Yes, I will outline that briefly.

Justice Stephens: We can't foresee what the proposed testimony is.

Mr. Knuff: Shall I proceed?

Justice Stephens: Yes; just make a very brief statement, you don't need to argue the point.

Mr. Knuff: Beginning early in the 1930's—the exact year the witness will tell us—the Cardiff Gypsum Company endeavored to purchase board from the American Gypsum Company, from United States Gypsum Company, from Certain-teed, from Universal, from National, and from Texas; that endeavor to purchase extended from 1933 down to around 1938 or 1939; that when he went to see the American Gypsum Company to get board from the American, he was told by Mr. Arthur Black of the American Gypsum Company that in view of the fact that the Cardiff Gypsum Company had a reputation on the market as a price-cutter on plaster, he didn't know what could be done for him. However—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) I think you have stated enough to indicate the general theory of the testimony.

Now, what is your objection to that, Mr. Bromley? If the Government can prove that this company was 5225 eliminated or refused products, isn't that material under the general charges here which have been sustained by the majority of the Court?

Mr. Bromley: I didn't think it was, and there is no charge in the complaint that has to do with this, that I can see anywhere.

The reason it has always seemed so clear to me is that this was one part of the criminal indictment, specifically charged there, which was omitted from the bill in equity, completely omitted. It was very definitely charged in the indictment, but when we come to the bill of complaint that allegation is completely omitted.

Justice Stephens: Paragraph 121 charges complete elimination from the distributive system of wholesale distributors who might fail to maintain prices.

What is the other paragraph that you rely on?

Mr. Knuff: Were you addressing me, Your Honor?

Justice Stephens: Yes.

Mr. Knuff: Paragraph 45(c), Your Honor, at page 10.

Justice Stephens: The objection is overruled.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Suppose we start over again with the question. Beginning sometime in 1930, Mr. Sensibar, did the Cardiff Gypsum Company attempt to purchase board and lath from a board and lath manufacturer?

5226 Mr. Bromley: May I have a general objection to all questions having to do with board?

Justice Stephens: With board?

Mr. Bromley: Yes, with board. As I understand, he has two objectives in view,—one is plaster, and the other is board. May I have a general objection to all questions having to do with board?

Justice Jackson: And "board", of course, includes gypsum lath?

Mr. Bromley: Yes, sir.

Justice Stephens: Paragraph 121 relates to board, plaster, and miscellaneous gypsum products. What is the basis of your differentiation in your objection?

Mr. Bromley: I didn't mean to make any at all, I want to object to both types; but I thought he was only now inquiring about board, and when he came to plaster I thought the ground of my objection would be somewhat different.

Justice Stephens: Are you going to examine first on board, and then on plaster?

Mr. Knuff: No, Your Honor. The reasons that they gave for the refusal to sell them board will, in and of themselves, sustain the position that the Government takes that they were trying to maintain plaster prices.

Mr. Bromley: Then may I have a general objection to all the testimony of this witness, as immaterial?

5227 Justice Stephens: You may. The record will show your general objection that this is immaterial, and that it is overruled.

Justice Garrett: When did the witness state that he became connected with the Cardiff Gypsum Company?

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Will you answer that, please? A. I became active in the affairs of the company in 1930 or 1931.

Q. Do you remember the question—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) Let me ask one other question.

This case is so complicated that I don't pretend to remember every detail of it all at once and without notice. Was this subject gone into in the reserved rulings?

Mr. Knuff: Not that I remember, Your Honor.

Mr. Bromley: It was gone into in connection with Mr. Lenci's testimony, as I remember it.

Justice Stephens: Well, we are anxious to have our rulings consistent.

Mr. Bromley: Well, this ruling is consistent with that. I think Mr. Lenci was interrogated, over my objection, as to his dealings with Cardiff, and his attempt to get a consent from USG to sell Cardiff. I think I objected, and I think the Court ruled that that was material, 5228 and it was admitted, Judge Garrett dissenting.

Justice Stephens: Thank you, Mr. Bromley.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Do you remember the question? A. No.

Q. Then I will rephrase it. A. All right, sir.

Q. So we understand one another, Mr. Sensibar, when I use the term "board", I want you to understand that I mean by that term wallboard as well as plasterboard and plaster lath. I am going to use "board" as a general term comprehending both board and lath. A. All right, sir.

Mr. Bromley: I am now told that I was mistaken, that there was some limitation in the ruling of the Court.

Justice Stephens: Well, I would like to have the Court's recollection refreshed, if possible. We want to be consistent, not just to be consistent, but because we try to make each ruling correct, and if our ruling on the objections with respect to Lenci's testimony on this subject was carefully made—as we try to make each of our rulings—we ought to have it in mind in making this one, if it presents the same subject.

Can you refresh our recollection as to the part of the record in which that was discussed?

5229 Mr. Bromley: If I may have a moment, Your Honor; I think that I can find it.

Justice Stephens: Yes, take your time.

We will take the afternoon recess at this time, and perhaps counsel, during the recess, can look up that reference. Perhaps Government counsel can assist on that.

5230 Justice Stephens: Proceed.

Mr. Bromley: This question came up, may it please the Court, during the testimony of the witness Lenci, in connection with Exhibits 523 and following. It was there shown that the Cardiff Gypsum Company had negotiations with the Ebsary Gypsum Company about the purchase of board, and that the Ebsary Gypsum Company applied to USG for USG's consent to Ebsary to sell Cardiff, which consent was refused.

In connection with the proffer of that testimony the Court ruled, in an advisory fashion, on page 4542, saying:

"Justice Stephens: There is nothing before the Court to rule on, but for the guidance of counsel we may say that if these letters, Exhibits 523 to 527, inclusive, are to be offered on the theory that the Government states—which I need not repeat because it is clearly stated on the record—that all of us are agreed, all of the Judges, that they are not admissible under paragraph 45 (e).

"Judge Jackson and I are of the view that they are admissible under paragraph 45 (c), where it is charged that the defendants concertedly raised, maintained and stabilized the general level of prices for plaster and miscellaneous gypsum products.

"We think the proffered evidence may possibly support an inference that the defendants were trying to keep their own prices on plaster up, by keeping the prices of 5231 other people up, although it seems to Judge Jackson and myself that it might support a different inference, that it was a kind of indirect rebating or gift enterprise.

"Judge Garrett is doubtful, I think, whether the evidence is admissible on any theory. In fact, I think it is his view that it is not admissible under any theory of the complaint."

Now, at page 4554—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) If I may interject, I remember now that was the testimony that had to do, was it not, with Mr. Lenci's letter to USG asking for a consent to sell to Cardiff?

Mr. Bromley: Yes, sir.

Justice Stephens: And his failure to get an affirmative response?

Mr. Bromley: Yes, sir.

At page 4554, the following appears:

"Justice Stephens: Now whether or not you named Cardiff as a manufacturing distributor, how could the evidence which you offered, which is evidence that the defendants refused to sell board to Cardiff, prove that they fixed its price?"

And again at page 4556 the Presiding Justice said:

"I don't yet understand how evidence that the defendants refused to sell board to Cardiff could tend to prove that they were fixing the price of other manufacturing distributors on board, since this company was only a plaster price-cutter."

5232 Finally, at page 4582 there was the general ruling, beginning at line 5:

"Justice Stephens: I am referring to the ruling in which Judge Jackson and myself indicated that this class of evidence was admissible under paragraph 45 (c) of the complaint, but not under 45 (e), to which Judge Garrett dissented, thinking it inadmissible at all. That is clear now, I think."

Justice Jackson: Did we make any reference at all to paragraph 121, Mr. Bromley?

Mr. Bromley: Yes, sir.

At page 4540, beginning in line 21, I said:

"Paragraph 121 is under the effect of the combination. It is not a charge of the combination or its scope. The last sentence to which counsel refers, or the last part of the last sentence, "have completely eliminated from the distributive system wholesale distributors who might fail to maintain said prices", I think plainly refers to jobbers, I think a reading of the whole complaint shows that reference is to the allegations in paragraph 94 that we conspired to sell only to jobbers who sold to dealers, who maintained bulletin prices.

"I did not before understand that the use of the words "wholesale distributors" was ever intended to broaden the scope of the allegations of the conspiracy, and I think all of us have understood that to mean merely jobbers."

5233 Then the record shows the following:

"Justice Stephens: Do you wish to be heard, Mr. Knuff?

"Mr. Knuff: No, your Honor, I think not.

"Justice Stephens: Of course there is no offer before the Court, but the Government states that exhibit numbers—

"Mr. Knuff: (Interposing) Beginning with Exhibit 523 and going to 527, so far.

"Justice Stephens: (Continuing) Exhibits 523, 524, 525, 526, and 527 are to be offered—do you offer them at this time?"

So I thought it was accepted that paragraph 121 did not cover, and the final ruling of the Court was that the Lenci evidence was only admissible under 45 (c), having to do with plaster prices.

Justice Stephens: Judge Jackson and I will rule as we did before, that the evidence is admissible for what it may be worth, subject to the same doubts that we expressed previously as to its value, under paragraph 45 (c).

Judge Garrett will make a separate statement.

Justice Garrett: I suppose that from the standpoint of personal consistency I should again dissent. But the situation is somewhat different from what it was when I dissented before. It has been my uniform practice, after a majority of my associates—when I was sitting with associates—would pass upon a question, to acquiesce in 5234 that holding and treat it as the settled rule or law of the case. Hence, I do not persist in any dissent in this instance.

Justice Stephens: In other words, you feel bound by the ruling when it has once been made?

Justice Garrett: Yes.

Justice Stephens: I think we all take that position.

You may proceed, Mr. Knuff.

Mr. Bromley: May I have the record show that I have a continuing objection to all of this witness' testimony?

Justice Stephens: The record may so show, and it is overruled.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. In the early part of 1930, did your company make an effort to purchase board from any other manufacturer? A. I don't know of any such attempts.

Q. Maybe I didn't make myself clear—I meant to say in the early 1930's? A. Oh, I beg your pardon. Yes, beginning with the summer of 1933.

Mr. Knuff: Mr. Sensibar, will you kindly speak a little louder so that Mr. Johnston may be able to hear.

Mr. Johnston: If the Court please, I don't want the record to insinuate that I am the only old man here. I think that a good many others are having trouble hearing.

Justice Stephens: Yes, I was having trouble,
5235 Mr. Johnston, I will share the trouble with you. (Laughter)

Mr. Knuff: I was just beginning to wonder if I was getting away with that "shot from ambush", but I see I wasn't successful. (Laughter)

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. From what company did the Cardiff Gypsum Company endeavor to purchase board? A. I believe that the first people with whom we discussed the question was the Universal Gypsum Company.

Q. Who conducted those negotiations? A. I did.

Q. And whom in Universal did you contact? A. Mr. Eugene Holland.

Q. And where did you contact Mr. Holland? A. In Chicago, in the Edgewater Beach Hotel, where we were holding meetings all that summer with respect to establishing a code under the NRA and—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) Now, Mr. Sensibar, just in the interests of saving time, let this question illustrate the purpose of my little injunction to you at the time we started out.

Read this question to the witness.

(The question was read by the reporter.)

Justice Stephens: The answer to that question should be "the Edgewater Beach Hotel in Chicago." But you proceeded to go on and state how you happened to be there, what the purpose of the meeting was, and that you had been there all summer. You weren't asked that. You were simply asked where you met. Please answer questions directly. If counsel want to bring out those other matters, they will do that.

The Witness: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Can you fix the time a little bit more definitely than the summer of 1933; can you give us the month? A. I would say it began in June.

Q. And did you have one meeting or more than one meeting with Mr. Holland? A. I had a number of them.

Q. And by a "number", what do you mean? A. Perhaps six or eight.

Q. What did you ask Mr. Holland? A. I asked him whether we might not make arrangements so that Cardiff would be sold board on the customary industry basis.

Q. And what was the customary industry basis?

Mr. Bromley: May this testimony having to do with what Mr. Holland said be received subject to the usual reservation?

Justice Stephens: Yes. I think it should be received subject to the usual reservation. It is a declaration of Holland.

5237 Mr. Bromley: May that be understood also as to the future testimony?

Justice Stephens: It may be, and the record may so show.

Mr. Knuff: What was my question?

(The question was read by the reporter as follows:)

"And what was the customary industry basis?"

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. By "customary industry basis" what do you mean? A. I mean a discount of 15 percent on long board and 12-1/2 percent on lath.

Q. What did Mr. Holland say to you, if anything? A. He told me that that would be a matter for the final decision of USG, and that he thought that if they would be willing for us to have the board and lath at all, they would be willing to sell it directly; that since they had a plant at Fort Dodge, that perhaps I might take it up with them directly.

Q. And did Mr. Holland ever state to you that he would endeavor to secure permission from USG to sell your company board? A. Yes. I persisted with him, pointing out that he perhaps was in a better position to get that consent from USG than we were directly.

Q. And did he later tell you whether or not he was 5238 able to get the consent? A. He told me that he had discussed it with them a number of times, and that they had refused it.

Q. Did he tell you why they had refused it? A. He told me that there was a general impression in the industry that Cardiff had been cutting prices on gypsum plaster; that he doubted, under those circumstances, whether we could make a connection to get board.

Q. And were you able to secure board from Universal? A. No, sir.

Q. Now, is that the substance of all the conversation that you had with Mr. Holland? A. Perhaps not. I asked him as a matter of advice what, in his opinion, he thought we might do. I explained to him the situation of the Cardiff Company, that the control had changed hands, and that I understood the objections of the industry to the policies of the company under the management that had existed up to that time; but I explained that a change had taken place, and in view of that I asked him what he would advise us to do, as newcomers entering into the control of the company.

Mr. Bromley: What was the date of this, please?

Mr. Knuff: What was the date of the conversation that you are now relating, that you had with Mr. Holland?

The Witness: The summer of 1933.

By Mr. Knuff:

5239 Q. Now when you say that you stated to him that the control had changed hands, will you tell us just what you mean by that? I am not sure that I know. A. The Cardiff Gypsum Company had been founded by and the control at that time, the stock control, was in the hands of the Breen family, in Fort Dodge, Iowa, and sometime before that my brother and I had acquired from various interests in Fort Dodge, a controlling percentage of the stock of the company.

Q. And when you say that the control had changed hands, you mean by that that the Breen family was no longer in control of the policies of the Cardiff Gypsum Company, is that correct? A. Well, not quite. Mr. Tom Breen was at that time the president and the manager of the company, but neither he nor his family any longer had a controlling stock interest, and I explained to Mr. Holland at that time that it was our intention to take an active interest in the management of the business, and that he might therefore expect that the policies of the company would change.

Q. What did Mr. Holland say to that? A. He welcomed it and said that he thought that after some short time, after some showing actually of a different policy with respect to sales, that the attitude toward the company might change; and he advised me that in the meantime our 5240 best bet was to take up the matter with the American Gypsum Company.

Q. Now is that the substance of the various conversations that you had with Mr. Holland? Have you given us the substance of all the conversations? A. Yes, sir, as far as I can remember it.

Q. In 1933 did you contact anyone at USG in an attempt to purchase board from USG? A. Only by way of casual conversation with Mr. Henning.

Q. Was this before your contact with Mr. Holland or after your contact with Mr. Holland, or while you were negotiating with Mr. Holland? A. Yes, it was during that same period.

Q. And while the negotiations were on between you and Mr. Holland? A. That is right.

Q. What did you say to Mr. Henning, if anything? A. I believe I said to him one day, in the company of Mr. Bale—

Q. (Interposing) Mister who? A. James Bale—I believe I explained to him the changed status with respect to the stock ownership of Cardiff, and our plans with respect to entering into the active management of Cardiff, and expressed again the hope that the company would be treated a little differently than they had been in the past.

5241 Q. At that time did you endeavor to buy any board from USG?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as incompetent, because calling for a conclusion. Let him ask what he said.

Justice Stephens: Sustained. Ask the witness what he said, and what Mr. Henning said.

Mr. Knuff: I don't understand Mr. Bromley's objection. I am asking if he endeavored to buy board from USG.

Justice Stephens: Well, whether he endeavored to buy it or not is a form of conclusion which the Court might draw if we hear what he said to Mr. Henning. Ask for the conversation with Mr. Henning on the subject of the possible purchase of board.

Mr. Knuff: All right, sir.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. With reference to the purchase of board, did you have any conversation with Mr. Henning? A. I believe I discussed with him the difficulties that Tom Breen had told me of, in that the company had tried for some time to get board and had been persistently refused that privilege, and I went over the same ground with him that I just related as to the new attitude and policy of the company, and our hope that conditions would change.

Q. What, if anything, did Mr. Henning say to you? A. He gave me encouragement in that respect.

5242 Mr. Bromley: I move to strike the answer out as a conclusion.

Mr. Knuff: I think that the answer probably should go out as a conclusion.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Can you tell us what Mr. Henning said to you?

Justice Stephens: Let me explain to you, Mr. Sensibar, so you won't be confused. You are not expected to recollect the exact words, unless you happen to, but you can give the substance and effect of what Mr. Henning said, rather than characterizing it as an "encouragement" or a "discouragement". We can tell whether it was encouraging or discouraging after we hear what he said in substance and effect.

The Witness: All right, sir.

Mr. Henning confirmed the fact that it was the impression around his organization that Cardiff had been a price-cutter in the plaster field, and that this was not a very propitious time to talk about such a matter as I wanted to discuss; but that after a little experience with the new policy of Cardiff, the situation might be better.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Now, coming back to the Universal Gypsum Company, did you buy, or were you able to buy board from Universal? A. No, sir.

Q. Were you able to buy board from USG in 1933?

5243 A. No, sir.

Q. Throughout my questions, Mr. Sensibar, I want you to understand that when I say, "Were you able to buy board?", I mean by that were you able to buy board at a discount. You will understand that, will you? A. Yes, sir, I understand that.

Q. And have these questions which you have answered been answered on that basis? A. Yes, they have.

Q. Did you contact any other companies in 1933 with reference to the purchase of board at a discount? A. I think in the fall of that year that I began to talk to the American Gypsum Company of Port Clinton, Ohio.

Q. With whom in the American Gypsum Company did you negotiate? A. With Arthur Black.

Q. I show you what have been marked for identification as Government Exhibits 572, 573, 574, and 575.

(The documents referred to were marked as Government Exhibit Nos. 572, 573, 574 and 575, for identification.)

(Government Exhibits Nos. 572, 573, 574 and 575 were handed to the witness.)

Mr. Knuff: Exhibit 572 is a copy of a telegram, dated 8-25-33, addressed to the American Gypsum Com-5244 pany and signed—Ezra Sensibar.

Exhibit 573 for identification is a telegram dated August 25, 1933, addressed to Mr. Ezra Sensibar, and signed—American Gypsum Company.

Government's Exhibit 574 for identification is the original of a letter, dated September 21, 1933, addressed to Mr. Ezra Sensibar, and signed American Gypsum Company.

Government's Exhibit No. 575 for identification is a copy of a telegram, dated 10-3-33, addressed to the American Gypsum Company and signed—Ezra Sensibar.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Did you send the original of Government's Exhibit 572 for identification to the American Gypsum Company? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you receive, in answer to that telegram, Government's Exhibit 573 for identification? A. Yes, I did.

Mr. Knuff: I offer Government's Exhibits 572 and 573 in evidence.

Mr. Bromley: I object on the ground that they are completely immaterial.

Justice Stephens: Overruled; they are received in evidence subject to the usual reservation with respect to declarations of alleged co-conspirators.

(Government's Exhibits Nos. 572 and 573 were received in evidence.)

5245 By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Pursuant to the matter stated in the telegram, that you could come Monday or Tuesday, that is in the telegram—Exhibit 573—did you go to Port Clinton? A. Yes, I did.

Q. And did you go at about the time that was specified in the telegram? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see Mr. Black? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Will you relate to the Court the conversation that you had with Mr. Black? A. I discussed with him the need that Cardiff Gypsum Company had for a wallboard and lath connection, and pointed out to him that it ought to be a very good thing for his company, especially since our sales territory reached out a good deal farther than his sales territory did, and in that way that it might increase his business immeasurably.

Mr. Black told me that from his point of view, as sales manager of the company, it was a desirable proposition, and that he would do all he could to put it through, but that the final decision would not depend on him or on his company, but would depend on what USG would permit them to do.

Q. At that time was any reference made as to your 5246 sales policies with reference to plaster? A. Yes. We discussed that at some length.

Q. Can you tell us what that discussion was? A. My recollection is that at that time there had been some specific complaint made—I can't remember now where the complaint was—as to some sale by Cardiff allegedly below the market price. He wanted some facts regarding that, so that he could use them in any discussion of the subject.

Q. And did you convey to Mr. Black the information that you had concerning the complaint he mentioned to you? A. Yes, I did.

Q. You cannot recall now the name of the specific job about which the complaint was made? A. No, I am afraid not.

Q. How long were you in Port Clinton at that time? A. All day, I think.

Q. When next did you see Mr. Black after your first trip to Port Clinton? A. I saw him at another time on a Sunday, several weeks later.

Q. Where? A. At his home.

Q. In Port Clinton? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did you have any conversation with him at that time, and if so will you relate the conversation, if 5247 you can, and if you cannot, the substance of the conversation? A. Well, several weeks had elapsed, and I was pressing him for an answer on the matter.

Q. And by "an answer on the matter", what do you mean?

A. As to whether they would sell to Cardiff on the usual industry basis. He told me either that he hadn't been able to take it up with USG or hadn't gotten an answer. In any event, he didn't have an answer at that time, and he said that he would let me know shortly. It seems to me he said he was going to make a special trip to Chicago to talk to them about it.

Q. Did you receive from Mr. Black the letter that is marked for identification as Government's Exhibit 574? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did you receive this from Mr. Black before your conversation with him on the Sunday that you mentioned, or after you had had that conversation? A. I think it was before.

Q. Before? A. I think so.

Mr. Knuff: We now offer in evidence Government's Exhibit 574.

Mr. Bromley: I object to it as immaterial to any charge in the complaint.

Justice Stephens: That is overruled and the ex-5248 hibit is received in evidence.

Mr. Bromley: That will be subject to the usual reservation?

Justice Stephens: Yes. All of these are coming in, as far as they are statements by Mr. Black, subject to the usual reservation with respect to declarations of alleged co-conspirators.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Did you see Mr. Black after your visit to him at his home on the Sunday which you have just referred to, and if so where and when? A. Yes, I saw him after that, and I think it was about October or November, subsequent to that, at a Gypsum Association meeting.

Q. Where? A. I couldn't say.

Q. Where were the Gypsum Association meetings held? A. They were held in various cities. About half of them were in Chicago, and the others were held in Buffalo and elsewhere.

Q. And did you have any conversation with him at that time concerning the purchase of board at a discount? A. Yes, I did.

5249 Q. And what was that conversation, please? A. He told me that the USG had finally refused permission for them to sell us, and that he had no particular hope of getting them to reverse the decision, and he thought for the time being we might as well drop the matter.

Q. Were you able to buy board from the American Gypsum Company? A. No, sir.

Mr. Bromley: At a discount?

Mr. Knuff: At a discount?

The Witness: No, sir.

Mr. Knuff: I now offer in evidence Government's Exhibit 575.

Mr. Bromley: The same objection.

Justice Stephens: Overruled. Received in evidence subject to the usual reservation with respect to declarations of alleged co-conspirators.

(Government's Exhibit No. 575 was received in evidence.)

Justice Stephens: The record may show that these exhibits are being received by the Court as connected with and showing a foundation for the conversations. They are not, of course, directly probative of the issue involved, but we think they are a proper preliminary foundation for the conversations which have been testified to.

5250 Mr. Knuff: That is all we are offering them for, your Honor.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Did you receive the telegram marked Government's Exhibit 575 before the conversation with Mr. Black at the Gypsum Association meeting, or after you had the conversation with him? A. I believe it was before that.

Justice Garrett: You asked him if he had received that—he sent it, didn't he?

Mr. Knuff: I should have said—Did you send this telegram to Mr. Black before the conversation that you had with him at the Gypsum Association meeting, or after the conversation that you had with him at the Gypsum Association meeting?

The Witness: Before, I believe.

Mr. Knuff: Thank you for calling that to my attention, your Honor.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Did you endeavor in 1933 to purchase board at a discount from any other gypsum manufacturer, other than the ones that you have mentioned? Now, I am limiting that question to 1933? A. Well, I believe I talked with Warren Henley of Certain-teed regarding that problem.

Q. When you say you believe you talked with 5251 Warren Henley, do you mean by that, that that is your best recollection? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And where did you talk with Mr. Henley? A. At his office.

Q. In Chicago? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And will you tell us the conversation that you had with Mr. Henley? A. It arose out of a general discussion regarding the Code that we were then working on. There were a number of questions involved on which there was a difference of opinion, and one was whether the situation should be created so that jobbers might exist in the industry. That was one of the matters discussed there.

Several of us met one day in his office to talk about that, to see whether we had anything in common on that subject. During that conversation the situation of Cardiff Gypsum came up, as a related question, and I pointed out to him at that time what we believed was the inequity of the existing situation.

Q. What did you point out? A. That Cardiff alone, of all of the independent plaster manufacturers, was not accorded a regular industry status.

Q. And by "regular industry status" what did you mean?

A. I meant the arrangement for the purchase of 5252 board and lath at a 15 percent and 12-1/2 percent discount.

Q. And you say you pointed that out to him? A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. Go ahead with the rest of the conversation. A. And the question was discussed there as to whether that was a proper matter to treat in the Code, and it was his opinion—

Mr. Bromley: (Interposing) Can't we have more of the conversation and less conclusions about it, if the Court pleases?

Mr. Knuff: What I am interested in, Mr. Sensibar, right now, is the conversation that you had with Mr. Henley relative to buying board from him. Will you try to confine your answers to that particular phase?

Justice Stephens: State what Mr. Henley said, so far as you remember, or in substance and effect, on that subject.

The Witness: He said that he believed that that was a matter that ought to be treated among the companies involved rather than in the Code, and that he would undertake to try to do something about it as far as his company was concerned.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Did you ask Mr. Henley to be allowed to purchase board from Certain-teed? A. Yes, that is right.

Q. And what, if anything, did he say he would do?
5253 A. He said that he had been receiving a constant stream of complaints from his sales organization about situations where Cardiff had sold plaster off the market price, and that he would look into those and see whether he could convert some other members of the organization to his belief that they ought to do business with us.

Q. And did he explain what he meant by "some other members of the organization," or did he use those words? A. I don't remember, I am sure, what words he used. The thing that we were thinking about naturally was the salesmen of the company out in the various markets, the sales managers.

Q. Did Mr. Henley tell you that Certain-teed would sell board to Cardiff? A. No, sir.

Q. Did he tell you that they would endeavor to obtain the consent of USG to allow them to sell board at a discount to Cardiff? A. He said that first he would have to convert some other people in his own organization.

Q. That is in Certain-teed's organization? A. Yes, sir—and then it would be naturally a matter for USG to decide.

Q. And did you talk to him later about that? A. I spoke with him again—when you say "later", do you 5254 mean right after this time, right after this period?

Q. Well, at any time. A. Yes, sir. I opened the subject with him after the reorganization of the Cardiff Gypsum Company.

Q. What do you mean by the "reorganization of the Cardiff Gypsum Company"? A. The Cardiff Gypsum went through a 77-B reorganization—

Q. (Interposing) That was in 1935? A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will come to that later. But in 1933 did you talk to Mr. Henley as to whether or not he was able to obtain the consent of USG for Certain-teed to sell you board? A. Yes, the thing was discussed a number of times after that.

Q. And what was the discussion? A. As to whether he had received their consent, and he told me he had not.

Q. And were you able to buy board from Certain-teed? A. No, sir.

Q. And you never did buy any board from Certain-teed, is that correct? A. That is correct.

Q. Now, you spoke of a reorganization of the Cardiff Gypsum Company—just tell us what you meant by 5255 that, please. A. The Cardiff Gypsum Company was reorganized in 1935 under 77-B, and resumed business as a reorganized company in August of that year.

Q. Did the Cardiff Gypsum Company file a voluntary petition in bankruptcy under 77-B, or was there an involuntary petition filed, and later Cardiff filed a petition under 77-B? A. The latter is the case.

Q. That is, an involuntary petition was filed to declare Cardiff a bankrupt? A. Yes, in January of that year.

Q. 1935? A. That is right.

Q. And pursuant to that involuntary petition and acting in the bankruptcy courts, the Cardiff Gypsum Company filed a petition under section 77-B for reorganization? A. That is correct.

Q. And the company was reorganized and resumed business in August of 1935? A. That is right.

Q. Now, in 1935, did you endeavor to purchase board at a discount from USG? A. Yes, sir, we did.

Q. With whom in USG did you talk? A. I think first with Mr. Knode.

Q. I have reference to the year 1935. You talked 5256 with Mr. Oliver Knode during that year? A. Yes.

Q. And what was his position with the company at that time? A. He was either vice president or president.

Q. What conversation did you have with Knode? A. I told him about the reorganization of the company, that we had started in business again, and that Mr. Breen was no longer to have any active connection with the company, that I was taking an active hand in the management of it and in establishing the sales policies of the company; and I asked whether we might not be put on the usual industry basis with respect to the sale of board and lath.

Q. And what, if anything, did Mr. Knode tell you? A. I think he told me to take it up with Mr. Keady.

Q. Did you take it up with Mr. Keady? A. Yes, I did.

Q. And what was Mr. Keady's connection with the company? A. I believe he was vice president in charge of sales, or else sales manager at that time.

Q. You are not sure of his official position, his official title, with the company? A. No, sir.

Q. What, if anything, did you say to Mr. Keady? A. That since he was relatively a newcomer to the 5257 industry, I hoped we could start with a clean slate as far as both of us were concerned.

Q. What did you mean by that, that he was relatively a newcomer to the industry? A. That he had been in that position just a short time.

Q. By a "short time", what do you mean, a matter of years, a matter of months, or a matter of days? A. No, it might have been a year or so.

Q. Proceed. A. And that I felt that with him in an active, responsible position, we might be able to forget; in our discussions, these things that were persistently dragged in about what had happened years and years before, and that we might approach this question of the status of Cardiff purely on a business basis, and without any emotional bias about what had happened; and I asked him whether, from that point of view, he didn't regard it as a good thing for USG to treat Cardiff on the same basis as anybody else would be treated.

5258 Q. And by that what did you mean? A. Given the usual industry recognition with respect to the purchase of board and lath.

Q. What did Mr. Keady say to you, if anything? A. Mr. Keady said that it sounded perfectly reasonable to him but that he would have to take it up with some other members of the organization to see how people around the office felt about it.

Q. And is that all the conversation you had with Mr. Keady at that time? A. I think it is, in substance.

Q. Did you talk with Mr. Henning in 1935? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Before you talked to Mr. Keady or after you talked to Mr. Keady? A. I think before.

Q. Before? A. I think so.

Q. I think I asked you a little while ago with whom you first took up, in USG, in 1935, this matter, and you said that it was Mr. Knode, and that Mr. Knode then sent you to Mr. Keady— A. (Interposing): I believe I made a mistake. I believe that it was Mr. Charles Henning that I saw at that time, and that the discussions with Mr. Keady came later.

Q. Let's see if we can get it straight. With what 5259 official of U. S.G., in 1935, did you first take up the purchase of board, was it Henning or was it Knode? A. No, it was Knode, I am sure of that, and he sent me to Mr. Henning. I was mistaken when I said that Mr. Knode sent me to Mr. Henning.

Q. You say you were mistaken when you said that Mr. Knode sent you to Mr. Henning? A. I am sorry, I meant I was mistaken when I said that I took it up then with Mr.

Keady. Mr. Knode sent me to Mr. Charles Henning. It was a year or so later that I talked with Mr. Keady, not at this time in 1935.

Q. In 1935 you first talked to Knode, and Knode sent you to Henning? A. That is right.

Q. Are you clear on that? A. Yes, I am quite clear on that.

Q. You were mistaken before when you said that Mr. Knode sent you to Mr. Keady, is that correct? A. That is correct.

Q. And you wish to change your testimony? A. I do, yes.

Q. What, if anything, did you say to Mr. Henning, and what did Mr. Henning say to you, about the purchase of board? A. I reviewed with Mr. Henning the conversation 5260 that I had just had with Mr. Knode about the reorganization of the Cardiff Gypsum Company, and about the fact that I was taking or was going to take over the responsible management, and that they would no longer have to deal with Tom Breen, and that they could look forward to a different policy with respect to sales.

Q. Now did you tell him what your policy would be? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what did you tell him your policy would be in the future? A. That we would expect to have a normal dealer policy, giving up the policy of the old company of selling directly to contractors.

Q. And will you explain just exactly what you mean by "normal dealer policy"?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that unless he told it to Mr. Henning.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Did you use the words "normal dealer policy" in your conversation with Mr. Henning? A. I wouldn't be sure of the word "normal"; but I would as to the words "dealer policy".

Q. And did you explain to Mr. Henning what you meant by "dealer policy"? A. I don't think so.

Q. What did you mean by "dealer policy"?

5261 Mr. Bromley: I object to that as incompetent, if he didn't tell Mr. Henning what he meant by it.

Justice Stephens: It may be possible for the witness to explain that it was a phrase which had a common meaning to him and to Mr. Henning. We will have to see. Subject to a motion to strike, you may answer.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. What did you mean by the use of the expression "dealer policy"? A. It refers to a policy by a manufacturer under which he expects to, and does, make a very high percentage of his sales directly to building material dealers, rather than directly to contractors.

Q. And did you explain to Mr. Henning at this time what your price policy would be? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you tell Mr. Henning your price policy would be? A. That we expected to get the full market price.

Q. The full market price? A. Yes, the full price prevailing at any particular time in any particular market.

Q. Just go on and tell us the rest of the conversation that you had with Mr. Henning, please? A. I pointed out 5262 to him that if they expected Cardiff to turn over a new leaf with respect to sales policy, that they also had to give some cooperation; that they couldn't very well expect to set rules under which a company couldn't make a living, and at the same time have them abide by those rules; and that part of the solution to that problem would be to put Cardiff on the same basis as anybody else, and not treat them as an outlaw, but give them the right to sell board and lath on the usual basis.

Q. What, if anything, did Henning say to you? A. His reply to me was that my position was sound, but that he doubted very much whether he could put it over in his organization; that everybody would be afraid that if they gave us board and lath to sell, we would use our plaster in order to sell the board and lath.

Q. And did you give Mr. Henning any assurances as to what your conduct would be, in that event? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Will you tell us what you told Mr. Henning? A. I explained to him that we were in no position, considering our production costs, to sell plaster in any market consistently under the market price; that we had no intention of doing it; and that giving us these other products to sell, which were extremely necessary to the financial health of the company, would probably be the best assurance they could hope to have that that policy would be carried out.

5263 Q. Was there any other conversation at that time with Mr. Henning? A. Only that he would discuss it with his organization and let me know.

Q. Did you see Mr. Henning sometime after that? A. Yes, I did.

Q. About how long after this first visit with Mr. Henning was it until you saw him the second time? A. Oh, a matter of weeks, perhaps four, or five, or six weeks, or something like that.

Q. Where did you see him, at his office? A. At his office in Chicago, yes.

Q. And did you have any conversation the second time about the purchase of board from USG? A. Yes sir.

Q. And will you tell us just what the conversation was, please? A. I pressed him for a favorable decision on it, and he told me that there were people in his organization who were still not willing to believe that we would sell, or continue to sell, plaster at the going prices; that he had had some good reports about what we had done during those few months since the reorganization, but that it would have to be a matter of time to convince the others in the organization.

Q. And were you able, in 1935, to buy board from 5264 USG at a discount? A. No sir.

Q. Did you contact any other companies in 1935 in an endeavor to purchase board at a discount from them? A. National.

Q. In 1935? A. In 1936, probably.

Q. 1936? A. Yes.

Q. Well, now, can you tell us what time in 1936 it was that you contacted National, whether it was in the Spring or Summer, or when? A. I can't place it very accurately.

Q. I would like to show you what has been marked for identification as Government's Exhibit 576, the same being a letter, dated February 1, 1936, addressed to Mr. Arthur Black and signed by Ezra Sensibar.

(The document referred to was marked for identification as Government Exhibit No. 576.)

(The document referred to was handed to the witness for examination)

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Will you please look at that letter and tell us whether or not that is your signature thereon? A. Yes sir, 5265 it is.

Q. Now in view of the date in that letter, do you care to change your testimony as to which company you first contacted in 1936 with reference to the purchase of board? A. Yes, it was the American Gypsum Company.

Mr. Knuff: I now offer in evidence Government Exhibit No. 576.

Mr. Bromley: I make the same objection.

Justice Stephens: The objection is overruled, and the document is received in evidence subject to the usual reservation with respect to declarations of alleged co-conspirators.

Justice Stephens: We will take the afternoon recess at this time. Before we adjourn I want to state that at the time the opinion of the Court on the motion to strike Paragraph 46(a) was copied into the record, my secretaries did not have time to proof read it. During recent recesses they have very carefully proof read it and have found a number of clerical errors. Also I made in the original opinion, which is filed with the Clerk, one or two minor changes in diction. None of these affect the sense or substance of the opinion.

For the convenience of the court reporter, during the recent recess I asked him informally to make these corrections in the record, but I wish now to cover it by a 5266 formal order and I hand to the Court reporter the list of corrections, to be copied into the record at this point.

(The list of corrections referred to is as follows:)

Memorandum of corrections to be made in the transcript—pages 684-731—Paragraph 46(a)

5271 IN THE

DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Civil Action No. 8017

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

Plaintiff,

v.

UNITED STATES GYPSUM COMPANY; NATIONAL GYPSUM COMPANY; CERTAIN-TEED PRODUCTS CORPORATION; THE CELOTEX CORPORATION; EBSARY GYPSUM COMPANY, INC.; NEWARK PLASTER COMPANY; SAMUEL M. GLOYD, doing business under the name of TEXAS CEMENT PLASTER COMPANY; SEWELL L. AVERY; OLIVER M. KNODE; MELVIN H. BAKER; BROR H. DAHLBERG; HENRY J. HARTLEY; FREDERICK G. EBSARY; and FREDERICK TOMKINS,

Defendants.

Seventh Floor,
Internal Revenue Building,
Washington, D. C.,
Friday, March 24, 1944.

The above-entitled cause came on for further hearing at 10:00 o'clock a. m., pursuant to adjournment, before Honorable Harold M. Stephens, Honorable Finis J. Garrett, and Honorable Joseph R. Jackson, sitting as the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

APPEARANCES:

(Same as heretofore noted.)

5275 Thereupon, EZRA SENSIBAR the witness on the stand at the time of adjournment, resumed his testimony as follows:

Direct Examination (resumed)

Justice Stephens: Are you ready?

Mr. Knuff: Yes, Your Honor.

Justice Stephens: Very well, proceed.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Mr. Sensibar, at the conclusion of the proceedings yesterday evening, I believe you had before you the letter of February 1, 1936, Government's Exhibit 576? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you, sometime previous to the letter, Government's Exhibit 576, contact Mr. Arthur Black with reference to purchasing board from the American Gypsum Company at a discount? A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. Will you relate the circumstances of that conference with Mr. Black, please, giving us the date, as near as possible; the place where you saw him; and, as nearly 5276 as you can, the conversation that you had with him?

A. That was some time, some few months, after we resumed business, when the company was reorganized in August, 1935. I dare say it was November or December of that year. I visited him at Port Clinton, in line with a suggestion that he had made several years before, that when conditions changed, and after some experience with our company's policy in the industry, something might be done in the way of a board connection.

We discussed the situation as to what changes had taken place in the attitude of the industry toward Cardiff Gypsum Company, and whether something could be done about a board connection.

He told me that a matter that had been brought to his attention, in the nature of a complaint, concerned our sale of plaster on a Government housing project in Indianapolis, which was called the Community Housing Project, and that there had been some allegation that we had sold plaster below the prevailing market price, and that he thought he ought to have information about that in order to be able to proceed with our request to establish a board connection.

I gave him the data on it at that time.

Q. What did you tell him at that time? A. I told him the dealer to whom the material had been sold, and the price, and the conditions of sale, so that he might 5277 check and see whether they were the reigning conditions at the time or whether they did, in fact, establish a new low market price.

Justice Jackson: Did you mean "reigning" or "prevailing"?

The Witness: "Prevailing".

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Go ahead, Mr. Sensibar. A. I think that was the substance of the conversation, before this letter.

Justice Jackson: Was that the Severin job that is mentioned in this letter?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Will you look at the second sentence of the second paragraph in Government's Exhibit 576, and tell me what you meant by the expression: "that the transaction was handled in the method customary in the industry and approved by yourself and others"? A. That is, that the sale was made through a recognized local dealer.

Q. And at what price? A. At the prevailing market price.

Q. Now, when you had this conversation with Mr. Black, did Mr. Black tell you that he would contact USG?

5278 A. Yes, he did.

Q. And what did he tell you concerning that? A. He told me that he would first investigate the figures that I had given him. He told me at the time that he had no doubt that I was telling him the truth about the matter, but he wanted to confirm it; and that after confirming it, if he was satisfied, he would then take it up with USG and see whether he could get permission to sell us board.

Q. I show you what has been marked for Identification as Government's Exhibit 577, the same being a letter dated February 10, 1936, addressed to Mr. Ezra Sensibar, and unsigned.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 577 for Identification.)

(Government's Exhibit No. 577 for Identification was handed to the witness.)

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Did you receive the original of that letter, sir? A. Yes, I did.

Q. And whose signature appeared thereon? A. Arthur Black's signature.

Mr. Knuff: We offer in evidence Government's Exhibit No. 577.

5279 Justice Stephens: Let us read it.

(Government's Exhibit No. 577 for Identification examined by the Court.)

Justice Stephens: Is there any objection?

Mr. Bromley: We make the usual objection, and the further objection that it is immaterial.

Justice Stephens: Received in evidence, subject to the usual reservation with respect to declarations of alleged co-conspirators.

(The document referred to, marked as Government's Exhibit No. 577, was received in evidence.)

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. After receiving Government's Exhibit 577, did you have any further conversation with Mr. Black? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Where? A. I believe in Chicago.

Q. When? A. I would say within a month after that time.

Q. What was discussed at that time? A. I pressed him then for an answer on the board question. He was in Chicago, as I recall it, and had discussed it with USG; and he told me that there was simply no chance, that he didn't think that they could get USG to change their earlier 5280 opinion about the matter.

Mr. Bromley: I take it, when the witness said that Black talked to USG, he means that Black told him that he talked to USG—is that right?

Justice Stephens: Is that what you mean?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Did he tell you any conversation or any statements that any representative of USG had made? A. No, I don't think so. At least, I can't remember.

Q. Were you able to purchase board from American Gypsum Company at a discount, in 1936? A. No, sir.

Q. Were you ever able to purchase board from American Gypsum Company at a discount? A. Never.

Q. Did you make any further efforts, after your talk with Mr. Black in early 1936, to purchase board from American Gypsum Company, at any later time? A. Well, in a general way, after they were taken over by Celotex, which was some time later.

Q. But not from American? A. No, sir.

Q. Now, did you talk with any other manufacturer, in 1936, concerning the purchase of board at a dis-5281 count? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What manufacturer did you talk to? A. National.

Q. With whom in National did you talk? A. At various times, with Mr. Baker and with Mr. Burley; and later, I think, with Mr. Best.

Q. Mr. John Best? A. John C. Best.

Q. Can you tell us when you first contacted Mr. Baker? A. It was shortly after National took over the Universal mill at Fort Dodge.

Q. Can you give us the approximate year when that was? Was it 1936 or 1937? A. I think it was 1936, Mr. Knuff.

Q. You are not sure, but you think it is 1936, however? A. That is right.

Q. Where did you see Mr. Baker? A. Well, these conversations took place over a period of about two years, I would say, and I saw him several times in Buffalo.

Q. Where did you first see him, if you can recall? A. I can't recall.

Q. You can't recall? A. We were seeing each 5282 other every 3 or 4 months, and I can't tell you just where it was we first talked about it.

Q. What did you talk about, with Mr. Baker, concerning the purchase of board, if anything? A. That inasmuch as they now had a mill at Fort Dodge, that he would seem a logical party with whom to make a deal on the purchase of board. And I discussed with him, somewhat as I had with the others, the situation of Cardiff in the industry, our new sales policy; and I asked him to confirm what I told him regarding the new sales methods of the company, which had then been operating about a year or so since its reorganization; and I asked him whether we couldn't make a deal on board and lath.

Q. That is, by "making a deal", did you mean that you wanted to purchase board and lath? A. That is right, on the usual industry basis.

Q. What did Mr. Baker say, if anything? A. My recollection is that at first he said to hold the matter in abeyance a little while, until they got their own sales situation better organized. After time went on, he referred me to Mr. Harrison, who was the Division Sales Manager at Chicago, and told me it would depend a good deal on the recommendation that Mr. Harrison would make.

Q. You say later on—you mean that he told you to 5283 see Mr. Harrison sometime in 1936? A. That might have been 1937, Mr. Knuff.

Q. Did you see Mr. Harrison? A. Yes, sir. I had quite a series of conferences with him. That carried on over the better part of a year, I should say, into 1938.

Q. Can you tell us about the number of conferences that you did have with Mr. Harrison? A. Perhaps half a dozen.

Q. What did you say to Mr. Harrison, if anything, and what did Mr. Harrison say to you? A. I pointed out to him our need for this product to sell in connection with our plaster; furthermore—

Q. (Interposing) What did you point out to him? A. That we had some 10 or 11 salesmen, covering a certain territory, who were selling only plaster, at the time; and that from the sales effort point of view, they could just as well—in fact, much more easily—sell board along with the plaster; that it would result in considerable increase in their own outlet for board, for plasterboard; that, furthermore, the commissions allowed in the industry were such that they would probably make a greater profit on the board that they would sell to us for distribution, than on the board that they would sell themselves, because that 12-1/2 or 15 percent did not cover sales and administrative expense.

5284 He recognized those things, and said that in his opinion it would be a good thing for the company to make the connection, for the National Gypsum Company to make the connection with us, and offered to recommend it and push it as much as he could.

He made some suggestions with respect to a letter that I should write to the company, and some of the things I should say in it.

Q. What representations did he tell you to make to the company? A. He suggested that I should explain this situation, that in almost every city or town there are some dealers to whom, for one reason or another, National was not able to sell its products; and that by reason of a distribution through us, possibly under our own name, we would be able to reach those dealers, and so increase their sales among dealers who were now not productive of any business.

Q. Did you write that letter? A. Yes, sir.

Q. To whom did you write it? A. I think to Mr. Baker.

Q. Do you have a copy of that letter? A. Yes.

Q. Where is the copy of that letter? A. I don't 5285 know, sir. I haven't been able to locate it for some time.

Q. Well, when you say you have a copy of it— A. (Interposing) I thought you said "had".

Q. No, I said "Do you have a copy of it? A. No, sir.

Q. Have you endeavored to find a copy of that letter? A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. And you say you have been unable to locate that copy? A. That is right.

Q. Can you tell us the date of that letter, the approximate date of it? A. I think it was in the fall of 1938.

Q. In the fall of 1938? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what, if anything, did you say in that letter?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as incompetent.

Justice Stephens: Where is the original?

Mr. Knuff: We have asked the National Gypsum Company to supply us with all letters, and so forth, under the subpoena, and we have never received it from the National Gypsum Company. Mr. Sensibar has said that he hasn't been able to locate his copy of it.

Mr. Finck: If the Court please, I would like to ask if they requested this specific letter? I have no in-5286 formation on that.

Mr. Knuff: No, I don't think that we mentioned the letter by date, or anything else. It was covered by the blanket subpoena.

Mr. Finck: We submitted, under the subpoena, a complete file of all the correspondence with Mr. Sensibar. If that letter had been sent, I am sure that you would have it.

Mr. Knuff: We don't have the letter, Your Honor.

Mr. Finck: I object to the testimony of this witness on such a letter.

Mr. Knuff: I won't press it.

Mr. Bromley: I move to strike out the answer that he gave as to what was contained in the letter.

Mr. Knuff: He didn't say what was contained in the letter, he said that Mr. Harrison suggested certain things to be put in the letter, and I asked him what Mr. Harrison suggested.

Justice Stephens: I thought he said he wrote a letter to such effect.

Mr. Bromley: He did.

Justice Stephens: If there is any dispute about it, we can have it read back, but I think that is what he said.

Mr. Knuff: That may be true, I am not sure.

Justice Stephens: Since you don't press it, let the record show that that is stricken, if it was stated.

Mr. Knuff: I want to be sure that the only thing
5287 that is stricken is that he wrote such a letter. I want to make sure that what he said Mr. Harrison told him does not go out of the record.

Justice Stephens: That is not being stricken.

Will you read that part, Mr. Grover?

(The record was read by the reporter as requested.)

Mr. Finck: If the Court please, I move to strike all of the testimony given regarding the conversation with Mr. Harrison as to what this witness should write to Mr. Baker. We should not be bound by Mr. Harrison's instructions to Mr. Sensibar, whatever they were. He was not an officer of National Gypsum Company.

Justice Stephens: Who was Mr. Harrison?

Mr. Finck: He was the Central District Manager, located in Chicago.

Mr. Knuff: And he is the gentleman that Mr. Baker suggested Mr. Sensibar contact.

Justice Stephens: It seems to the Court that that motion ought to be denied, Mr. Finck. A man doesn't have to be an officer of a corporation to have apparent authority to make statements. But since you don't press for the contents of the letter, Mr. Knuff, the Court is in doubt as to whether or not the words "I wrote that letter" ought to stay in, because that, to an objective reader of the 5288 record, might indicate that the contents of the letter were what Mr. Harrison had suggested be written.

So the Court will strike out the answer, "I wrote that letter", or the answer to that effect; and you may examine the witness again, Mr. Knuff, to bring out that he wrote a letter, since you do not press for the contents of it.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Following that conversation with Mr. Harrison, did you write a letter—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) Just a moment. Judge Jackson thinks I haven't made clear that I denied Mr. Finck's motion. It is denied.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Following your conversation with Mr. Harrison, did you write a letter to Mr. Baker? A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. Now, you have testified that your first contact with Mr. Baker was in 1936, and you testified as to what was said to Mr. Baker at that time. When next did you see Mr. Baker? A. I am afraid I can't put it any more precisely than that I used to see him generally every 3 or 4 months.

Q. I see. And what other conversations, if any, did you have with Mr. Baker at the other times that you saw him, concerning the purchase of board? A. Well, in the 5289 fall of 1938, this long negotiation over this 2-year period was pretty much coming to a head, and I remember making one or two trips to see Mr. Baker,—one time particularly, to Buffalo,—to press for a favorable decision on this thing.

I pointed out to him then that we had been operating some three years since the company had been reorganized, and that if we were ever going to receive any favorable recognition from the industry, it ought to be about time to do something about it.

I told him that based on our experience, we didn't have any great hope that USG would give him that permission without considerable pressure on his part, and I asked him point-blank whether National Gypsum was prepared to make an issue of the matter, or whether they were going to let it go by the board.

He told me then—and I think this was the last conversation on the subject—that USG had turned it down; that National could probably sell us had they been willing to make an issue of it, but that there were other reasons why they didn't want to make an issue of it.

He told me that he considered it unfair to us; that he thought the doors should have been opened to us on some basis or other; and that we could count on his personal support as time went on; but that that, for other 5290 reasons, simply wasn't the moment when National could make an issue of it, and that the best thing to do would be to drop it.

Q. At any time, did Mr. Baker suggest that you contact any person in USG in order to expedite any consent that was necessary from USG? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did he tell you to do that? A. It was toward the end of this period of negotiation. I had 'phoned him several times about bringing the matter to a head; and one day, during a conversation with him, he said that it would be well for me to contact Mr. Keady in Chicago, and press it from that end; and that he would push the matter from Buffalo. He told me that there had been some delay in getting an answer from USG on it, and he thought that might help.

Q. Did you contact Mr. Keady? A. Yes, sir. I saw Mr. Keady about the matter, I would say, twice, at that time.

Q. When did you see him the first time? A. Well, the two times were pretty close together, about 3 or 4 weeks apart, and were in the fall of 1938.

Q. And what conversation did you have with Mr. Keady? A. I explained to him our request to National, and that I understood that National was taking the matter up with them; and that I was there to answer any questions 5291 that he might have as to our sales policies, price policies, or anything else that might be of interest to them in helping them to reach a favorable decision on the matter.

Q. What did Mr. Keady say to you? A. He asked me a number of questions about the status of the company, its ownership; about its markets; its sales organization, and so on—which I explained to him.

I also pointed out to him the benefits that would be derived out of such a deal for USG and the industry as a whole.

Q. What did you point out? A. That it simply wasn't a healthy thing for a large company, dominating that kind of a situation, to keep a small competitor from having the same recognition as other people; that this thing had been going on at that time for 3 years, since the reorganization, and during those three years we had adhered to the sales practices established by USG, with one exception, and that exception consisted of the fact that we did make truck deliveries directly out of Fort Dodge, in a different territory than they did, but that that thing was forced on us by the very fact we didn't have this board so we couldn't load full cars, and that we would be willing to give up that sales practice as soon as we had the board. And I naturally urged on him to do what he could to grant the consent to National.

5292 Q. What did Mr. Keady say to you? A. He told me that so far as he was concerned, while he had every sympathy with our situation, he considered it a fixed policy of the company that they were not going to allow it. He told me that so far as he was concerned, that matter was final.

Q. Did you ever have any further conferences with Mr. Keady and any other officers of the corporation? A. Yes, sir. During this same period, and I think shortly after these talks with Mr. Keady, I went to see Mr. Knode about it, thinking that it might still be possible to get a reversal of that attitude.

Q. And what was the conversation that you had with Mr. Knode, and who was present at the time? A. I believe there were two meetings with Mr. Knode. One was of a preliminary nature.

Q. Who was present at that time? A. Just he and I.

Q. What was discussed? A. I told him the history of Cardiff's business during the previous 3 years, and pointed out to him that we were again raising this question of being put on a par with other independent members of the industry; and that we really wanted it given serious consideration, because it had become a very serious matter for us.

5293 He suggested that I talk with Mr. Keady, and that resulted, a little later, in a joint conference with Mr. Knode and Mr. Keady and a Mr. English.

Q. Who was Mr. English? A. I understood him to be a Director of the company, from California.

Q. And, before you had this joint conference, have you related all the conversation you had with Mr. Knode? A. Have I related it all?

Q. Yes, before the joint conference. Disregard the joint conference for the moment. Have you told us what you remember as to the conversation that you had with Mr. Knode? A. Yes, sir.

Q. At this conference with Mr. Knode, Mr. Keady, and Mr. English, and yourself, was there any other person present? A. No, sir.

Q. Just the four of you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, what was said at that conference? A. Well, after some introductions—because I hadn't known Mr. English—we got down to the meat of the matter, and I reviewed for them, as fully as I could, the history of our operations during those three years since the reorganization. I pointed out to them that we had started from scratch in August, 1935, with no business, because 5294 we had been completely out of the market for nearly a year; and that it had cost us a great deal to build up a sales organization and to develop a trade again; that we had done that during a period of 3 years at considerable sacrifice, and as consistently as we could along the lines of the policy laid down by USG for their own sales. I pointed out to him that we had—

Q. (Interposing) You say to "him", were you talking to just one person? A. I was seated at Mr. Knode's desk, and the other two gentlemen were seated a little further back, and I was directing my conversation to Mr. Knode.

Q. Go ahead. A. I pointed out to him that there were a number of things that hampered us, and to some extent hampered other independents in the industry. I pointed out that one of those was the freight rate manipulation that had been going on; that another was the peculiar use of basing points; and that so far as we were concerned, perhaps the most serious was this constant inability to make the same kind of a board connection that everybody else had.

I suggested to him that it just wasn't a healthy thing in an industry to let that kind of a thing prevail, and that it seemed strange that a company the size of USG would insist on maintaining that kind of a situation.

I pointed out to him, also, that we had a competitor
5295 right across the tracks from us, who was an independent operator, who had for years enjoyed just the kind of a board connection that we were talking about.

Q. What was that competitor's name? A. Wasem Plaster Company.

Q. Go ahead. A. I told him that it was simply the ordinary business connection prevailing in the industry; I told him that I would substantiate my statements as to sales prices and terms, and that they were welcome to look over our books and see what they showed, to verify my statements.

His response was, in substance, this,—that USG had spent $60,000,000 or $70,000,000 developing the business; that they had that, at one time or another, invested in their plants; that it would cost at least a half a million dollars to establish a board mill; and that they were not disposed to make available to us facilities of their board plants on any kind of a basis; that if we wanted board, then the thing we ought to do was to decide to build a board mill, and if we could then come in with a showing that we had the money available, that they would then consider granting us a license.

Q. Now, did Mr. Keady or Mr. English say anything at this conference? A. Very little.

5296 Q. Was there anything said after Mr. Knode told you that USG would consider granting Cardiff a license? A. Yes. I told him that that was not the subject of our discussion; and I again pressed him on the matter, pointing out the unfairness of it, pointing out that a number of members of his organization, beginning with Mr. Henning, had recognized the inequity of that situation. I suggested to him that it might be a matter that had some legal aspects to it; and I suggested that without going to any trouble about it, we place the question before some proper agency in Washington, and see whether we could get an advisory opinion on it.

Q. What else was said, if anything? A. He rejected that, and indicated that the decision was final, that they would do nothing about it.

Q. Now, we got into this discussion of the conference with the United States Gypsum Company because of my first question concerning your contacts with Mr. Baker in 1936. Did you talk with anybody else in National in 1936? A. Yes. Beginning in 1936, and through those two years, besides talking with Mr. Baker and Mr. Burley and Mr. Harrison, I also talked with John C. Best from time to time.

Q. You haven't mentioned Mr. Burley before; you have mentioned Mr. Baker and Mr. Harrison. Did you 5297 have any conversation with Mr. Burley? A. I am sorry if I didn't mention Mr. Burley. I think I did.

Q. You may have. My recollection is that you hadn't. A. They were separate conversations. I sometimes talked with Ralph Burley, and sometimes with Mr. Baker.

Q. What was your conversation with Mr. Burley? A. It was generally—

Mr. Bromley: (Interposing) When, please?

The Witness: Beginning in 1936.

(Continuing) —It was generally on the subject of specific sales, specific orders. During that period I had under discussion with them the question of supplying us with Keene's Cement, and white finishing plaster, which they made out in Kansas, and that was a question apart from the board question.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Well, just confine yourself to the board conversations that you had with Mr. Burley. A. They were only general, and would be more or less a repetition of what I had been saying to Mr. Baker, with the idea in mind of getting the organization favorable to this project.

Q. At the risk of being repetitious, what did you say to Mr. Burley, and what did Mr. Burley say to you?

5298 A. I pointed out to Mr. Burley the need that Cardiff had for such a connection, the common one in the industry. I pointed out to him how it would be helpful to his own company, and would very likely diminish some of the resistance that he had, in selling his product, with certain dealers. And I asked him for his backing, with Mr. Baker, in seeing this proposition through.

Q. What did Mr. Burley tell you, if anything? A. Mr. Burley told me that he had been very favorably impressed with the new sales policy of Cardiff; that he was, generally speaking, getting good reports through his salesmen and sales managers; and that he thought the time had come to change the situation, and that he would do what he could with Mr. Baker.

Q. Now, did you have more than one conversation with Mr. Burley? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And have you told us everything that was said to Mr. Burley, and that Mr. Burley said to you, relative to the purchase of board, at this first conversation with him—have you told us everything about that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When next did you see Mr. Burley, if you did see him again? A. I couldn't—5299 Mr. Finck: (Interposing) Can you fix the date of the first conversation a little more clearly?

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Can you fix the date of the first conversation with Mr. Burley? A. Sometime shortly after the taking over of Universal by National.

Q. Was it before your first conversation with Mr. Baker, or after your first conversation with Mr. Baker? A. I think it was before. I think I first opened it with Mr. Burley.

Q. You first opened the negotiations with Mr. Burley, is that correct? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now then, when did you talk with Mr. Burley again? A. From time to time throughout this two-year period, Mr. Knuff. I couldn't tell you the dates.

Q. Can you give us the number of conversations, or the approximate number of conversations, that you had with Mr. Burley concerning Cardiff's purchase of board at a discount, from National? A. Three or four, I dare say.

Q. And was the substance of all the conversations that you had with Mr. Burley, similar to the conversation that you have now related that you had with Mr. Burley?

5300 A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you add anything to later conversations that was not discussed in the first conversation with Mr. Burley? A. Well, I remember once asking him how long this thing was going to go on. I told him there was a limit to most anybody's patience, and that we had been knocking at this door, now, for several years, and always got the same kind of an answer, that "some day in the future it will be opened, but it isn't now".

I asked him how long he thought that ought to continue. His opinion was, he told me, that it was time for the gypsum industry to do something about it; that he thought we had done our share, and that he was satisfied that we would do more if they would do something about it; and he undertook to help all he could.

Q. You have testified that you were in Buffalo in the fall of 1938, is that correct? A. Yes, sir.

Q. I want to show you what has been marked for Identification as Government's Exhibit 578, the same being a letter dated October 24, 1938, addressed to Mr. Ezra Sensibar, and signed M. H. Baker.

5301 (Government's Exhibit No. 578 for Identification was handed to the witness.)

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Will you tell us whether you received that letter? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Knuff: We offer in evidence Government's Exhibit No. 578.

Mr. Bromley: We make the usual objection, and also object on the ground that it is immaterial.

Justice Stephens: The objection is overruled, received in evidence subject to the usual reservation with respect to declarations of alleged co-conspirators.

(The document referred to, marked as Government's Exhibit No. 578, was received in evidence.)

Justice Stephens: Announce the morning recess.

(Thereupon, a short recess was taken, after which the trial was resumed as follows:)

5302 Justice Stephens: You may proceed.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Mr. Sensibar, during the recess have you had an opportunity to think over your testimony as to the conference with the United States Gypsum Company's officials, that is, Mr. Knode, Mr. Keady, and Mr. English? A. Yes sir.

Q. Do you wish to add anything to what you previously told us about what was said at that conference? A. Yes sir, I do.

Q. Would you proceed, please? A. When I made the point with the gentlemen that the arrangement that we were seeking and had been seeking for three years, was simply the usual one in the industry, Mr. Knode said that it was no longer the practice of USG to make those deals; that the one with Wasem was very old at that time, was of long standing; and it was not their policy to make any more arrangements of that kind.

I then suggested to him my understanding that during that very period since we had become interested in Cardiff, they had made other such arrangements—

Q. (Interposing) Did you mention the name of the company that you had in mind at that time? A. I believe I did not.

5303 Q. You believe you didn't? A. That is right. I don't think there was any question about it, we all knew who it was.

Q. What did Mr. Knode—

Mr. Bromley (Interposing): I move to strike that last out as a conclusion, "I don't think there was any question about it, we all knew who it was."

Mr. Knuff: I think it should come out, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: It may be stricken.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. What, if anything, did Mr. Knode or Mr. English or Mr. Keady say when you called their attention to the fact that similar arrangements had been made with a company other than the Wasem Plaster Company? A. Well, that was covered by Mr. Knode's general statement that they weren't making any deals of that kind during that period, and that the existing ones were old.

Q. Now, Mr. Sensibar, will you please look at Government's Exhibit 578, and particularly at the second paragraph of that exhibit. In any of your conversations that you had with Mr. Baker, did Mr. Baker ever suggest that their plant capacity was limited in any manner? A. No sir, never.

Q. When did you first hear that National's plant wasn't of sufficient capacity to take care of this business that 5304 you were offering— A. (Interposing) When I received this letter—

Mr. Bromley: (Interposing) I object to that on the ground that it assumes facts not in evidence, and I move to strike out the answer. That is not what the letter says. It says, "Any substantial upturn will consume our capacity."

Justice Stephens: That is correct, the answer may be stricken.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Mr. Sensibar, at any conversations that you had with Mr. Baker, was the capacity of the National Gypsum Company's plants ever discussed with you? A. No sir.

Mr. Knuff: I believe I have offered Government's Exhibit 578.

Justice Stephens: Yes, that has been received in evidence.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Now, at page 5546 of yesterday's transcript, beginning with line 7, the following appears:

"A. The Cardiff Gypsum Company went through a 77-B reorganization—

"Q. (Interposing) That was in 1935? A. Yes, sir.

"Q. I will come to that later. But in 1933 did you talk to Mr. Henley as to whether or not he was able to obtain the consent of USG for Certain-teed to sell you board?"

5305 Did you mean to infer that in 1935 you talked with Mr. Henley concerning the sale of board? A. No sir.

Q. After 1933, when next did you take up with Certain-teed the question of purchasing board from them at a discount, if you did take it up?

Mr. Bromley: I am sorry, but I have lost track—may we have those last few questions about Certain-teed read?

Justice Stephens: Yes, you might. Read them, Mr. Reporter.

(Thereupon the reporter read the record as requested.)

Justice Stephens: Answer the pending question.

The Witness: It was about 1939, it might have been in 1938. In any event, it was right after the new management came in.

Justice Stephens: The new management of what?

The Witness: The new management of Certain-teed, after Celotex had acquired an interest in the company.

Justice Stephens: I see.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. And with whom in Certain-teed did you talk at that time? A. First with Mr. Henry J. Hartley, the president.

5306 Q. Where did you talk with Mr. Hartley? A. In their office in New York.

Q. And will you tell us the conversation? A. I told him that I was coming in to get acquainted, at the suggestion of Mr. Dahlberg—

Q. (Interposing) And who is Mr. Dahlberg? A. Mr. Dahlberg was president of the Celotex Corporation at that time.

Q. Proceed. A. And I stated that I wanted to discuss with him some matters with reference to the general situation in the gypsum industry.

He asked me to give him some overall picture of it, because he was new to the business, and would like to get an outsider's viewpoint.

I explained to him, as best I could, the overall situation in the industry with respect to the various companies, their size and influence in the industry, and so forth, and the problems of independents, and Cardiff in particular; and I went on to explain to him the situation with reference to board and lath, and what it meant to an independent plaster manufacturer.

I then asked him as occasion would arise to inform himself a little better about these things we had been discussing, and asked him whether or not I might come in somewhat later and discuss with him more in detail the question 5307 of some dual arrangement between Certain-teed and Cardiff.

Q. What did you mean by "dual arrangement"? A. I meant an arrangement for them to sell us board and lath on the usual industry basis.

Q. What did Mr. Hartley say to you, if anything? A. Mr. Hartley told me that he was new to the business; that he was just beginning to learn something about it, and that he would welcome my return after a few months, and in the meantime would try to catch up on his information so that he could discuss the matter more intelligently.

Q. Did you subsequently go back and see Mr. Hartley? A. Yes sir, I did.

Q. When? A. I had a number of visits with him over a period of a year or so following the time he took over direction of the company.

Q. And what was the conversation that you had with Mr. Hartley? A. The conversations were that Cardiff Gypsum Company needed a good board and lath connection; that their plant at Fort Dodge would be a logical source of supply; that it would increase the outlets for the production of that plant, and therefore would be a good thing for both companies—and I asked him to enter into such an arrangement with us.

His reply was that they at that time had a number 5308 of matters under discussion with USG; that there were a number of differences about other things; and that as those got to some kind of a solution, he would be glad to take up our matter and try and arrange it for us.

Q. And did that end the second visit with Mr. Hartley? A. The second or third or fourth, or thereabouts.

Q. Did you subsequently see Mr. Hartley after the conversation that you have just related now? A. Yes, I did. It must have been a year or so after our first conversation. During that period, at his request, I had discussed the matter more in detail as to territory and freight rates and so on, with the vice president of the company, Mr. Albert Miller, I think it was, and with their sales manager, I forget his name.

Q. Would it be E. G. Roos? A. No sir.

Q. Would it be Warren Henley? A. He isn't the man that I have in mind at the moment. I did talk with Warren Henley about it during that period, though. It was Cres Stedman.

Q. Did you talk with Mr. Stedman? A. Yes sir, I did.

Q. What was the conversation that you had with Mr. Stedman? A. Mr. Stedman was in charge of the sales of the company—

5309 Mr. Bromley: (Interposing) May we have the time, please?

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. When was the conversation? Mr. Bromley wants to know. A. Well, all of these conversations were within the period of about a year after this new management took over, and my best recollection of that is that it was either late in 1938 or early in 1939, that the new management took over.

Q. Proceed. A. The conversations with Mr. Stedman and with Mr. Miller, who at that time was the vice president, were with regard to the details of the territory that we should serve, or did serve, with our sales organization—

Mr. Adams: (Interposing) Excuse me. Were these conversations with these gentlemen separately, or were they together when you talked with them? Could we have that indicated, please?

Justice Stephens: The Court understood that he was talking to these two men together, is that true?

The Witness: Generally, yes. I generally spoke to Mr. Stedman and Mr. Miller together, but almost always alone with Mr. Hartley, although sometimes with Mr. Miller. I don't remember ever talking with Mr. Hartley and Mr. Stedman together, however.

5310 We discussed the particular sales coverage that we had, that is where our salesmen operated, and what territories they covered; discussed some of the accounts that we handled, with the object in view of giving the facts to Mr. Stedman so that he could make some recommendation as to how much their business would be increased by such an arrangement.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. What, if anything, did Mr. Stedman tell you, or Mr. Miller? A. They both told me very emphatically that they were in favor of such an arrangement.

Q. How many conversations did you have with Mr. Stedman and Mr. Miller, if you can recall? A. I would say, all in all, a dozen or so.

Q. A dozen or so? A. Yes sir.

Q. And was the substance of all these conversations the same as you have now related? A. That is right. During a part of the time Mr. Hartley felt that he couldn't press the matter because they had other things involved. Towards the end of that time, he assured me that he had pressed the matter with USG, and had discussed it with them, and had been turned down.

Q. How many conversations did you have with Mr. Hartley? A. About eight, I should say.

5311 Is my understanding correct that you had about 12 conversations with Stedman and Miller, and in addition to that, about eight conversations with Mr. Hartley—is that correct? A. That is right.

Justice Stephens: Over how long a period of time?

The Witness: Between a year and a year and a half, I should say.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. You testified at the criminal trial in the District Court, did you not? A. I did.

Q. It is my recollection that you did not mention the conversations with Mr. Hartley or Mr. Stedman or Mr. Miller at that time. Can you tell us why? A. My recollection is that all the matter with respect to Certain-teed was excluded.

Q. I see. Did you talk with Mr.—

Mr. Bromley: (Interposing) Since he has gone into that, I think I ought to say that it was excluded by Judge Goldsborough because in that case we had a bill of particulars. Since there was a specific allegation in the indictment that one of the parts of the conspiracy was to refuse to sell Cardiff, we asked for a bill of particulars as to the refusals, the dates and the companies, and that bill 5312 of particulars did not include Certain-teed, and did not include others, as I remember.

Mr. Knuff: I just wanted to make it clear why there was none of this testimony given at the criminal trial. I hadn't finished doing that, but I thank Mr. Bromley for doing it. I intended to do it in that manner.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Did you have any conversations in 1938 with Mr. Warren Henley? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Where and when? A. Those were held in Chicago shortly after my first approach to the new Certain-teed management. Mr. Henley was one of the old-timers in the business, and knew the background, and Mr. Hartley naturally referred the matter to him for some opinion. Mr. Hartley told me that when I got back to Chicago I should see Warren Henley, and I did that.

Q. And what, if anything, did you say to Mr. Henley, and what, if anything, did Mr. Henley say to you? A. I asked Mr. Henley whether he would be in a position, or of a mind, to make a favorable recommendation on it, since they were looking very largely to his opinion on the matter. He told me that since this matter had been hanging fire, as far as he was concerned, for a period of five years or so then, and seeing the come-back that Cardiff had 5313 made after its reorganization, that he thought, on the whole, that he could recommend it.

Q. How many conversations did you have with Mr. Henley? A. Two or three.

Q. And was the substance of all the conversations similar to the one that you have just now related? A. Yes sir. He asked for some particulars from time to time about certain competitive situations, about certain sales here and there that he had heard about, and I gave him the information.

Q. Were you able to buy board from Certain-teed as a result of the visits that you had with Mr. Hartley, Mr. Stedman, Mr. Miller and Mr. Henley? A. We were not.

Q. Do you know Mr. Wright of the Texas Cement Plaster Company? A. Yes sir.

Q. Did you ever have any conversation with Mr. Wright concerning the purchase of board and lath at a discount, from Texas? A. Yes sir, I did.

Q. Where did you have that conversation? A. At a number of cities at which we used to meet, because we were both members of the Traffic Committee of the Gypsum Association.

5314 Q. When did you first contact Mr. Wright concerning the purchase of board and lath? A. Oh, about 1937 or 1938.

Q. In 1937 or 1938? A. Yes.

Q. Will you tell us the conversation that you had with him? A. It was a general conversation along the lines that we wanted to have the sales of these products, and that I realized that it was not a very economical proposition, not very sound economically, to think about a connection with his company, because their plant was down in Texas, and the freight absorption to most of our customers would be great; in other words, the freight from his plant to our customers would be larger, on the average, than the freight from our plant to the same customers, who, of course, wouldn't pay any more for the product. So that it would be necessary, either for Texas or for ourselves to absorb the difference in freight, and that that would not make such an arrangement as economically sound as one with a plant in Fort Dodge, which of course was the indicated thing.

Nevertheless, I pointed out to him that it might fill in a gap in their production that was open, and as marginal business might be of some interest to him.

Q. Did you have any conversation with Mr. Wright 5315 as to your previous price policy on plaster? A. Yes.

Q. What was that conversation? A. Texas and ourselves are competitive in a rather narrow area, comprising Missouri, northern Oklahoma, and some of those states about half way between Fort Dodge and their plant in Texas. I discussed with him the competitive situation in a number of those places.

Q. I don't believe you answered the question that I asked you. I asked if you ever had any conversation as to your previous price policy. A. Yes sir, I discussed with him the background of this whole thing, which he said he knew. He had known Tom Breen, and had known the old Cardiff company and its policies, and he also knew about the change in management. I explained to him how we had been operating since 1935.

Q. Again, at the risk of being repetitious, when you say that you discussed the background, will you be a little bit more specific, please? A. That consisted largely in a complaint by USG and Certain-teed and National that in the old days, that is during the period of the Tom Breen management of the company—

Mr. Bromley: (Interposing) Is this what the witness told somebody, or isn't it?

By Mr. Knuff:

5316 Q. I am asking now as to your conversation with Mr. Wright. In the answer that you are making,

Mr. Sensibar, did you tell Mr. Wright what you are now telling us? A. In substance, yes.

Justice Stephens: Very well, proceed.

The Witness: (Continuing)—that the principal members of the industry used to object to our sales policy of selling directly to contractors, and jobbers, and so on, and since we had taken over the management of the company, and since the reorganization in 1935, that we were following the regular or normal, or customary sales practice of the industry in making sales almost exclusively through dealers.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. This first conversation was had either in 1937 or 1938, is that right? A. That is right.

Q. And at that time did you ask Mr. Wright to have Texas apply to USG for permission to sell your company board and lath at a discount? A. I don't think I put it that way. I think I merely asked him whether we couldn't make an arrangement to buy from them.

Q. What did he say to you? A. He said that that would depend, in the last analysis, on USG; that he would 5317 first have to talk to his people, that is to Mr. Chism and Mr. Gloyd, and then it would depend on whether USG would give him permission.

Q. Did you talk to Mr. Wright after that? A. A number of times, yes.

Q. And with reference to your first conversation, when next did you see Mr. Wright? A. We used to see each other every three or four months at these Traffic Committee meetings.

Q. And how many conversations would you say that you had with Mr. Wright? A. Seven or eight. I kept the thing alive every time we were together, which was over a period of a couple of years.

Q. That is, from 1937 down to 1939 or 1940—was it as late as 1940? A. It may be.

Q. What is your best recollection as to that? A. Either late in 1939 or early in 1940, it was about two years. He finally told me that while they hadn't made any firm application, that they had talked the thing over and that there just wasn't any use.

Q. Did he say who he had talked it over with? A. With USG.

Q. And Mr. Wright told you that? A. Yes sir.

Q. When did he tell you that? A. Well, as I have 5318 said, as nearly as I can tell, either in the fall of 1939 or the spring of 1940.

Q. Did you ever have any conversation with any other person connected with Texas Cement Plaster Company than Mr. Wright? A. Not on that subject, no sir.

Q. I show you what has been marked for identification as Government's Exhibit 579, the same being a letter, dated September 22, 1939, addressed to Mr. Baker of the National Gypsum Company and signed by Ezra Sensibar.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 579 for identification.)

(Government's Exhibit No. 579 for identification was handed to the witness.)

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Is that your signature, Mr. Sensibar? A. Yes, it is.

Justice Stephens: Does that consist of two pages, or one?

Mr. Knuff: It is a one-page letter, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: You are skipping one item, then, in our sets?

Mr. Knuff: Yes, your Honor, I am skipping one item.

By Mr. Knuff:

5319 Q. I also show you what was been marked for identification as Government's Exhibit 580, the same being a copy of a letter from the National Gypsum Company, addressed to Mr. Ezra Sensibar, and signed John C. Best, Vice President.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 580 for Identification.)

(Government's Exhibit No. 580 for Identification was handed to the witness.)

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Did you receive the original of that letter?

Mr. Finck: What is the date of that?

Mr. Knuff: September 27, 1939.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Did you receive the original of that letter, Mr. Sensibar? A. Yes, I did.

Justice Stephens: You haven't offered Exhibit No. 579, have you?

Mr. Knuff: No, I have not.

Justice Stephens: Is Exhibit 580 in response to Exhibit 579?

Mr. Knuff: I am going to have three of them marked, and then I will interrogate the witness.

Justice Stephens: I see.

5320 By Mr. Knuff:

Q. I show you what has been marked for identification as Government's Exhibit 581, the same being a copy of a letter dated October 3, 1939, addressed to Mr. John C. Best, and signed, "Cardiff Gypsum Company, by E. S., President."

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 581 for identification.)

(Government's Exhibit No. 581 for identification was handed to the witness.)

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Are those your initials on that carbon? A. Yes.

Q. Was the original of that letter sent to Mr. Best? A. It was.

Q. I show you what has been marked for identification Government's Exhibit 582, the same being a copy of a letter dated October 7, 1939, addressed to Mr. Ezra Sensibar, and signed National Gypsum Company, John C. Best, Vice President.

(Government's Exhibit No. 582 for identification was handed to the witness.)

By Mr. Knuff:

5321 Q. Did you receive the original of that letter, Mr. Sensibar?

Mr. Finck: What date is that?

Mr. Knuff: October 7, 1939.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Did you receive the original of that letter? A. I did.

Q. Would you look at Government's Exhibits Nos. 580 and 582, please?

Justice Stephens: Let the Court take time to read these so that we can tell what this is about.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. You will notice, Mr. Sensibar, that those are copies of originals. Do you know where the originals are? A. No, I do not.

Q. Have you made an effort to locate them? A. I have, yes sir.

Q. Would you say that the Exhibit marked 580 for identification is a correct copy of the letter that you received? A. Yes, it is.

Q. And would you say that the exhibit marked for identification No. 582 is a true and correct copy of the letter that you received? A. Yes sir.

5322 Q. And you have made an effort to find both of the originals? A. Yes, I have.

Q. And you did that pursuant to a letter that I wrote to you, is that correct? A. That is correct.

Mr. Knuff: We offer in evidence, if your Honor pleases, Government's Exhibits 579, 580, 581 and 582.

Justice Stephens: Let the Court read them.

Now, Mr. Knuff, does one of these letters appear to be an answer to the letter of September 22, Exhibit 579, and if so, which one?

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Will you tell us, Mr. Sensibar, if any of the letters that you have in front of you is an answer to the letter marked Exhibit 579 for identification, please? A. Yes sir.

Justice Stephens: Which one?

The Witness: The letter of September 27, which is marked Exhibit 580.

Justice Stephens: Is there any objection to these?

Mr. Bromley: May it please the Court, we object to these Exhibits 579 to 582 inclusive, as immaterial to any charge in the complaint. They have to do, if they have to do with anything, with resales by Cardiff of Keene's cement.

5323 Now, there is no claim of any kind in the pleadings about the resale prices of plaster or Keene's cement. Keene's cement is mentioned in the bill of particulars as one of the three miscellaneous gypsum products covered by the suit, but there is no claim of any kind about the resale prices of plaster or any miscellaneous gypsum products.

The rule applied, therefore, last Monday, with respect to the testimony of the witness Perry as to resales by a wholesale distributor, should be applied here.

Justice Stephens: We understood this witness as being called under the charge in Paragraph 45 (c), which concerns concertedly raising, maintaining and stabilizing the general level of prices for plaster and miscellaneous gypsum products manufactured and sold by said companies in the Eastern Area—and that the theory of this testimony was that the United States Gypsum Company and the other defendants wouldn't sell to Cardiff because Cardiff wouldn't keep the price of plaster up, that is, they wouldn't sell board to Cardiff.

Now these letters, it is urged, have to do with the resale price of Keene's cement.

What is your answer to the objection?

Mr. Knuff: My answer to the objection, your Honor, is of course that Keene's cement is a plaster, and that it is mentioned—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) That is not disputed, the question is concerning resale price.

Mr. Knuff: My offer is not to establish the resale price, but to show that there was a fixing of the plaster prices.

Mr. Bromley: It seems to me that counsel overlooks the fact that up until the subject matter of these letters was approached by him, he had been talking or inquiring about plaster manufactured by the Cardiff Gypsum Company. Now, these letters have something to do, not with anything manufactured by them, but with something which they are trying to buy from the National Gypsum Company, because they don't make it themselves. Therefore his whole approach here has shifted from Paragraph 45 (c) to a charge of resale price fixing of miscellaneous gypsum products, which is not charged in the complaint.

Mr. Knuff: May I refer your Honor to Exhibit No. 581, paragraph 3, which is a letter from Mr. Sensibar to Mr. Best, in which Mr. Sensibar says:

"Your other possible objection might have arisen from a matter which you once asked me to investigate, the alleged sale of some of your Keene's cement at a price below cost. I investigated the quotation and found that through an error it had indeed been made below cost. The Cardiff Gypsum Plaster Company accordingly withdrew it, and the sale was never made."

Now, if your Honor will keep that in mind and then read Government's Exhibit No. 582, in which Mr. Best says:

5325 "I acknowledge letter of the 3rd, and the matters that you mention naturally had a considerable bearing on our decision."

We are not offering these letters to prove the resale price of Keane's cement, but we are offering them as a circumstance from which the Court can infer that National was interested in maintaining plaster prices.

They are not offered for the purpose of proving the truth of the sale below cost of Keane's cement, but purely circumstantially, from which it can be inferred that this evidence, in connection with the other testimony that Mr. Sensibar has given, establishes the fact that the defendants in this case, particularly the defendant National, had in mind a stable price for plaster.

Mr. Brownley: Now, if counsel, in Exhibit No. 581, had read on to the fourth paragraph, he would there have disclosed that the letter characterizes the transaction described in the third paragraph as a "resale price". The last sentence of the fourth paragraph says:

"As to the question of our resale price, we would be entirely willing to verify our present statement by audit."

The instance which is being talked about in the third paragraph is a resale instance. Cardiff bought the Keene's cement from National and resold it.

5326 Justice Stephens: The objection to these exhibits is sustained on the ground that they apparently relate to resale prices of Keene's cement, and that is not covered by any charge in the complaint. They are not received in evidence.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. I would like to have marked for identification as Government's Exhibit No. 583 a memorandum from Mr. Burley to Mr. Baker, dated September 25, 195[illegible].

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 583 for identification.)

(Government's Exhibit No. 583 for identification was handed to the witness.)

Justice Stephens: Where is that in this file?

Mr. Knuff: It should follow, your Honor, Exhibit No. 579.

Justice Jackson: It is right ahead of 579.

Mr. Knuff: As I say, in connection with this exhibit, this was furnished to us by the National Gypsum Company under a subpoena served upon them, and apropos of that, I want to call your Honor's attention, on the question of identification, to the position taken by the defendants at page 5334 of the record, beginning with line 12—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) That was yesterday's record?

Mr. Knuff: Wednesday's, your Honor, just before
5327 the recess on Wednesday.

Justice Stephens: I missed one statement you made. You said that this was supplied from the files of National?

Mr. Knuff: That is right, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: Under subpoena by the Government?

Mr. Knuff: Yes.

Justice Stephens: The Court does not have that record before it. Will you hand it to the Marshal so that the Court may see it?

(A copy of the transcript referred to was handed to the Court.)

Mr. Knuff: I gave your Honor the wrong reference, I am sorry. It should be page 5335, line 14.

Justice Stephens: Very well. Is this exhibit offered?

Mr. Knuff: Yes, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: Let the Court read it.

Is there any objection?

Mr. Bromley: I object to it on the ground that there is no proper foundation, and that it is incompetent. In connection with my statement on page 5335 of the record, not only is it probably inaccurate, but what I had in mind was that this Court had been ruling that where a document had been identified and was produced from the files of a defendant, that that was some authentication for it. This document has not been identified, as I understand it, so 5328 that all we have here, if we have anything, is a document which counsel says was produced by National under subpoena.

So far as its materiality is concerned, I object to it only on the usual ground.

Mr. Knuff: I don't think that Mr. Finck will say that he didn't furnish this exhibit 583 to us. You furnished that to us, did you not?

Mr. Finck: Of course I did.

Mr. Knuff: It was taken from the files of National?

Mr. Finck: It must have been. I submitted it some time ago. I don't recall that one particularly. There is a number on the back of it which is the number that was put on by our office at the time it was submitted.

Mr. Bromley: That is certainly not a sufficient identification.

Justice Stephens: The problem seems to be this, Mr. Knuff. The situations we have had before were situations where a letter, being on its face addressed to a defendant, and then found in its files, and the signature having been identified, the Court ruled that there was, thereby, a circumstantial identification, or rather circumstantial proof of its having been received. But the question apparently raised by Mr. Bromley here is that the mere fact that a memorandum is found in the file of a defendant, or is furnished from the file of a defendant as having been there, without any testimony that it was written by a per-5329 son connected with the company, doesn't bind the company.

Is that your point, Mr. Bromley?

Mr. Bromley: Yes, your Honor.

Mr. Knuff: I realize what your Honor's previous rulings were, and I felt that Mr. Bromley was shifting, and I just wanted to call your Honor's attention to the matters that appeared there—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) It is entirely proper for you to call attention to anything that Mr. Bromley has said.

I think, however, that there we were considering a different situation. Now this, I think, is the first time we have had presented to us the question of whether or not the mere existence in the file of a party, of a paper containing apparently relevant—we will assume that for the purpose of argument—material, is sufficient to warrant its coming into evidence without any showing that it was prepared by somebody who had any authority to bind the company.

We will hear you on that if you wish to be heard.

Mr. Knuff: Well, I don't want to labor the argument, but there is no question here that Mr. Burley was the Vice President of the National Gypsum Company; there is likewise no question but what Mr. Baker was the President of National Gypsum Company.

When we send out our subpoenas and ask for cer-5330 tain correspondence, and that correspondence is furnished to us, in response to that subpoena, it seems to me that the position that Mr. Bromley took the other day is the correct and sound position, that they are almost estopped, if your Honor pleases, to question the authentication of that, because they have said, "We have before us your subpoena; we are giving you this in answer to it; it is from our files."

Justice Stephens: Well, Mr. Knuff, the problem that troubles me, at least, is this. If you could show to the Court that you had served a subpoena upon the defendants asking them to produce a communication in their files between Burley and Baker, and they then had produced this, I should think that your situation might be a little bit different. But that isn't what the record shows. The record simply shows that you filed a general subpoena for the production of various documents, and I have some doubt as to whether there is a sufficient foundation for this.

Mr. Knuff: Our subpoenas asked for all interoffice communications as a general rule, your Honor. I will be glad, during the lunch hour, to get the subpoena that was served upon them.

Justice Stephens: I think that might be material; perhaps you had better do that.

We will take the luncheon recess at this time.

(Whereupon a recess was taken from 12:10 p.m. until 1:45 p.m.)

5331 AFTERNOON SESSION

(The trial was resumed at 1:45 o'clock p.m., pursuant to recess.)

Justice Stephens: Have you anything further to say with respect to this proposed exhibit?

Mr. Knuff: Yes, Your Honor.

During the lunch hour I sent over to the Department and obtained the original subpoena duces tecum which was served upon the National Gypsum Company on February 17, 1940. The subpoena is in the usual form that has been sustained, time after time, on motions to quash. In paragraph 22 of the subpoena, we asked for the following:

"All original memoranda, reports, and intra-company communications—or copies thereof, where the originals can not be produced—made or written by you, or by any of your subsidiaries, during the period from January 1, 1929, to the date of this subpoena; and all original communications—or copies thereof, where the originals can not be produced—between you, or between any of your subsidiaries, and any producer or distributor of gypsum products, during the period from January 1, 1929, to the date of this subpoena, referring or relating to the sale of gypsum products, or the refusal to sell gypsum products, by you or by any of your subsidiaries, to Fairmont Wall Plaster Company, Cardiff Gypsum Company, and Gypsum Products Company."

5332 Now we have asked for the inter-office memoranda. National Gypsum Company, pursuant to that subpoena, and pursuant to the various requests contained therein, furnished us Government's Exhibit 583. In effect, the National Gypsum Company said, "We have gone over the matters which you have requested in your subpoena, and here are the documents which we believe relate to what you have asked for."

In addition to that, however, we have the testimony of Mr. Sensibar to the effect that he had contacted Mr. Baker sometime between 1936 and 1938; that Mr. Baker had told him to see Mr. Harrison, the Sales Manager; that he did see Mr. Harrison, had a talk with Mr. Harrison, on one occasion or maybe more, I don't recall how many, now; and the exhibit, Government's Exhibit 583 for Identification, ties the conversation of Mr. Harrison and Mr. Sensibar together.

Now at this time, Government's Exhibit 583 for Identification is meaningless unless it is related to a sale of gypsum products. It wasn't any academic question with National as to the policies of Cardiff. It must have had relation to—and I think we can assume that it did, as reasonable persons—the sale of gypsum products.

We say that in view of what we have asked for in our subpoena, from the National Gypsum Company, the inter-office memoranda, and what they furnished us, taken together with what Mr. Sensibar testified to here this 5333 morning, it is at least prima facie evidence of the genuineness of it. We don't say that it is conclusive, but it relates to the very subject that Mr. Sensibar has testified concerning this morning.

Justice Stephens: Please hand that paragraph of the subpoena to the Marshal so that the Court may see it.

(Subpoena handed to the Court.)

Mr. Knuff: It is paragraph 22, Your Honor.

Justice Stephens: What is the date of the subpoena?

Mr. Knuff: It was served on either the 14th or the 17th of February, 1940.

If your Honor will turn to the Marshal's return, you will get the exact date there. It was either the 14th or the 17th of February, 1940.

Justice Stephens: Do you wish to be heard further, Mr. Finck?

Mr. Finck: Yes, Your Honor.

I haven't looked at the original subpoena for some time, but I doubt very much if this was returned under the paragraph that was just read. There are a great many other provisions in the subpoena; and, of course, the time that we had, to go over 15 years of work and files, was very short, so that we really returned almost everything that had any indication that it was connected with sales of gypsum board and gypsum lath and plaster, and everything else.

Now we did not have time, when we were collecting 5334 this material, to have our officers authenticate these documents and pass upon them.

It seems to me that if a ruling allowing all of this evidence just to be thrown in, were made, it would open the door to allowing the Government to not produce the real facts, but to put in all sorts of evidence here from which the wrong inferences could be taken.

Justice Stephens: How much of this type of evidence do you propose to offer, Mr. Knuff?

Mr. Knuff: Offhand, I can't think of another one except this one.

Justice Stephens: I was about to say that—

Mr. Knuff: (Interposing) I wouldn't want to be bound by that.

Justice Stephens: I was about to say that apparently the only thing in this exhibit that appears, from our present inspection of it, to have any relationship to the issue we are now discussing, is the first sentence of the second paragraph.

Mr. Knuff: That is correct, Your Honor.

Justice Stephens: And that sentence, embodying a claim or purported claim by National as to price cutting by Cardiff, has been proved to be the claim of several of the defendant companies, by this witness, before. It would seem almost repetitive and hardly worth the time we are 5335 spending on it, except for this,—that of course, we don't want to make a ruling which would establish a precedent for introducing a large class of evidence, or for rejecting it, unless we are thoroughly advised as to the propriety of the ruling.

The Marshal will hand this subpoena to Mr. Finck.

(The subpoena was handed to Mr. Finck.)

Mr. Finck: If the Court please, in reading over the exhibit, I hardly see how the contents of the exhibit tie into any of the evidence given by the witness, or to the other exhibits which the Government has tried to introduce here. It is just a very general statement as to certain correspondence, which I do not have, attached to this exhibit.

Justice Stephens: That goes to its relevance, Mr. Finck. Let's get first past the question of its proper identification.

Mr. Bromley: May it please the Court, I am interested not in the exhibit, but in the principle, and I try to test it by our every-day experience in court. If I could serve a subpoena duces tecum on the plaintiff and have a messenger boy bring the documents called for by the subpoena, and then proceed to offer them in evidence, without any witness on the stand, I would be doing something that I never heard of being done in 20 years. Certainly, if I get a subpoena duces tecum returned from the Bethlehem Steel Company, and I get all their files relating to a certain subject, 5336 I wouldn't think I had any right to put them in evidence until I put a witness on the stand and asked him what they were. A return under a subpoena is no verification of anything except they seem on their face to have some relation to what is demanded in the subpoena.

Justice Stephens: Is Mr. Burley or Mr. Baker living?

Mr. Finck: Both of them are living.

Mr. Knuff: I don't know whether this has any bearing or not, but it was offered in the criminal case, and admitted in the criminal case.

Mr. Bromley: With a witness on the stand.

Mr. Knuff: No, Your Honor. Mr. Burley couldn't be called to the stand because Mr. Burley was a defendant in the criminal case.

Mr. Bromley: There were other witnesses from the company on the stand, and there was a long fight about identifying this document, as I remember it, with witnesses on the stand testifying about it.

Justice Jackson: Witnesses from National?

Mr. Bromley: Yes.

Mr. Knuff: That isn't my recollection.

Justice Stephens: Well, it is my personal view that it would not be a sound ruling, to establish that evidence can be introduced in this manner, especially in view of the fact that the witnesses are available to qualify the docu-5337 ment, and my own view is that it is not admissible because of lack of identification.

What is your view?

Justice Garrett: I agree with that.

Justice Jackson: So do I.

Justice Stephens: That is the view of all three of us.

The offer of the exhibit is rejected, with leave to re-offer it if you can produce someone to identify it.

Mr. Knuff: Mr. Sensibar, will you resume the stand?

Thereupon, EZRA SENSIBAR, the witness on the stand at the time of recess, resumed his testimony as follows:

Direct Examination (resumed)

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Mr. Sensibar, in 1939, did you endeavor, or did your company endeavor, to purchase gypsum board and lath from the Ebsary Gypsum Company? A. Yes, sir, we did.

Q. Who conducted the negotiations for Cardiff? A. I started them, and had a number of conferences on the subject, and our Sales Manager, Mr. M. S. Gutman, then entered into the situation with respect to a good many of the details of the territories.

Q. What person or persons from Ebsary Gypsum Company did you contact? A. Mr. Fred Ebsary and 5338 Mr. Lenci.

Q. And can you tell us about when you contacted them? A. It was right after we learned that they had been interested in securing a wallboard order in Chicago.

Q. Can you fix the month? A. No, sir, I can't.

Q. I show you what has been marked for Identification as Government's Exhibit 584.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 584 for Identification.)

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Will you look at that exhibit and see if you recognize it, please?

(Government's Exhibit No. 584 for Identification handed to the witness.)

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. That is dated October 4, 1939, addressed to George Lenci, and is signed by the Cardiff Gypsum Company. A. Yes, I remember this letter.

Justice Stephens: Was it marked in the previous trial Exhibit 140?

Mr. Knuff: Yes, Your Honor, that is the one.

Justice Stephens: Thank you. Let us read it, now.

(Government's Exhibit 584 for Identification examined by the Court.)

Justice Stephens: Very well, proceed.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Since looking at that exhibit, Mr. Sensibar, does that refresh your recollection as to the date when you had a conference with the Ebsary Gypsum Company? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would you say it was on or about September or October? A. Yes, I would.

Q. Of 1939? A. Yes. Very likely September, because this was written after my first or second conference with Mr. Ebsary.

Q. Will you just relate the substance of any conferences that you had with Mr. Ebsary, or Mr. Lenci—what you said to them and what they said to you? A. As I said before, this began shortly after—

Mr. Bromley: (Interposing) I object to these preliminaries. Can't we get to the conversation, if the Court please.

Justice Stephens: Just state the conversation, if you can, unless it is necessary to an understanding of the conversation that you state some preliminary matter; if so that can be stated, and we will consider, after hearing it, whether it should stay in.

The Witness: I explained to Mr. Ebsary that the reason for my visit to him was that we had learned of his interest in some wallboard business in Chicago; and that that raised the possibility in our minds that we might be able to make a deal, of mutual benefit, for that whole territory. I then discussed with him the sales territory that we covered, pointing out the extent of the coverage in each part of the territory, and went over with him in a general way what the freight rate situation would be.

He expressed an interest in it, and suggested that on my way back to Fort Dodge, I stop to see their plant near Rochester, and have a talk with some of their people there about the operating situation; and then, that we give him more detailed freight rate information so that we could then follow it up with a more detailed discussion.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Now, in your conference with Mr. Ebsary, were the price policies of the Cardiff Gypsum Company, concerning plaster, mentioned? A. I have no recollection that they were.

Q. Now, then, will you continue with what you were going to say when I interrupted you, that on your way back you were to stop at Rochester? A. Yes. I did stop at the plant on my way back, and looked at the plant and talked 5341 with the superintendent there, and was told that—

Q. (Interposing) I am not interested in what the plant superintendent told you. Did you talk with Mr. Lenci? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When? A. I think on my next visit.

Q. And when was that? A. Several weeks after that.

Q. And what conversation did you have with Mr. Lenci? A. I had with me then a list of rates, of freight rates, from their plant near Rochester to principal points in our territory, and also the freight rates from our plant, so that we could see what the amount of absorption would be that would have to be made, either by themselves or by us, in order to take care of the trade in those territories.

We went over those in detail to arrive at what average price or yield the Ebsary Company would have out of sales that they would make to us and ship to our various customers in our territory.

Q. How many conversations did you have with Mr. Lenci? A. Three or four.

Q. And what you are relating now is the subject matter of the first conversation, or have you related all of it? A. Yes, I think of the first conversation, because the matter was covered more in detail afterwards, between 5342 Mr. Lenci and our Sales Manager.

Now, did you secure an order for gypsum board and lath, and forward that order to the Ebsary Gypsum Company? A. Yes, we did.

Q. When? A. Shortly after these September or October conversations.

Q. Was that order ever filled by the Ebsary Gypsum Company? A. No, sir, it was not.

Q. In any of your conversations that you had with either Mr. Lenci or Mr. Ebsary, was the subject of your price policies on plaster ever discussed? A. I think not.

Q. You think not? A. That is right.

Q. I show you what has been marked for Identification as Government's Exhibit 585, the same being a letter dated October 5, 1939, addressed to the Cardiff Gypsum Company and signed Ebsary Gypsum Company—

Mr. Bromley: Before that exhibit is identified, I now move to strike out all the testimony having to do with Ebsary and Cardiff, as well as the testimony of the witness Lenci and the exhibits with respect to it.

Justice Stephens: Will you repeat that, Mr. Reporter?

5343 (The record was read by the reporter.)

Justice Stephens: Do you mean the testimony of the Witness Lenci?

Mr. Bromley: Yes, I was joining up, in that motion, a motion with respect to this witness' testimony and the testimony of Lenci regarding the same subject matter.

Justice Jackson: For the reason that?

Mr. Bromley: For the reason that this witness has testified that there was no mention made of Cardiff's price policies on plaster, which, as I understand it, is the only purpose of the testimony.

Mr. Knuff: Your Honor will recall Mr. Lenci's testimony to the effect that he knew the reputation of the Cardiff Gypsum Company, and when asked what that reputation was, he said they had the reputation of being a price cutter. That is Mr. Lenci's testimony.

Justice Jackson: But this witness states that they didn't discuss anything about price policies on plaster.

Mr. Knuff: That is right.

Justice Jackson: Why shouldn't that be stricken, anyhow, regardless of what Lenci said?

Mr. Knuff: So far as striking that answer, I don't care.

Mr. Bromley: I am not moving that that alone be stricken.

Justice Jackson: I was getting at them one at a time.

Mr. Bromley: My friend makes it too easy, he 5344 wants to just strike out that answer. I moved to strike out Lenci's testimony, also.

Justice Jackson: We can't recall all of Lenci's testimony.

Justice Stephens: Mr. Bromley, it seems to me that the testimony of this witness, and the testimony of Mr. Lenci, ought to stand, notwithstanding the fact that this witness said he didn't talk to Lenci about price cutting, or the alleged price cutting policy of Cardiff, because Lenci did testify, as I remember it, that he knew something of the reputation of this company for price cutting, that is, Cardiff, and it may be that in connection with other letters and other evidence it can be shown circumstantially that there is some basis for inferring that the refusal of Ebsary to sell board was on that account, or the refusal of USG to permit Ebsary to sell board was on that account.

What do you say to that?

Mr. Bromley: I am frank to say I don't understand the whole theory of the evidence. As I remember Mr. Lenci's testimony, he said he was ready, willing and anxious to sell this company, and he tried his best to get a consent to sell the company, and the letters certainly bear out that testimony.

Justice Stephens: There is no doubt about that.

Mr. Bromley: The testimony is that he wrote a 5345 letter to us, and we, in the exercise of our right under our license, sent him a telegram and said "Permission is refused". Now what in the world that has got to do with the maintenance of plaster prices, I can not for the life of me see.

Justice Stephens: What do you say to that, Mr. Knuff?

Mr. Knuff: I still think that the evidence should not be stricken from the record, because whether the Ebsary Gypsum Company was willing to sell, knowing the reputation, does not seem to answer the question completely at all. The refusal of USG is still a matter for consideration here, and it is a fact that USG likewise knew what the reputation of the Cardiff Gypsum Company was.

Mr. Bromley: Is it the contention of counsel that USG had no right to refuse to give consent, under its license, for any or no reason? Didn't we have an absolute right to refuse, under our license, to give a consent, whether we had any reason or not? If we didn't like the color of the man's hair, we could refuse. We didn't have to give a consent to licensees to sell to this class of trade, because we put a clause in our contract that said, "You licensees can't sell to manufacturing distributors at all without our consent".

Justice Stephens: Well, we have been receiving this testimony only under the theory, in paragraph 45(c) of the complaint, that it might have some tendency to prove that 5346 there was an attempt to keep up the prices on plaster by refusing to sell to those who were supposed to be cutting the price. That is the only theory on which it is being received.

We deny the motion to strike.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. I show you, Mr. Sensibar, what has been marked for Identification as Government's Exhibit No. 586, the same being a letter dated October 13, 1939, addressed to the Cardiff Gypsum Company, and signed George N. Lenci.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 586 for Identification.)

(Government's Exhibit No. 586 for Identification was handed to the witness.)

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Will you state whether or not that letter was received at the office of the Cardiff Gypsum Company?

Justice Stephens: What is the date of that letter?

Mr. Knuff: October 13, 1939, Your Honor.

The Witness: It was.

Mr. Bromley: Where is Exhibit 585? I have no record of that.

Justice Jackson: It is the letter of October 5, 1939.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. I now show you, Mr. Sensibar, what has been marked for Identification as Government's Exhibit 587, the 5347 same being a letter, or rather a carbon copy of a letter, dated October 14, 1939, addressed to Mr. George Lenci, and signed Cardiff Gypsum Company.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 587 for Identification.)

(Government's Exhibit No. 587 for Identification was handed to the witness.)

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Can you state whether the original of that letter was sent? A. It was.

Q. I show you what has been marked for Identification as Government's Exhibit 588—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) Just a minute, let us read these as we go along.

Mr. Knuff: Pardon me.

(Government's Exhibit No. 587 for Identification was examined by the Court.)

Justice Stephens: Proceed.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Government's Exhibit 588 for Identification is a letter dated October 16, 1939, addressed to the Cardiff Gypsum Company and signed George N. Lenci. Will you state whether that letter was received?

5348 (The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 588 for Identification.)

(Government's Exhibit No. 588 for Identification was handed to the witness.)

The Witness: Yes, sir, it was.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. I likewise show you what has been marked for Identification as Government's Exhibit 589, the same being a letter dated October 21, 1939, addressed to the Cardiff Gypsum Company and signed Ebsary Gypsum Company.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 589 for Identification.)

(Government's Exhibit No. 589 for Identification was handed to the witness.)

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Was that letter received by your company, sir? A. Yes, sir, it was.

Q. I show you what has been marked for Identification as Government's Exhibit 590, the same being a telegram dated October 25, 1939, addressed to the Cardiff Gypsum Company, and signed Ebsary Gypsum Company.

(The document referred to was marked as Govern-
5349 ment's Exhibit No. 590 for Identification.)

(Government's Exhibit No. 590 for Identification was handed to the witness.)

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Was that telegram received, Mr. Sensibar? A. Yes, sir, it was.

Mr. Knuff: I now offer in evidence Government's Exhibits Nos. 584, 585, 586, 587, 588, 589, and 590.

Justice Stephens: Is there any objection as to identification?

Mr. Bromley: May I have a moment to look at them, please?

Justice Stephens: Yes, you may.

(Exhibits examined by counsel.)

Mr. Bromley: May it please the Court, as to Exhibit 585, we make the usual objection; and also object because it is immaterial to any issue in this case.

Justice Stephens: That objection is overruled, and the exhibit is received subject to the usual reservation with respect to declarations of alleged co-conspirators.

Mr. Knuff: I don't want to lead the Court into error on Exhibit 585. Mr. Steffen and the Reporter have called my attention to the fact that Mr. Sensibar has not as yet identified Exhibit 585.

Justice Stephens: Suppose you ask him to do that, if he can.

5350 (The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 585 for Identification.)

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Mr. Sensibar, was Exhibit 585 received by your company? A. Yes, sir, it was.

Justice Stephens: Is any question raised as to its having been sent by Mr. Hough or signed by Mr. Hough? Who is representing Ebsary today?

Mr. Finck: Mr. Varian is not here, Your Honor.

Mr. Bromley: I think no question is raised about Mr. Hough's signature.

Justice Stephens: Very well; that exhibit, then, is received, subject to the usual reservation with respect to declarations of alleged co-conspirators; and the objection as to materiality is overruled.

(The document referred to, marked as Government's Exhibit No. 585, was received in evidence.)

Justice Stephens: Are there any other objections?

Mr. Bromley: As to the rest of the exhibits, Nos. 586 to 590, inclusive—

Justice Jackson: (Interposing) How about Exhibit 584?

Mr. Bromley: That wasn't offered.

5351 Mr. Knuff: If I didn't offer it, I meant to offer it. I meant to offer 584 to 590, inclusive.

Justice Stephens: It occurs to the Court that possibly this whole matter could be covered by a stipulation. Apparently all the letters tend to prove, that is, subject to your objection as to the materiality of the evidence, is that the Cardiff Gypsum Company applied to Ebsary for purchases of board to fill its orders, and that Ebsary tried to get the consent of USG, which was refused. That has all been shown before, anyway, by Mr. Lenci.

Mr. Bromley: I offered to stipulate that before, but we couldn't agree on it.

Mr. Knuff: As I say, if the Court cares to not receive these in evidence—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) We are perfectly willing to receive them if they are properly introducible. I simply made that suggestion in the interest of time. It takes a lot of time to identify the exhibits and to consider the objections on them. If they could be covered by a stipulation, it would be proper; but if there is something in them that you think the Government needs to prove, we don't wish to interfere with your proper efforts to prove it.

Mr. Knuff: I don't think there is anything in these that the Government needs to prove that hasn't already been proved by the exhibits introduced through Mr.
5352 Lenci. They simply round out that picture, supplying the missing letters in the Lenci testimony.

Justice Stephens: How about Exhibit 584?

Mr. Bromley: I make the usual objection, and object on the ground that it is immaterial to any charge in the complaint.

Justice Stephens: Received, subject to the usual reservation with respect to declarations of alleged co-conspirators.

Justice Stephens: How about Exhibit 586?

Mr. Bromley: As to the rest of the exhibits, 586 to 590, inclusive, they not only round out the picture, but they are repetitious, because every one of them has heretofore been introduced and received in evidence.

Justice Jackson: Those very documents?

Mr. Bromley: Every one of them.

Mr. Knuff: If that is the fact, then I don't want them in evidence.

Mr. Bromley: Government's Exhibit for Identification 586 is already in evidence in this case as Government's Exhibit 536.

Justice Stephens: And has 587 been offered again?

5353 Mr. Bromley: I am talking about 586.

Justice Stephens: How about Exhibit 587?

Mr. Bromley: That is already in evidence in this case as Exhibit 537.

Justice Stephens: Exhibit 588?

Mr. Bromley: Already in evidence in this case as Exhibit 539.

Justice Stephens: Exhibit 589?

Mr. Bromley: Already in evidence in this case as Exhibit 541.

Justice Stephens: Exhibit 590?

Mr. Bromley: Already in evidence in this case as Exhibit 543.

Justice Stephens: Is there any dispute about that, Mr. Knuff?

Mr. Knuff: I haven't checked it, and if Mr. Bromley says that that is the fact, I would be inclined to take his word for it.

Justice Stephens: Then we will reject those exhibits last mentioned, commencing with 586 and concluding with 590, on the ground that they are repetitive.

Mr. Knuff: The exhibits themselves I don't believe are in; I don't believe that these identical exhibits are in. But there are carbon copies in, which is practically the same thing, and I am not going to insist at all.

5354 Justice Stephens: Very well.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Mr. Sensibar, have you told us about all the conversations that you have had with members of the industry with relation to your attempts to purchase gypsum board and gypsum lath at a discount? Are there any other companies, who are defendants here today, that you talked to, that you haven't already testified concerning? A. To the best of my knowledge, that is all.

Q. I want to call your attention—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) Just a minute, Mr. Knuff.

(The Justices conferred.)

Justice Stephens: Proceed.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. I want to call your attention, Mr. Sensibar, to page 5543 of the transcript, beginning at line 7, where I asked you this question:

"Q. And will you tell us the conversation that you had with Mr. Henley?"

And you answered:

"A. It arose out of a general discussion regarding the Code that we were then working on. There were a number of questions involved on which there was a difference of opinion, and one was whether the situation should be 5355 created so that jobbers might exist in the industry. That was one of the matters discussed there.

"Several of us met"—and so forth and so on.

And it was suggested that you proceed to answer the question more directly. Do you recall that in your testimony yesterday? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, Mr. Sensibar, in 1931, 1932, 1933, and from then on down, did you know what the policy of the industry was with respect to jobbers?

Mr. Bromley: Objected to as immaterial.

Justice Stephens: Do you wish to be heard, Mr. Knuff? It seems to the Court immaterial what the policy of the industry was. That is so general that it can hardly prove anything in the case.

Mr. Knuff: We have stated in the complaint—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) If you were talking about the policy of the defendants, that might be different, but your question was as to the policy of the industry. I don't assume to rule that that is admissible, but it would certainly be closer to the edge.

Mr. Knuff: The defendants comprise practically the entire gypsum industry. In so far as board is concerned, they are the industry.

Justice Stephens: That is the charge, but we have 5356 to apply the usual rules of evidence, and I think the question as phrased is not proper. The objection is sustained.

Mr. Knuff: Very well, I will rephrase it.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Mr. Sensibar, beginning with 1931, did you know what the policy of the defendants was with regard to jobbers of board in the gypsum industry?

Mr. Bromley: May that be answered "yes" or "no", if Your Honor please?

Justice Stephens: Just state "yes" or "no", whether you knew what the policy of the defendants was.

The Witness: Yes, sir, I did.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. You say you did know the policy? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Of the defendants? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And will you tell us, in your own words, just what that policy was, please?

Mr. Bromley: Objected to as incompetent.

Justice Stephens: I should think, Mr. Knuff, on further reflection, that what you would have to do would be to show what each defendant did and said, which you have made some showing of, and let the Court determine what the policy was; that that is a conclusion which the Court might have to draw.

5357 What do you say as to that?

Mr. Knuff: Well, I wouldn't be inclined to say that the Court is wrong. I thought maybe I could take just a little shortcut. If you want me to develop it—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) Thank you for your frankness, Mr. Knuff. I think the objection is well taken.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Did you ever talk with anybody in the United States Gypsum Company concerning jobbers of board in the gypsum industry? A. Yes.

Q. With whom did you talk? A. First, probably, with Mr. Henning.

Q. When you say "probably", do you mean you probably talked to Mr. Henning, or do you mean you probably talked to him first—which do you mean? A. First—that I probably talked to him first.

Q. When did you talk to him? A. In the summer of 1933, during those Code meetings.

Q. Will you relate what your conversation was? A. In a general way, I can tell you. During the discussions as to the various points that should have been put into the Code, I pointed out that in the past, the business of Cardiff had depended to a large extent on distribution through jobbers—the further back we go in the history of 5358 Cardiff, the more that is true—and that the sales problem for a company such as Cardiff then was,

was a very difficult one, and that jobbers fitted into that situation very well.

Justice Jackson: Are you talking about jobbers or commission men, which?

The Witness: Jobbers. (Continuing) And that we favored a recognized standing for jobbers in the industry.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. What did Mr. Henning say? A. He said that a good many of the ills of the industry had, in the past, arisen out of the jobber situation, and that they had decided once and for all to put an end to it.

Q. That they had decided once and for all? A. So far as his company was concerned, yes, sir.

Q. That was in 1933? A. Yes, sir, beginning in June.

Q. And did you have any further conversations with Mr. Henning on that subject? A. Well, from time to time, in a general way, because there were a number of us there who espoused the same ideas, that the jobbers ought to be put back in the picture, and it came up a number of times.

Q. Did you talk with anybody else connected with 5359 USG concerning the jobbers? A. I don't remember that I did.

Q. Mr. Henning, then, is the only person connected with USG that you can remember talking to, is that correct? A. Well, I talked about it to a man who at that time was in charge of Chicago sales for USG, but I can't recall his name.

Q. At or about this time, did you ever talk to anyone connected with National? A. Pardon me, that man's first name was Dick, but I can't remember his second name.

Q. I am afraid "Dick" doesn't help me very much.

Mr. Sensibar, did you ever talk with anybody from National concerning National's attitude about jobbers? A. At the same time, yes, sir, I talked with Mr. Burley, who was attending those conferences.

Q. What was your conversation with Mr. Burley, what did you say to Mr. Burley and what did Mr. Burley say to you? A. It was very much along the same lines as my conversation with Mr. Henning. He said that they had had jobbers at the beginning of their business, and that they no longer favored that kind of a set-up.

Q. Now, when was that conversation with Mr. Burley? A. When?

5360 Q. Yes. A. During the summer, say June or July, and maybe into August, of 1933.

Q. Did you talk to Mr. Burley in company with Mr. Henning, or was your conversation with Mr. Henning separate and apart from your conversation with Mr. Burley? A. I can't remember that. These weren't formal negotiations or discussions. A whole group of us spent a whole summer there, and Lord knows, we talked about pretty nearly everything, from time to time.

Q. Are you sure that you talked to Mr. Burley on this subject? A. Yes, sir, I am.

Q. Did you talk with anybody else from National? A. I don't think so.

Q. Did you talk to anybody connected with Certain-teed, concerning the policy of Certain-teed about jobbers? A. With Mr. Warren Henley, who also attended all those meetings.

Q. When did you talk with Mr. Henley, and what conversation did you have with him? A. During this period of June to August, 1933; and the conversations were for the purpose of pointing out our belief that jobbers were justified and necessary in a sound gypsum industry, and asking his cooperation to put them in by means of the Code that was then being established.

5361 Q. And what was Mr. Henley's answer to you? A. That over a period of time it hadn't worked out, and that they preferred not to re-create that situation.

Q. Did you understand from that, that over a period of time the jobbers hadn't been of any benefit to the industry? A. To his company, so far as they were concerned.

Q. Did you talk with anybody in American concerning jobbers? A. With Arthur Black, yes.

Q. When? A. During this period, June, July and August, 1933.

Q. And what conversation did you have with Black? A. Mr. Black was one of those who wanted jobbers retained or re-created, so far as the gypsum industry was concerned, and we were together on that.

Q. Did you talk with anybody from Texas? A. I believe not.

Q. Did you talk with anybody from Kelley? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you talk with anybody from Ebsary? A. I think not.

Mr. Knuff: I don't know, if there are any other gypsum companies in the industry, I would ask the witness; but I can't remember any others.

You may cross-examine the witness.

5362 Cross Examination

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. Mr. Sensibar, the dealer distribution policy that you talked about is a policy applicable to a manufacturer, isn't it? A. I am afraid I don't quite understand.

Q. Well, when you mentioned the phrase "dealer distribution policy"—whose policy would that be, the policy of the dealer or the policy of the manufacturer? A. Well, did I use that in relation to our sales to dealers—is that how it was used?

Q. Don't you remember? A. No, sir.

Q. Well, isn't it the fact that the dealer distribution policy is the policy of the manufacturer of goods to sell those goods, in the gypsum industry, direct to building material dealers and masons' supply dealers, rather than to contractors? A. I get it now. The words I used were "dealer policy". That is right.

Q. Dealer policy? A. Yes. I didn't identify it, as you said, by "dealer distribution policy".

Q. When you used the phrase "dealer policy", you meant the same thing as the dealer distribution policy, 5363 didn't you? A. Yes.

Q. There is no difference, is there? A. I don't exactly know what you mean.

Q. Isn't the dealer policy a phrase which refers to the method of distribution, that is, through dealers? A. Yes, it does.

Q. And the method of distribution referred to in the phrase "dealer policy" is the distribution method of the manufacturer, isn't it? A. Yes.

Q. A manufacturer of gypsum products could either sell them to dealers, or he could sell them to ultimate consumers, such as housing contractors, couldn't he? A. That is right.

Q. And if it is the policy of any particular manufacturer to sell the gypsum product that he makes, only to dealers, then he is following what you call the dealer policy, isn't he? A. You had the word "only" in there. There might be exceptions and still have a dealer policy.

Q. Well, if most of the time he preferred to sell his product to dealers, then you would say that he was following the dealer policy? A. That is right.

Q. And the policy which is opposed to that, or 5364 different from that, would be a policy, on the part of a manufacturer, to sell directly to the ultimate consumer, such as contractors, wouldn't it? A. That is right.

Q. The manufacturer who sells directly to contractors in the majority of his sales, Mr. Sensibar, would be by-passing the dealer altogether, wouldn't he? A. Yes.

Q. And wouldn't you say that the effect of such a policy, that is, to sell to the contractor instead of to the dealer, if indulged in by a manufacturer to any great extent, would antagonize the lumber dealers and masons' supply dealers and building material dealers of the area in which the manufacturer sold? A. Yes.

Q. And that antagonism would spring from the fact that the manufacturer's policy of selling direct to contractors would cause the dealers to lose that business; isn't that right? A. Yes.

5365 So that if a manufacturer has a policy of selling mainly through dealers, he cannot make it a practice to supply his product directly to contractors, because to do so would destroy the trade of the main class of his customers, that is his dealers, isn't that right? A. Within certain limits.

Q. Well, the policies are inconsistent, aren't they? A. If you are going to pursue either policy—well, let me put it this way, if you are going to pursue one policy in a large majority of your business, obviously you cannot pursue the other one.

Q. Now, the policy of your company under Mr. Breen's control was to sell direct to contractors, wasn't it? A. The generally most truthful answer to that is no, that it was not the policy.

Q. What is the truthful answer? A. What I just gave you.

Q. It is still no? A. Yes.

Q. What did you mean when you testified here yesterday that you told these gentlemen whom you went to see that when you came into the picture you changed the Cardiff policy about distribution? A. I mean this, that under the Breen management the company had no sizeable sales organization. They had Tom Breen and 5366 two or three salesmen. That many salesmen naturally couldn't cover the large territory into which we shipped. The result of that was that the company had a very limited number of dealer outlets, simply because they didn't have the manpower to cover them, and to fill in between these dealer outlets, where they had territories that were not covered by dealers, they sold directly to the contract trade. That wasn't because they preferred to do it that way. They preferred to sell to the dealers.

What I meant by the change in policy was that we undertook, beginning in 1935, to make the outlay necessary to establish a field organization that would cover the territory and that we were willing to make the sacrifice to a very great extent, of not selling to contractors in the territory in between where we had our direct dealer coverage.

Q. Well, whatever the reason for Mr. Breen's policy, a truthful answer to my question would have been that Breen followed the contractor policy, wouldn't it? A. No sir, I gave you the truthful answer.

Q. Well, didn't you just say that because he didn't have enough salesmen, he sold to contractors? A. That is right.

Q. Now, Breen's policy was also to cut prices in order to get business, even below his cost, wasn't it? A. No sir.

5367 It was not? A. It would be very foolish, wouldn't it?

Q. Well, was it or was it not his policy? A. No, of course not.

Q. You would agree, wouldn't you, that the Cardiff company under Breen's policy, did not follow what you thought were good business policies? A. That is right.

Q. And isn't it the fact, Mr. Sensibar, that a manufacturer which supplied Cardiff with materials under a distributing arrangement, or some similar wholesale arrangement, would antagonize the dealer-customers of the manufacturer? A. It probably depends upon what period you are talking about.

Q. Under the Breen management. A. Until about 1930, I couldn't say. I can tell you about after 1930.

Q. Well, I was asking you as an experienced businessman. Wouldn't it be unwise for a manufacturer who was following the dealer policy, to have a distributor who was following the contractor policy? A. In that situation, if you want my opinion, it is no, that it would have been wise for them to have made that kind of a deal with Tom Breen.

Q. And you don't think that if one of the board
5368 manufacturers had made that arrangement it would have resulted in antagonizing the dealer-customers of that manufacturer in the territory in which Breen operated? A. You are dealing there with a lot of people. Each one has his own ideas, and it is pretty hard to generalize about a whole group. Some would have objected, but I believe that, taking it all-in-all, it would have been wise for them to have gone along with him on that policy.

Q. But you concede, don't you, that a business man might have been reasonable in concluding that he would prefer not to distribute through a distributor who sold to contractors? A. That he would have been what?

Q. Reasonable in his judgment, even though you disagreed with him? A. A lot of people can disagree with me and still be reasonable.

Q. And your answer to my question is yes, then, isn't it? A. No, I don't think I can say that. I don't think it was a reasonable policy by USG.

Q. The Cardiff Company, during all of this time, would, if supplied with board by any one of the manufacturers, have been in competition with the manufacturer 5369 who sold to it, wouldn't it? A. Yes sir.

Q. In other words, for one of these board manufacturers to sell to Cardiff would have just added to the competition that that manufacturer would have had to meet, would it not? A. In an academic way, yes sir. It might also have added to his profits.

Q. Suppose the Cardiff Company had been supplied board out of a manufacturer's mill at Fort Dodge. A. Yes sir.

Q. The Cardiff Company and the supplier with the mill located there, would have been soliciting the same trade, wouldn't they? A. That is right.

Q. Don't you call that competition for business? A. Yes. That was just the situation when I talked with Mr. Harrison, and he thought it would be good for National.

Q. But some other salesman might conclude that it would be bad for a supplier to furnish Cardiff goods to compete with it, isn't that right? A. It was usual practice in the trade.

Q. Now, won't you answer the question? A. Will you repeat it?

(The reporter read the question as above recorded.)

The Witness: Yes.

By Mr. Bromley:

5370 Q. Now, your company, you said, went into bankruptcy in 1935—that is right, isn't it? A. That is right,

Q. That means, doesn't it, that a considerable number of the creditors of your company were left unpaid? A. In cash, yes.

Q. And don't you think that a manufacturer who was approached to sell the Cardiff Company, board, after 1935, would give some consideration to the credit risk? A. Yes, but no one ever questioned that. Nobody ever said to me, "We would sell you, Ezra, but we are afraid you can't pay your bills."

Q. You know, don't you, that your Dun and Bradstreet reports during all the period subsequent to 1935 were, to say the least, very bad? A. No, I don't, I never saw a Dun and Bradstreet report on our company.

Q. Did you ever give a statement to Dun and Bradstreet? A. No sir.

Q. It is a fact, isn't it, Mr. Sensibar, that in 1938 and 1939 there was an upturn in building which left the board manufacturers without the capacity to fill their own customers' needs? A. No, you have that date a little wrong. That upturn was in 1937. 1938 was a worse year than 1937.

5371 Q. 1937 was the year, was it? A. 1937 had a considerable upturn, yes. 1938 had a downturn.

Justice Stephens: We will take the afternoon recess.

(Whereupon a five-minute recess was taken, after which the trial was resumed as follows:)

Justice Stephens: Mr. Steffen, do you wish to get away at quarter of four tonight?

Mr. Steffen: I would like to, your Honor.

Justice Jackson: Can Mr. Knuff carry on until four?

Mr. Steffen: Oh, I think so.

Justice Jackson: Then you can go at any time you want to. (Laughter).

Mr. Steffen: Thank you.

Justice Stephens: Proceed, Mr. Bromley.

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. In your talks with various representatives of the different board manufacturers that you have mentioned, you realized at all times, didn't you, that you were asking for a supply of patented board? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And your knew, of course, that the patented board which you were seeking was made by these companies, as licensees under licenses with USG, which did not give those licensees the right to sell you that patented product without the consent of the licensor? A. In a gen-5372 eral way, that was my understanding.

Q. You have testified before about these various talks which you had with the representatives of the manufacturers haven't you? A. I have, yes sir.

Q. And you testified at the criminal trial about them, didn't you? A. That is right.

Q. And this time you have dressed that testimony up a little, haven't you? A. No sir.

Q. You haven't? A. Not a bit.

Q. Haven't you dressed it up a little to emphasize the part that USG played in it, and to exaggerate the discussions about cutting prices on plaster? A. If anything, my friend, there are hundreds of little talks here and there along the line that I have forgotten. This was over a period of 10 or 12 years, and if I could give you the whole story it would be a lot more lengthy and detailed than what I have given you.

Q. Didn't you try to give it in the criminal case? A. I did my best, yes sir.

Q. You want the defendants to lose this suit, don't 5373 you? A. Yes.

Q. And you were disappointed in the result of the criminal case, weren't you? A. Naturally.

Q. And it is your purpose now, and has been for some time, to bring a treble damage suit against the defendants, isn't it? A. No.

Q. You have already consulted counsel about it, haven't you? A. It so happens—

Q. (Interposing) Wait a minute. Can't you tell us that without talking about it? A. Yes, I can say no, I have not consulted counsel about it.

Q. But it so happens that there are two lawyers on your board of directors, doesn't it? A. That is right.

Q. And you have talked to them about it, haven't you? A. Quite naturally. The question of the generally unfavorable losing situation, you may be sure, has been discussed more than once. Those people are stockholders. It is their money as well as mine.

Q. And you are going to sue these defendants for treble damages whenever this case comes to an end, aren't 5374 you? A. I don't know, Mr. Bromley. If we have a means of recovery, and if the company is able to afford the expense of the effort involved to get some recovery, and try to get something back for our stockholders, we certainly are going to try to do everything we can in that connection.

Q. To put it shortly, if the Government wins this suit, then you will sue the defendants for treble damages, won't you? A. No. The answer to that is no. It depends on a whole lot of circumstances, and I cannot give you a categorical answer that you want, that we will sue USG—I don't know.

Q. You mean you have not yet finally decided, is that it? A. I presume in the end it will be a combination of a legal question and a business question, Mr. Bromley.

Q. Then you have not yet finally decided, have you? A. No, naturally.

Q. Well, you threatened to sue USG once before, didn't you? A. No.

Q. Didn't you go to the Department of Justice and complain to it? A. No, I did not.

Q. Didn't you have a conference with a lawyer named Price in Chicago, at which you threatened to sue 5375 USG? A. No sir, that wasn't the way it was at all.

Q. It wasn't? A. I never understood that Mr. Price was a member of the Department of Justice, either.

Q. I don't mean to intimate that he was. Didn't you go to a lawyer named Charles Price, counsel for USG, and threaten to bring a suit against USG? A. No sir.

Q. What was this mention you made this morning about putting the matter up to some Government agency—you meant the Federal Trade Commission, didn't you? A. Frankly, I didn't know who I meant, but I felt at that time, in 1938, that this situation was so outrageous, which we had been trying to get corrected for several years, and that very evidently USG didn't want to correct it, and without knowing what agency, I felt that certainly some agency in Washington would be interested in it, and I suggested that we go and present the matter to them, not by way of a court procedure, but by way of getting an opinion about it, and that was rejected.

Q. Like the Department of Justice? A. I tell you I didn't have in mind what agency it might be, I didn't know.

Q. You did have the Department of Justice in 5376 mind, didn't you? A. No sir, I didn't have any department in mind.

Q. Didn't you have the Federal Trade Commission in mind? A. I didn't have any department in mind. I didn't know, I am not a lawyer, Mr. Bromley.

Q. And you testified before the Grand Jury, didn't you? A. Yes, I was subpoenaed.

Q. And you have tried to get others to testify for the Government in this case, haven't you? A. No sir.

Q. Well, you testified to the conversation which you said you had with Mr. Holland of Universal in 1933, during the criminal trial, did you not? A. Yes, I think I did.

Q. And at that criminal trial you told the Court and jury there as fully and frankly as you could remember, what your conversation with Holland was, didn't you? A. I think I did.

Q. And when you testified about that same conversation here, you added something—do you remember? A. No, I don't.

Q. Don't you remember that when you testified here you added a reference to a mention of Cardiff cutting prices on gypsum plaster? A. Is your question whether I re-5377 member adding something to it; is that your question?

Q. No. My question was intended to be—when you testified here, didn't you add something that you had not said at the criminal trial at all? A. I don't know. In each case I have tried my very best to remember everything that happened and to relate it, and I am sure I can't tell you whether there is something more in my testimony yesterday or today than there was two years ago.

Q. Can you tell me now whether you said at the criminal trial that in your Holland conversation there was talk about Cardiff cutting prices on plaster? A. I don't know. Is there a record of my testimony of two years ago here?

Q. Yes. Would you like to see it? A. I would be very glad to.

Q. Do you recall that you told us here when you were describing your conversation with Holland, that Holland said something about Cardiff cutting prices on plaster? A. Yes, I think I did. In any event, he said something about it.

Q. Now, you asked if the criminal record was here. Haven't you read your testimony in the criminal trial? A. Yes sir, I have.

Q. That is one of the first things you did when you 5378 came to Washington, wasn't it? A. A month ago, yes sir.

Q. You went to Mr. Knuff's office and read it over carefully, didn't you? A. Yes sir.

Q. And that little black book you have got in front of you contains the notes you made when you read over your criminal testimony, doesn't it? A. You are welcome to it.

Q. Could you answer the question? A. No. What this contains is notations as to the several years when these conversations were held, and the names of the people with whom I held the conversations during particular years, as nearly as I can remember. You are quite welcome to it, there is no secret about it.

Q. You had that little black book at the criminal trial, did you? A. No.

Q. You didn't? A. No.

Q. When did you make it up? A. About ten o'clock last night.

Q. And you have been consulting it right along during your direct examination, haven't you? A. Today, yes sir.

5379 Q. Did you tell any representative of the Department of Justice about these conversations prior to the criminal trial? A. Yes.

Q. And did you aid the Department of Justice in the preparation of the bill of particulars that had to do with the conversations that you had had with these manufacturers? A. No sir, I never knew anything about it.

Q. Well, now, would you look at your criminal testimony?

(Copy of testimony of the witness on the criminal trial was handed to him.)

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. Do you recall that you testified this morning, or rather yesterday afternoon, that in your talk with Holland in 1933, Mr. Holland—

Mr. Steffen: (Interposing) May we have the page, please?

Mr. Bromley: Page 5530.

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. (Continuing)—that Mr. Holland said, "that there was a general impression in the industry that Cardiff had been cutting prices on gypsum plaster; that he doubted, under those circumstances, whether we could make a connection to get board."

You remember that? A. Yes sir.

5380 Q. Now will you look at your testimony beginning at page 2497 of the criminal case? It isn't there, is it? A. No. I am sorry I forget this point. I should have testified to this here, this morning or yesterday.

Q. Now what are you referring to? A. This, you just asked me to read.

Q. You are sorry you forgot what? A. Shall I read it?

Q. Just give me a reference to it. A. Beginning at line 17 on page 2497 and going over to page 2498, line 14.

Q. So that when you testified here yesterday afternoon you left out altogether what you had said at the bottom of page 2497, didn't you? A. I overlooked it, yes sir.

Q. You didn't say anything about it, did you? A. No sir.

Q. Just read what it was you told us in the criminal case about your Holland conversation, will you? A. Yes.

"I explained to him the desire of our company to have a connection similar to other plaster manufacturers in the industry, such that we could buy board and lath at a dis-

5381 count under the price at which we would sell it to the building material trade. He replied to me that as far as they were concerned there would be some objection to that, that our men would be out visiting the same building material dealers to a very large extent, to whom they were selling lath and board, and that that might be an objection."

Q. You didn't mention that yesterday afternoon at all, did you? A. I overlooked that.

Q. Well, it was a very important overlooking, wasn't it? A. I am sure I don't know. Mr. Bromley—

Q. (Interposing) That happened— A. (Interposing) Now wait a minute.

Q. That happened, didn't it?

Mr. Steffen: Let the witness answer. He was continuing to answer that question.

Justice Stephens: Finish your answer.

The Witness: I was about to say to Mr. Bromley that I am now being asked to recall details of conversations that took place over a period of years. This one took place over eleven years ago. I did my best at the criminal trial to recall those conversations, and I did my best here. Naturally, some things I recall now that I didn't then, and vice versa.

By Mr. Bromley:

5382 Q. So that it would be very easy for you unconsciously and not meaningly, to create an entirely false impression about these conversations, wouldn't it? A. No sir, because I am telling all the truth I can remember in both instances.

Q. Well, let's see if that is so.

You told us here yesterday afternoon that Mr. Holland had told you, in answer to the question,

"Q. Did he tell you why they had refused it?"

that Mr. Holland had said,

"A. He told me that there was a general impression in the industry that Cardiff had been cutting prices on gypsum plaster; that he doubted, under those circumstances, whether we could make a connection to get board."

Now, you didn't mention that in the criminal case at all, did you? A. I don't know, I haven't read through the rest of this testimony.

Q. Well, read it.

Mr. Knuff: If your Honor pleases, I haven't any objection if Mr. Bromley wishes to incorporate in the record the entire testimony of this witness given at the criminal trial.

Justice Stephens: The record may show that you are willing that that be done.

By Mr. Bromley:

5383 Q. It isn't there, is it? A. No sir.

Q. Now yesterday afternoon you also said that you said to Mr. Holland:

"I explained to him the situation of the Cardiff Company, that the control had changed hands, and that I understood the objections of the industry to the policies of the company under the management that had existed up to that time; but I explained that a change had taken place, and in view of that I asked him what he would advise us to do, as newcomers entering into the control of the company."

Now you didn't say anything like that in the criminal case either, did you? A. I think that is correct.

Q. Now is it true— A. (Interposing) Wasn't that a later meeting I was talking about yesterday, than this one?

Q. Well, was it? A. I think so.

Q. You think so? A. Yes. Didn't I tell you yesterday, or tell the Court, that there were several meetings with Mr. Holland, not just one?

Q. Well, what is your recollection, one? A. There were several.

5384 Q. There were several? A. Yes. We had a lot of those general discussions throughout that summer from June to August.

Q. Well, is it your testimony that in the criminal case you were only talking about one conversation, whereas in this case you were talking about several? A. I have done my best to remember the conversations, the several times when they were had, Mr. Bromley.

Q. I want to know what you mean by what you just said. Were you trying to create the impression that in the criminal case you were only talking about one conversation, and that in this case you were talking about several? A. I don't know, I am sure, whether I was talking in the criminal case about one or more.

Q. You don't, in spite of the fact that your eyes are now directed precisely at the question. A. Maybe it says so here.

Q. Well, doesn't it say so? A. I don't know.

Q. Look at line 13: "There were a number of conversations, several of them took place in his office in Chicago.

"Q. Would you relate these conversations for the Court and jury, please?"

Do you see that? A. Yes.

5385 Q. Now it is true, isn't it, as you testified in the criminal case at the bottom of page 2497, that whatever else Holland may have said to you, he told you that since your men would be out soliciting the same material dealers to a very large extent, as his men, that that might constitute an objection to your buying board from Universal? A. Yes sir, and he afterwards withdrew that and was perfectly willing—

Mr. Johnston: (Interposing) We cannot hear him.

The Witness: He afterwards withdrew that as an objection and said that he would be willing to sell us.

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. Well, did you say anything about that in the criminal case? A. I don't remember.

Q. Well, look at it and see. It is all there in the space of two or three pages. A. Yes. I said:

"I pointed out to him then that the discount that we were asking for, and which was customary, was a discount which really is smaller than what it costs to sell the board and lath. So that even if it were true that we would be selling to his customers, his company would be just as well off to have us to sell it as they would themselves. He recognized that", and so on.

Q. Now, you wanted the Court to understand from 5386 your testimony here, didn't you, that Holland was telling you that none of the board companies would sell board to you? A. That that was his opinion, yes sir, and that he thought that the best bet would be to take it up with American, that we would have more chance with them.

Q. You didn't say anything about that in the criminal case, didn't you? A. Maybe not.

Q. Well, isn't it the fact, Mr. Sensibar, that it was Mr. Holland who suggested that you go to the American Gypsum Company? A. Yes, I just said so.

Q. Well, you don't mean to say, then, that he told you that none of the companies would sell you board? A. That in his opinion it wasn't likely that they would.

Q. Well, what did he want you to go to American for? A. He thought that was the best possibility.

Q. And thereafter you went to American? A. I did, yes.

Q. Now, in your conversation with Mr. Black—you testified about that conversation at the criminal trial, didn't you? A. Yes.

Q. You told us here that the decision as to whether Black would sell to you would depend upon what 5387 USG would permit American to do—didn't you? A. In the last analysis, yes.

Q. Now, when you gave that testimony here, you meant by that, that Black said it would depend on whether USG would grant American a consent to sell your company patented board, didn't you? A. Yes.

Q. Now in the criminal trial, at page 2500, you testified that Black told you he would have to sell his own people on the idea that this would be a profitable connection. Do you see that? A. I think I testified to that here too.

Q. You do? A. That is my impression, yes sir.

Q. Well, is that the fact, is that what Mr. Black told you? A. That is right.

Q. Now when you told the story here you said, didn't you, that there was a lengthy discussion on Cardiff's sales policies with reference to plaster? A. Well, there was, in any event. I think I said that.

Q. Did you say it in the criminal case? A. I don't remember.

Q. Well, can you look and see? A. Yes.

5388 Q. Look at page 2500. A. No, I don't see that here.

Q. No reference to plaster prices at all appears in the criminal case, does there? A. Oh, yes.

Q. So far as your conversation that we are talking about now? A. It seems to me that I testified about that Community Housing Project in Indianapolis.

Q. You realize that I am asking you about 1933? A. Here?

Q. Yes. A. Yes.

Q. There was no mention in your criminal testimony about any plaster prices in the 1933 meeting with Black, was there? A. No, I don't see it.

Q. Now you went to see Mr. Henley of Certain-teed in 1933, you said. Is that right? A. Yes, I think that is right.

Q. You couldn't remember that without that little book, could you? A. Does it bother you that I use the book?

Q. Could you remember it without your little 5389 book or couldn't you? A. I think so.

Q. Well, what do you look at it each time for? A. If it bothers you, I won't.

Q. What do you look at it for? A. Just to be sure.

Q. What did you use last night when you made that little book up? A. What did I use?

Q. Yes, to refresh your recollection, if anything? A. I looked over something similar to this (indicating copy of minutes of the criminal trial which had previously been handed to the witness) of my testimony at the criminal proceedings.

Q. And you had your criminal testimony last night? A. That is right.

Q. I thought you told me a minute ago that you had read it over a month ago. A. That is right.

Q. But you read it over again last night? A. I scanned through it, picking out the dates.

Q. And you made those notes from your criminal testimony? A. That is right. Well, a lot of them were added because there were a lot of things that weren't in the criminal testimony at all.

Q. There were? A. Yes.

5390 Q. Do you know how that happened? A. I was there when part of it happened, anyway. The Certain-teed testimony was excluded.

Q. Is that the reason for all of your omissions in your criminal testimony? A. I don't think I know what you mean by "omissions" there.

Q. Well, you say you didn't testify to the Certain-teed conversations. A. Yes, it wasn't admitted.

Q. Because they were objected to? A. Yes.

Q. Now there were a great many other conversations that you testified to here that you didn't testify to at the criminal trial at all, weren't there? A. I don't know.

Q. You don't know? A. No sir.

Q. You can't even tell from the little book? A. It seems to me that Texas was not touched on—

Q. (Interposing) Was there an objection to Texas at the criminal trial? A. I don't know, I'm sure.

Q. Don't you know that Texas was listed in the bill 5391 of particulars in the criminal trial? A. I don't know, no sir.

Q. Don't you know that you gave no testimony with respect to any conversation with anybody from Texas at the criminal trial? A. I just said I think there was nothing in the criminal trial about Texas.

Q. From you? A. That is right.

Justice Garrett: I had the impression that Texas was not involved in that indictment. Am I wrong about that? Where did I get that impression?

Mr. Bromley: That is right, your Honor; it was named in the bill of particulars, however, under this charge, and testimony of course was received as to it, because it was alleged to be a co-conspirator, although not a defendant.

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. Now didn't Mr. Henley tell you in 1933 that he would see whether he could convert other members of his organization to his own belief that you ought to be sold? A. Yes, I think he did.

Q. Now, when you said, "other members of the organization", you meant other employees or officers of Certain-teed, didn't you? A. Yes.

Q. You told us yesterday that Mr. Henley had 5392 told you that there was a constant stream of complaints from his sales organization about situations where Cardiff had sold plaster off the market price. Do you remember that? A. I do.

Q. In using the word "complaint", you meant merely, did you not, reports by Certain-teed's salesmen to the head of the Certain-teed sales department? A. Reports in the nature of complaints, yes sir.

Q. But whether they were reports or complaints, they were from Certain-teed's salesmen to Certain-teed's executives? A. That is right.

Q. Now was there any basis in fact whatsoever for Henley's statement that Cardiff was constantly cutting prices on plaster? A. Would you mind repeating that?

(The reporter read the question as above recorded.)

The Witness: I don't think I said that Mr. Henley said that. What he said was that there was a constant stream of complaints coming to his desk regarding—

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. (Interposing) Regarding what? Regarding the cutting of prices on plaster by Cardiff, wasn't it? A. That is right.

Q. Let me ask you, was there any basis in fact 5393 for that statement by Mr. Henley? A. Well, I am not trying to quibble with you. I don't question that he had those reports from his salesmen, if that is what you mean?

Q. Well, the reports were not true, were they? A. In general, no. It is a constant experience of all of us that when a salesman loses an order, he sends a complaint to the home office that somebody else cut the price.

Q. That is commonly used by salesmen as an alibi for failure to get orders, isn't it? A. I'm afraid it is.

Q. Wasn't this statement that Henley made to you a statement with respect to the period of time after you had taken over control of Cardiff? A. No, it was a statement regarding his general experience up to that time in 1933; during the last three years of that period, I did, in fact, have stock control of the company, but I was not directing the sales policies of the company until sometime after 1933.

Q. Well, would a statement like that have been true after you commenced to direct the sales policies of the company? A. No sir.

Q. Were you a price-cutter? A. No sir.

Q. Was the Cardiff Gypsum Company a price-
5394 cutter on plaster? A. No sir.

Q. After you took control of the company, in the sense of directing it, it seldom, if ever, cut a plaster price, did it? A. That is true.

Q. Now is it your testimony that Mr. Henley, after telling you that he had been receiving a constant stream of complaints about Cardiff's price-cutting, nevertheless voluntarily offered to enter into a business association with you? A. No, that wasn't my testimony.

Q. Well, you testified that he did say that he was in favor of doing business with you? A. That is right, he did.

Q. He did? A. Yes sir.

Q. After mentioning this constant stream of complaints, he nevertheless said that he thought Certain-teed ought to do business with you? A. As a result of considerable discussion and negotiation, he did, and I might say, after some investigation of some of those complaints.

Q. Well, in the criminal case you testified about a conversation that you said you had with Mr. Henning 5395 in 1935—do you remember? A. No, I don't.

Q. Well, do you remember that you testified that you had a conversation with Mr. Henning which was initiated by Mr. Knode? A. Did you just say Mr. Henning or Mr. Henley?

Q. Henning. A. I am sorry, I understood you to say Mr. Henley. Would you ask that again, please.

Q. You testified about a conversation you had with Mr. Henning in 1935, didn't you? A. Yes sir.

Q. And here, after tesifying about it, you said you were sure that that conference was initiated by Mr. Knode, do you remember that? A. Yes sir.

Q. And do you recall the other day when you first testified about this conversation that you said that after you had talked with Mr. Knode, he referred you to Mr. Keady? A. Yes, I became confused about Mr. Keady and Mr. Charles Henning, as to that particular conversation.

5396 Q. Then I take it you will want to withdraw all of your testimony about your alleged conversation with Mr. Keady in 1935? A. I think I corrected that at the time.

Q. I do not think that you did, and that is why I ask it. Whether you did or not, don't you now want to withdraw your testimony about any alleged conversation with Keady in 1935? A. Well, wasn't that corrected at that time to Mr. Charles Henning from Mr. Keady?

Justice Jackson: I thought it was corrected.

Mr. Knuff: I thought it was.

Mr. Bromley: Well, it leaves us in this state: He has testified at length to a conversation with Keady which he had in 1935; and then he says he didn't have a conversation with Keady, he had one with Henning, and he proceeded to tell what the Henning conversation was,—which leaves us with his testimony at pages 5548 to 5550, all about what was said between him and Keady, when nothing was said.

Justice Stephens: Well, you can bring out by further cross-examination that nothing was said between him and Keady, I suppose. You may proceed.

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. Nothing was said between you and Keady in 5397 1935, at all? A. That is correct.

Q. And the conversation that you described as having had with Keady could not apply to what you and Henning talked about, because you talked about Keady saying he was a newcomer in the business, and things that Mr Henning never could have said? A. That is right. That conversation with Keady actually took place some time later.

Q. Well, you testified that it took place in 1938, and you later on told us what it was, in detail? A. I think that is right.

Q. So I ask you now, don't you want to withdraw the testimony that you gave with respect to any conversation with Keady in 1935? A. I didn't talk with him at all in 1935.

Q. But you are sure, you say, that your talk with Henning was initiated by a conference with Mr. Knode? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, you didn't say anything about that in the criminal case, did you? A. I don't remember.

Q. Would it surprise you to know that you didn't? A. No, it wouldn't surprise me.

Q. Will you look at page 2524 of the transcript
5398 in the criminal case? A. Yes, sir.

Q. There is no question of it there, is there? A. No, sir. This is 1933, isn't it?

Q. 1935, I think. A. If you will look at line 17.

Q. I have seen line 17, and in line 24 the question is:

"Q. Did you ever talk with Mr. Henning in 1935? A. Yes, sir, I did."

And over the page at 2525, you go on to tell all about that, don't you? A. Yes, I go on to tell about it.

Q. And you don't mention a thing about Mr. Knode, do you? A. No, not there; no sir.

Q. Do you know of any other place in the criminal case where you did mention him with respect to your talks with Henning? A. I don't remember.

Q. Now, your discussion with Henning in 1935 was to the effect that you wanted Henning, or USG, to sell you patented gypsum board, wasn't it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And isn't it the fact that Mr. Henning refused 5399 to make any arrangement with you? A. This is 1935?

Q. Yes, 1935. A. Yes, that was the conclusion of it.

Q. Well, Mr. Henning never made any arrangement with you at any time, did he? A. No.

Q. Now, it was at this meeting in 1935, wasn't it, when your proposition was that if Henning gave you a supply of board, you would resell not only the board but your plaster at market prices? A. You say that was the proposition?

Q. That you made to Henning.

Mr. Knuff: I don't recall the witness testifying that he made any proposition to Henning at all, in the form of a proposition, as such.

Mr. Bromley: Are you objecting to the word "proposition"?

The Witness: No, I was thinking about the whole thing.

Justice Stephens: Counsel for the defendants is entitled to ask the witness what he did propose, if anything, to Henning.

Mr. Bromley: I will withdraw the question.

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. Didn't you say to Henning that if Henning gave you a supply of board, you would resell not only the board but you would sell your plaster at market prices?
5400 A. That was the time, as I recall, that I pointed out to him—

Q. (Interposing) Can't you answer my question? A. I am doing it.

Q. Can't you tell me "yes" or "no"? A. Do you mind letting me go on for a minute?

Q. I mind, yes—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) You should answer the questions responsively, Mr. Sensibar, if you truthfully and accurately can.

What is the last question?

(The question referred to was read by the reporter.)

The Witness: No.

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. Well, haven't you told us here, with respect to every conversation you had with everybody, that you told them the Cardiff Company's policy had changed, and you were going to sell plaster at market prices? A. Now, if you will let me, I will tell you what I did tell him.

Q. Can't you answer that question "yes" or "no"?

Mr. Knuff: May it please the Court, Mr. Bromley before asked the witness to answer a question "yes" or "no". The witness answered the question, and then 5401 he obviously meant to explain the answer, and before he could even explain the answer another question was fired at him. I think it is unfair to pin a witness down to a "yes" or "no" answer without giving him an opportunity to explain his answer.

Justice Stephens: Well, the Court has admonished the witness at the beginning of his examination, and also, in effect, a moment ago, that he must answer responsively, if he can do so truthfully and accurately, which clearly implied that he need not if he cannot do so truthfully and accurately. But if the question can be answered, truthfully and accurately, "yes" or "no", then the examining lawyer is entitled to have it answered in that manner. Then, if an explanation is thought necessary by adverse counsel, he can bring it out on re-direct.

Mr. Knuff: I think that is all true, and I have no quarrel with Your Honor on that; but the witness clearly indicated that he wanted to explain his answer, and I think in fairness to the witness he ought to be allowed to explain the answer.

Justice Stephens: Read the question.

(The record was read by the reporter as requested.)

Justice Stephens: Can you answer that question "yes" or "no", correctly and truthfully, whether you did or did not tell that to Mr. Henning?

5402 The Witness: I did not.

Justice Jackson: Is it capable of being answered by a "yes" or "no" answer?

The Witness: Not very well. The best answer I can give is "no".

Justice Stephens: You are not required to give a "yes" or "no" answer. But I don't quite see why that question can't be answered, truthfully and accurately, "yes" or "no". Either you told him that or you didn't tell him.

The Witness: I didn't tell him.

Justice Stephens: You see, Mr. Sensibar, you are not supposed to argue this case with opposing counsel. Anything that needs to be explained, Mr. Knuff will have an opportunity to bring out on re-direct-examination. It seems to me that that question can be answered, truthfully and accurately, "yes" or "no". That answer may stand.

You may conduct re-direct-examination on this topic if necessary, Mr. Knuff.

We will take a recess.

(Thereupon, at 4:00 o'clock p.m., a recess was taken until 10:00 o'clock a.m., Monday, March 27, 1944.)

5403 IN THE

DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Civil Action No. 8017

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

Plaintiff,

v.

UNITED STATES GYPSUM COMPANY; NATIONAL GYPSUM COMPANY; CERTAIN-TEED PRODUCTS CORPORATION; THE CELOTEX CORPORATION; EBSARY GYPSUM COMPANY, INC.; NEWARK PLASTER COMPANY; SAMUEL M. GLOYD, doing business under the name of TEXAS CEMENT PLASTER COMPANY; SEWELL L. AVERY; OLIVER M. KNODE; MELVIN H. BAKER; BROR H. DAHLBERG; HENRY J. HARTLEY; FREDERICK G. EBSARY; and FREDERICK TOMKINS,

Defendants.

Seventh Floor,
Internal Revenue Building,
Washington, D. C.,
Monday, March 27, 1944.

The above-entitled cause came on for further hearing at 10:00 o'clock a.m., pursuant to adjournment, before Honorable Harold M. Stephens, Honorable Finis J. Garrett, and Honorable Joseph R. Jackson, sitting as the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

APPEARANCES:

(Same as heretofore noted.)

5406 Justice Stephens: Take the witness stand, Mr. Sensibar.

Thereupon, EZRA SENSIBAR, the witness on the stand at the time of adjournment, resumed his testimony as follows:

Cross Examination (resumed)

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. When did you start directing the sales policies
5407 of the Cardiff Company? A. I had some hand in them from about 1933, Mr. Bromley, and entirely after 1935.

Q. Well, just what hand did you have in them between 1933 and 1935? A. I had conferences from time to time with Tom Breen, who at that time was Manager and Vice President, and was actively in charge of the affairs of the company. I had conferences with him between 1933 and 1935, from time to time. After the reorganization in 1935, I was made President, and took the entire responsibility for the sales policies.

Q. Prior to 1935, your office was in Fort Dodge, was it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that you saw Mr. Breen daily, did you? A. No, sir, I never lived in Fort Dodge. I was living in Chicago during that period.

Q. How often were you in Fort Dodge? A. I should say every four or five or six weeks, for a couple of weeks at a time, or something like that.

Q. Then you were in the Chicago office of the Cardiff Company, is that right? A. That is right.

Q. And you spent all your time in the Chicago Cardiff office instead of the Fort Dodge office? A. Well, the time I wasn't in Fort Dodge, yes, sir.

5408 Justice Stephens: How long a period? I didn't quite understand one of your answers. I understood you to say about every six weeks for two weeks. Do you mean you would stay in Fort Dodge for a couple of weeks at a time?

The Witness: That is right, sir.

Justice Stephens: I see. Thank you.

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. You started with the company in 1930, you said? A. As a stockholder, and about that time as Vice President, yes, sir.

Q. And you were a Vice President between 1933 and 1935, weren't you? A. That is right.

Q. So you didn't change the nature of your activities between 1930 and 1935, so far as Cardiff was concerned, did you? A. I became increasingly active in its affairs, Mr. Bromley. I started out as a stockholder in 1930, with no knowledge whatever of the business; and as time went on, I took a more active hand in it.

Q. Well, you started out as Vice President, too, didn't you? A. Shortly after I acquired a stock interest in the company, I was named Vice President, yes, sir.

5409 Q. Did you ever live in Fort Dodge? A. You mean was it ever my legal residence, did I ever have my family there?

Q. Yes, sir. A. No, sir.

Q. Not even after you became President of the company? A. That is correct.

Q. How often would you go out there after you became President? A. Well, for quite a period during 1935 and 1936 and 1937, I must have spent half my time there; and less after that.

Q. And the rest of your time you spent in the Chicago office, did you? A. Not all of it, no, sir.

Q. Now, wasn't it October, 1934, when the involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed against Cardiff? A. No, my recollection is definite that it was in January of 1935.

Q. Do you differentiate between the adjudication and the filing of the petition? A. Well, sir, you are in pretty deep for me. I am sure I don't know.

Q. What I mean by that is, don't you remember that the proceedings which resulted in the bankruptcy of your company were started in the fall of 1934?

5410 A. No, sir, my recollection is that the bankruptcy took place in January of 1935.

Q. At several places in the record, you used the word "independent" in connection with the phrase "independent members of the industry". Do you remember that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. By the use of the word "independent", you intended to indicate, did you not, single-plant manufacturers? A. Yes, sir.

Q. At all times when you had meetings or conferences with representatives of the United States Gypsum Company, you knew that it was selling board to a manufacturing distributor named Wasem Plaster Company, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You knew the head of that company, Henry Wasem, didn't you? A. Yes, I knew him.

Q. He lived in Fort Dodge, didn't he? A. That is right.

Q. And his plant was located in Fort Dodge? A. That is right.

Q. It is an old, well-established plaster manufacturing company, isn't it? A. Yes.

Q. And their plant and place of business is very 5411 close to the plant and place of business of Cardiff?
A. That is right.

Q. And, of course, Cardiff and Wasem were in competition with one another, weren't they? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Serving almost exactly the same territory? A. That is true.

Q. And you knew that the Wasem Company had had a close business association with the United States Gypsum Company for more than 20 years, at the time you got into the Cardiff business; isn't that right? A. No, I can't say I knew that. I knew it was old; I didn't know how old it was.

Q. Wasem manufactured plaster but did not manufacture board, isn't that right? A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. And Wasem had always purchased its board from the United States Gypsum Company, so far as you knew, hadn't it? A. I could only say about the time after I became interested in Cardiff. So far as I know, they purchased from USG after that, yes, sir.

Q. Now, isn't it a fact that Mr. Henning, when you saw him for the first time back in 1935, told you that, of course, it wouldn't be good business for USG to supply board to another manufacturing distributor like Cardiff,
5412 which was practically in the backyard of the Wasem
Company? A. Is it a fact that he told me that?

Q. Yes. A. No, sir, it is not a fact. He never told me that.

Q. Do you say that that situation was never discussed between you? A. That is correct, it was never brought up as an objection.

Q. Does that ~~mean that you~~ didn't mention it, either? A. Well, now, I can't say. I might have said to him that we ought to be treated the same as Wasem. But that was never raised as an objection.

Q. Well, did Mr. Henning remain silent when you said you thought Cardiff ought to be treated the same as Wasem? A. I don't recollect definitely that I told him that. I just said to you that I might have said it in that way.

Q. Don't you recollect that he replied very promptly, "Well, I don't see how we can sell you, with Wasem right there in the same territory."? A. No, I just told you that he never raised any such thought as an objection, Mr. Bromley.

Q. I am asking you whether he didn't raise it in response to your raising the matter? A. Well, first of all, I don't know whether I raised it that way, but he never 5413 raised it as an objection. I am clear on that.

Q. You can't remember whether or not you mentioned it, but you are sure he didn't mention it; is that it? A. That is correct.

Q. You never asked Henning, at any time, if he had refused to grant consents to Universal or American or Certain-teed to sell you, did you? A. I don't believe I did.

Q. Now, what is the date which you fixed as the date of the conference that you had with Messrs. Knode, Keady and English, of the United States Gypsum Company? A. To the best of my recollection, that was in the fall of 1938.

Q. There was only one such conference at which all four of you were present; isn't that right? A. That is true.

Q. Would it surprise you to know that that meeting was held on November 7, 1939? A. No, sir, it wouldn't surprise me.

Q. You might be a year off in the date that you testified to here Friday, might you not? A. Yes, sir, that could be.

Q. Now, if it were in November, 1939, that would be very shortly after the time when you tried to buy 5414 board from Ebsary, wouldn't it? A. Well, it would be right close. I couldn't tell you whether it would be right after or before, Mr. Bromley. If it were in the fall of 1939, that was about the same time that we were negotiating with Ebsary.

Q. Can't you remember now whether the conversation was in the fall of 1939, or the fall of 1938? A. I have been under the impression that it was the fall of 1938, but if you say it was in the fall of 1939, I would be willing to take your word for it.

Q. I do say so. A. All right, sir.

Q. You testified to this meeting in the criminal case, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Bromley: May the witness be shown the testimony at the criminal trial, please?

(Testimony handed to the witness.)

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. Will you turn to page 2531 of your testimony at the criminal trial? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you testified about that meeting among the four of you, on Friday, you added something which you had not mentioned in the criminal case at all, do you recall that? A. No, sir, I don't.

5415 Q. Do you recall that you told us the other day that you offered to let USG look over the Cardiff books? A. That is right.

Q. Now, you know you didn't say anything of that kind in the criminal case at all, don't you? A. I don't know, sir.

Q. Well, can you find any such reference in your previous testimony in the criminal case? A. Do you want me to read it and see?

Q. I want you to look at it and tell me whether it is there or not. A. I have read up to page 2535, which seems to be the end of it, and it isn't there.

Q. Isn't it a fact that this Mr. English, whom you said was a Director of the company, came in that meeting somewhat accidentally, and was only there for a very few minutes at the last of it? A. I am sure I don't know how he came there. I was introduced to him there. I remember that that was the first time I had ever met him.

Q. Don't you remember that he came in well toward the end of the meeting? A. No, sir, I don't remember that.

Q. Is it your recollection that he was there all 5416 the time? A. My recollection is that he was sitting over on a sofa near a window, just sitting and listening to the conversation, without taking any part in it.

Q. Was he there all the time? A. That is my recollection.

Q. Now, after you got through saying what you said you said to Mr. Knode, didn't Mr. Knode tell you that he knew little, if anything, about your business policies? A. I don't remember him saying that, Mr. Bromley.

Q. Didn't he tell you that he had no interest in your business policies then, or at any other time, and was not interested in telling you how to run your business? A. No, I don't believe he said anything like that. I think I would remember it if he had.

Q. Don't you remember that he told you that as he understood it, neither he nor anyone else from USG had ever suggested what you should do about your business, or complained to you about Cardiff's activities, and you told him that that was right? A. No, I have no such recollection.

Q. Now, wasn't the subject of the Wasem Plaster Company mentioned at this meeting? A. I believe it was.

Q. And wasn't it mentioned by Mr. Knode, who told you that you must realize that it wouldn't be good 5417 business for USG to sell to another distributor in Fort Dodge, when it was already doing business with the Wasem Company which was located there? A. No, sir, that was not raised as an objection against doing business with us at that meeting, or at any other time that I talked with officials of the USG.

Q. Do you say that you mentioned the Wasem Company? A. Yes, sir, I think I did, in pointing out that it wasn't a fair proposition to be selling board and lath at a discount to a man across the tracks from us, and to refuse to put us on the same basis.

Q. You remember, don't you, in connection with that, that Mr. Knode told you he did not consider either you or the Cardiff Company to be an outlaw in the business? A. That is right.

Q. Wasn't that statement made in connection with your remark to him that you thought USG considered Cardiff to be an outlaw in the industry? A. That is right, that they had been treating us as an outlaw—correct.

Q. And Mr. Knode said that USG did not consider your company to be an outlaw at all, didn't he? A. That is correct, he said that.

Q. And didn't he follow that remark up by saying, "Of course, I don't see how it would be good busi-5418 ness for us to sell you, with Wasem being located as it is."? A. No, sir, he did not. What he said was that they weren't making any more deals like that.

Q. Didn't he say a little more than that? A. Yes, he said the Wasem deal was an old deal, and that they weren't going to make any more like it.

Q. Didn't he tell you that at that time, there were only a few of these consents to sell manufacturing distributors outstanding, and that it was the policy of USG not to extend these consents to new companies? A. No, he didn't put it that way. He said that the deal with Wasem was an old deal, and that they weren't going to make any more like it.

Q. Well, you testified about this at the criminal trial, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you turn to page 2559? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you see in line 3 that you answered in the affirmative my question:

"Q. Now, didn't Mr. Knode or Mr. Keady or Mr. English, one or all of them, tell you that it was the policy of the company, carefully considered, not to put any more distributors into business?"

That is right, isn't it, that is what he did say?

5419 A. Isn't that the same as I just said, that the deal with Wasem was an old deal, and they weren't going to make any more like it?

Q. Perhaps it is.

You made some statement here the other day to the effect that you said that USG had granted a consent during this period to sell some other plaster manufacturer. Do you remember that? A. I did. I said that I understood that during this same period they were talking about, that I was talking about, that they had granted a consent to somebody else.

Q. And you told us that you brought that to Mr. Knode's attention, but did not mention the name of the company that you had in mind? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, the name of the company that you had in mind was the Mathieson Alkali Company, wasn't it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you intended by that reference to charge Mr. Knode with an inconsistency, didn't you? A. Yes, I wanted to point out that he wasn't giving us the usual treatment that independents in the industry had been receiving.

Q. And you wanted to suggest to him that when he said it was the company's policy not to grant new con-

5420 sents, that he wasn't telling the truth, because during that very period you say USG had granted a consent to somebody to sell Mathieson. Isn't that the purpose of your testimony that you gave here Friday? A. The purpose of my testimony was to tell what I recollected. The purpose of that question at that time was to point out to him that maybe he wasn't treating us the same as he had treated others.

Q. Did you hear Mr. Dolan testify in the original trial? A. No, sir.

Q. You know who Mr. Dolan is, don't you? A. No, sir.

Q. Don't you know him to be the Sales Manager of the Mathieson Alkali Company during this period? A. No, I don't know Mr. Dolan.

Q. Did you know anything about the Mathieson Alkali Company at all? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you know where their plant was located? A. It was my understanding that they had acquired a plant that was located at Plasterco, Virginia.

Q. That was a plaster plant, wasn't it? A. That was my understanding, yes, sir.

Q. And USG had a board plant right near there, 5421 didn't they? A. That was my understanding.

Q. And you knew from talk in the trade, didn't you, Mr. Sensibar, that USG had been furnishing board to the Mathieson Alkali Company for 6 to 9 years prior to your conversation with Mr. Knode? A. No. My understanding was, at that time, that the Mathieson Alkali Company had just acquired that plant, shortly before this conversation, sometime during the depression.

Q. Mathieson Alkali had been in business for how many years, do you know? A. I don't know, the Alkali Company is old, I guess. But it is my impression that they had acquired that plant, which I understand that Certain-teed had operated before, during the depression.

Q. Wasn't it your information, regardless of where their plant was, that USG had been giving them their board for many, many years prior to that conversation? A. No, sir, it was not.

Q. Didn't Mr. Knode point that out to you, in this conversation, that that was hardly a fair statement to make in view of the fact that Mathieson was an old customer of USG? A. No, because the thing wasn't discussed. He simply refused to enter into any discussion on it.
5422 As I told you; I hadn't mentioned the name Mathieson, and I don't think there was any discussion whatever about it.

Q. You were asked about this very subject matter at the criminal trial, weren't you? A. I was, yes, sir.

Q. Now in this meeting, didn't you tell Mr. Knode and Mr. Keady that what you wanted to do was to submit this matter to the Federal Trade Commission? A. No, sir.

Q. And don't you remember that Mr. Knode told you he didn't believe it was a matter for the Commission, but that, rather, it was a question of USG's legal rights under its patents, and that he believed the company was within its rights under those patents? A. No, sir, that was not the conversation at all. I suggested to him that since we had been trying to get things changed for years, and had failed, and since it was important to us, and from our point of view a great injustice to us, and since it might have some legal aspects, why didn't we go to Washington and place it before the proper people to get some sort of an opinion on it, without going to any trouble about it—by which I meant legal trouble. He simply brushed that aside, and said there was nothing to that at all.

5423 Q. And that is all he said, is it? A. I am quite sure that that is all he said, yes, sir.

Q. You told us next about the conversations that you had with Baker and Burley of the National company, in 1936, 1937 and 1938; and you testified about these conversations in the criminal case, do you remember? A. Yes, sir, I testified about them.

Q. Will you turn to page 2538 of your testimony in the criminal case? A. Yes, sir, I have it.

Q. Now, you left out of your testimony here, the other day, what you said in the criminal case, didn't you, to-wit, that you told Baker that what you wanted him to do was break his contract with USG and go ahead and sell you? A. What happened was this—

Q. (Interposing) Now wait a minute. That is what you testified to in the criminal case, isn't it? A. I don't think so.

Q. You don't? A. No, sir.

Q. You didn't testify to that here the other day, did you? A. Well, now, I will tell you exactly what happened.

Q. Can't you answer the question? A. Well, I take it what you want is the truth. If you want the whole truth, I will tell you the story.

5424 Q. Can you answer the question? A. Will you repeat it, please?

Mr. Bromley: Will you read it?

(The record was read by the reporter.)

The Witness: I can't tell you now just exactly what I said about that. When Baker told me—

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. (Interposing) You can't tell me now what you said in this case about that, can you? A. I can't tell you word for word.

Q. And you don't remember what you said in the criminal case, do you? A. I remember pretty well what I said both times, but I can't tell you word for word what I said either time.

Q. Now, the fact is that although you didn't say so here the other day, you suggested to Baker that he break his contract with USG and give you board, didn't you? A. No. What happened was that Baker finally told me that USG wouldn't give him permission, or didn't give him permission, and I said to him, "Why don't you go ahead and sell us anyway, and let's cross that bridge about permission when we get to it?"

And he said, "I think I could do that if I would be willing to make an issue of it, but I don't want to make an issue of it."

Q. When you said, "Why don't you go ahead and 5425 sell us anyway", weren't you suggesting that he break his contract wth USG? A. Mr. Bromley, that is entirely a legal matter. I wasn't interested in the contractual relationship between Mr. Baker and USG. I was interested in getting what our company needed. Mr. Baker had said he wanted to sell us, and Harrison had said that also, and I was interested in getting that board. So far as their relationship was concerned, that could take care of itself.

Q. Well, in 1938, you told us on Friday, you had a talk with Mr. Keady of the USG Company about whether or not USG would grant consent to National to sell. Do you remember that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You testified about that conversation in the criminal case, didn't you? A. I think I did.

Q. Will you turn to page 2546? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you see that all you said there was that you talked to Mr. Keady about USG's consent to National to sell Cardiff, and Keady simply said that USG had made up its mind and saw no reason to change it? A. Yes, I see that.

Q. And that is all you said about that conversa-
5426 tion in the criminal case, isn't it? A. That is all that appears here.

Q. Now, here the other day you said that Mr. Keady asked a number of questions about your company and its organization. Do you remember that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that you pointed out to him the benefits to be derived for USG and the entire industry if Cardiff was given a supply of gypsum board. Do you remember that? A. Are you repeating my words?

Q. Yes, I am summarizing your words. Do you want to look at it? It is page 5582. A. No, I am perfectly willing to take your word for it.

Q. Did you say that to Mr. Keady? A. Yes, I had such a conversation with him.

Q. And you told us here that you also added that it was not healthy for a large company to hold down a small competitor, do you remember that? A. That is right.

Q. You didn't mention that in the criminal case, did you? A. It doesn't appear here, no, sir.

Q. And you said here the other day that you told Keady that you had adhered to the sales practices estab-
5427 lished by USG for 3 years, with the exception of truck deliveries out of Fort Dodge? A. Yes, I told him that.

Q. You didn't say anything like that in the criminal case, did you? A. I don't recollect that I was asked about the details of that conversation, and this page you directed me to here doesn't show that I was asked about the details of that conversation.

Q. Does it show that you were asked any question at all? A. Yes, the question is: "What did Mr. Keady say?". I told what he had said, that they had made up their minds, and that was that.

Q. You don't think that that was a question that asked you to tell what the conversation was? A. Well, I have just told you.

Q. So in the criminal case, you were just giving what Mr. Keady said, but deliberately leaving out what you said; is that it? A. No, that isn't correct at all.

Q. Well, you said the other day that when you said to Keady that Cardiff had been following the USG sales practices for 3 years, you said, "If we can obtain board, we will be willing to give up that sales practice"—do you 5428 remember testifying to that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, you were proposing to Keady, weren't you, that if he gave you a supply of board, you would agree to restrict the nature of Cardiff's business practices? A. I was talking about that one item of truck deliveries. USG had a practice at that time, if I recollect rightly, of making deliveries by truck out of their plant at Fort Dodge to just a few surrounding counties; whereas, we made deliveries by truck to a much larger area; and I told him that if that was an objection, if they would be willing to let us have the board we would conform to the same trucking practice that they had.

Q. And don't you remember that Mr. Keady thereupon promptly told you that the mere proposition which you had made to him prevented him from supplying you with board, because any such arrangement as that would be illegal? A. I am positive that he didn't say anything like that.

Q. Didn't you know that any such arrangement as that would have been illegal? A. No, sir.

Q. You didn't know that? A. No, sir.

Q. You said you talked to a Mr. Wright from 5429 the Texas Company? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was Mr. Wright? A. Mr. Frank Wright was the Traffic Manager of the company, according to my understanding.

Q. Now when you spoke to him, you knew that it wasn't possible to make any feasible arrangement between two plants, such as Cardiff and Texas, nearly a thousand miles apart, didn't you? A. No, sir—there are two questions in that question.

Q. Answer one and then the other. A. You asked me whether I knew it wasn't feasible. First of all, it may have been feasible. I couldn't very well know it wasn't feasible. A thing like that, Mr. Bromley, requires a pretty careful study of freight rates, and where your customers are. For illustration, freight rates—

Q. (Interposing) I don't care for any illustration, Mr. Sensibar.

Mr. Steffen: May he answer the question fully?

Mr. Bromley: I object to his continuing to answer the question, on the ground that it is not responsive.

Justice Stephens: The objection is sustained. You may bring it out on re-direct-examination, if you think it is material to the Government's case.

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. In each of the instances that you have testified 5430 to with respect to your talks with manufacturers, isn't it true that each one of them stated that it wanted to sell board to Cardiff if it could?

The Witness: May I have that question repeated, please?

(The question was read by the reporter.)

The Witness: Well, there were certainly officials in each of these companies who told me that they did, yes.

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. And didn't all of them tell you that USG had refused to grant the necessary consent? A. Yes, I think they all finally did.

Q. And you feel, don't you, now, and have felt at all times, that each of the manufacturers that you approached acted in entire good faith in the matter? A. I have never had any occasion to question that.

Q. And you feel that each one of these companies, like National and Ebsary and the others, really tried to see if they couldn't supply you with board, don't you? A. Yes; some tried harder and maybe some not quite as hard, but I think they all did try.

Q. Now, isn't it, however, true that except for Ebsary in 1939, you have no knowledge as to whether any one of the others actually did request USG's permission to sell Cardiff? A. Well, with the possible exception of National, during my talks there with Mr. Keady.

5431 Q. You mean by that that you have no knowledge as to whether any licensee actually applied for permission, except Ebsary and possibly National? A. That is right.

Q. No one of the licensees—not even National—except Ebsary ever told you that they had applied in writing to USG for permission to sell, did they? A. I think that that is correct.

Q. And so far as you now know, each one of these companies which you approached might have had their own reasons for not wishing to sell your company; isn't that right? A. Well, sir, a company is made up of a lot of individuals, Mr. Bromley, and in each of those companies there might have been some people who didn't want to sell us; but when the official representative told me that they had tried, I did believe him.

Q. Now, won't you answer the question as I asked it, please? A. I am afraid I have forgotten the wording.

(The question was read by the reporter.)

The Witness: I think the companies did wish to sell us. As I said before, there might have been individuals in those companies that didn't, but I think that the companies, as a whole, wished to.

Mr. Bromley: That is all.

5432 Justice Stephens: Is there any other cross-examination?

Mr. Johnston: Yes, if the Court please.

Justice Stephens: Very well, Mr. Johnston.

Mr. Johnston: The testimony of this witness to which I am about to refer commences on page 5604 of the record.

Cross Examination

By Mr. Johnston:

Q. I believe you testified that Mr. Wright, of the Texas Company, was the only person connected with that organization with whom you talked about board or lath? A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. And that you had several conversations with him? A. That is right.

Q. Extending over a period during 1937 and 1938—right? A. That is right, or maybe a little later than that, too.

Q. And that you talked with him as often as every 3 or 4 months? A. That is right.

Q. Now, will you give us the place and the date of any conversation you had with him?

Justice Stephens: Before you answer that, I must have misunderstood you. What page did you give?

Mr. Johnston: Page 5604.

5433 Justice Jackson: That is the testimony you are talking about, that isn't where he started his testimony?

Mr. Johnston: That is the testimony I am talking about, in connection with the Texas Company.

Justice Stephens: Read the last question.

(The pending question was read by the reporter.)

The Witness: Mr. Johnston, the nearest I can come to that is to tell you that it was at the traffic meetings of the Gypsum Association, at whichever ones Mr. Wright attended. I recollect one of those meetings, I believe, was in Cincinnati. They were at different places.

By Mr. Johnston:

Q. When was that meeting? A. I couldn't place the exact date for you.

Q. You don't even know the year? A. I should say 1938 or 1939.

Q. Well, your testimony the other day stated '37 or '38. Are you changing it now to the next year? A. I wouldn't like to be pinned down to the exact year, Mr. Johnston. I simply don't remember.

Q. The fact is you just don't know specifically about any meetings, anywhere, at any time, that you attended and talked to Mr. Wright, do you? A. Yes, sir, I know that we attended a number of those meetings together, 5434 and discussed this board thing at most of those times we were together.

Q. And the Cincinnati meeting is the only meeting that you can specifically fix, and you now think that was in 1939? A. I think I said it was in 1938 or 1939.

Q. 1938 or 1939? A. That is my recollection.

Q. And that is the only meeting? A. I can remember meeting with him other times, but I can not tell you precisely in what city or at what hotel. We had meetings in St. Louis, Cincinnati, Chicago, and Buffalo, over a period of years. There were other meetings when we didn't talk about this. It is pretty hard to pick out of a person's memory the exact place and date that a particular conversation was held.

Q. You can, therefore, remember what you and Mr. Wright talked about, but you can't tell when it was or where it was? A. Well, it is much easier to remember exactly what a person talked about—

Q. (Interposing) Just answer my question. A. (Continuing) —in this case, than it is to tell you exactly where it was—

Q. (Interposing) I don't want any explanation. I want you to answer my questions.

Justice Stephens: Mr. Sensibar, you are falling into the habit of arguing the reasonableness of your answers 5435 with counsel instead of answering questions.

The Witness: I am sorry.

Justice Stephens: You shouldn't do that, because it takes up time. If counsel for the Government feel that your answers need explanation, they have a right to ask you questions on re-direct examination. It is for them, as officers of the Court and counsel for the Government, to decide what testimony is necessary in their case, not for you. When you proceed to argue or explain these answers, you are assuming their function.

I don't say that as criticizing you, but to explain; and so far as you can accurately do so, you should answer just the questions that are asked you, not argue your reasons.

The Witness: I will try to do so.

Mr. Johnston: Read the question.

(The pending question was read by the reporter.)

By Mr. Johnston:

Q. Is that right? A. I think that that is correct, except for that Cincinnati meeting.

Q. On page 5605 of the transcript, you were asked this question:

"Q. When did you first contact Mr. Wright concerning the purchase of board and lath?"

5436 You were talking about board and lath. Then you were asked the question:

"Q. Will you tell us the conversation that you had with him?"

And I read from your answer, or give the substance of it, and let us see if that is correct. You said that it was "not a very economical proposition, not very sound economically, to think about a connection with his company, because their plant was down in Texas, and the freight absorption to most of our customers would be great; in other words, the freight from his plant to our customers would be larger, on the average, than the freight from our plant to the same customers, who, of course, wouldn't pay any more for the product."

Now that is correct, isn't it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you know who Mr. Wright was at that time? A. I understood him to be the Traffic Manager of the Company.

Q. He merely handled freight matters, didn't he? A. I didn't know exactly what he handled. I knew he did handle freight matters.

Q. You didn't know that he was anything else than a rate clerk, did you? A. Yes, sir, I understood at the 5437 time that he was a man in the confidence of the company.

Q. That he was what? A. A man in the confidence of the company.

Q. In the confidence of the company? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who told you that? A. I can't remember that. That was my understanding.

Q. Did anybody tell you that he handled anything else than freight matters? A. I can't say, Mr. Johnston.

Q. Then you testified further that in these several conversations, each time you would talk to him he would say that he would take it up, and the next time you would see him he would tell you that he would take it up and let you know? A. Yes.

Q. Now, that is the extent of your negotiations with the Texas Company regarding board and lath, isn't it? A. Substantially, yes.

Justice Stephens: The Court will take the morning recess at this time.

(Thereupon, a short recess was taken, after which the trial was resumed as follows:)

Justice Stephens: Proceed, Mr. Johnston.

By Mr. Johnston:

5438 Q. I believe you testified that this Cardiff Company had some financial difficulties along about 1934; is that correct? A. 1935, yes, sir.

Q. And that it went into bankruptcy in 1935? A. That is right.

Q. And at that time, you were a stockholder? A. That is correct.

Q. How much stock was outstanding in that company at that time? A. You refer now to the company that went into bankruptcy?

Q. The Cardiff Company that went into bankruptcy. A. Yes, sir, that was the Cardiff Gypsum Plaster Company.

It seems to me it had, I believe, 1,000 shares of stock.

Q. Well, it was a $10,000 company, wasn't it? A. Well, sir, I believe that is right. I believe that that is the capital it was organized with in 1896.

Q. February 15, 1896? A. That sounds right.

Q. And when did you first have this financial difficulty in this company that prompted the bankruptcy pro-
5439 ceedings? A. I hardly know what you mean. Are you referring to the three people who petitioned for the bankruptcy?

Q. I am referring to the company. When did the company first have the financial difficulty? A. The company was hard up for working capital beginning in 1932. 1931 was the last profitable year.

5440 Q. You mentioned, or started to mention, something about three creditors? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was that? A. I was thinking of the three creditors who signed the petition for bankruptcy.

Q. Then, as I understand it, three creditors of this company filed an involuntary petition in bankruptcy. A. I think that is right.

Q. Against the company? A. Yes.

Q. When did they file that petition? A. Well, my recollection is that it was in January of 1935. Mr. Bromley seems to think it was October of 1934.

Q. And now to refresh your memory, wasn't it in October, 1934, about October 15? A. Well, sir, if that is the record, I will take your word for it, but my recollection is that it was January, 1935, that we went into bankruptcy.

Q. What was your connection with the company at that time? A. I was a stockholder, and I was vice president.

Q. You were the active vice president at that time? A. I wouldn't say that. Mr. Breen was manager of the company.

5441 Q. You were living in Chicago at that time? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And spending some time at Fort Dodge and some time in Chicago? A. That is right.

Q. Then you people came along as directors or officers of the company, after this involuntary petition was filed, and filed a voluntary petition under Section 77-B? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you think that that was filed along in the latter part of 1934 or the first part of 1935? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it was under that petition that your reorganization took place? A. That is correct.

Q. Do you know what your debts were, scheduled and filed, in that bankruptcy proceeding, how much they amounted to? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How much? A. About $91,000.

Q. I believe you testified the other day, in response to a question by Mr. Bromley, that you did not pay those debts in cash, is that correct? A. That we didn't pay them all in cash, that is right.

Q. What you did do was to pay the small miscel-

5442 laneous accounts in cash? A. That is correct.

Q. Now the other debts have never been paid to this day, have they? A. I shouldn't say that, sir.

Q. Well, I don't care what you should or shouldn't say—I am asking you to tell me what the fact is. A. The other creditors took stock in the reorganized company. Well, let me give it to you more accurately. My recollection is that all accounts under $300 were paid in full, and that on the larger accounts they got $300 in cash, and the rest in stock of the new company.

Q. How much in stock, altogether, was issued to them? A. I believe they got half of the stock of the reorganized company, and I might say that a large part of that $91,000 owed was owed to Ezra Sensibar.

Q. You were a principal creditor? A. I was, yes.

Q. How much was paid in stock outside of what you got? A. It seems to me that my advances to the company had been—

Q. (Interposing) Wait a minute. Did you understand my question? I am not inquiring about you, I am inquiring about the amount of stock that the creditors other 5443 than yourself got. A. I am trying to think it through —I believe that my advances were $30,000 odd, out of a total of $90,000, or out of the $91,000, so that I got a little better than one-third of the stock that was given to creditors. The remaining $50,000 in creditors got the other two-thirds.

Q. That is, $50,000 in volume of debts got how much stock? A. Got two-thirds of half the stock of the new company.

Q. I know, but how many shares? A. The new company was reorganized with three hundred shares of stock.

Q. What par value? A. No par value.

Q. It was a no-par-value stock? A. I think it was no par value, Mr. Johnston.

Q. All right. A. And half of that went to these $90,000 of creditor claimants.

Q. That would be 150 shares? A. That is right.

Q. Representing how much indebtedness? A. About $91,000.

Q. Then is it fair to say that there was $91,000 of indebtedness of that company that has never been paid? A. Paid in stock—

5444 Q. (Interposing) Other than by this stock? A. That is correct. Well, that is not right, because the small claims were all paid off, and, as I said, $300 was paid on the larger ones. All of that came off the $91,000, if I remember right.

Q. Would you say that it was fairer to say that there is $50,000 of those debts unpaid? A. That was paid in stock?

Q. Yes. A. Yes, that sounds all right.

Q. Now there was a substantial loan against this company at the time it went into bankruptcy, wasn't there? A. Yes, the advances that I had made to the company.

Q. You had negotiated those loans through your Chicago connections? A. No, sir.

Q. How did you do that? A. I simply advanced the money to the company.

Q. They were your personal advances? A. That is right.

Q. Did you ever hear of a concern by the name of Construction Materials Corporation? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Tell us what that was. A. That was a concern
5445 in Chicago engaged in the production of building materials and the ownership and operation of seagoing hopper dredges.

Q. You were interested in that concern, weren't you? A. I was an employee of it.

Q. Not an executive? A. No, sir.

Q. Who was the financial and executive responsibility of that concern? A. My brother was president of the company, and had built it up.

Q. And you were connected with him? A. With the concern, yes sir, not with him.

Q. Now at about the same time that the Cardiff Company went into bankruptcy, that other concern went into bankruptcy also, didn't it? A. About a year earlier. I can give you that date, it was January 17, 1934.

Mr. Steffen: Your Honor, we have no particular objection to this line of questions, except that it seems to be going rather far afield.

Mr. Johnston: It is not far afield, if the Court please, it is only to bring out the connection that these two concerns had, together, and he is testifying here now about his attempting to go out and establish business relations. I merely want the Court to get the picture—

5446 Justice Stephens: (Interposing) I think we see the purpose of it. I think it is not improper cross-examination. Apparently it goes to the business reasons which the various companies that have been testified about, had in respect to their decision not to sell board to Cardiff. That is what you are developing, Mr. Johnston, is it not?

Mr. Johnston: Exactly.

Justice Stephens: Very well. The objection is overruled.

By Mr. Johnston:

Q. Wasn't that petition filed about the same time the petition with respect to the Cardiff Company was filed? A. No sir, that was filed on January 17, 1934.

Q. That was a reorganization too, wasn't it? A. That company was reorganized, yes sir.

Q. And the debts of that company were not paid? A. Do you want me to go into the details of it?

Q. I just want you to answer my question, yes or no. A. No, they were paid.

Justice Jackson: They were paid, you say?

The Witness: They were paid, some in cash and some in stock, your Honor.

By Mr. Johnston:

Q. How much was paid in cash? A. Well—

Q. (Interposing) Just approximately, if you can 5447 recall. A. Let me think a minute.

Justice Stephens: You can take your time and think about it.

Mr. Johnston: Take all the time you want to. I don't want to destroy any of your processes of thinking at all.

The Witness: I would say that about half a million dollars was paid in cash.

By Mr. Johnston:

Q. And how much in stock? A. To the best of my recollection, about $800,000 or so.

Q. Do the records not show that the liabilities of that company at the time of its bankruptcy were nearly $2,000,000 or more? A. You probably have in mind the claims filed against the company, rather than what the liabilities finally turned out to be. Those claims included one for close to $1,000,000. According to the best of my recollection, it turned out to be a duplicate claim and was thrown out by the court.

Q. Mr. Sensibar, wasn't the stock distribution made on a basis of nearly $2,000,000 in debts? A. No, I don't believe so, I think I have given you the figures.

Q. And you don't know that to be the fact and you were connected with the company? A. I have given you 5448 the figures to the best of my recollection.

Q. And you were connected with the reorganization, weren't you? A. Yes, I was connected with the reorganization.

Q. And you were connected with it in reference to the reissue of the stock, or rather the issue of stock, for the debts? A. No.

Q. Under the order of the Court under Section 77-B? A. No sir. I had a claim against it, if that is what you mean. I was not the manager of the reorganization.

Q. I believe you testified in response to Mr. Bromley's question that this Cardiff Company never submitted any financial statements to the credit agencies? A. That is correct.

Q. Either before or after the reorganization? A. Yes, that is right.

Q. You were the executive responsible, at least in 1935, from that time on until the present time? A. That is right.

Q. And isn't it a fact that Dun and Bradstreet, at least every year and sometimes oftener, have asked your company to furnish financial statements so that they could put out commercial reports on you? A. Mr. Johnston, from time to time we have been receiving those circular requests of Dun and Bradstreet.

5449 Q. And you have always refused to respond to them? A. To furnish a statement, that is right.

Q. Don't you know, Mr. Sensibar, that any prudent businessman, in considering the establishment of business relations with a concern, would look up its financial credit and standing and rating? A. Yes.

Q. That is common business practice, isn't it? A. Yes, it is.

Q. And isn't Dun and Bradstreet the established credit agency of this country today, to which businessmen go for that information? A. Yes, we have no fault to find with Dun and Bradstreet.

Q. Well, that is a fact, isn't it? A. That is right.

Q. And yet you would refuse, year after year, and still refuse, to furnish any financial information, give any business report or financial statement of your business, to this or any other agency. That is right, isn't it? A. Yes. Is there anything wrong about that, Mr. Johnston?

Q. I am just asking you for the facts. A. That is right.

Q. Now, did you ever have any information, or receive any reports, of how your concern was regarded in 5450 the business world from a financial standpoint, as to its financial responsibility? A. We had a pretty good idea, yes.

Q. It was pretty bad? A. No sir, I am sorry to say that that was not the case. It was pretty good. After 1935 we had no difficulty in buying supplies. We had credits that ran as high as $10,000 or so, established, for purchasing purposes.

Q. Can you name any business concern during 1935, 1936, 1937, 1938, or 1939, with whom you had a credit of $10,000? A. Yes, I can.

Q. Who? A. The St. Regis Paper Bag Company.

Q. Wasn't there a guarantee behind that account? A. No sir. We also had a line of credit at a bank in Fort Dodge that ran over $20,000, and there was no guarantee behind that.

Q. When was that credit established? A. About 1940.

Q. But prior to 1940 you didn't even have a credit rating with the bank there of as much as $2000, did you? A. Yes sir, we did.

Q. Wasn't $1000 your limit? A. We had a good deal more than that. No, $1000 wasn't the limit.

5451 Q. During this period from 1935 on, were you ever sued on any of your accounts? A. I don't believe so. We paid our bills promptly, as far as I can remember.

Q. Did you do any business with the Viking Automatic Sprinkler Company? A. Yes.

Q. What did you do there? A. What was that?

Q. What business did you do with them? A. They installed a sprinkler system throughout the plant.

Q. That was on a contract? A. That is right.

Q. You paid it out in monthly payments? A. That is correct.

Q. Where they retained the title to the system? A. That is correct.

Q. And when you would buy other equipment of any other character, you would have to buy it on time and pay it out in small payments, wouldn't you? A. No, that is not correct.

Q. And either give a chattel mortgage on it or have it put in under a title contract? A. No, that isn't 5452 correct. We made a packer installation that cost us about $15,000, in order to take care of increased business, and there wasn't anything such as you suggest involved in that. We paid for it all in cash without any extension of time.

Q. Now, you said something about your salesmen, in response to a question by Mr. Knuff, I believe, that you worked salesmen over an area out through the Middle West? A. We did.

Q. How many salesmen did you work after the reorganization? A. I think the most that we had was eleven.

Q. When did you first have eleven? A. I should say in about 1939 or 1940.

Q. Isn't it true that up until 1940, or about that time, you only had two salesmen? A. No sir, that is not true.

Q. And when you started, after your reorganization, you only had one for a time, and then for a long time you only had two salesmen? A. No, that is not the case. When we reorganized, we started right away with three men, and we kept adding to that organization as we could.

Q. Do you know who D. N. Kelliher is? A. Yes sir.

5453 Q. Who is he? A. He is an attorney in Fort Dodge.

Q. Did he ever bring a suit against your company? A. Yes, he did.

Q. On an open account for $480? A. No.

Q. For how much? A. I think you have the amount right, but it wasn't an open account.

Q. What was the nature of the claim? A. It had to do with the claim of a man who had been selling for the compan,, not a customer of the company or anyone we bought from.

Q. Now when was that? A. About August, 1942.

Q. So that as late as 1942, you were still having some difficulties or controversies about your indebtedness? A. No sir.

Q. And isn't it true also that all through that period you were either threatened with suits, or that your accounts were slow, and generally throughout the business world where you were known, you were considered a poor credit risk? A. During the period we paid our bills promptly, our credit was good, and we had no difficulty in buying, Mr. Johnston.

5454 Q. In small quantities? A. Or large quantities, for the size of our company.

Q. Do you think, Mr. Sensibar, as a good businessman, that after this reorganization the financial condition of this Cardiff Company was such that it should merit the favorable consideration of establishing business relations with other business concerns? A. Yes, it not only should have merited it, but it did merit it, and business relations were established with everybody, except in the case of board.

Q. Except with these people that you wanted to do business with? A. That is right.

Mr. Johnston: That is all.

Justice Stephens: Is there any further cross-examination?

Mr. Adams: Yes, your Honor.

Cross-Examination

By Mr. Adams:

Q. Mr. Sensibar, you were interested in doing business with Certain-teed? A. We were, yes sir.

Q. And did you feel that the old management would not do business with you? A. No, we did not.

Q. You never took that matter up with them, did you?

A. Yes sir, I discussed the question first with Mr.
5455 Warren Henley back in 1933.

Q. Then a new management came in after that? A. Yes sir.

Q. Then you took it up with the new management? A. Yes sir, that is correct.

Q. You knew that the old management wouldn't do business with you, is that right? A. No, that isn't right. The old management had told us that they weren't able to.

Q. Then, when the new management came in, you took it up with them, is that right? A. That is right, sir.

Q. You kept yourself pretty well informed about what was going on in the building material business, didn't you? A. I tried to do my best.

Q. And you knew when the new management came in, didn't you? A. Yes.

Q. The new management, as a matter of fact, came in in April, 1936, didn't it? A. I don't know the exact date, I am sure.

Q. Well, you didn't talk to anybody until you talked with Mr. Hartley, did you, in the new management? A. I think that is correct.

Q. And Mr. Hartley didn't come with the com-
5456 pany until 1939, did he? A. Well, now, I don't know the exact date, it was shortly after he came with the company that I made it my business to go and talk with him.

Q. Hadn't you known that there had been a new management in the company since 1936? A. No, I don't believe I have any recollection of that, sir.

Q. But you kept yourself informed about what was going on in the building material business? A. I did the best I could.

Q. And you were anxious to take this matter up with the new Certain-teed management when it came in? A. That is right.

Q. And you have no recollection of the fact that you waited for over three years after the new management came in before you took it up with anybody? A. You are speaking about a management before Mr. Hartley, I take it. I don't remember about that, sir.

Q. Despite your awareness of what was going on in the building business, you have no recollection of that? A. I am perfectly willing to admit having overlooked some good bets, if that is what you mean.

Q. You knew when the Browns were in control of the Certain-teed Company, didn't you? A. I never met 5457 the Browns.

Q. Will you answer the question, please? A. I had heard of them.

Q. You knew when they retired from the business, too, didn't you? A. It seems to me I read about that in the papers.

Q. And that was in 1936, wasn't it? A. I don't remember.

Q. Mr. Sensibar, isn't it a fact that when you got around to asking questions of Certain-teed, the only purpose of asking those questions was so that you could build up a record for bringing a lawsuit? A. No, that is definitely not the fact.

Q. Wasn't it your motive at that time to cover them simply so you could say that you had covered everybody in the building material business? A. That is not the fact, and further—

Q. (Interposing) That is all, you have answered my question. A. Just a minute, if you want the whole truth—

Mr. Steffen: (Interposing) Go ahead and answer it.

Mr. Adams: Please, I asked the question, your Honor, and if they want to ask any further questions—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) That may be brought out on redirect. The question has been answered.

5458 Is there any further cross-examination?

Mr. Bromley: I did want to ask one question, because I am told I asked the witness a question and didn't get an answer.

Justice Stephens: You may do so.

Cross-Examination (Resumed)

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. Didn't Mr. Knode or Mr. Keady or Mr. English in your conference with them, tell you that it was the policy of the United States Gypsum Company, carefully considered, not to put any more distributors into business? A. The answer they gave me was substantially like that.

Q. And you were asked, and answered in the affirmative, in the criminal case, this question, weren't you?

"Now, didn't Mr. Knode or Mr. Keady or Mr. English, one or all of them, tell you that it was the policy of the company, carefully considered, not to put any more distributors into business?"

A. Isn't that the same as what you just asked?

Q. Well, do you think it is? A. It seems to me it is, yes sir.

Q. Well, at any rate— A. (Interposing) They told me substantially that, that the Wasem deal was old and they weren't making any more like it.

5459 Q. But the question I asked you is—didn't they tell you that it was the policy of the company, carefully considered, not to put any more distributors into business? A. In substance, yes, the same thing.

Q. They did tell you that, is that what you mean? A. In substance, yes. I don't know the exact words.

Mr. Bromley: That is all.

Justice Stephens: Is there any redirect examination?

Mr. Steffen: Yes. Will the reporter please repeat Mr. Adams' last question, which the witness should have been permitted to answer.

Mr. Adams: I object to counsel's remark, and ask that it be stricken, the Court having ruled that the continuation of his answer was not proper.

Justice Stephens: I don't think that that characterization was necessary, Mr. Steffen. The Court had ruled that he had answered the question and that if you desired to bring out anything further, it might be done on redirect.

Mr. Steffen: I certainly didn't mean to reflect on the Court. I thought it was odd for Mr. Adams to ask a question and then turn around and walk back and not be ready to listen to the answer.

Justice Stephens: The rule is, on cross-examination, that if a question is answerable by a direct answer it must be so answered. Then, if counsel on redirect wish to 5460 bring out more to explain it, they may have that opportunity. Now that question was clearly answerable, as it was answered, without the volunteered explanation.

But you may ask it now, freely.

Read the last question which Mr. Adams asked.

(Whereupon, reporter read the record as requested.)

Justice Stephens: If you wish to make some further explanation of the answer you may do so, if you understand the question. If you want further questions read back, so that you are entirely clear what it was about, you may have that done also, Mr. Sensibar.

The Witness: No, I understand it. I was about to say, your Honor, that I devoted a great deal of time during that period to working out an arrangement with a company known as the Standard Lime and Stone Company, for the supply of lime on a manufacturing distributor basis to a number of gypsum companies, of whom Certain-teed was one. They appreciated very much the work I had done on that matter and were very complimentary and thankful for what I had done, and I am positive that there was no question in their minds about the sincerity of this proposition about our needing board and lath.

Mr. Adams: I respectfully move to strike out that portion of the answer dealing with their being no question in their minds about the sincerity of his motives, as being a pure speculation, and moreover, a matter of conclusion of the witness.

5461 Justice Stephens: Whose mind do you mean, Certain-teed's?

The Witness: The mind of Mr. Hartley and Mr. Miller and Mr. Stedman, from our conversations, from what they told me, and from what I told them.

Justice Stephens: That may go out.

Mr. Steffen: I would like to say a word on that, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: Well, I paused in order to give you an opportunity to say a word, but you didn't take that opportunity, so I thought you were ready for a ruling. You may be heard.

Justice Jackson: Did the witness answer that question? It doesn't seem to me as though he has anwered it. It doesn't seem to me that he explained what his original answer was. There was a direct question there, asking whether or not he was "cooking up" a lawsuit.

Justice Stephens: He said "No" to that.

Justice Jackson: Then I thought he was going to explain it.

Justice Stephens: Let us hear the argument first on the motion to strike that portion of the answer which says that there was no question in the minds of Mr. Hartley and others of Certain-teed with whom he talked, as to the sincerity of his approach, or words to that effect. What is your contention on that, Mr. Steffen?

Mr. Steffen: The argument is that Mr. Adams
5462 was making a charge, in effect, that Mr. Sensibar was "cooking up" a lawsuit, and he replied by explaining the occasion of his visit; that he had these other matters with regard to procuring a lime connection for Certain-teed, and that he, Mr. Sensibar, had no doubt in his mind that Mr. Hartley and the other officers of Certain-teed felt that he was sincere.

Now that goes to the attitude of Mr. Sensibar as to what he understood.

Justice Stephens: Well, I didn't understand him to make that answer. I thought he said that there was no question in their minds.

Go back to the beginning of this, Mr. Reporter, go back to the question preceding the one which Mr. Adams last asked and read through the record.

Justice Stephens: My colleagues are of the view that that portion of the answer ought to stand. I think it is a pure conclusion myself, but I defer to their views.

Mr. Adams: May I move to strike out the whole answer as immaterial.

Justice Stephens: Well, I should think it would not be immaterial, Mr. Adams. It is redirect examination as to the reasonableness of the witness's testimony concerning his reasons for approaching Certain-teed for board.

5463 That motion is denied.

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. There is one item, Mr. Sensibar, concerning the Mathieson Alkali Works, which I would like to ask you about.

I believe you testified that you understood their plant was at Plasterco, is that correct? A. That is my understanding.

Mr. Steffen: May it be stipulated here that the plant of the Mathieson Alkali Company was at North Holston?

Mr. Bromley: Yes, it is the same thing. I mean by that that both towns are very close together, in Virginia.

Justice Stephens: Very well, that stipulation may be shown.

Mr. Steffen: We would now like to offer physically the entire testimony of Mr. Sensibar on the criminal trial, beginning at page 2493 to and including page 2503 of Volume 18, and, I think, from page 2514 to page 2596, inclusive, of Volume 19 of the criminal transcript.

We offer that with the idea that the Court has been asked to make various comparisons between the testimony here and the testimony at the criminal trial, and we offer it in order that the Court may have the matter fully before it.

Mr. Bromley: That is objected to as immaterial and incompetent.

Justice Stephens: How many pages does that involve?

5464 Mr. Bromley: About 100.

Mr. Steffen: I would estimate it at 92 or 93, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: Judge Garrett and I are of the view, Mr. Steffen, that that is an irregular offer to put in that entire 100 pages or 93 pages of the examination.

In the first place, much of it not may be relevant or material to explaining the witness' cross-examination, and if it isn't, then we have got into the record, at the expense of both sides, and at the expense of the time of the Court in examining it, a great deal of unnecessary material.

In the second place, it puts the burden upon the Court to sift out, without the aid of counsel on both sides, in the course of an open examination, what is relevant and what isn't, and it leaves the record without any explict indication of what the Court has treated as relevant and not relevant, or material and not material, to the cross-examination.

We therefore reject that offer of that entire record. We do not, however, forbid you, if you wish to do so, to examine at as much length as you think necessary, into any other phase of the criminal testimony, or rather the testimony given by this witness at the criminal trial, which you think might clear up the answers which he has made on cross-examination.

But it must be done by counsel on redirect, and perhaps also recross, rather than have it put into the record in that wholesale fashion, because that would leave an ap-5465 pellate court without any understanding as to what we had considered or had not considered as relevant and material and proper re-direct.

Mr. Steffen: Then, your Honor, I would like to have leave to at least select the passages that were brought up in cross-examination and which Mr. Bromley accused Mr. Sensibar of having dressed up in his testimony here or there.

It seems to me that in order for the Court, in looking over the transcript, to determine anything concerning Mr. Sensibar's testimony on that point, they would have to be advised of the exact matters testified to in the criminal case.

Justice Stephens: That is right, and you are entitled to bring those out. So far the proceeding has gone along in an orthodox fashion, and the reason for the rule of having it conducted in this manner, I have just stated. If you want to pick out additional passages and ask the witness if he didn't also testify to those, and argue to the Court the relevance of those, or bring those matters to the attention of the Court as tending to explain his cross-examination, you, of course, are entirely free to do that, and if you need time to do it we will take a little extra time at noon.

But that is the way it must be done because that is the conventional and orthodox practice, and it is based upon the sound reasons which I stated, that we must have an explicit showing, objectively, in the record of what the Court has considered as relevant and material and proper re-direct.

5466 Do you wish to take the recess now so that you will have a little more time to go over that?

Mr. Steffen: I think we might be able to furnish it to the Court at the end of the recess if we could take it now.

Justice Stephens: What I expect you to do is not to furnish it to the Court, but to call to the attention of the witness various points in the record which you think Mr. Bromley or other examining counsel ought to have called to his attention, and which you think, if called to his attention, would explain his cross-examination. We are not going to receive in evidence ourselves, without having them put to the witness, these statements, because it is the witness' reasonableness and truthfulness that we are interested in.

Mr. Steffen: My thought, your Honor, was that when the witness was cross-examined by Mr. Bromley relative to what he said in the criminal trial, an impression might be given which, it seems to me, would perhaps be erroneous, and the simplest way of getting at the matter would be to put in the transcript the matters which he actually testified to before the criminal court.

If your Honor cares at all, then, to test the accuracy of Mr. Sensibar's statements, it would be a simple reference to what he actually testified to, and that would end the matter.

I agree that your Honors are right that it would be too voluminous to put in all of this testimony, and much 5467 of it would be irrelevant to the cross-examination.

Justice Stephens: I think if you will go through it, you will find that you will be able to select out those portions which you think were overlooked in cross-examination and which, if called to the attention of the witness, and his recollection refreshed may help to modify his answers, and you can ask him if he had those matters in mind when he was giving his answers. That is the usual way to do it.

We will take the noon recess at this time until the usual time.

(Whereupon a recess was taken at 12:07 p.m. until 1:45 p.m.)

5468 AFTERNOON SESSION

(The trial was resumed at 1:45 o'clock p.m., pursuant to recess.)

Justice Stephens: Mr. Grover calls my attention to the fact that at page 5567, line 15, this morning, I asked the Court Reporter to change the word "concerned" to the word "concerning". Mr. Grover calls my attention to the fact that I am in error in respect of that, because of the use of two "that's" in the previous part of the sentence. The participial form is therefore not appropriate, but the past tense of the verb "concern", and that may be left as it was.

I find, also, that I was in error in indicating, in my announcement of the rulings of Judge Garrett and myself with respect to the manner of conducting re-direct-examination, just at the close of the morning session, that Judge Jackson did not agree with us. I find that he does share our views with respect to the manner of conducting re-direct examination.

To repeat the ruling, the view of the Court is that the proper method of conducting the re-direct-examination, in view of the cross-examination concerning the criminal record, is this,—where the Government feels that an answer given on cross-examination might give a misimpression of the facts because of a failure, on the part of cross-5469 examining counsel, to bring to the attention of the witness additional portions of the record in the criminal case, the proper practice is for the Government, on re-direct-examination, to bring those portions individually to the attention of the witness and ask him if he had them in mind in answering, and whether or not he wishes to change or modify his answer in any manner. Any other form of examination would deny the Government itself the right of presenting to the Court, through the lips of the witness and through his demeanor, an opportunity to determine what was the correct answer on the whole; and it would also deny to the defendants the right of re-cross-examination, because they wouldn't be aware, if we took either the criminal record as a whole or excerpts therefrom, without presentation of the witness, of what was being considered by the Court as relevant and material and proper re-direct, or of its effect upon the witness' previous answers.

So you may proceed in the orthodox way.

Mr. Sensibar, will you take the witness stand?

Thereupon, EZRA SENSIBAR the witness on the stand at the time of recess, resumed his testimony as follows:

Redirect Examination (resumed)

Mr. Steffen: I want to say simply that the Government's offer was to introduce only those portions of the 5470 criminal transcript to which Mr. Bromley referred, and that largely for the Court's assistance and in order to make the record complete.

We have no additional provisions or parts of the transcript which we would like to call to the attention of the witness, because I think that that has been adequately done.

Justice Stephens: If you want to call the attention of the witness again to those same portions, you are entitled to do so. The process is necessarily a laborious one, Mr. Steffen, and if you want to take the time to do it, and think it is of advantage to the Government to do so, we will, of course, give you full opportunity.

Mr. Steffen: We are very well satisfied with the witness' testimony along those points. We have no further redirect.

Justice Stephens: Any re-cross?

Mr. Bromley: No re-cross.

Justice Stephens: Does any other defendant have any re-cross?

(No response.)

Justice Stephens: Mr. Sensibar, was there a change of policy in the Cardiff Company after you came into actual control of its policies?

The Witness: Yes, sir, there was.

Justice Stephens: Now, did that change of policy
5471 have to do with price cutting, or did it not?

The Witness: No, sir, it had to do—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) Just answer me briefly, first. Did it have to do with price cutting, or did it not?

The Witness: I would say not.

Justice Stephens: You would say not?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

Justice Stephens: Did it have to do with methods of distribution? I refer to the distribution directly to contractors rather than through dealers.

The Witness: That is right.

Justice Stephens: Had the company, prior to your coming into control of its policies, but since your acquaintance with it, been a price cutter on plaster?

The Witness: You refer to the period, say, from 1930 to 1935?

Justice Stephens: I think that would be approximately the period, from the time you came into contact with the company as a stockholder until you came into control of it.

The Witness: I think, Your Honor, that the company was, during that period, often led into an erroneous idea of what the real market situation was, and very likely quoted a number of prices that were below the competitive level during that period. I think we made very few mistakes of that character after 1935, because we had the 5472 manpower to investigate and know just what the market level really was.

Justice Stephens: Then you do think that there were some sales, before 1935, below the current price?

The Witness: That is right.

Justice Stephens: And after 1935, you think there were not?

The Witness: That is correct.

Justice Stephens: Then the reason, I assume, you say there was no change in policy, with respect to price cutting, before and after 1935, was that you mean to indicate that in neither period did you intend to sell below the current price, but did so in the earlier period inadvertently?

The Witness: That is precisely correct.

Justice Stephens: Do you know—just answer this question "yes" or "no"—do you know whether or not the company, before 1935, was reputed to be a price cutter on plaster?

The Witness: It was, yes, sir.

Justice Stephens: And what was its reputation, if you know, after 1935, in that respect?

The Witness: I believe its reputation since 1935 has been very good in that respect. It takes a long time to change the opinions of people about a company's reputation, sir.

Justice Stephens: I suppose, since the Court has 5473 conducted a brief examination, it would be only fair to give counsel on both sides an opportunity to question him further, if they desire to.

Mr. Bromley: No questions.

Mr. Steffen: No questions.

Justice Stephens: Then you are excused, Mr. Sensibar. Thank you for attending the Court.

The Witness: Thank you, sir.

(Witness excused.)

Mr. Steffen: Mr. McCormack.

Thereupon HARRY G. MCCORMACK appearing as a witness for and on behalf of the United States, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. State your full name, Mr. McCormack, please? A. Harry G. McCormack.

Q. Where are you located? A. In Baltimore.

Q. What company are you with, Mr. McCormack? A. American Cyanamid & Chemical Corporation.

Q. How long have you been with them? A. Since 1928.

5474 Q. 1928? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you with the Structural Gypsum Corporation at any time? A. I was with the Structural Gypsum Division, yes, the Structural Gypsum Corporation.

Q. What was the Structural Gypsum Corporation? A. It was a wholly-owned subsidiary of the American Cyanamid Company.

Q. And did they change the status of that company at some point of time? A. Yes, at some time along 1933 or 1934, approximately that time. It then became a division of the American Cyanamid & Chemical Corporation.

Q. It was what was called the Structural Gypsum Division of the American Cyanamid & Chemical Corporation? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was your office with Structural? A. I was Assistant Sales Manager in charge of Plaster Sales.

Q. That applied to both the Structural Division, and also to the time when the concern was a separate corporation, the Structural Gypsum Corporation? A. That is right.

Q. And you have been in that capacity for how 5475 long, since 1930? A. Since 1928.

Q. Did you have any gypsum experience before you went with the Structural people? A. Oh, yes.

Q. Who were you with? A. I had been with the United States Gypsum Company; the American Cement Plaster Company, which ultimately was absorbed by the Beaver Board Company; and for a short period with the National Gypsum Company.

Q. When you were with the United States Gypsum Company, who was your superior? A. Mr. S. F. Bartlett.

Q. Was there a man named Farley that worked in conjunction with you? A. Yes.

Q. Who was he? A. Jim Farley.

Q. How long ago was that? A. That was back in 1912, just about the time I got out of school. Jim and I were co-partners in crime.

Q. He left the Gypsum Company, did he not, at some time? A. Jim left it after I did. I preceded him in leaving.

Q. Now, what was the business of the Structural 5476 Gypsum Corporation or the Structural Gypsum Division? A. They manufactured and sold plaster and plaster products, but they did not make board.

Q. What was the source of your supply for plaster? A. We manufactured our plaster from a sludge, a by-product sludge.

Q. That was an American Cyanamid by-product? A. Which came from our parent company's plant.

Q. And in what quantities did that come? A. I can only hazard a guess, but it was sizable quantities, anywhere from 400 up to 700 tons a day.

Q. How was that treated, Mr. McCormack? A. Well, a description of it would be rather technical. I could attempt sketching it.

Q. I want just a general description. A. The sludge came in a slurry form, possibly 35 percent solids and 65 percent water, through a pipeline from our parent company's plant. It emptied into a large decantation reservoir. The solids were drawn from the bottom and put through centrifuges, and the excess water thrown off, and the gypsum sludge was then carried around and finally emptied into kettles and calcined or cooked.

Q. What did you make when you cooked it? A. Calcined gypsum.

5477 Q. And what did you do with that? A. Calcined gypsum is plaster of Paris. That is the base for making wall plaster, gypsum block, or any other gypsum product.

Q. What products did your company make? Did they make board? A. No, sir, they did not.

Q. Did they make tile? A. They made gypsum tile, yes.

Q. And plaster? A. And plaster.

Q. Did you sell any of this calcined gypsum, as such? A. Yes, we did.

Q. Who did you sell it to? A. The Kelley Plasterboard Company.

Q. During what years? A. We sold them on and off over a period of, I would say, beginning along about 1932 or 1933 and continuing possibly up to 1939 or maybe 1940.

Q. Did you buy any board during this period? A. Yes.

Q. And by "board", I mean either gypsum board or gypsum lath. A. Yes, we did.

Q. Which did you buy the most of, board or lath? A. Gypsum lath, mostly.

5478 Q. Why did you buy more lath than board? A. For the reason that our contacts, because of our economic situation in having only plaster to sell, our contacts were mostly with the masons' supply dealers. The masons' supply dealer was usually not considered an outlet for large board, they ordinarily used or sold gypsum lath.

Q. When you say that, you mean you were primarily interested in disposing of your plaster, is that correct? A. That was our principal objective.

Q. Was it important that you also have a source of supply for board, if you were going to sell plaster advantageously? A. It was an advantage to have it.

Q. Why was that so, Mr. McCormack? A. In a good many cases, a dealer would not care to purchase an entire carload of plaster. He might desire to buy it in mixed cars, mixing the plaster with some board. Our competition was in a position to sell in that manner, and we thought it would be an advantage to us to also sell likewise.

Q. That is, I get the impression that your dealer might want to buy both plaster and lath, is that correct? A. Yes.

Q. And he wouldn't want to buy it from two sources? A. That is right.

5479 Q. Now, you stated, I think, that you had been buying board from Kelley during this period, from 1932 until what time? A. Until what time?

Q. Yes. A. We continued to buy it all through the entire period Kelley was in business.

Q. And they went out of business when, do you remember? Was it in about 1938? A. I would judge around that time. Eventually they were bought by the Calvin Tomkins Company.

Q. You mean by the Newark Plaster Company? A. That is right.

Q. And you sold to them for what period of time? A. Newark Plaster Company or Kelley?

Q. You said you sold to Kelley until they went out of business, and did you thereafter sell to the Newark Plaster Company? A. Yes.

Q. And you sold to them until what period of time? A. We are at present selling, to the Newark Plaster Company, some calcined gypsum.

Q. There was a period when their plant burned down, in 1940. You didn't sell at that time, did you? A. Hardly.

5480 Mr. Bromley: What do you mean when you say "you sold"?

Mr. Steffen: Calcined gypsum—is that correct?

The Witness: Yes.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. And that is sold to the Newark Plaster Company for the purposes of making board? A. I assume that it is.

Q. Is the Structural Division making the same quantity of calcined gypsum now as they were back in 1932 to 1938? A. No, our plant was dismantled possibly 3 to 4 years ago. The quantity of sludge available has been considerably reduced, and almost eliminated, but we did have some gypsum sludge in the impounds back of the plant which we have attempted to salvage, and we retained two kettles in which to cook it. We are selling that as long as it lasts.

Q. Now, when you were buying from the Kelley Plasterboard Company, did you buy at a discount?

Mr. Bromley: What is that?

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. When you were buying board and lath from the Kelley Plasterboard Company, did you buy at a discount? A. They allowed us a discount.

Q. Do you remember what it was, to begin with? A. I think it was 10 percent on the small board, and 12 on the large board, it may have been 12-1/2.

5481 Q. Was that discount later increased? A. Yes, it was.

Q. Do you remember to what amount? A. I think to 12-1/2 and 15 percent, respectively.

Q. And do you remember the year—was that about 1933? A. I could only hazard a guess—possibly at that time.

Q. So far as you recall, it was along about that time, is that right? A. Along about that time, yes.

Q. When you were buying board and lath from Kelley, how was it delivered? A. Kelley delivered some to us at our plant; we picked some up at his plant; or he would ship it on his equipment, or with his equipment, for our account.

Q. And he would ship it directly to the dealers to whom you were selling? A. That is right.

Q. Did you have an arrangement with him whereby you shipped calcined gypsum to him, and took back board or lath in your trucks? A. That is right.

Q. And that board or lath would be delivered where? A. Wherever we could sell it to a dealer.

Q. Would it also, perhaps, be delivered to your 5482 warehouse? A. In some instances, yes.

Q. Where was the Structural Division's plant located? A. At Linden, New Jersey.

Q. Did you have a warehouse there? A. Well, a plant warehouse.

Q. Did you have a warehouse in Philadelphia at any time? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And were shipments made from Kelley directly to that warehouse in Philadelphia, of board and lath? A. That is right.

Q. Now, will you state what areas the Structural Company sold both plaster and lath in—in what areas did they sell? A. Oh, roughly from, I would say, the Connecticut State line, or possibly one or two counties in the extreme western section of Connecticut; through Westchester County, Southern New York State; all of New Jersey; Eastern Pennsylvania; down through this area, into Maryland, the Eastern part of Maryland, coming down into the District of Columbia. That, roughly, was the area. There were some sales made outside of that area, but that, roughly, was where we did business.

Q. Did you receive price lists from Kelley? A. We did.

5483 Q. At which your board was sold?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as leading, and incompetent because calling for a conclusion.

Justice Stephens: Sustained.

Mr. Steffen: I withdraw that.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. I now want to show you what has been marked as Government's Exhibit No. 591, which purports to be a price list under date of April 26, 1932, under the heading of Kelley Plasterboard Company—

Justice Jackson: (Interposing) Have we these exhibits?

Mr. Steffen: You should have them. I am sorry I didn't ask you, to begin with, whether you had them.

Justice Stephens: I believe we all have copies now. You may proceed, Mr. Steffen.

How many pages has that exhibit, Mr. Steffen?

Mr. Steffen: It consists of 8 pages, Your Honor.

(Government's Exhibit No. 591 for Identification was handed to the witness.)

Justice Stephens: I count 9 pages.

Mr. Steffen: That probably is correct.

By Mr. Steffen:

5484 Q. I also show you what has been marked for Identification as Government's Exhibit 592, which purports to be a Kelley Plasterboard price list, dated January, 1938.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 592 for Identification.)

(Government's Exhibit No. 592 for Identification was handed to the witness.)

Justice Stephens: Is that the one with the picture, Mr. Steffen?

Mr. Steffen: That is right, Your Honor.

I further show—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) Let's get the record clear as to how many pages that consists of, because it may get torn apart or lost sometime.

It consists of 8 pages.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. I further show you what has been marked for Identification as Government's Exhibit No. 593, which is dated March 1, 1937, and purports to be a further price list. This exhibit is made up of 3 pages.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 593 for Identification.)

(Government's Exhibit No. 593 for Identification
5485 was handed to the witness.)

Justice Stephens: These are all Kelley price lists, are they?

Mr. Steffen: Yes, Your Honor. I was going to ask that question of the witness.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Have you had an opportunity, Mr. McCormack, to examine Government's Exhibit 591? A. Yes, I have.

Q. Dated April 26, 1932. A. Yes.

Q. Can you identify that as a price list which you received at Structural? A. They look like Kelley's price lists, all right.

Q. I want you to address your attention first to Government's Exhibit 591, dated April 26, 1932, and I call your attention to the reverse side of the exhibit, upon which there is a stamp. Turn the whole exhibit over. A. Yes.

Q. Can you identify that? A. Yes, it is a mailroom stamp of ours, indicating the receipt of the document.

Q. Now, looking at Government's Exhibit 592, which is the price list of January, 1938, can you identify that as a price list which your company received?

5486 A. I would think it was quite possible that we received it.

Q. And now, in regard to Government's Exhibit 593 for Identification—are you familiar with Exhibit 593? A. I am not familiar with it, but it is possible that we received it.

Q. As I understood your testimony, you did receive price lists from Kelley? A. That is right.

Justice Stephens: Were these taken out of the files of Kelley?

Mr. Steffen: Out of Structural's files.

Justice Stephens: I meant Structural's files.

Mr. Steffen: That is right.

I offer in evidence at this time Government's Exhibits 591, 592 and 593, as price lists of the Kelley Plasterboard Company.

Mr. Bromley: We make only the usual objection.

Justice Stephens: Received, subject to the usual reservation with respect to declaration of alleged co-conspirators.

(The documents referred to, marked as Government's Exhibits Nos. 591, 592 and 593, were received in evidence.)

5487 Justice Stephens: Who is representing Newark here today?

Mr. O'Donnell: I do, Your Honor.

Justice Stephens: That is right. Thank you.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Could you say, Mr. McCormack, whether you were furnished with price lists by Kelley throughout this period from 1932 to 1940, at which your board was sold?

Mr Bromley: I object to that as leading, and also incompetent because calling for a conclusion.

Justice Stephens: Read the question.

(The question was read by the reporter.)

Mr. Steffen: I would like to withdraw the question, Your Honor, because I didn't intend to ask the latter part of it.

Justice Stephens: Very well.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Did you receive price lists from Kelley from time to time all through this period from 1932 to 1940? A. I would say yes. The last couple of years, I am not so sure that Kelley continued to publish a price list, but I would say we received them as long as he published them.

Q. Did you ever buy board from the United States
5488 Gypsum Company? A. Yes, we did.

Q. During what period? A. I would think possibly in 1937 and 1938.

Q. Who did you contact in the United States Gypsum Company when you purchased the board? A. Mr. Gallagher.

Q. Who? A. Mr. Gallagher.

Q. Did you make the arrangements? A. I did.

Q. And how long did you say, for the years 1937 and 1938? A. Roughly, yes, for parts of each of those years.

Q. What transpired at the end of that time, did you discontinue purchasing at that time? A. USG discontinued selling us.

Q. And did you have any conversation with Mr. Gallagher about that? A. Yes. Gallagher told me that their own business had increased to such an extent that their production was not sufficient to fill their own orders and ours too.

Q. Were you able to buy or did you attempt to buy board from them as a dealer at that time? A. As a distributor.

Q. I mean to say, your arrangement with USG was 5489 to buy at a discount? A. Oh, yes, yes.

Q. And your conversation with Mr. Gallagher had altogether to do with buying board from USG at a discount? A. Well, I believe it was generally accepted that we knew what the discounts were.

Q. Surely. But what I am getting at is that you didn't attempt to buy any on a dealer basis from USG, did you? A. Oh, no.

Q. Did you form another connection about this time, that is, take another source of supply for board and lath? A. We already had other connections.

Q. Who else were you buying from? A. We were buying from Kelley, or the old Newark company. After Kelley faded from the picture, we bought from USG, Ebsary—

Q. (Interposing) There was a time when you bought from Ebsary? A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember about when that started? A. Again, I can only hazard a guess. Possibly in 1937.

Q. About the time that you discontinued buying 5490 from USG? A. Possibly so.

Mr. Bromley: Wait a minute, the witness said he bought from USG in 1937 and 1938.

Mr. Steffen: That is correct.

The Witness: We were buying from two or three sources at one time.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. That is, there was a period, as I get your testimony, in 1937 and 1938, when you were buying from Kelley or Newark, and from USG, and also from Ebsary; is that right? A. That is right.

Q. How long did that continue, that triple buying? A. Well, that continued for quite a lengthy period, I would say possibly a year, until USG advised us they could no longer furnish us board. We then only had Kelley and Ebsary.

Q. Was there a time, Mr. McCormack, when a question came up between Structural and Kelley concerning commission men, do you remember that? A. Yes, I think I do.

Q. And that was about what time, Mr. McCormack? A. Oh, I would place it probably in 1936 or 1937.

Q. Did you have any discussion with Mr. Kelley at about that time? A. I had quite frequent discussions with 5491 Kelley, I mean throughout the years, throughout our business relationship.

Q. Did you discuss, with Mr. Kelley, prices, throughout your relationship, prices at which he would sell you board? A. Yes. That is quite possible.

Q. Do you have any recollection as to the prices at which you should sell board? A. Kelley furnished us his price lists, and—

Q. (Interposing) And you understood— A. (Interposing and continuing) —and we went along with those prices.

Q. I see.

Now, about commission men. Did Mr. Kelley ever say to you anything concerning his right to have commission men under the license agreement? A. I think Kelley told me at one time that he was not in a position to sell through commission men.

Q. I see. Did he tell you whether that restriction applied to Structural, perhaps? A. No. He may have thought I accepted it by inference, but he never made any actual demands upon me.

Q. Did your company have a man by the name of Stremble in your employ? A. Yes, sir, they did.

5492 Q. Was he working on a commission basis? A. He was a commission salesman.

Q. And did you ever have any conversation with Mr. Kelley about Mr. Stremble? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Can you relate that conversation? A. Kelley phoned me—I can't place the date definitely—that Stremble had been cutting his commissions, and had been rebating part of his commissions to some dealers to whom he was selling board, and he wanted to know what I was going to do about it.

I told Kelley I would investigate the matter, because that was wholly contrary to our policy.

Q. Did you make an investigation? A. I did.

Q. Did you report back to Mr. Kelley, do you remember? A. I can't recall that I did.

Q. What, if anything, did you do in regard to Mr. Stremble? A. I eventually fired him.

Q. You say "virtually fired him"? A. I said "eventually fired him".

Q. At about this time that Mr. Kelley was talking to you about him? A. That would be rather difficult to place 5493 the timing of it. I would say somewhere in there.

Q. Did Mr. Kelley mention the license agreement in his conversation with you, and any restrictions that he might be under as respects commission men? A. He mentioned the restrictions he was under. Whether it was at that particular time, I couldn't say definitely.

Q. Did he say whether or not he had any commission men in his employ? A. He never indicated it to me.

Q. In your testimony at the criminal trial, at page 1970, you testified that he said that commission men were taboo; is that correct? A. Yes.

Mr. Bromley: I object to this as leading, and move to strike the answer.

Justice Stephens: It may go out. You shouldn't lead the witness, Mr. Steffen. The witness is an intelligent witness, and can answer the questions without any leading.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Could you give us in any more detail what Mr. Kelley may have told you regarding commission men? A. Somewhere, sometime, in the course of a conversation I had with him, he indicated that under the license agreement he could not sell board through a commission sales-5494 man.

Q. And did you understand that to place any obligation upon you?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as leading.

Justice Stephens: The objection is sustained. Ask the witness what effect, if any, it had upon him.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. What effect, if any, did that have on you? A. We continued to sell through commission salesmen.

Q. How many salesmen did you have? A. Oh, it varied from time to time; probably from 10 to 15 or 16.

Q. And what effect did it have, if any, in connection with Mr. Stremble? I think you testified that he was eventually fired? A. That is right.

Q. And was that partly because—

Mr. Bromley: (Interposing) Just a moment. I move to strike out, "I think you testified that he was eventually fired"—or at least the witness should be given the opportunity to answer the question—"what effect, if any, did it have upon Stremble?"

Justice Stephens: That objection is well taken.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. What effect, if any, did it have upon Mr.
5495 Stremble, Mr. McCormack? A. Well, frankly, it tended to weaken my confidence in Stremble.

Mr. Bromley: I don't believe that that is a responsive answer, if the Court pleases.

Mr. Steffen: I don't think so, either, Your Honor.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. The question was: After your conversation with Mr. Kelley, in which he told you that he was under restrictions, under the license agreement, not to have commission men—the question then is: What, if any, effect did your conversation with Mr. Kelley have upon your relations with Mr. Stremble? A. I can't say that it had any effect.

Q. I think you testified you made an investigation, is that right? A. That is right.

Q. And you eventually discharged Mr. Stremble? A. That is right.

Mr. Steffen: I would now like to have marked as Government's Exhibits for Identification the following documents:

A letter of June 5, 1936, signed H. F. Sadler, addressed to the Board Survey Company, to be marked as Exhibit 594; a letter dated June 8, 1936, with the initials 5496 "CBM" in the lower left-hand corner, addressed to Kelley Plasterboard Company, as Government's Exhibit 595; and a letter of July 16, 1936, with the same initials in the lower left-hand corner, addressed to the United States Gypsum Company, as Government's Exhibit 596 for Identification. Attached to Exhibit 596 is a green copy of a letter on the Board Survey Company form, dated June 22, 1936, signed in typewriting by Mr. S. J. Kelley for the Kelley Plasterboard Company.

Justice Stephens: You had better mark that 596-A.

Mr. Steffen: Yes, Your Honor.

(The documents referred to were marked as Government's Exhibits Nos. 594, 595, 596, and 596-A, respectively, for identification.)

(Government's Exhibits Nos. 594, 595, 596 and 596-A for Identification were handed to the witness.)

Mr. Steffen: I might say that at the criminal trial, Your Honor, these exhibits were admitted upon stipulation, as being genuine, and were received in evidence at that time.

I now ask Mr. Bromley whether they may similarly be admitted here?

Mr. Bromley: I would like to look at them.

Justice Stephens: Who does the letter of July 16th purport to be from?

Mr. Steffen: From Mr. Mahan, I believe, who is a 5497 lawyer in Mr. MacLeish's office.

Justice Stephens: It is addressed to the United States Gypsum Company.

Mr. Steffen: And that also applies to the letter of June 8, 1936. He is a lawyer in the MacLeish firm.

Mr. Bromley: I agree that these documents are authentic, and were sent and received.

Justice Stephens: Thank you. That will save a great deal of time.

Mr. Steffen: We offer in evidence Government's Exhibits 594, 595, 596 and 596-A.

Mr. Bromley: We make only the usual objection.

Justice Stephens: Received, subject to the usual reservation with respect to declarations of alleged co-conspirators.

(The documents referred to, marked as Government's Exhibits Nos. 594, 595, 596, and 596-A, respectively, were received in evidence.)

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. I am going to ask you to look, if you will, Mr. McCormack, at Government's Exhibit 596-A, which purports to be a report from the Kelley Plasterboard Company of an investigation of the Stremble situation, and ask if that is accurate, in so far as it concerns you?

5498 A. Not wholly accurate.

Q. What is your understanding of that?

Mr. Bromley: I object to what his understanding is. If he wants to bring out the conversation, I think he should be asked about it.

Justice Stephens: You may tell what explanation you made to Mr. Kelley. The Court will then have to determine whether or not Mr. Kelley's statement was correct. If you have anything to add to what you have already said, Mr. McCormack, you may tell what statement you made to Mr. Kelley on the subjects involved in this purported explanation.

The Witness: I am quite confident that on general principles, I denied to Kelley that Stremble had been cutting his commissions.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Do you recall whether you made any assurances to Kelley of the sort mentioned in this report?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as leading, and incompetent because calling for a conclusion rather than the conversation.

Justice Stephens: That objection is sustained.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Do you recall any assurances being given to Kelley concerning the possibility that Mr. Stremble would no longer split commissions?

5499 Mr. Bromley: The same objection.

Justice Stephens: The Court will sustain the objection. The Court must ask Government counsel not to continue to invade the rulings of the Court with respect to leading questions.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. I think you testified earlier that you didn't recall for sure whether you had made any report back to Mr. Kelley, is that correct? A. I think that is right.

Q. And does a reading of Government's Exhibit 596-A perhaps refresh your recollection? A. It would not necessarily follow that I had taken it up with Kelley again.

Q. Well, could you say for sure, Mr. McCormack, whether you did or not? A. I don't believe I did.

Q. You don't believe that you did report back? A. I don't believe I did.

Q. Now, I think you testified that beginning in 1937 or thereabouts, you commenced buying board and lath from the Ebsary Gypsum Company; is that right? A. That is right.

Q. And did the matter of Mr. Stremble ever come up in connection with your sale of Ebsary board?
5500 A. Yes, sir, it did.

Q. And do you recall about when? A. It is a little difficult to place, at this time. It was perhaps in 1938.

Q. And did you have a conversation with anyone from Ebsary about Mr. Stremble? A. Mr. Lenci.

Q. What did Mr. Lenci say, or will you relate the whole conversation, if you can? A. Well, he called and said that he had a report that Stremble was cutting commissions. From my conversation with Lenci, I assumed that Stremble had gone in and stepped on the toes of one of his dealers with a cut commission price.

Q. What was Mr. Lenci's attitude in the matter? A. Well, naturally, not a very happy one—

Mr. Bromley: (Interposing) I object to that as immaterial, and incompetent because calling for a conclusion.

Justice Stephens: The objection is sustained.

State what Mr. Lenci said to you, and what you replied. You, of course, understand that the Court doesn't expect you to remember the detailed words that were used, it is so long a time ago, but state the substance and effect of what he said and what you said.

The Witness: Lenci stated that he understood
5501 Stremble was running wild among a group of dealers in either Kings or Queens County, cutting his commissions; and again, I told Lenci I doubted it. That was done on general principles, wholly, in defense of one of my salesmen. I promised, however, that I would check into the matter.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Did Mr. Lenci indicate at all that he was operating under any restrictions, under the license? A. I think he did. Whether at that time or some other, I couldn't say for sure.

Q. What did he say in that connection, if you can remember? A. That his company was not permitted to sell through commission men.

Q. And what did you understand that meant, as respects your company?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as incompetent because calling for a conclusion, and as leading.

Mr. Steffen: I think that is a proper question, Your Honor, on the ground that we are wishing to establish that perhaps Mr. Lenci's conversation had some influence on Mr. McCormack's action.

Justice Stephens: Well, the proper way to get that information is to ask this witness what, if any, influence or effect this had upon him. That is the view of the 5502 Court. The objection is sustained.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Well, Mr. McCormack, will you answer that question—what, if any, influence did Mr. Lenci's statement have upon your action? A. It certainly influenced me to check into the matter, and make an investigation, because if Stremble had been pursuing such a course, it was wholly contrary to our policy.

Q. Do you recall whether you reported back the results of any investigation you made, to Mr. Lenci? A. I can't recall. I don't know.

Q. I want now to show you what has been marked for Identification as Government's Exhibit 597, which is a letter dated June 20, 1938, purported to be signed by Mr. McCormack, addressed to Mr. Stremble.

(Government's Exhibit No. 597 for Identification was handed to the witness.)

The Witness: That is my letter.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. You say that that is your letter? A. Yes.

5503 Mr. Steffen: I now offer in evidence Government's Exhibit No. 597.

Mr. Bromley: We object on the ground that it is immaterial and incompetent because not binding on any of the defendants, since it is admittedly not a declaration of a co-conspirator.

Mr. Steffen: We offer it not as a declaration of a co-conspirator, obviously, but simply as having a bearing upon the actual state of mind of Mr. McCormack and the Structural Gypsum Company as of this time, and as giving an indication of the probable basis upon which they acted in dealing with Mr. Stremble following Mr. Lenci's telephone conversation.

Justice Stephens: In other words, you are offering it in the same manner that you offered the statements of Mr. McCormack to Mr. Lenci?

Mr. Steffen: No, your Honor, those would come in as admissions on the part of Mr. Lenci.

Justice Stephens: What has the state of mind of this witness, and his relationship with Stremble, got to do with the issues in this case?

Mr. Steffen: The charge in the case, your Honor, applying here, is that the gypsum manufacturers have influenced, in one way or another, the prices and the terms and conditions upon which manufacturing distributors have resold board, and we have testimony now to the 5504 effect that Mr. Lenci had talked with Mr. McCormack in regard to Stremble, and this letter indicates the understanding which Mr. McCormack apparently had of that matter on June 20, 1938. Now that understanding is important, as the state of mind or understanding of the manufacturing distributor in question on the date or at the time when Mr. Lenci raised this point. It is an indication that one of the reasons why Mr. McCormack acted in firing Mr. Stremble was that he felt that there was some obligation under the license agreement, or under Mr. Lenci's statement concerning the license agreement, that he should not engage commission salesmen, particularly where they split commissions.

Justice Stephens: Is this one of the companies which is described in the bill of particulars as a manufacturing distributor whose resale prices were fixed?

Mr. Steffen: Yes, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: And do you contend that splitting commissions was a method of resale price fixing?

Mr. Steffen: Well, it is Mr. Bromley's argument, certainly, that if commissions are split, it does effect a decrease in the price to the dealer, and that therefore it constitutes, in effect, a rebate, and they would thereby have failed to maintain prices. The connection, I think, is fairly close.

Mr. Johnston: If the Court please, on behalf of Texas, as to this, I just can't see where there is any pos-5505 sible relevancy or materiality or where we would be bound in any way by a letter between two parties who are entire strangers to this law suit.

Justice Stephens: Well, as I understand it, it is offered as a circumstance showing the state of mind of the Structural Gypsum Division in respect to the resale prices of Structural as a manufacturing distributor, it being asserted that that state of mind is produced by the influence of Ebsary.

Of course if this witness were not here, Mr. Johnston, unless this were admissible merely as a circumstance, regardless of its truth, it would come within the hearsay rule; but the witness is here, subject to cross examination, and under oath, and you are not harmed, therefore, by the absence of cross examination.

The question would seem to be more as to its relevance. Let me hear you, Mr. Bromley, again, as to why you think it is not relevant under the charge of resale price fixing?

Mr. Bromley: First, I take it that Mr. Steffen admits it is not relevant on the ground that it is a declaration of a co-conspirator. That brings us to the theory that it is relevant—as I understand him—on the state of mind of this witness. Now I suppose that is under the verbal act rule of evidence, if it is under anything.

But I am not sure what his state of mind has to do with it. Again counsel for the Government seeks to come 5506 in the back door. Why doesn't he ask him whether he had an understanding or agreement with Ebsary about resale prices or practices? I don't believe that this sort of charge can be proved in this sort of way by trying to show the state of mind that Mr. McCormack had with one of his salesmen.

Justice Stephens: Why wouldn't state of mind be one of the circumstances tending to show the effectiveness of the asserted agreement, or showing, perhaps, its existence? If he acts verbally in a manner which he would act in if he had an agreement, why isn't that, while perhaps not entitled to great weight, a circumstance tending to prove an agreement with respect to resale price fixing?

Mr. Bromley: I think it probably is, and I think the Court has admitted other evidence of that type on that theory. I can't distinguish it.

Justice Stephens: It may be received in evidence; and the objection is overruled.

(Government's Exhibit No. 597 was received in evidence)

Mr. Bromley: May it be understood that this is received subject to the usual reservation?

Justice Stephens: It is not being received as the declaration of a co-conspirator.

Mr. Bromley: That query of mine raises this question in my mind. I suppose I should have asked the 5507 Court to rule with respect to all the testimony given so far by this witness, with relation to his dealings with Kelley and Ebsary, that it all should be received subject to the usual reservation.

Justice Stephens: So far as this witness has testified concerning conversations with Lenci or Kelley, it should be received subject to the usual reservation with respect to declarations of alleged co-conspirators.

Mr. Bromley: May that be understood as to future testimony, or rather as to the future so far as other conversations of a like nature are concerned?

Justice Stephens: The record may so show.

We have reached an appropriate point, I think, for the afternoon recess.

Announce the recess.

(Whereupon, a five minute recess was taken, after which the trial was resumed as follows:)

5508 Justice Stephens: Proceed.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. I now show you what has been marked, Mr. McCormack, as Government's Exhibit 598, which purports to be a price list, dated September 14, 1936.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 598 for identification.)

(Government's Exhibit No. 598 for identification was handed to the witness.)

Justice Stephens: That skips the letter of March 7, does it?

Mr. Steffen: Yes, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: That is a two-page letter, the present exhibit?

Mr. Steffen: No, just one page, your Honor, dated September 14, 1936.

Justice Stephens: Oh, yes.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Did you make up price lists, Mr. McCormack, for your salesmen? A. At various times, yes.

Q. And from what information did you make up your price lists for board and lath? A. I would be guided 5509 by the price lists furnished to me by my suppliers.

Q. And can you identify Government's Exhibit No. 598? A. It looks like our price list.

Q. Could you say how that was made up? A. I would assume it was made on the basis of prices furnished by one of our suppliers, Kelley, or Ebsary, or whoever we were buying from.

Q. Who was supplying you as of this time, do you remember—1936? A. Kelley, I would think.

Q. Then can you say whether or not it was made up from Kelley's price lists? A. It is quite possible, yes.

Q. Would you say that that is your best recollection? A. That would be my best recollection.

Mr. Steffen: I offer Government's Exhibit 598, your Honor.

Mr. Bromley: We make the usual objection, and also we make the additional objection that it is immaterial and incompetent because not binding on the defendants.

Justice Stephens: I am a little puzzled as to why you make the usual objection. This isn't being offered as a declaration of a co-conspirator, is it?

Mr. Steffen: No, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: It is offered only to show ac-
5510 tion, or alleged action, following upon the asserted direction of Kelley, is it not?

Mr. Steffen: That is right, your Honor, and it should be admissible, I think, upon the same grounds as Exhibit 597 was admissible.

Justice Stephens: Well, of course it may be connected with Kelley. To the extent that if connected by other evidence it may be in the nature of a declaration of Kelley, it is received subject to the usual reservation with respect to declarations of alleged co-conspirators; and the objections as to its materiality and relevancy are overruled.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. And now, Mr. McCormack, I want to direct your attention to the fact that you were buying, according to your testimony, in 1937 and 1938, you were buying board from three companies, Ebsary, USG and Kelley—is that correct? A. That is correct.

Q. And did you sell in the same territories that they did? A. Yes. Our territory embraced areas in which they also sold.

Q. And did you understand that they were all 5511 three, or rather Kelley and Ebsary, under a license agreement?

Mr. Bromley: I object to his understanding as immaterial and incompetent.

Justice Stephens: Sustained.

Mr. Steffen: I will withdraw the question.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. What, if any, obligation, Mr. McCormack, did you feel that you were under to sell board procured from Kelley at this time, at Kelley's prices? A. I wouldn't say it was an obligation; it was good business sense to go along with those prices.

Q. Why? A. If we undersold our source of supply, and continuously did it, I don't believe we would have a source of supply very long.

Q. And what was your practice, did you undersell your source of supply?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that on the ground that the prices that he charged are the best evidence.

Mr. Steffen: I asked, if I might say, for his practice, not for the actual proof of any particular transaction, and I think he may answer as respects his practice. I have some invoices, which I will also show.

Mr. Bromley: I think he may be permitted to answer with respect to his policy, which he already has answered.

5512 Justice Stephens: I think that is proper, and I thought he had answered that. As to what he did sell at, that must be answered by the actual prices, if they are available, or his memory of them, if they are not, and I assume that you have the price lists available.

If there is any doubt in the record as to what their practice was with respect to underselling, you may repeat that question. I thought the record showed that Mr. McCormack testified in effect that they didn't have the practice of underselling their suppliers. But you may ask that question.

Mr. Bromley: Does your Honor mean "practice", or "policy"?

Justice Stephens: Policy. I was using the words interchangeably.

Mr. Steffen: I think that the policy is sufficiently established, and I have no wish to go into a large volume of invoices to disclose what actual prices were obtained.

Justice Stephens: And we don't wish to have them in the record if it is escapable. At the same time I think that if defendants feel, in order to protect their rights, that they must have an actual evidential showing under the rules as to what the prices were, so that the Court can tell whether there was a following of the Kelley prices or not, that that objection urging the best evidence rule is well taken.

Mr. Bromley: Counsel for the Government well knows that it developed at the criminal trial that these in-5513 voices will show that the prices were not the same, and that there was a very great dispute about it. It turned out that the prices varied very greatly on account of credit memoranda.

Justice Stephens: Then we will have to go into that.

Mr. Steffen: I don't think I need anything further at this point, your Honor. We have no further questions.

Justice Stephens: You are not offering the April 18th letter?

Mr. Steffen: No, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: You may cross-examine.

Cross-Examination

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. Mr. McCormack, the Structural Company had no license agreement with USG, did it? A. No sir, we did not.

Q. You knew that at all times during the period that you were connected with the company, didn't you? A. I did.

Q. And you knew that your company was not bound by any minimum prices on patented gypsum board, fixed by USG? A. We never accepted that we were.

Q. Well, you knew as a matter of contract that you had no contract with USG whatsoever, isn't that right? A. We had no contractual obligations.

Q. Now isn't it likewise the fact that you had no
5514 understanding or arrangement or agreement with Kelley as to what your resale prices would be? A. I couldn't honestly testify that we had any arrangement with any of our suppliers.

Q. You mean by that that you had no arrangement with Ebsary or with USG or with Kelley with respect to your resale prices, don't you? A. No sir.

Q. You had none, is that right? A. We had none.

Q. You have told the Court that your policy, as I understood you, was to resell the board at as near your suppliers' prices as you were able to, is that right? A. That was our policy.

Q. Now will you tell the Court the reason for that policy? A. I have already explained that it was just business prudence. We couldn't undersell our sources of supply, and expect them to continue furnishing us board with which to undersell them. That is just common horse-sense.

Q. And as you said, your main business was the manufacture and sale of plaster, wasn't it? A. That is right.

Q. And the only reason you sold this board at all was to implement or aid your plaster sales, is that cor-5515 rect? A. I have already testified to that.

Q. Now did you arrive at that policy, of which you have just spoken, independently of any arrangement with anybody else and because you thought it was the best thing to do for your company? A. It was a company policy, it was evolved within the company, as a company policy.

Q. You realized, did you not, that when Kelley, Ebsary or USG sold you board at a discount, that that was more or less of an accommodation or favor to you? A. I would think it would be a sales incentive.

Q. A sales incentive? A. I would think so.

Q. Well, it was an accommodation to you? A. It was an accommodation, yes. We needed the board to round out our sales to the dealers.

Q. And isn't it the fact that at no time was the discount which you received sufficiently great to enable your company to make any substantial profit out of the board business? A. Well, I don't believe we ever made any great profit. I don't know that there was ever any cost study made to determine that definitely.

Q. But isn't it the fact that you weren't in the business of buying and reselling board because of the profit 5516 involved in it? A. No, I wouldn't say that.

Q. What do you mean by that, that you did make some money? A. We evidently made a small profit. As I indicated, how much I don't know. It wasn't much. With what the discounts were, it wasn't enough to get rich on.

Q. And as a matter of fact the margin of gross profit which the discount allowed you was pretty generally used up in selling expense and handling and warehousing, wasn't it? A. A good part of it would have to be charged off that way.

Q. Now you were in direct competition at all times, so far as the sale of board was concerned, with each one of the suppliers from whom you bought board, weren't you? A. That is right.

Q. You solicited their trade, their customer trade, and they solicited yours? A. It was open competition, we were all entitled to sell or approach any dealer we had a mind to.

Q. And what would you say about the nature of the competition, was it vigorous, or wasn't it? A. I would say it was most vigorous.

Q. And that goes for the entire period that you were connected with the company, wouldn't you say? A.
5517 Most assuredly.

Q. Now you knew generally, did you not, that all of your suppliers were licensees of USG, so far as patented board was concerned? A. I think that was general information within the industry.

Q. And you knew, of course, that USG was the licensor, didn't you? A. I did.

Q. Wasn't one of the reasons for trying to get as much as you could for your board, the fact that your margin of profit was small? A. That may have been a contributing reason.

Q. Well, you wanted to get as much for your board as you could get, didn't you? A. Yes, naturally.

Q. You couldn't have sold it at any higher price than was being charged by USG or Ebsary or Kelley, could you? A. No, we couldn't get a premium for it, no, certainly not for the same brand of board.

Q. By the way, was this board which you purchased and resold, marked with your trademark or the trademark of your supplier? A. It was always sold on the supplier's trade mark.

Q. That is true for USG and Ebsary and Kelley—
5518 it was their board? A. That is true.

Q. So that as to board that you sold, which was found in the dealer's hands, anybody who was interested in it wouldn't be able to tell whether that board was sold to the dealer by you or by USG, so far as Sheetrock and Rocklath were concerned, is that right? A. I would say that that is correct.

Q. And that same answer is true so far as the Ebsary board is concerned? A. That is right.

Q. And likewise that would be true of the Kelley board? A. That is right.

Q. In other words, once that board came into the possession of the dealer, nobody else could tell whether the dealer had bought the board from you or from Kelley, for instance? A. That is right.

Q. Wasn't one of the reasons that your policy was to sell as nearly as you could at the same prices as your suppliers charged, because there was so little money in the business anyway that you wanted to get as much as you could? A. Naturally we sought to make a profit.

Q. And was that the reason why, as a matter of policy, you determined to charge the same prices, if you could get them, as your suppliers were charging for this pat-5519 ented board? A. Naturally.

Q. And is that another reason why you did not, consistently, as a matter of policy, attempt to undersell your supplier? A. I would say that was one of our definite reasons.

Q. And is it true that quite apart from any license agreement, you would at that time have regarded it as bad business for any distributor to cut the prices of that distributor's supplier? A. I would only want to answer for myself. I wouldn't attempt to cover the other fellows.

Q. I didn't mean to ask you about the other fellows. I just was talking about you. Wouldn't you say generally, without regard to any license agreement, that it would have been poor policy for you to cut the prices at which your supplier of any goods was selling those goods on the open market? A. Without question.

Q. Now it is the fact that you knew at all times that you were not bound to charge any particular price for board, or to follow any particular terms of sale on board—that is the fact, isn't it? A. We never felt that we were under any definite obligation, no.

Q. And what is the fact about jobbers, for instance—didn't Structural at all times sell to jobbers at a dis-
5520 count throughout this period? A. Whether during the entire period or not, it would be difficult to say. For a good part of the period, yes.

Q. And isn't it the fact likewise that throughout this entire period the Structural Company had many salesmen who were compensated on commission? A. Yes, there were.

Q. You never changed that practice or got rid of those salesmen, did you? A. No.

Q. Again, isn't it likewise the fact that throughout this entire period of time, for instance, Structural permitted dealers to pick up small quantities of board at the Structural Company's mill? A. Yes, they did.

Q. And those quantities that you permitted thus to be picked up were smaller quantities than Kelley was permitted to have picked up under the terms of his license, or at least as a matter of his practice, isn't that right? A. That may possibly be so.

Q. Well, you would sell a dealer any quantity, to be picked up at your mill, wouldn't you? A. If he came to our mill to get a truckload of plaster, and wanted a thousand or two thousand or three thousand feet of board, we felt we ought to give it to him, as a matter of ac-5521 commodation.

Q. And you did give it to him? A. We did, yes.

Q. And that was throughout the period? A. I would think so.

Q. Now, were you ever threatened by anyone at any time that USG's consent to Ebsary or Kelley to sell you would be withdrawn? A. I can't recall any such threat, no.

Q. Were you ever told that any conditions had been attached by USG to any consent which it had granted Ebsary or Kelley to sell you at a discount? A. Frankly, I didn't know until quite late in this picture that we ever were selling under a consent.

Q. Did you ever have anything to do with the Board Survey Company? A. No sir.

Q. Did you ever, before today—or perhaps I should say before the criminal trial—see either Exhibit 594, Exhibit 595, Exhibit 596, or Exhibit 596-A?

Justice Stephens: Let the witness see those exhibits, unless they are before him, so that he will be sure what he is answering.

(Government's Exhibits Nos. 594, 595, 596, and 596-A were handed to the witness.)

5522 The Witness: What were the numbers of those?

Mr. Bromley: 594, 595, 596, and 596-A.

The Witness: I don't know that I ever saw them at the criminal trial.

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. Then is it the fact that today is the first time you have ever seen those documents? A. I would say yes.

Q. Did you ever at any time receive any communication in writing from the Board Survey Company? A. No sir, I did not.

Q. Did you ever at any time receive any communication or complaint about what you were doing in the market, or selling in the market, from anybody representing the Board Survey Company? A. No sir, I did not.

Q. Did any representative of the Board Survey Company or USG ever call upon you and complain about your resale prices or your resale practices? A. No sir.

Q. Now, Stremble was a commission salesman in the employ of Structural, wasn't he? A That is right.

Q. And he was discharged, not once by you, but 5523 twice, wasn't he? A. That is correct, yes.

Q. And isn't it a fact that he was discharged, not because he was a commission salesman, but because you felt that you could not control his practice of rebating a part of his commission to your customers? A. Well, we had satisfied ourselves pretty well on that point. In fact, when we rehired Stremble the second time, he was really on probation, and when we found he was again cutting commissions, we fired him again.

Q. Now, was Stremble fired because of anything that was brought to your attention by any of your other salesmen in your organization? A. Yes, we had—

Q. (Interposing) What was that? A. Stremble was selling in an area where we had a regular, established salesman, a salaried salesman who had been with us for a number of years.

Q. A salaried salesman? A. That is right.

Q. Not on commission at all? A. That is right.

Q. What was his name? A. Horne.

Q. Did he complain to you about Stremble's activities? A. Yes, he complained several times.

5524 Q. What did he say? A. The same thing as Kelley and Lenci had said, that he had been cutting commissions.

Q. What was the reason that he was complaining? A. Stremble was stepping on his toes. He had inadvertently gone into a couple of Horne's dealers and made an offer to them. Horne, naturally, felt that he was being placed at a disadvantage, and he came to me to complain.

Q. Well now, when you say that Stremble went into a couple of Horne's dealers, you mean a couple of dealers that were customers of the Structural Gypsum Company, but who were regularly sold by Structural through its salesman Horne, don't you? A. That is right.

Q. Now it is a fact, isn't it, that Horne was not in a position to split commissions, because he didn't receive commissions? A. He didn't receive commissions.

Q. Therefore, he was not in a position to split commissions, was he? A. He couldn't.

Q. He got the same amount of salary no matter how much business he produced? A. That is right, he was a salaried salesman.

5525 Q. Now Stremble went, on one or more occasions, to one of these customer friends of Horne and got the order from that particular dealer, isn't that right? A. I don't know whether he ever got the order, but Horne claimed he made the offer.

Q. He made the offer? A. Yes.

Q. And if he had gotten the order, that is if Stremble had gotten the order, Stremble would have been paid a commission on that order, wouldn't he? A. Oh yes.

Q. And he would have gotten the credit for getting that business, rather than Horne? A. We couldn't do otherwise.

Q. Isn't that what Horne was complaining about? A. Well, we ourselves wouldn't care to sell through a commission man where we were already getting the business from a salaried salesman. That would be sort of cutting our own throat.

Q. Wasn't that the reason that you first fired Stremble and then put him on probation when you took him back? A. It may have been a contributing factor.

Q. And wasn't that the reason that you finally fired him the second time? A. It was one of the contributing factors, yes.

Q. You testified that prior to the time that 5526 Stremble was fired the first time, you had a talk with Mr. Kelley, didn't you? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Now in that conversation, Kelley didn't make any mention either of USG or Board Survey, did he? A. No, he did not.

Q. Nor did Mr. Kelley mention anything about any license agreement, did he? A. No sir, he did not.

Q. Stremble's activities in splitting commissions and getting business thereby, might have resulted in taking business away from the Kelley Company, might it not? A. It was quite possible, yes.

Q. And isn't it the fact that all Mr. Kelley did was tell you that he had heard that one of your men was splitting commissions, and asked you to investigate the matter? A. Kelley indicated to me that Stremble had gone to a couple of his customers—

Q. (Interposing) A couple of Kelley's customers? A. A couple of Kelley's customers—and it is my recollection that it was on that basis that he telephoned me, that Stremble was hurting Kelley.

Q. And isn't it the fact that all you did was call Stremble in and ask him what he was doing? A. Yes.

5527 Q. Now you did not take Stremble off selling board, did you? A. No, I eventually took him off selling everything.

Q. At that time, I mean, when you called him in after Mr. Kelley had talked to you, you didn't restrict his sales—A. (Interposing) Not immediately, no.

Q. And you made no report back to Mr. Kelley whatsoever, did you? A. Not that I recall.

Q. Isn't it the fact that you let the matter drop after your talk with Kelley because Stremble had told you that he was not rebating? A. There would be no advantage to me in resurrecting it and keeping it hot.

Q. So you let it drop, didn't you? A. I think that that is what developed.

Q. Wasn't it some time later, after your salesman Horne had complained about Stremble splitting commissions, that you called Stremble in again and decided to fire him? A. May I have that question repeated?

Mr. Bromley: Will you read it, Mr. Reporter?

(The reporter read the question as above recorded.)

The Witness: I wouldn't know definitely, I can't answer that question. I don't recall definitely. I wouldn't want to hazard a guess.

5528 Q. Don't you recall that there was quite a period of time between your talk with Kelley and your actual firing of Stremble? A. There may have been, but I can't place definitely what it was.

Q. Well, wasn't the most important reason for your first discharge of Stremble, not what Mr. Kelley had said in his conversation to you, but what your salesman Horne had said by way of complaining against Stremble? A. Well, they both might be contributing factors to the conclusion I reached. Stremble's practices were contrary to our sales policy. We didn't condone that, and we just concluded it would be better to get him out of the picture.

Q. Now you went right on paying commissions to all of your other salesmen who were working on commissions after you fired Mr. Stremble, didn't you? A. That is correct.

Q. You didn't make any change in your commission set-up other than as respects Stremble, did you? A. No sir, that was the only one.

Q. After the lapse of a year or two subsequent to 1936—

Mr. Steffen: (Interposing) Excuse me, Mr. Bromley. Those questions with regard to commissions applied to board or plaster?

By Mr. Bromley:

5529 Q. You understood that my questions were addressed to your salesmen who were selling board on commission? A. I assumed as much.

Q. That is the fact, isn't it? A. They were selling all of our products, all on a commission basis.

Q. Including board? A. Including board.

Q. And that practice you never changed? A. We never changed it.

Q. Now a year or two after 1936, and after you had fired Stremble, you re-hired him, didn't you? A. That is right.

Q. And he went to work for you on a commission basis again? A. That is right.

Q. And then it was that you heard from Mr. Lenci? A. That is right.

Q. Now didn't Mr. Lenci merely tell you that he had heard that Stremble was approaching some Ebsary customers and offering to split his commission with them? A. I can't recall definitely the subject of the conversation. That would be rather difficult to answer.

Q. Well, did he say anything more than that he had heard that Stremble was soliciting Ebsary's cus-5530 tomers and offering to split commissions? A. That was substantially what he said.

Q. He didn't mention anything about any license agreement, did he? A. Oh, no, he did not.

Q. Or any complaint from USG or anybody else about it, did he? A. No, he did not.

Q. And he certainly didn't mention Board Survey, did he? A. No, he did not.

Q. And you thereupon decided that Stremble was up to his old practices again, and determined to fire him again, didn't you? A. Well, he had gotten into difficulties with Horne again too.

Q. Oh, he had? You mean by that that you had had another complaint from Horne before you fired him the second time? A. With Horne; it was a continuous thing. He was a thorn in his side continuously.

Q. Stremble was a thorn in Horne's side continuously? A. Yes.

Q. That is what Horne thought Stremble was; is that right? A. That is right.

5531 Q. And that is what Horne told you that he thought Stremble was, isn't it? A. Yes sir.

Q. And wasn't that the principal reason that you fired Stremble the second time? A. Whether it was the principal reason or not, we fired him.

Q. That was a reason? A. It was a reason, yes.

Q. Wasn't it the most important of all the reasons you had? A. Well, it was a pretty good one.

Q. It was a pretty important one, wasn't it? A. I would think so.

Q. Have you got Exhibit No. 597 in front of you? A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. By the way, you knew, did you not, that in 1938 this practice of Stremble of giving rebates by splitting commissions involved the possibility that your company might be held for a violation of the Robinson-Patman Act? A. Yes, there was always that danger.

Q. You knew about the Robinson-Patman Act, didn't you? A. Oh, yes.

Q. And wasn't that another reason why you de-5532 termined to fire Stremble? A. As far as split commissions, yes, that would be a very definite reason.

Q. A violation of the Robinson-Patman Act was a crime, wasn't it?

Mr. Steffen: I don't think that you should ask the witness concerning whether a violation of a law constitutes a crime or constitutes a misdemeanor, or what not. It seems to me that calls for a conclusion and is not appropriate.

Justice Stephens: Well, if he knows, or knew at the time, that it was, or thought it was, it would bear upon the action that he took in discharging Stremble. So it is not bad as a conclusion in the usual sense, Mr. Steffen. The Court of course isn't taking the witness' construction of the statute. The Court is permitting cross-examination testing the reasonableness of and reasons for the witness' action. The objection is overruled.

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. Can you answer that, sir? A. Will you repeat the question?

(The reporter read the question as above recorded.)

The Witness: Yes, I would think so.

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. And didn't that influence you in your decision to get rid of Mr. Stremble? A. It is quite possible.

5533 Q. Now looking at the second paragraph of Exhibit 597, do you see that sentence:

"As you know, all gypsum board is manufactured and sold under license agreement, and we have to adhere rigidly to the terms."

A. Yes sir, I see that.

Q. When you wrote that you knew you had no license agreement, didn't you? A. Oh, yes.

Q. What? A. Yes, I did.

Q. And didn't you write that sentence to Stremble as a sort of an excuse for getting rid of him? A. It might have been as good as any.

Q. Well, that is why you wrote it, isn't it? A. As I indicated before, it was probably as good as any excuse to get rid of him.

Q. You never at any time, Mr. McCormack, received a USG licensee bulletin, did you? A. No sir, I did not.

Q. Wasn't it necessary at all times during your relationships with USG, Ebsary and Kelley, that you know in advance the dealer price for patented board, of your suppliers? A. Yes, it was.

Q. And what was the reason for that? A. We 5534 had to know what it was going to cost us, or what commissions would apply in various areas. There were variable prices applying.

Q. And the price which you paid USG or Ebsary or Kelley was the dealer price of those organizations, on which your discount was figured, isn't that right? A. That is right.

Q. So wasn't a reason why you asked for and received price lists, because you wanted to know what the board would cost you before you made contracts for its resale? A. We had to know what the board was going to cost us.

Q. And wasn't that a very important reason why you got the price lists of your suppliers throughout this period. A. It would be one of the reasons.

Q. Did you ever attend a meeting of the licensees, or the licensees with the licensor, in your life? A. No sir.

Q. And did you ever know of anyone investigating your resale prices, or your resale practices? A. Not to my knowledge, no sir.

Q. Did anyone ever police or attempt to police either your resale prices or practices? A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Did you ever make any attempt to conceal the fact that Structural employed commission salesmen? A.
5535 I don't believe we did, no.

Q. Or that Structural sold to jobbers at a discount? A. I don't recall any effort of concealment.

Q. Or did you ever attempt to conceal the fact that Structural sold in small quantities, whatever the dealers wanted to buy, and permitted them to pick that up at your mill? A. I don't recall any.

Q. Did you ever receive any threats, direct or indirect, that the Structural Gypsum Corporation had to resell its board at the suppliers' prices, or on their terms and conditions? A. I could never honestly testify that any supplier ever made such a demand.

Q. Now will you tell me the difference, briefly, between a masons' supply dealer and a lumber dealer? A. A masons' supply dealer usually is found in the larger cities, selling what they call "hard" materials—cement, plaster, lime, stone aggregate, and sand; as compared with a lumber dealer, who, as the name would imply, sells lumber, window sash, and things that the carpenter uses, as against the masons' supply dealer, who usually sells supplies that the mason uses.

Q. The lumber dealer would handle wallboard, whereas the masons' supply dealer would not, isn't that right? A.
The lumber dealer would handle most of the wall-
5536 board, yes. You might find an isolated instance of a masons' material dealer doing that, but customarily it would be the lumber dealer.

Q. And the masons' supply dealer would handle both lath and plaster? A. That is right.

Justice Stephens: If you have a number of other questions, we will have to take the afternoon recess.

Mr. Bromley: I am through, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: Have you any redirect examination?

Mr. Steffen: Yes, your Honor, we may have as much as ten minutes, unfortunately.

Justice Stephens: Well, that may mean recross-examination. We are sorry to have to ask you to come back tomorrow—I assume you are a very busy businessman—but our work is only about half over. We have to read all this yet tonight, Mr. McCormack, and go over these exhibits, so we will have to ask you to come again tomorrow.

The Witness: All right, sir.

Justice Stephens: Announce the recess.

(Whereupon a recess was taken at 4:00 o'clock p. m. until 10:00 o'clock a.m. of the following day.)

5537 IN THE

DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Civil Action No. 8017

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

Plaintiff,

v.

UNITED STATES GYPSUM COMPANY; NATIONAL GYPSUM COMPANY; CERTAIN-TEED PRODUCTS CORPORATION; THE CELOTEX CORPORATION; EBSARY GYPSUM COMPANY, INC.; NEWARK PLASTER COMPANY; SAMUEL M. GLOYD, doing business under the name of TEXAS CEMENT PLASTER COMPANY; SEWELL L. AVERY; OLIVER M. KNODE; MELVIN H. BAKER; BROR H. DAHLBERG; HENRY J. HARTLEY; FREDERICK G. EBSARY; and FREDERICK TOMKINS,

Defendants.

Seventh Floor,
Internal Revenue Building,
Washington, D. C.,
Tuesday, March 28, 1944.

The above-entitled cause came on for further hearing at 10:00 o'clock a. m., pursuant to adjournment, before Honorable Harold M. Stephens, Honorable Finis J. Garrett, and Honorable Joseph R. Jackson, sitting as the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

APPEARANCES:

(Same as heretofore noted.)

5544 Thereupon, HARRY G. MCCORMACK the witness on the stand at the time of adjournment, resumed his testimony as follows:

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. I have only three or four questions, Mr. McCormack. Yesterday, Mr. Bromley, at page 5807 in the record, asked you some questions concerning the competi-
5545 tion with your suppliers, and I think you testified that you solicited the same trade as your suppliers of board did, which would be Ebsary and United States Gypsum Company and the Kelley Plasterboard Company, and that there was open competition between you and your suppliers; also, that the competition was very vigorous. Do you remember that? A. Yes, I do.

Q. Do you differentiate in your answers, Mr. McCormack, between price competition and any other kind of competition? A. Well, that would be sales competition.

Q. And by "competition", what did you mean—that there was price cutting, or was it sales competition? A. Well, I am not aware of any price cutting. It was more the direct sales effort, the number of salesmen who were competing with our salesmen, and just general competition.

Q. But did you mean to say that the prices of board varied? A. I don't believe so.

Q. Would that be true of plaster? A. Yes, it would be.

Q. Plaster prices were stable? A. I think so.

Q. At this time? A. (No response.)

5546 Q. Now at transcript page 5810, Mr. Bromley asked whether or not your company employed jobbers, do you remember that? A. I believe so.

Q. And your testimony was that you had jobbers more or less through all this period? A. We did.

Q. Did those jobbers sell both board and plaster? A. They did.

Q. And there has been testimony here to the effect that the margin of profit was very low, under a 12-1/2 or 15 percent discount, and that it wouldn't admit of having jobbers. What do you say as to that? A. Well, in our jobbing arrangement, we split our commission with the jobber.

Q. And what territories did the jobbers serve, immediately around your plant at Linden—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) When you use the word "commission" in that instance, you mean discount, do you?

The Witness: Yes.

The one that comes to mind is the Union Materials Company of Baltimore.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. And did they job both plaster and board for you? A. Yes, they did.

5547 Q. And did you split your commission or discount with them, in jobbing board? A. On board, we did, yes.

Q. Now there was a question concerning bulletins, and you testified that you received price lists from Kelley? A. Yes.

Q. And that in the years 1936, 1937 and 1938, or thereabouts, you bought board from the United States Gypsum Company, do you remember that? A. That is right.

Q. Did the United States Gypsum Company supply you with price bulletins? A. Not that I recall.

Q. And in selling their board, at what prices would you sell?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that. I think the invoices are the best evidence as to what the prices were.

Justice Stephens: Objection sustained.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. What was your policy in selling their board, as respects prices? A. We knew the prices that applied—in fact, we had Kelley's price lists. We would just use those as a guide.

Q. Now, coming to this Stremble matter, you will remember that in your direct testimony you testified 5548 that on the second occasion when Mr. Stremble was in trouble, you had a conversation with Mr. Lenci.
A. Yes.

Q. And you testified that either at the time of that conversation, or at some other time—and you weren't sure about that—Mr. Lenci had told you he was operating under restrictions under the license agreement. That appears on page 5792 of your testimony. Do you remember that? A. I think—

Mr. Bromley: (Interposing) Just a moment—

Mr. Steffen: (Interposing) May I show the witness his testimony on this point?

Justice Stephens: Yes.

Mr. Steffen: Read from page 5792 over to page 5793.

(Transcript handed to the witness.)

Mr. Bromley: May his attention, if the Court pleases, be called to his cross-examination at page 5820, line 24, to page 5821, line 6?

Mr. Steffen: Your Honor, what I was wanting to do was to do just what Mr. Bromley suggested, to compare those two bits of testimony, because there is an apparent inconsistency.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Will you, then, Mr. McCormack, now look at your testimony on page 5820, at which point Mr. Bromley asked you some questions concerning what Mr. Lenci said?
5549 A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you read your testimony, Mr. McCormack? A. Yes.

Q. You said, on page 5820, in answer to Mr. Bromley's question, that Mr. Lenci made no mention of operating under a license agreement, and in your earlier testimony you stated that he did at some time. Can you clear that up?

Justice Stephens: You had better say, to make the record clear, "at pages 5820 and 5821".

Mr. Steffen: Yes, particularly at page 5821.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. And in your testimony at page 5792, on your direct testimony, you testified that Mr. Lenci said to you, either at this time or some other time, that he was operating under restrictions under the license agreement, as respects commission salesmen. A. At some time he did.

Q. Can you testify as to whether it was at this time, or when? A. I wouldn't know.

Q. Can you be sure of your answer, then, to Mr. Bromley on page 5821, in which you said that he made no mention of the license agreement? A. That is most difficult to answer. Frankly, I don't know.

5550 Q. And when you say that, you mean you don't know whether he said it at this time or at some other time? A. Yes; frankly, I don't know.

Q. Then you would like to modify your answer on page 5821 to say that you were not sure whether he did or didn't say anything at that time—is that correct—about the license? A. I think that that would be a fair answer.

Mr. Steffen: That is all, Your Honor.

Justice Stephens: Any re-cross?

Recross Examination

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. In your testimony about plaster prices, Mr. McCormack, you didn't mean to say that plaster prices didn't change from time to time during this period, did you? A. What period do you refer to, Mr. Bromley?

Q. Well, I understood you were referring to the whole period that you were with the Structural Company. A. Oh, plaster prices changed considerably during the entire period. I thought you had reference to some particular period.

Mr. Steffen: I thought the reference was to the years 1936, 1937 and 1938, in my question.

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. How did you understand Mr. Steffen's ques-
5551 tion,—to be limited to 1936, 1937 and 1938, or to apply to the whole period that you were with the Structural Company, so far as plaster prices were concerned? A. I assumed that he was referring to Stremble, and so far as I know, without referring to the record, I imagine our prices were the same. During the entire period that we sold plaster, there were many, many price changes.

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. And there were many price changes in plaster prices during the years 1936, 1937 and 1938, weren't there? A.

Possibly so. Without referring to the record, I can't say definitely. I wouldn't be surprised if there were.

Q. And when you say "possibly so", you mean your best recollection is that the price of plaster did change during the years 1936, 1937 and 1938, don't you? A. I wouldn't know definitely without referring to the record, but if you say they did, I will accept that statement that they did.

Q. Isn't your best recollection, Mr. McCormack, that they did change during the three years mentioned, 1936, 1937 and 1938? A. I wouldn't be surprised if they did.

Q. You mean by that answer that your best memory is that they did change, don't you? A. To be sure, I would have to refer to the records.

5552 Q. So you don't remember as to whether they changed in the years 1936, 1937 and 1938; is that right? A. I honestly don't.

Q. Now, in one of your answers to a question by Mr. Steffen this morning, in connection with whether you received USG price lists, you said that you had Kelley's price lists, and you therefore knew the prices that applied.

Now you didn't mean, in your use of the word "applied", to suggest that the Structural Company had any obligation or arrangement or understanding to follow either the USG or the Kelley or the Ebsary prices in its resales, did you? A. We had no obligation, no.

Q. By the way, on page 5810, in line 18, I asked you this question:

"Q. Now it is the fact that you knew at all times that you were not bound to charge any particular price for board, or to follow any particular terms of sale on board—that is the fact, isn't it?"

And you said:

"A. We never felt that we were under any definite obligation, no."

Now when you used the word "definite", you didn't mean to qualify your answer, did you? A. No, I don't believe so.

5553 You must remember that we were dependent upon others to supply us with board, and just as good business practice we felt it incumbent upon ourselves to get as good a price as they got. As I told Mr. Steffen yesterday, we couldn't undersell our source of supply and expect them to continue furnishing us with board, that was just common business sense.

Q. So that, when you said "We never felt that we were under any definite obligation", all you meant was that you had no obligation of any kind, isn't that right? A. I never felt we had.

Q. Nor did you have any agreement or understanding of any kind, with respect to your resale prices or practices—isn't that right? A. That is correct.

Q. And when you said, Mr. McCormack, yesterday—and I think again today—that you could not honestly testify that you had any obligation to follow your suppliers' prices, you didn't mean to qualify your answer, or your statement, that you had no obligation of any kind, did you? A. No, we had no obligation.

Q. And when you used the word "honestly", that was just your method of saying that you had no obligation or agreement or arrangement or understanding of any kind; isn't that right? A. I would say that that is correct, yes.

Q. And you have no reservation in that answer 5554 whatsoever, have you? A. No, I have not.

Q. Now, at page 5804, in your cross-examination, I asked you this question:

"Q. And you knew that your company was not bound by any minimum prices on patented gypsum board, fixed by USG?"

And you answered:

"A. We never accepted that we were."

Then I said:

"Q. Well, you knew as a matter of contract that you had no contract with USG whatsoever, isn't that right?".

And you said:

"A. We had no contractual obligations."

Now, you meant by those answers that you had no obligations, arrangements or understandings of any kind, with respect to what prices you should charge on your resales of patented board; isn't that so? A. That is correct.

Q. Then at page 5812, at line 10, Mr. McCormack, I asked you a question which I think you did not answer, as follows:

"Q. Were you ever told that any conditions had been attached by USG to any consent which it had granted Ebsary or Kelley to sell you at a discount?"

And you said:

5555 "A. Frankly, I didn't know until quite late in this picture that we ever were selling under a consent."

Mr. Steffen: I think, Your Honor, that this, at least, goes beyond the scope of proper re-cross-examination. I don't recall anything that prompts such a question, at this time. I think several of the questions that have already been asked have gone too far.

Justice Stephens: Well, I think that that is strictly true; but at the same time, I noticed in reading the record that that question was left unanswered. I think the Court would like to have an answer to it.

Mr. Steffen: Is that to be considered as cross-examination and not re-cross?

Justice Stephens: Yes, as cross-examination and not re-cross.

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. Now, will you direct your attention to the question beginning at line 10:

"Q. Were you ever told that any conditions had been attached by USG to any consent which it had granted Ebsary or Kelley to sell you at a discount?"

Will you answer that question, please? A. Well I attempted to answer it, beginning in line 13. I learned of the consent eventually—whether it was at the last trial or just when, I don't know—but frankly, I didn't know that 5556 they were selling us under a consent.

Q. Yes, sir.

Now at any time, even after you learned about the consent, you were never told that there were any conditions attached to that consent by USG, were you?

Mr. Steffen: Your Honor, I think the question has now been answered, and this goes on into a subject which is certainly not proper re-cross, and is wasting time.

Mr. Bromley: Well, it may be, but I still haven't got an answer out of the witness, and I would like to have him answer the question, if I can get him to.

Justice Stephens: It will be treated as cross-examination. I would like to have a direct answer to the question. I think the witness—who I am sure intends to be entirely frank—perhaps doesn't see at first glance that the answer is only an answer upon implication rather than a direct answer to the question, and I think it is important that we should know about it, if he is willing to answer it directly.

The Witness: All I can say is that if I didn't know there was a consent, I wouldn't know what obligations were imposed.

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. Then you never had any information, at any time, Mr. McCormack, that any conditions to the consent had been imposed by USG on anybody; isn't that the fact? A.

5557 I didn't know it until it came up either at the last trial or in the grand jury proceedings.

Q. Well, now, you say you "didn't know it". When you say that, you mean you didn't know that there was such a thing as a consent—isn't that what you mean? A. That is right.

Q. I am asking you to forget all about whether you knew there was a consent or whether you didn't know; and I am merely asking you this simple question; Did anybody, at any time, ever tell you that USG had attached any conditions to any consent which it may have granted any one of its licensees to sell you? A. No, they did not.

Q. Now, sir, will you turn to page 5824, and to the question beginning in line 12. There I asked you:

"Q. And didn't you write that sentence to Stremble as a sort of an excuse for getting rid of him?"

And you said:

"A. It might have been as good as any."

Mr. Steffen: I object, Your Honor, to any questions based upon—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) He hasn't asked a question yet.

Mr. Steffen: I say I am now objecting to any questions based upon that, as going beyond the scope of proper 5558 re-cross examination.

Mr. Bromley: Well, of course, he isn't even sound about that, because he inquired about the Stremble incident on re-direct.

At any rate, I ask leave now to cross-examine on this subject, because I again believe that the record is not clear, and neither one of the two questions, either the one at line 12 or the one at line 15, was answered.

Justice Stephens: The Court would like to have a direct answer on that, and will, in its discretion, permit further cross-examination on that subject, which means that you can conduct re-direct on it yourself, if you wish to, Mr. Steffen.

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. Have you read those two questions and the answers that you gave there between lines 12 and 17, Mr. McCormack? A. Yes, I have.

Q. And you know what the sentence is that we are talking about, don't you? A. I think so.

Q. That sentence is quoted up at the top of page 5824, beginning at line 3 and ending at line 5, isn't it? A. That is right.

Q. Now, didn't you write that sentence to Stremble merely as an excuse or an alibi, and not because it stated the true facts?

5559 Justice Stephens: You may look at the letter itself, if you wish to.

The Witness: I think I am familiar with it, Your Honor, with this statement.

It is rather difficult to recall the mental processes one would go through to arrive at a decision to fire a man. As I indicated, Stremble was sort of a bad boy, and there undoubtedly were a number of reasons at the time, and an accumulation of things, and possibly this is one of the reasons that helped me reach that conclusion.

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. But, Mr. McCormack, look at the sentence, and that part of it quoted at lines 4 and 5 of this page. You didn't have to adhere rigidly to the terms of any license agreement, did you? A. No, we didn't have any license agreement.

Q. And you knew you didn't have to adhere rigidly, or otherwise, to the terms of anybody else's license agreement, didn't you? A. That is correct, because we didn't have one.

Q. All right, sir, I know you didn't have any, but you knew that Structural didn't have to adhere to the terms of anybody else's license agreement, didn't you? A. That is right.

Q. Well, then, when you wrote that you did have to 5560 adhere rigidly to the terms, you were stating something that you knew wasn't so, but you were just using it as an excuse to get rid of Stremble—now isn't that the plain fact, sir? A. Well, it is quite possible, as I indicated to you yesterday, that I did use it as an excuse, because I was under no obligation with our suppliers.

Q. When you say it is quite possible that you did use it as an excuse, you mean that your best recollection is that that is what you did do, don't you? A. I might say yes.

Q. Now, you have told us that you can not say now when it was that Lenci mentioned his license agreement to you. Regardless of the time that he mentioned it to you, what is your best recollection as to what he said about it? A. About the license agreement?

Q. Yes, sir, in connection with the Stremble incident. I will withdraw that question.

What is your best recollection as to what Lenci said to you about his license agreement? A. He said several things to me. If you have in mind about commission men, he told me that under the license agreement his company could not sell through commission salesmen.

Q. Did he say anything more than that? A. I can't recall that he did.

Q. But you don't know when that was, is that 5561 right? A. I can't place it, no.

Mr. Bromley: That is all.

Justice Stephens: Any re-direct?

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. I want to refer, Mr. McCormack, again to your testimony on page 5824 in regard to your letter to Mr. Stremble. You say in the quotation appearing at the top of page 5824 that you had to "adhere rigidly to the terms" of the license agreement. You answered, to Mr. Bromley, that you had no license agreement. Do you recall that? A. That is right.

Q. Is it possible that when you said that you had to adhere rigidly to the terms, that you meant you had to adhere to the prices which Mr. Kelley furnished you? A. We were under no obligation to, Mr. Steffen.

Q. By "obligation", do you mean legal obligation? A. Well, even a moral obligation.

Q. You have testified as to your general policy. A. It was politic for us to observe Kelley's prices simply as a medium for us to continue our source of supply.

Q. And would you say that that policy meant that you had to adhere rather rigidly to Kelley's prices?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as incompetent because calling for a conclusion as to what it meant. He can 5562 ask him what it was, but not what it meant.

Justice Stephens: The objection is overruled. We think that it is a conclusion in a sense, but it is a kind of a conclusion that this business man would be able to draw, or the kind of a word he would be able to use in describing their price policy.

Mr. Steffen: Will you read the question?

(The question was read by the reporter.)

The Witness: As a general thing, we didn't adhere rigidly.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Would that afford any explanation of what you meant in your letter here? A. I don't quite get what you mean.

Q. You have testified, I think, that your policy was to follow Kelley's prices? A. That is right.

Q. And that you felt it was bad business practice to undercut Kelley? A. That is right.

Q. Did you follow that policy rigidly, is what I am suggesting or asking?

Mr. Bromley: I think that calls for a conclusion. I object to it.

Justice Stephens: Read the question. Isn't that 5563 exactly the same question that was asked before?

Mr. Bromley: I think it is, and probably it has been answered. I object to it as repetitious.

Justice Stephens: That objection is sustained.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Well, Mr. McCormack, have you any other explanation of the phrase "adhere rigidly to the terms" of the license agreement, than you have already offered? A. We did not have a license agreement, but it was common knowledge in the industry, and in the trade, and every lumber dealer and every mason materials dealer knew of the existence of the license agreement. All I can say is that that term, or that phrase, was at times bandied around rather recklessly.

Justice Jackson: Can't you say whether or not you meant it or didn't? Why don't you come out directly and say, "I didn't mean this" or "I did mean this", one or the other?

The Witness: Well, I didn't mean it, because we did not have an obligation, Your Honor.

Justice Jackson: Then say so, "I didn't mean it"; or, if you did mean it, say, "I did mean it."

The Witness: I didn't mean it, because we had no obligation.

Justice Stephens: It is an important part of this aspect of the case. If you were bound, or felt that you were 5564 bound, or acted as if you were bound, by some agreement with your suppliers or by some agreement that they had, that is a fact that we ought to know. On the other hand, if, humanly, you were just saving your face with this fellow by using that phrase, in order to get rid of him, we would like to know that.

The Witness: Well, as I look back upon it now, we had a salaried salesman in the territory. This man Stremble was just doing a little sort of extracurricular sales work. Stremble was continuing to sell in that territory because he represented manufacturers other than ourselves, he was selling cement, lime, and sewer pipe. And Horne, who was our regular salesman, would still have to come in contact with Stremble. I couldn't use Horne as a medium or excuse—his complaint, I mean—I couldn't use Horne's complaint to tell Stremble that that was the basis of it. He then might have taken it out on Horne.

As I look back upon it now, that is the way I see it.

Justice Stephens: Very well, I think you have made it clear what your state of mind was.

Is there anything further, gentlemen?

Mr. Steffen: No, Your Honor.

Mr. Bromley: That is all.

Justice Stephens: I forgot to ask whether any other defendants intended any re-cross-examination of this 5565 witness. If they wish, they may have that opportunity now.

(No response.)

Justice Stephens: We will take the morning recess at this time.

May this witness be excused?

Mr. Bromley: Yes, Your Honor.

Mr. Steffen: Yes, Your Honor.

Justice Stephens: Thank you, Mr. McCormack, for attending the court.

The Witness: Thank you for your consideration.

(Witness excused.)

(Thereupon, a short recess was taken, after which the trial was resumed as follows:)

5566 Justice Stephens: The Court will now rule, before taking up the evidence of another witness, upon the motion to strike Government Exhibit No. 324.

Where is Mr. Adams?

Mr. Bromley: Mr. Adams has gone over to the Department of Agriculture. (Laughter).

Justice Stephens: We didn't want to interrupt a witness, but we will have to postpone this now until Mr. Adams returns.

Call the next witness, please.

Mr. Steffen: Mr. Kellogg.

Justice Stephens: How long do you expect this witness' testimony to take?

Mr. Steffen: About ten minutes, or possibly fifteen.

Thereupon, WILLARD H. KELLOGG, JR. appearing as a witness for and on behalf of the United States, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Would you state your name in full, Mr. Kellogg. A. My name is Willard H. Kellogg, Jr.

Q. Where do you live? A. New Haven, Connecticut.

5567 Q. What company are you connected with? A. The Connecticut Adamant Plaster Company.

Q. How long have you been with them? A. Well, the company was organized the year after I was born, and I have grown up in it.

Q. What is your capacity with the company now, what office do you hold? A. Secretary and Treasurer.

Q. What does the company do, Mr. Kellogg, what does it manufacture? A. It manufactures wall plaster.

Q. What type of wall plaster, neat and sanded? A. Neat and sanded and plaster of Paris.

Q. And where does the company get its gypsum rock? A. From Nova Scotia.

Q. Do you own your source of supply? A. Yes sir.

Q. And what process do you have in New Haven, a calcining process? A. Yes sir.

Q. Do you make your plaster and sell it under your own name? A. Yes sir.

Q. Your own trade name? A. Yes sir.

5568 Q. Do you have a source of supply for board? A. Yes sir.

Q. And do you sell board and lath, plasterboard and lath? A. We do.

Q. What is your source of supply for board? A. At the present time?

Q. Yes. A. The United States Gypsum Company.

Q. And for how long have you been buying board from United States Gypsum Company? A. For about ten years.

Q. For about ten years? A. Yes sir.

Q. And your prior source of supply? A. The Ebsary Gypsum Company and the Kelley Plasterboard Company.

Q. Is it necessary or important in your business to have a source of supply for board and lath? A. We think it is.

Q. And would you tell us why? A. A split sale is difficult to make. If somebody else sells the lath, they are apt to sell the plaster with it. We want to sell the plaster.

Q. You would say it is important, then, as re-
5569 spects your sale of plaster, that you also have the ability to sell lath? A. Yes.

Q. Are you familiar with the fact that the board and lath is a so-called patented article? A. I am now.

Q. How long have you been familiar with that? A. Are you referring to licensing?

Q. Well, that would be my next question. A. I heard of that first in the grand jury investigation.

Q. And you didn't know that prior to that time? A. No sir, I did not.

Q. In buying lath and board from United States Gypsum Company, how do you have it delivered? A. Carloads and truckloads.

Q. And it is delivered to your place, or to your dealers? A. Both ways. We carry a stock, which is delivered to our plant; we also have it delivered direct to our dealer-customers.

Q. And do you receive a discount from United States Gypsum Company? A. Yes sir.

Justice Garrett: Will you speak a little louder, please, Mr. Witness?

The Witness: Yes, your Honor.

5570 By Mr. Steffen:

Q. What is that discount? A. In carload lots, into our warehouse, on the lath it is twelve and a half percent, and on big board, long board, it is 15 percent. On truckload lots direct to our dealer-customers, it is 10 per cent.

Q. What price is that discount figured upon? A. The mill-base price at the mill from which the shipment is made.

Q. In selling to your customers, do you require the prices from the United States Gypsum Company? A. Yes, at times, whenever we need them.

Q. Why do you do that? A. In order to know what price to sell at, what the market price is.

Q. And who do you talk with at the United States Gypsum Company? A. Anybody that answers the phone.

Q. Do you know anyone by name? A. You mean over the last period of ten years that we have been doing business there?

Q. Yes. A. It would be a long directory.

Q. Well, let's have whoever you remember. A. Martin Powers was one of the earliest men I talked 5571 to there. There is a man called Barnett there now that I talk to on the phone.

Q. And what were your conversations with them about? A. Do you mean in any particular instance?

Q. Yes. A. Well, if I had an inquiry from a customer in a town in which I had not previously made a sale, I would ask what the delivered price was to a dealer at that point of delivery.

Q. And why would you want to know that? A. To know what I had to pay for it.

Q. And what would your policy be with respect to selling at the prices you obtained from United States Gypsum Company? A. My policy is to sell at those prices.

Q. Now I think you testified that you had a previous source of supply in the Ebsary Gypsum Company, is that correct? A. Yes sir.

Q. And that was back during what time? A. In the early 30's, 1931 or 1932.

Q. Did you ever have a conversation with Mr. Lenci concerning your relations with the Ebsary Gypsum Company? A. I think the business I did was done with Mr. Lenci.

Q. Was he ever at New Haven? A. Oh, yes.

Q. Do you recall a conversation with Mr. Lenci at any time concerning the territory in which you might sell 5572 board? A. When we first bought of the Ebsary Gypsum Company there was no question of territory, we bought merely for delivery at New Haven. Eventually we wanted deliveries to other points in Connecticut. Mr. Lenci explained to me at that time that he had salesmen traveling in Connecticut, and he wanted to limit my purchases to deliveries to New Haven.

Q. And did he mention Bridgeport in connection with that matter? A. That was the particular incident that brought up the point I have just made.

Q. What did he say about Bridgeport? A. That he had salesmen covering that territory who could handle the business there, and he didn't want to sell me at that point.

Q. And did you subsequently—and I think you have already testified that you did—change to United States Gypsum Company as a source of supply? A. Yes sir.

Q. Was that fact one of the reasons why you made the change, Mr. Lenci's conversation with regard to Bridgeport? A. Yes, because we were looking for a source of supply that would ship where we wanted them to ship.

Mr. Steffen: We have no more questions, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: Cross-examination?

5573 Cross-Examination

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. You said that your discount was figured on the mill base price, Mr. Kellogg, is that right? A. That is what I understand it to be, sir.

Q. Now the mill base price is the mill base price charged to dealers, isn't it? A. The only price I know is the dealer price, I know of no other type of price.

Q. So when you talk about the mill base price, that is the same thing as saying the dealer price? A. Yes sir.

Q. And you always wanted to know what the dealer price was, because, as you say, that was what the board cost you? A. Yes sir.

Q. And you meant by that, that the board cost you the dealer price less the applicable discount therefrom, did you not? A. Yes sir.

Q. Now you said you also wanted to know your suppliers' prices, in order to know the price to sell at. Do you recall that? A. Yes sir.

Q. Did you at any time have any understanding or agreement or arrangement with anybody as to the resale 5574 prices which you would charge in your resales for board and lath which you bought? A. No sir.

Q. And you determine this policy of which you speak, independently, without relation to any understanding with anybody whatsoever? A. With anybody, yes sir. It was a policy of a long standing in our company.

Q. And it was not the result of any arrangement or agreement or understanding with anybody, was it? A. With anybody in the gypsum business, no sir.

Q. And you have always been free at all times to sell your products at whatever prices you wanted, have you not? A. Yes sir.

Q. So far as you know, or are aware of, has anybody from USG, or Ebsary, or Kelley, or anybody else, ever investigated or checked up on your resale prices on gypsum board? A. The only knowledge that I have of that was brought to my attention in the grand jury proceedings, where the Board Survey Company was named. It was the first time I had ever heard of it. Nobody from the gypsum companies has ever come to me to investigate any prices.

Q. And nobody from Board Survey ever came to you, as far as you knew, to investigate your prices, did they? A. I never heard of them.

5575 Q. Now, has anybody from the United States Gypsum Company or from any other board manufacturer ever threatened to cease to sell you on account of the prices which you charged or did not charge in your resales of board? A. No sir.

Q. Had you ever heard of the Board Survey Company prior to the grand jury investigation? A. I never had.

Q. And you never received, then, any communications, written or oral, from it, did you? A. No sir.

Q. Did you ever attend a meeting of United States Gypsum Company representatives and representatives of its licensees at any time? A. No sir.

Q. There has been testimony received in this case with relation to the Southbury Lumber Company and the New Haven Reserve Company—do you recall those two companies? A. Yes sir.

Q. Were they customers of yours at some time? A. I think they still are.

Q. And they have been for some time? A. They have been over a good many years.

Q. Now did Mr. Lenci ever come to you and ask you if you had sold to the Southbury Company or the New 5576 Haven Reserve Company at any time? A. No sir.

Q. And did he or anybody else from Ebsary or USG ever ask you or inquire of you as to at what prices you had sold those two customers at any time? A. No sir.

Q. So that I take it your testimony is that nobody at any time from any manufacturing company ever came to you and asked you any questions with respect to your sales, or your sales practices, so far as New Haven Reserve or Southbury Lumber were concerned, is that right? A. That is right.

Q. And now will you give us the reasons why it was the policy of your company to sell, as you have indicated, whenever you were able, at about the prices charged by your supplier of patented board? A. Because we could get as great a price as the supplier, and there was no reason to take less. That was our policy.

Q. Could you get more than the supplier was charging for his board? A. I should doubt it very much.

Q. And is that the reason why your company sold, whenever it was able, at the same prices as were charged 5577 for the board by your suppliers? A. Yes sir.

Q. Was the board which you bought marked with your trademark or the trademark or trade name of the supplier, in each instance? A. With the trade name of the supplier.

Q. You never sold board or lath under your own trade name or trademark, did you? A. No sir.

Q. You always sold it under the trade name or trademark of the supplier from whom you were buying at the time, didn't you? A. That is correct.

Q. Now do you buy products other than gypsum board and lath at a discount from manufacturers? A. Yes sir.

Q. Such as what?

Mr. Steffen: I think that this going beyond the direct examination, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: I am inclined to think it is proper, Mr. Steffen, because you had him generally describe his business. The objection is overruled.

The Witness: Yes sir, we do.

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. And what products do you buy from manufacturers at a discount, other than board and lath?
5578 A. Sewer pipe, flue lining, face brick, lime, insulating wool.

Q. And it is the fact, isn't it, that most of those products you have named are made by companies other than United States Gypsum Company? A. Yes sir.

Q. What is your policy with respect to the prices that you charge in your resales of those materials? A. Just the same as it is with our policy on the sales of board. We follow the market and retain whatever discount we can get as a distributor.

Q. You mean by that answer to say that it is your policy with respect to those materials which you have mentioned, other than board and lath, that you sell them at the same prices which are charged to dealers by your suppliers? A. Yes sir.

Q. That has always been your policy, has it? A. It has.

Q. And there is no difference between that policy and the policy which you follow in your resales of gypsum board and lath, is there? A. No sir.

Mr. Bromley: That is all.

Justice Stephens: Is there any further cross examination by other defendants?

5579 (No response.)

Justice Stephens: Is there any redirect?

Mr. Steffen: We have no redirect, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: You are excused, Mr. Kellogg. Thank you for coming here.

The Witness: Thank you, sir.

(The witness was excused.)

Mr. Knuff: Shall I call the next witness?

Justice Stephens: Yes, certainly.

Mr. Knuff: Mr. H. E. Chism.

Thereupon, H. E. CHISM, appearing as a witness for and on behalf of the United States, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Your name is H. E. Chism, and you spell your last name C-h-i-s-m, is that correct? A. Yes sir.

Q. You live in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma? A. Yes sir.

Q. And are associated with the Texas Cement Plaster Company, is that correct? A. That is correct.

5580 Q. The Texas Cement Plaster Company is not a corporation, but is an individually owned concern, is that correct? A. That is correct.

Q. The owner of that concern is Mr. Samuel M. Gloyd? A. Yes sir.

Q. What interest does Mr. Gloyd take in the management of that concern? Is he at the office daily? A. No sir.

Q. How frequently does Mr. Gloyd come to the office? A. Well, I should say three or four times a week, and stays at least an hour, possibly two hours.

Q. Does Mr. Gloyd direct the policies and affairs of the Texas Cement Plaster Company? A. Well, not to any considerable extent now.

Q. And who does direct the policies and affairs of the Texas Cement Plaster Company? A. I do.

Q. Mr. Gloyd has delegated to you the authority to direct the affairs of the Texas Cement Plaster Company, is that correct? A. Largely, yes.

Q. Does any other person direct those affairs? A. No, they do not.

Q. Well, why do you use the word, "largely"? A. Well, with the exception of the direction that Mr.
5581 Gloyd gives the business, I take care of the balance of it.

Q. What direction does he give the business? A. As I said, very little at the present time or during the past year or two years, particularly.

Mr. Knuff: May it please the Court, in view of the fact that it is now apparent that this gentleman is, I presume you would call him, the managing agent of the Texas Cement Plaster Company, I believe that under the Rules of Civil Procedure, we are entitled to examine him as if on cross examination.

Justice Stephens: That is Rule 43 (b)?

Mr. Knuff: That is correct.

Justice Stephens: Are you a director of the Company?

The Witness: It is not a corporation.

Mr. Knuff: It is not a corporation, your Honor.

Mr. Johnston: I don't see, if the Court please, how that comes under this rule—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) Just let me read the rule first.

Is this a partnership?

Mr. Johnston: No, if the Court please, this a wholly-owned business, owned by Mr. Gloyd.

Justice Stephens: It is a corporation?

Mr. Johnston: It is not a corporation, not a partnership, and not an association, just an individual, and he uses this trade name and Mr. Chism works for him 5582 as his manager. I don't see how it would come in under that rule at all.

Justice Stephens: Those facts are without dispute, are they, Mr. Knuff?

Mr. Knuff: That is correct, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: Mr. Gloyd is in business for himself, and he owns the business, and this gentleman, Mr. Chism, is employed by him?

Mr. Johnston: That is right, on a salary, and he has no interest in the business at all.

Under Subsection (b) of Rule 43, it is limited to, "an officer, director, or managing agent of a public or private corporation, or of a partnership or association,"—and it goes no further.

(The Justices conferred.)

Justice Stephens: Have either of you any authorities on this subject at all? We know of none. This rule hasn't been construed, to our knowledge. If you know of no authorities we are ready to rule on the matter.

Mr. Knuff: I haven't any authorities, your Honor, on the subject. I don't believe there are any authorities on it.

I will say frankly to the Court that while I don't believe we come literally within this rule, yet I think it is within the discretion of the Court.

You see we are in a very peculiar position in this case.

5583 We endeavored to get the testimony of Mr. Gloyd, and while the Court has said that we may file interrogatories, in all the 25 years that I have been at the bar, I don't know of any more unsatisfactory way of getting testimony than by interrogatories, written interrogatories. If you are going to prove a signature to a will, yes, written interrogatories are all right there. But here we have the proprietor of this business, a man of about 79 years of age, he comes to the office, according to this witness' testimony, about an hour a day, a couple of times a week, and according to what Mr. Johnston told us—and I haven't any reason to doubt it at this time—Mr. Gloyd is a pretty sick man.

The man that directs the business down there is the gentleman on the witness stand. I think that in view of the fact that we couldn't take Mr. Gloyd's deposition, that it is within the discretion of the Court to grant us this permission. We are in this position here, your Honor, that if we call Mr. Chism as our witness, and it turns out that he testifies differently than what we expect him to testify, we would not otherwise be in a position to impeach or contradict him.

As I say, in view of the ruling of the Court before, I don't think it would be any miscarriage of justice at all to indulge the Government in this request, and we ask that the Court exercise its discretion in the matter and allow us to call this witness as if on cross examination, and interrogate him by leading questions, and if necessary, to impeach him.

5584 Mr. Johnston: Now if the Court please, while I think under the rule my point is well taken—in fact I personally feel pretty sure of it—I am going to indulge the Government, and I am just going to waive the rule, so that there can't be any question about Mr. Chism—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) Well, I think that that is a very fair thing for you to do. My own view—and I think my colleagues agree with me, Mr. Knuff—is that it is not within our discretion. I think, as you argue, that it is probably within the spirit of the rule to permit the cross examination of this witness, but this is a rule which is in derogation of the common law, which left the matter purely to discretion, and it fixes an absolute presumption of hostility, and it enumerates the persons to whom the rule applies.

Now if the rule were ambiguous, then we could consult the spirit of the rule, but since it isn't ambiguous, and clearly doesn't cover this case, I doubt if we have any discretion in the matter.

But the matter is now academic, in view of Mr. Johnston's very fair waiver.

Mr. Knuff: It is my understanding—and Mr. Johnston may correct me if I am wrong—that we may be allowed to contradict or impeach this witness, is that correct? Does your waiver go to that extent?

Mr. Johnston: I am waiving the rule.

5585 Justice Stephens: He is waiving the rule, yes.

Mr. Knuff: If the waiver goes to that extent, then all right, and we thank Mr. Johnston for his indulgence.

Justice Stephens: He is waiving what he claims to be the inapplicability of this rule to this witness, and is conceding, for the purpose of this examination, that the rule does apply.

Mr. Johnston: I have been trying at all times to help the Government in any way I could in the case, and give them a chance for their money. (Laughter.)

Justice Stephens: Very well, proceed.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Mr. Chism, how long have you been with the Texas Cement Plaster Company? A. Since 1922.

Q. And when you came with the Texas Cement Plaster Company, in what capacity were you employed? A. I was doing a little bit of everything, I would call it assistant to the general manager.

Q. And who was the general manager at that time? A. At that time, Mr. G. W. McGahan.

Q. Was Mr. Jacobs with the company at that time? A. No, I don't believe he was just at that time, not until two or three years later.

Q. My understanding is that Mr. Jacobs is dead, 5586 is that correct? A. That is correct.

How long have you been general manager? A. Since 1932, I believe, the early part of 1932.

Q. For the past 12 years, approximately? A. Yes.

Q. What business is the Texas Cement Plaster Company engaged in? A. The manufacture of gypsum wall plaster and gypsum wallboard and lath.

Q. Block? A. Block, yes.

Q. Both neat and sanded plaster? A. Not sanded plaster, no.

Q. Not sanded? A. No.

Q. And where is the mill of the Texas Cement Plaster Company located? A. It is at Plasterco, Texas, near Hamlin.

Q. And where does the Texas Cement Plaster Company sell its products? A. Well, in quite a wide territory in the South and Southwest.

Q. Through what states? A. Eighty percent of it 5587 in Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, Missouri, and Arkansas. The balance is spread out over possibly 10 other states, surrounding states.

Q. When did you first start to manufacture board, and by "board" I mean board and lath? A. About the middle of 1925.

Q. And at that time I believe you did not manufacture the large board, is that correct? A. We did manufacture the large board beginning at that time.

Q. Did you manufacture lath? A. I think we manufactured some lath.

Q. I was under the impression that at one time you confined your manufacturing activities to either board or lath. I may be wrong on that. A. No, we did not.

Q. At all times you did manufacture both board and lath? A. That is my recollection now, yes.

Q. I would like, Mr. Chism, for you to look at what has been marked Government's Exhibit 599 for identification, the same being an agreement, dated the 11th day of April, 1927, between the United States Gypsum Company and the Texas Cement Plaster Company, and in particular to have you look at page 12 and tell us whether or not that is Mr. Gloyd's signature?

5588 (The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 599 for identification.)

(Government's Exhibit No. 599 for identification was handed to the witness.)

The Witness: Yes sir, it is.

Justice Stephens: Is this the license agreement which was referred to in the complaint?

Mr. Knuff: Yes, your Honor. We would have offered this agreement before, on the first day of the trial, but we didn't have it at the time, and we didn't have a photostat of it.

Mr. Johnston: May I inquire, Mr. Knuff, if that date is the 11th of April or the 18th? I thought it was the 18th of April.

Mr. Knuff: It says here the 11th.

Mr. Johnston: Look at the signature date. There was something about the date of the signing of that contract—

Mr. Knuff: (Interposing) I will show it to you.

Mr. Johnston: No, that is not necessary, but I know that that has been the testimony all the way through here.

Mr. Knuff: I think that has been the testimony, that it was dated the 18th, but it appears from page 1 of Exhibit 599 for identification that it was dated April 11th, and on the signature page, page 12, I don't see anything that would indicate that it was signed on another date than the 11th.

5589 Justice Stephens: No, it says on page 12, "the day and year first above written," and on the first page the date is shown as April 11th.

Justice Jackson: There is only the one agreement, is there?

Mr. Knuff: As far as I know. Is there more than one, Mr. Johnston?

Mr. Johnston: No, but the fact is that it was not finally signed on that date, and the exchange of letters shows it is of the 18th. It is considered to be a contract as of April 18th.

Justice Jackson: What difference does it make?

Mr. Johnston: I don't think it makes any difference, I was just calling it to Mr. Knuff's attention.

Mr. Bromley: My understanding is that it was re-executed on the 18th of April for some reason, perhaps because of a defect in the original agreement. Is that right, Mr. Johnston?

Mr. Johnston: That may be, I have forgotten.

Mr. Knuff: If the Court thinks it is important, I will see if I can clear it up.

Justice Stephens: If there is some defect in the agreement of April 11th, and it was re-executed to clear up the defect, we ought to see the later agreement, if that is the fact.

Mr. Knuff: I would like to see that too.

5590 Justice Stephens: See if you can clear it up by asking the witness.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Mr. Chism, do you have before you Government's Exhibit No. 599 for identification? A. Yes, I do.

Q. And was the contract executed on that date, April 11th, if you know? A. It was first executed on this date, April 11, and as I recall it, it was amended or corrected on April 18th.

Q. Corrected in what respect? A. I couldn't tell you.

Q. Well, does the correction that was made on the 18th appear on the agreement that you have before you? A. No, it doesn't.

Q. Well, where does that correction appear? A. My recollection is that it was contained in correspondence, in letters.

Q. Do you have that correspondence with you? A. I believe it has been turned over to you.

Q. Well, I will show you everything that you have turned over to me, and if you will point out to me just what you have in mind, I will be glad to—

Mr. Johnston: (Interposing) If the Court please, the correspondence that he is handing the witness does 5591 not show that, but all of our correspondence was turned over to the Government in response to the subpoena, and the letter in reference to the correction of a name, or the seal, or something like that, is in possession of the Government, although it is not in this last bunch of documents that the Government asked us to furnish them the other day.

I can turn to that in the photostats.

Justice Stephens: Well, we will take the noon recess at this time, and that will give the Government time to look at its files, and perhaps this may then be cleared up.

(Whereupon a recess was taken at 12:10 o'clock p.m. until 1:45 o'clock p.m.)

(The trial was resumed at 1:45 o'clock p.m., pursuant to recess.)

Justice Stephens: The Court will make rulings on the Exhibits, 233 and 324, which were taken under advisement.

First, the ruling on Certain-teed's motion to strike Exhibit U. S. 324.

5593 Exhibit U.S. 324 is an answer filed by Certain-teed in an action brought against it by USG to restrain Certain-teed from acquiring the assets of Beaver. The exhibit was received in evidence at Tr. 2861-2 as an admission by Certain-teed but not as binding, as a declaration, on other defendants unless connected by other evidence showing the admission to be in furtherance or execution of the alleged conspiracy. At Tr. 3283-5 Mr. Adams for Certain-teed moved to strike Exhibit U.S. 324 upon the ground that it had been ascertained by him upon reading the exhibit that it is not a verified answer and is therefore incompetent. Mr. Adams filed a memorandum in support of his motion wherein he urged this ground (and also that the answer is not signed by Certain-teed (and also that the statements in the answer, Exhibit U.S. 324, are inadmissible because conclusional in nature. The Government filed a memorandum in opposition. Argument was heard and appears in the transcript of February 15, 1944.

The applicable rule of law found in the decisions of Federal courts, including those cited by Mr. Adams in his memorandum, is not a strict rejection of unsigned or unverified pleadings but a rejection of those not connected with the party against which they are offered by oath, signing, adoption, acquiescence, ratification, or circumstances such as allegations of information which could have come only 5594 from the party itself against which the pleading is offered. The use of such pleadings, once they are admitted in evidence, is, as pointed out in 4 Wigmore, Evidence (3d ed. 1940) Par. 1066, limited to the facts they contain; conclusions and other incompetent statements being avoided.

A study of the record leads to the conclusion that there is no direct evidence that Certain-teed furnished the facts alleged in the pleading, Exhibit U.S. 324, to its lawyers or that the lawyers were present at a time when Certain-teed's officers were discussing its dispute with USG. On the other hand these circumstances do appear: George M. Brown wrote a memorandum while he was president of Certain-teed, which memorandum is in evidence as Exhibit U.S. 212, wherein he stated that Certain-teed must prepare to answer the suit of USG, should appear as a party to it, and should assert that the suit is not filed in the interest of royalties but for the sole purpose of trade domination, monopoly and price control. The allegations of Exhibit U.S. 324 are strikingly similar to this description by Mr. Brown of what should be asserted in the answer to be filed. It appears from Exhibit U.S. 211, a memorandum dated February 7, 1928, which was attributed by the witness C. O. Brown to L. R. Walker, vice president of Certain-teed (Tr. 1930) that the officers of Certain-teed were in communication with Cravath, Henderson and DeGersdorff concerning Certain-teed's acquisition of the Beaver plants, the transaction out of which the dispute with USG arose. The 5595 firm of Cravath, Henderson and DeGersdorff appears on Exhibit U.S. 324 as counsel for Certain-teed. A reading of Exhibit U.S. 324 shows that it contains many allegations of fact relating to the affairs of Certain-teed and the gypsum industry generally. Information about such matters is not usually acquired by counsel in a casual manner but from detailed disclosures made by clients. The fair inference to be drawn from the foregoing circumstances is that the allegations in Exhibit U.S. 324 are attributable to Certain-teed.

The allegations in Exhibit U.S. 324 are not all mere conclusions or statements of law. A reading of paragraphs 27 and 28 of the exhibit, the paragraphs to which the Government mainly refers in its reliance upon the exhibit, reveals that there is a considerable amount of factual material stated. The exhibit can be received for its factual value.

The court reaffirms its prior ruling. The objections of Certain-teed are overruled and its motion to strike is denied. Exhibit U.S. 324 remains in evidence as an admission of Certain-teed, not binding upon the other defendants unless it be shown that the statements in it were made in furtherance or execution of the alleged conspiracy and unless the alleged conspiracy itself be shown aliunde.

Ruling on the Government's reoffer of U.S. 233:
5596 The document marked for identification U.S. 233 is a memorandum dated August 2, 1929, purporting to have been written by A. D. Redfield, patent attorney, to

C. O. Brown of Certain-teed Products Corporation. When it was offered in evidence at tr. 2878, Mr. Adams for Certain-teed objected on the ground that the document came within the attorney-client privilege. Thereupon the Government sought to show by Redfield that the privilege had been waived by Certain-teed through instructions given by a Mr. Dowd when Redfield and an Assistant United States Attorney called Certain-teed's New York office by telephone about June 4, 1940, at the time of the grand jury investigation of the criminal aspects of the alleged violations of the Sherman Antitrust Act. Mr. Adams objected to this use of the telephone conversation because Mr. Dowd was not an officer of Certain-teed at that time, and because the person with whom Redfield said he spoke had not been identified as Mr. Dowd. There was no showing at that time that Mr. Dowd was an officer of Certain-teed or that he otherwise had authority to waive the privilege for Certain-teed. The court ruled at tr. 2890 that the offered exhibit would be refused because privileged, the privilege not having been shown to have been waived by Certain-teed.

At tr. 3529-31 Government counsel requested and obtained leave to reoffer the document on the ground
5597 that it had been ascertained that Dowd had actually been an officer of Certain-teed at the time in question. Mr. Dowd's official position with Certain-teed is now conceded by Mr. Adams.

After careful consideration of the memoranda submitted by both sides and after listening to oral argument, the court has reached these conclusions:

A telephone conversation may be used as the declaration of the purported speaker if that speaker is sufficiently identified. This identification may be made by circumstantial evidence. It is a settled rule in this jurisdiction that it is a prima facie identification of a particular party to a telephone conversation if the call was made to the party's place of business and someone answers and represents himself to be that party. See Campbell v. Willis, 53 App. D. C. 296, 290 Fed. 271 (1923), and Takahashi v. Hecht Co., 62 App. D. C. 72, 64 F. (2d) 710 (1933). Circumstantial identification is even more convincing where the party responding to a telephone call shows knowledge of the subject matter of the call. Van Riper v. United States, 13 F. (2d) 961 C.C.A. 2, 1926).

The person responding to Redfield in the telephone conversation of June 4, 1940, has been identified circumstantially as Mr. Dowd, in our view. Redfield stated that he and the Assistant United States Attorney had together called Certain-teed's New York office and that he, 5598 Redfield, had spoken with a person representing himself to be Mr. Dowd. As above stated, it is now conceded that Certain-teed had at that time an officer named Dowd. Furthermore, it appears from the statement attributed to this person that he was familiar with the Government investigation and with the past policy of Certain-teed with respect to furnishing documents to the Government. This is a prima facie showing that Dowd was speaking and that, as an officer of Certain-teed, he was speaking for the company.

In response to Redfield's inquiry as to what he should do with respect to claiming or waiving privilege, Mr. Dowd's statement, as reported by Redfield, was: "Well, I don't know, we have nothing to hide, we have thrown our records open to the Department of Justice and so far as I can tell there is no reason that you should not testify." Although mere identification of a document is not a waiver, this authority to testify coupled with the knowledge that the exhibit, if identified, was to be used in evidence before the grand jury would seem to be sufficient to constitute a general waiver. Redfield carried this grant of authority into effect when he went before the grand jury and identified the document so as to lend authority or approval to its use by that body.

Privilege once waived may not be reasserted because the disclosure exhausts the reason for the privilege. Mr. Adams' objection that U. S. 233 is privileged is, 5599 therefore, on the present state of the record, not well taken. Mr. Adams asks leave to call Mr. Dowd to deny the telephone conversation. This leave is granted. That is to say, the testimony for which Mr. Adams proposes to call Mr. Dowd goes to a preliminary question of fact, one not bearing upon the merits of the case as a whole but determining the admissibility of an item of evidence. The defendants are entitled to a ruling before the close of the Government's case as to what evidence is in the record in support of the Government's case. See 9 Wigmore on Evidence (3d ed., 1940) Par. 2550 and cases cited there. The settled practice in this jurisdiction is to determine on voir dire, during the case of the party offering evidence, preliminary questions of fact which themselves determine the admissibility of evidence and to hear, on such voir dire, such evidence as is offered by either party in respect of the preliminary question of fact. See McAffee v. United States, 105 Fed. (2d) 21; 70 Appeals, D. C. 142 (1939) in respect of confessions. It will, therefore, be the duty of the court to decide after hearing the witness Dowd whether or not the telephone conversation testified to by Redfield did occur and what its content was in respect of the asserted waiver, and thereupon to determine whether a waiver was authorized.

At tr. 3995-6 Mr. Bromley objected that proposed Exhibit 233 is irrelevant and immaterial because not 5600 shown to be in furtherance or execution of any conspiracy charged in the complaint. The binding effect of the document on Certain-teed is difficult to see since it is not a statement by Certain-teed itself, but by its attorney. There is no present showing that his views were or became the company's views. Even as an admission of Certain-teed the document is not yet shown to be in furtherance or execution of any conspiracy so as to bind the other defendants. These elements may, however, be supplied by later evidence, and the document could be received subject to connection in these two respects.

Mr. Bromley also requested that, if the document is received in evidence, Redfield be recalled for cross examination. Since this document is accredited by Redfield and was written by him, it is but fair and reasonable that the defendants be permitted to cross examine as they have been permitted to cross examine about other exhibits.

In summary, the court rules that a prima facie showing on voir dire has been made of a waiver of privilege in respect of proposed Exhibit 233; so that in the absence of convincing contradictory evidence as to the fact or content of the asserted Redfield-Dowd telephone conversation, the exhibit would be admissible subject to a showing that it is an admission by Certain-teed and subject to the usual reservation. But Certain-teed may call Dowd; and 5601 the court, after hearing his testimony, will rule as to whether the exhibit is admissible. If the exhibit is received, it will be received subject to the recall of Redfield for further cross examination.

Mr. Adams: If the Court please, I was just wondering, with respect to the question of calling Mr. Dowd—since the matter last came before the Court, Mr. Dowd has been again promoted from vice president, and is now president of the company, and it makes it a little more difficult to get hold of him. Do Your Honors have any particular time when you would like to hear that evidence?

Justice Stephens: No, it makes no difference. Any time before the close of the Government's case.

Mr. Adams: Thank you.

Justice Stephens: Mr. Redfield will have to be returned, also.

Justice Jackson suggests that we hear the Dowd testimony first, and if we should then rule that there has been no telephone conversation, or that the contents do not constitute a waiver, then it might not be necessary to recall Redfield.

Where is Redfield?

Mr. Adams: Cincinnati, I believe, Your Honor.

Justice Stephens: We will leave that to the convenience of counsel. This ruling will be copied into the record, and will be clear, I think, from the statement made by 5602 the Court.

Take the witness stand, Mr. Chism.

I may add that we have gone very carefully into these two questions, and extensive memoranda have been prepared and exchanged by the Judges, and the authorities were carefully examined; but it seems not necessary to make a more extensive announcement of the reasons for the rulings than have just been made.

Thereupon, H. E. Chism, the witness on the stand at the time of recess, resumed his testimony as follows:

Mr. Knuff: May it please the Court, apropos of Government's Exhibit 599 for Identification, Mr. Johnston has shown me the correspondence that transpired between the Texas Cement Plaster Company and the United States Gypsum Company, and I believe that the following are the facts:

Originally the contract, Exhibit 599 for Identification, was executed on the 11th day of April, 1927, and it was mailed to the United States Gypsum Company. It so happened, however, that in executing the contract, the Texas Cement Plaster Company—which at that time was a corporation—failed to affix thereto its common and corporate seal, and when the United States Gypsum Company received that contract they called this omission to 5603 the attention of the Texas Cement Plaster Company, sent the contract back to them, and said that while they didn't think it would affect the legality of the contract, nevertheless they felt that the seal probably should be affixed, and they asked the Texas Cement Plaster Company to affix its corporate seal.

The Texas Cement Plaster Company did do this, and they sent the contract back to the United States Gypsum Company, changing the date on it from the 11th to the 18th, but omitting to change the date on their own retained copy, at all.

So that, the United States Gypsum Company's copy was dated the 18th, and the retained copy of the Texas Cement Plaster Company remained as April 11.

Other than the affixing of the corporate seal and the changing of the dates, the contract, Government's Exhibit 599 for Identification, is identical to the contract that was sent to the United States Gypsum Company.

I have, I believe, stated the facts.

Mr. Johnston: And the parties considered the contract as of April 18.

Justice Stephens: Then that may be shown as stipulated between Mr. Johnston and the Government.

Direct Examination (resumed)

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Do you have before you, Mr. Chism, Govern-
5604 ment's Exhibit 599 for Identification? A. Yes.

Q. I want you to look at that exhibit, following page 12, and you will notice that there is attached immediately following page 12, Exhibit "A"—do you notice that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, in a separate document, consisting of four pages, which I now ask to have marked for Identification as Government's Exhibit 599-A, you will find another exhibit also called Exhibit "A".

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 599-A for Identification.)

(Government's Exhibit No. 599-A for Identification was handed to the witness.)

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Will you tell us just what your understanding is of the reasons for having two Exhibits "A"? A. My recollection is that this second Exhibit "A" includes all of those patents on the first one, and in addition there are other patents included.

Q. Government's Exhibit 599-A was always considered a part of the April 1927 contract, is that correct? A. Yes, that is my recollection.

Mr. Knuff: We now offer in evidence Govern-
5605 ment's Exhibits 599 and 599-A.

Justice Stephens: Is there any objection?

Mr. Bromley: May I have a minute, Your Honor?

Justice Stephens: Take your time.

Mr. Knuff: I may say that when these documents were given to us by Mr. Johnston they were in the form presented to the Court—that is, Exhibit 599 had an Exhibit "A" attached; and then there was another Exhibit "A", separate and not attached, which we have now identified as Exhibit 599-A.

Mr. Bromley: May it please the Court, we make only the usual objection to Exhibit 599.

Justice Stephens: It is received in evidence, subject to the usual reservation with respect to declarations of alleged co-conspirators.

(The document referred to, marked as Government's Exhibit No. 599, was received in evidence.)

Mr. Bromley: I should like to examine as to the competency of Exhibit 599-A at this time.

Justice Stephens: You may.

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. Will you turn to the third page of Exhibit 599-A, please? A. Yes, sir.

5606 Q. Do you see that in the margin someone has written the words, in pencil or ink, "New"? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you do that? A. No, I did not.

Q. Do you know who did? A. I couldn't tell you.

Q. Do you notice that opposite the word "New" at the top of the page, the reference is to Birdsey patent No. 1,643,801? A. Yes, sir, I do.

Q. And do you notice that in the second line of that paragraph, there is the phrase, "filed January 13, 1921, granted September 27, 1927"? A. Is that the first one mentioned on that page 3?

Q. Yes. A. It doesn't show that here.

Q. Have you got Exhibit 599-A? A. Yes, sir.

Q. After the underlined words "Birdsey patent No. 1,643,801.", doesn't this language appear: "Application Serial No. 437,062, filed January 13, 1921, granted September 27, 1927, expires September 27, 1944."? A. That is right.

Q. Now, do you see, Mr. Chism, that the note
5607 "granted September 27, 1927" indicates that that patent was granted after you signed your license agreement? A. Yes, that would be true.

Q. Do you notice that that is true as to every paragraph which is marked "New"—that is to say, that the granting date of the patent is a date later than the date of your license? A. I think that is true, yes.

Q. And do you notice on the last page, opposite the third paragraph, as to which there is contained in the margin the note "New", that the granting date of that patent is given as February 26, 1929? A. That is right.

Q. Now, that would indicate that this document, 599-A, was furnished to you some years after you signed the license agreement, wouldn't it? A. Yes, sir, I think it was.

Q. Now, isn't it a fact, then, and don't you now recall, that all this is is a list of the patents or applications which were contained in Exhibit "A" annexed to your contract, brought down to date so as to show which of the applications had ripened into patents, and the dates on which the patents had been granted under the applications? A. That may be true, I never checked it in that way.

Q. You didn't understand that you were being 5608 given any new rights under this Exhibit 599-A, over what were contained in the original Exhibit "A" to Exhibit 599, did you? A. I never had full charge of this matter at that time. I knew something about it, but not a great deal. So I couldn't tell you.

Q. Well, you know now, at least, that 599-A was not a part of the original contract, but was something furnished to you afterward; is that right? A. Yes, that is right.

Q. And was probably merely a revision of the original Exhibit "A" so as to put in the dates on which the applications contained in the original Exhibit "A" had thereafter been issued as patents; isn't that correct? A. I believe that is correct.

Mr. Bromley: With that showing, we make only the usual objection to Exhibit 599-A.

Mr. Knuff: Before the Court rules on it, I can see no reason why I should put it in at all, so I will withdraw it. It appears that Exhibit 599 is the original contract.

Justice Stephens: It may be withdrawn, if you desire to withdraw it.

(The document marked as Government's Exhibit 599-A was withdrawn.)

By Mr. Knuff:

5609 Q. Mr. Chism, if I understand you correctly, you took no part in the negotiations leading up to the execution of Government's Exhibit 599; is that correct? A. No, I did not.

Q. Mr. Gloyd was the gentleman that did negotiate with the United States Gypsum Company concerning that license agreement? A. That is correct.

Q. And you played no part in it at all? A. No, I didn't.

Q. Now, do you know, Mr. Chism, whether or not any patent studies or any patent surveys had been made by Texas Cement Plaster Company before this contract was executed? A. I am quite sure there was not.

Justice Stephens: I don't understand that question, I am sorry. I think I missed one of your words.

Please read it.

(The question was read by the reporter.)

Justice Stephens: Thank you, I understand now. I missed one word.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. If there had been any patent studies made, do you feel that you would have known about them? A. Yes, I believe I would.

5610 Q. Will you look at page 3 of Government's Exhibit 599, and look at the last paragraph on page 3, beginning with, "It is expressly agreed and understood"—do you notice that? A. Yes, I do.

Q. You understand by that paragraph, do you, that that is the paragraph that reserves to USG the right to fix and determine the minimum price at which Texas could sell the product; is that correct? A. Yes, I believe that is correct.

Q. Now, following the execution of Government's Exhibit 599 in April, 1927, did USG notify you as to the price or prices at which you could sell gypsum board and gypsum lath? A. Yes, they did.

Q. What form did those notices take, sir? A. I couldn't tell you the exact form. I would say it was their regular price bulletins.

Mr. Knuff: Will you show the witness Government's Exhibit 33, please?

(Government's Exhibit No. 33 was handed to the witness.)

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. The book that you have before you, sir, contains price bulletins issued by the United States Gypsum Company, or some of the price bulletins, I should say, 5611 issued by the United States Gypsum Company after March 21, 1931. Now the notices that you got under the 1927 agreement, were they in the form in which the price bulletins appear in Government's Exhibit 33? A. I couldn't remember definitely that they were, but I would presume so.

Q. When you say you "would presume so", do you mean that that is your best recollection? A. That is my best recollection.

Q. You were asked to produce all the price bulletins that USG sent to you, and I don't believe that you produced any prior to May 23, 1929. Do you recall that? A. I recall that we produced all that we had, but I don't remember the dates.

Q. Well, if you will accept my word for it, the record that we have indicates that no bulletins prior to the 23rd day of May, 1929, were furnished us by Texas Cement Plaster Company. A. If you say that is true, I will accept it.

Q. That is what the records in our office indicate. A. All right.

Q. Do you recall whether or not—

Mr. Johnston: (Interposing) If the Court please, I don't believe that that is the fact. The Government has the list of the bulletins that were furnished, and I 5612 wouldn't want to accept that as the fact. I think that record will speak for itself. That was at the time the records were subpoenaed and furnished for the grand jury investigation.

Mr. Knuff: That is correct.

Mr. Johnston: I think the Government should produce that correspondence, that letter, and that will show what was produced.

Justice Stephens: What is the point? Do you want to prove what bulletins were sent by some other evidence?

Mr. Knuff: The point is this, Your Honor, that when Mr. Chism testified before the Grand Jury, his omission to furnish these bulletins was called to his attention, and I think at that time he excused it on the grounds that, "You have everything that we have; if you don't have them before May 23, 1929, we don't have them; we have given you everything that we have."

I can say that I have never seen, over in our office, any bulletins prior to May 23, 1929.

Justice Stephens: What is the point of it all? If he hasn't got them and you haven't got them, what are you going to do about it?

Mr. Knuff: I am going to try to find out just exactly what was in those prior bulletins, if he knows.

Mr. Johnston: Now, it would seem to me, if the Court please, instead of showing this witness a volume of 5613 bulletins that he doesn't know anything about, and asking him if those aren't the kind of bulletins he received, it would be much better if you would show him the bulletins that he received and ask him if they were the kind of bulletins that he received otherwise.

Justice Stephens: There is no dispute about the fact, is there, that USG sent him these bulletins?

Mr. Johnston: Not at all.

Justice Stephens: Why couldn't the whole thing be stipulated to, as to what bulletins were sent to him and received by him?

Mr. Bromley: I am willing to stipulate that we sent him bulletins from April 18, 1927, to August 6, 1929.

Justice Stephens: And that the terms of the bulletins were the same as those sent to other licensees, which other bulletins are in evidence? Could that be stipulated to, if that is the fact?

Mr. Bromley: Well, let me see. The bulletins were sent in that interval only to such companies as were licensees.

Justice Stephens: That is right.

Mr. Bromley: I think we can stipulate that they were in substantially the general form as are the later ones which are in evidence, that is, they cover prices and terms and conditions of sale. I don't mean by that that they included everything that was in the later bulletins, but 5614 in substance they were the same kind of documents.

Justice Stephens: Now, is there any contention in the case, Mr. Knuff, concerning the exact amount of the prices in these earlier bulletins?

Mr. Knuff: I don't know what those earlier bulletins contained, because I never saw one. We asked the United States Gypsum Company to furnish us with the price bulletins at the criminal trial, and they were furnished; and the bulletins that were furnished us are the bulletins that are now in evidence. I have never seen a bulletin prior to May 23, 1929. I don't know what it looks like. We don't have any over in our files. I am just trying to find out what was in those bulletins. These bulletins, Government's Exhibit 33 and the series of bulletins following that, were furnished us by the United States Gypsum Company; and at the time they were furnished us, we were told that these were all the bulletins that they had at the time.

Justice Jackson: What is the first date?

Mr. Knuff: The first one in here is March 21, 1931. Now there is a period of approximately four years that I know nothing about, I don't know the form that the bulletin took, what was in it, or anything else.

Mr. Johnston: I think counsel is in error there. I think he has one here of August 3, 1929.

Mr. Knuff: I am referring to the bulletins I have 5615 in front of me in Government's Exhibit 33, the first of which is March 23, 1931. I have seen them from May 23, 1929, but I have never seen a bulletin prior to May 23.

Mr. Bromley: Counsel knows now,—I have just stipulated the fact,—back to 1927.

Mr. Knuff: But the stipulation, while I am grateful for the stipulation, it still doesn't help me as to what was in the bulletins.

Justice Stephens: Who can help you, Mr. Knuff?

Mr. Knuff: The witness, maybe.

Justice Stephens: Go ahead and examine him, then.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Do you recall what was in the first bulletins that you received, sir? A. No, sir, I couldn't tell you.

Q. Can you tell us whether or not, in addition to specifying the price, there was anything in those bulletins concerning the arbitrary shipping weight that a thousand feet of board should have? A. I couldn't tell you.

Q. Could you tell us whether or not there was a so-called truck delivery area specified in those earlier bulletins? A. I couldn't tell you for certain. I don't think there was.

5616 Q. Could you tell us whether or not there was anything in those earlier bulletins concerning the regulation of stopover charges? A. No, sir.

Q. When you say "No, sir", do you mean that you can't tell, or there wasn't anything in them? A. I mean I don't remember what was in those. If I saw one, I could probably tell you.

Q. I am sorry I can't give you one to look at. I would like to.

Mr. Knuff: I wonder if the United States Gypsum Company could help us out as to those earlier bulletins?

Mr. Bromley: We have furnished everything to the Government that we had at the time we furnished them, and we have nothing else.

Mr. Knuff: While I appreciate Mr. Bromley's offer to stipulate, in view of the fact that I have never seen a bulletin issued prior to the 23rd of May, 1929, I am afraid I can't agree to that stipulation.

Justice Garrett: What are you going to do about it?

Mr. Knuff: I don't know what I am going to do about it. I thought I could get it from this witness, but apparently the witness is just as—and I am not criticizing the witness, I want the Court to understand that—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) You had better
5617 proceed to another topic, then, and see if you can find these bulletins outside of Court.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Well, you do know, Mr. Chism, that you did receive some notification from the United States Gypsum Company concerning the price at which gypsum board and lath was to be sold; is that correct? A. Yes, we received notice.

Q. And the Texas Cement Plaster Company, from 1927, sold at those prices; is that right? A. Yes, we did.

Q. And— A. (Interposing) Up to August 6, 1929.

Q. To August 6, 1929? A. Yes.

Q. Now, after August 6, 1929, did Texas Cement Plaster Company receive a notification from United States Gypsum Company to disregard any previous prices that had bee sent you?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as immaterial. I think that assumes that such a notice was necessary; whereas, it is apparent, from reading the bulletins that he received, that no such notice was necessary, because the prices were only fixed under the patent which expired on August 6, 1929.

5618 Justice Stephens: What do you contend as to the materiality of that; since the bulletins fixed the prices only up to a given date, what would it prove for the Government that no notice was given of a discontinuance of prices after that?

Mr. Knuff: I want to know just exactly what USG did. After the so-called Hite and Haggerty patents expired on July 8, 1941, USG sent out a notice under those patents. Now I want to know what they did under the original patents, under the original license agreements.

Mr. Bromley: That argument is neither so nor sound. In 1941, when we sent out a letter, we had patents in force and effect under which we might have fixed prices. We chose no longer to exercise the right, and sent out a letter that we were not going to fix prices any more, at that time. We just chose to discontinue the fixing of prices then.

Back in 1929, the patent under which we had a right to fix prices, expired.

Justice Stephens: We don't see any materiality in it, Mr. Knuff. It is without dispute in the case that the bulletins fixed prices only up to a certain date. If that is the fact, the absence of notice after that wouldn't prove anything one way or the other.

Mr. Knuff: May it be stipulated that no notice was sent out, Mr. Bromley?

5619 Mr. Bromley: I object to that as immaterial.

Justice Stephens: The stipulation would be as immaterial as the proof. The objection is sustained.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. During the period after April, 1927, and before August 6, 1929, did you purchase board, did Texas purchase board and lath from any other manufacturer? A. I don't remember. I don't believe we did.

Q. In 1927, what companies were selling board and lath in the territory in which the Texas Cement Plaster Company sold board and lath? A. Well, in the principal part of our territory, it would be the United States Gypsum Company, the Certain-teed Products, the Universal Lime & Cement Company, and the Texas Cement Plaster.

Q. Was National down there? A. National was not down there at that time.

Q. Now, after August 6, 1929, at what prices did you sell board and lath in the territory covered by Texas? A. I wouldn't remember. We sold it at the best price we could get for our goods.

Q. Do you mean by that that you sold it at the prevailing price? A. Yes, we did.

Q. You knew that at that time all companies, ex-
5620 cept yourself, had taken out a license with USG, and that under the terms of that license USG fixed the price of the board and lath? A. I probably knew that some of them were operating that way, but not all of them.

Q. Well, it is a fact, and it has been testified in this case —and I believe that you can accept this as correct—that from the middle of 1930, all the companies named as defendants in this case, with the exception of Texas, were licensees of USG—

Mr. Oliver: (Interposing) Of course, that isn't correct.

Mr. Knuff: Just a second, please, Mr. Oliver.

Justice Stephens: Finish your statement; and then don't answer, Mr. Chism, until Mr. Oliver objects.

Mr. Knuff: (Continuing) —with the exception of Texas and Celotex, were licensees of USG, and it is also a fact that under these license agreements USG fixed the price of the licensees.

Now will you tell us whether your sales were at the same prices that the other companies charged, in the territory that you operated in?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that question as assuming facts not in evidence, and also as incompetent because calling for a conclusion, and not the proper way to prove 5621 the prices.

Mr. Knuff: I am not trying to prove a specific price. I am trying to prove a policy.

Justice Stephens: Ask him for the policy, then.

The objection is sustained.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Was it the policy of your company to sell at the prices that other companies sold at? A. No, sir.

Q. What was the policy of your company? A. It was to follow the prevailing prices in the field.

Q. And the— A. (Interposing) The prevailing market price.

Q. And the prevailing prices in the field were prices that were fixed by USG?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that—

The Witness: (Interposing) I couldn't say that.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. From time to time, Mr. Chism, your salesmen would report to you the prevailing prices in the territory that they covered, would they not? A. Yes, they would, quite often.

5622 Q. And from time to time your dealers would report to you the prices at which your dealers were offered gypsum board and lath by other companies, would they not? A. Very often.

Q. And you tried to keep advised as to the prevailing prices, did you not? A. We did try at all times.

Q. And was the policy of your company to sell at the prevailing prices? A. Yes, sir.

Q. In 1928, Mr. Chism, would you say that the price of board had declined from what it was in 1926? A. Well, my recollection is that it had declined, yes.

Q. Would you say that during 1928 there was what is known, or what was known throughout your territory, as a price war? A. Some called it that, yes, sir. There was quite a disturbance.

Q. Pardon me? A. There was quite a disturbance in prices.

Q. What do you mean by "quite a disturbance in prices"? A. Prices were demoralized, and down, and going down.

Q. And how long did they continue to go down? A. Oh, I would say a year, maybe a little longer.

Q. Would you say that the prices became firm 5623 around about June, 1929? A. No sir, I wouldn't say that.

Q. When would you say that they did become firm? A. They didn't become firm until possibly 1932 or 1933—that would be my best judgment.

Q. You are talking about the price of board, are you? I am only confining my questions to the price of board. A. Yes, that would apply to board.

Q. Do you mean that the prices of USG and Certain-teed and National, which were reported to you, showed a variance at any particular time—and I am still referring to board and only board?

Mr. Johnston: If he knows as to their prices?

Mr. Knuff: Yes.

The Witness: I don't think I would know definitely about that. As a matter of fact, the National was not operating in that territory.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Well, Certain-teed and Universal and USG? A. I couldn't tell you what their prices were.

Q. Well, without telling me in dollars and cents, were all the prices the same, or was one higher or lower than the others? A. I don't know.

Q. Do you know, Mr. Chism, whether or not the 5624 Texas Cement Plaster Company, after April 11, 1927, and down to August 6, 1929, ever received any notices about meetings of licensees? A. I think we may have received one or two or three letters, or something of that sort.

Q. And is it a fact that someone from Texas attended one or more of those licensee meetings? A. As far as my knowledge goes, nobody ever did.

Q. No person from Texas ever attended any of those licensee meetings? A. No, sir.

Q. Although Texas received notice, no one attended? A. That is right.

Q. Did you have a man working for you down there at that time by the name of Mr. Jacobs? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Jacobs ever attend any of those meetings? A. So far as my knowledge goes, he did not.

Mr. Knuff: I didn't think there would be any question about this, your Honor.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. I show you, Mr. Chism, what has been marked for identification as Government's Exhibit 600, the same being a letter, dated June 24, 1929, addressed to John E. MacLeish, attorney, and signed S. M. Gloyd; attached to which 5625 letter, and mentioned in Government's Exhibit 600 for identification, is what has been marked Government's Exhibit 600-A for identification, the same being a telegram dated June 24, 1929, addressed to Mr. John E. MacLeish and purporting to be signed by S. M. Gloyd, President, Texas Cement Plaster Company.

(The documents referred to were marked Government's Exhibits Nos. 600 and 600-A for identification.)

(Government's Exhibits Nos. 600 and 600-A for identification were handed to the witness.)

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Will you look at Government's Exhibit No. 600 for identification, please, and tell me whether or not that is Mr. Gloyd's signature? A. Yes, that is Mr. Gloyd's signature.

Q. Does that in any way refresh your recollection as to whether or not Mr. Jacobs attended any meeting? A. No sir, it doesn't.

Q. Will you look at Government's Exhibit No. 600-A, and tell us whether or not the telegram form there is the form that was used by the Texas Cement Plaster Company? A. Yes sir.

Mr. Knuff: I offer in evidence, if your Honor pleases, Government's Exhibits Nos. 600 and 600-A.

Justice Jackson: Did you ask him if that refresh-5626 ed his recollection?

Mr. Knuff: I asked him that and he said it didn't. I am now offering these in evidence, your Honor.

Mr. Bromley: I object to them as immaterial.

Justice Stephens: Do you mean, Mr. Bromley, that you object to these exhibits as immaterial on the ground that it is immaterial whether Mr. Jacobs attended or not, or on the ground that they do not tend to prove that he did attend such a meeting?

Mr. Bromley: On the latter ground, that they do not tend to prove that he attended any meeting.

Justice Stephens: What do you say to that, Mr. Knuff? Here is a telegram stating that Mr. Jacobs would attend. Do you think that that is evidence that he did attend?

Mr. Knuff: I think that that comes very close to the Hillmon case, where the man said he was going up to the mountain.

Justice Stephens: That is exactly what I had in mind. It seems to me that it is doubtful whether it comes within the Hillmon case, but maybe I am wrong. I thought the Hillmon case had to do with a situation where the evidence was of a statement by Hillmon as to where he was going, isn't that true?

Mr. Knuff: Yes, I believe that is true.

Justice Stephens: This is a statement by Gloyd 5627 as to where "Hillmon" was going.

Mr. Knuff: As I say, I am not going to take up the time of the Court, if the Court wants to let it in, all right, or if it wants to exclude it all right. I think it is material or I wouldn't have offered it.

Justice Stephens: The objection is sustained. We think that these documents are not material.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. I believe, Mr. Chism, that your company never made metallized board, is that correct? A. No, we never did.

Q. And by "metallized board", I mean a board having a foil surface on either one or two sides—you understand that? A. I understand what you mean, I believe.

Q. Your source of supply, if I understand correctly, was the National Gypsum Company, is that correct? A. Principally.

Q. And did you get any from any other place? A. We may have bought some through dealers at Sweetwater, Texas, where the United States Gypsum mill is located.

Q. When you bought the metallized board from National, you either bought National's board that was completely metallized, or you took down to the National's mill your own board and had National put their metal surface 5628 on it, is that correct? A. Yes, we did that.

Q. Your company never signed the metallized license agreement, is that correct? A. No, we never did.

Q. Now, during the time that your company purchased this board, your company received from the USG Company metallized lath or metallized board bulletins, did they not? A. No sir, I don't think so.

Q. You don't think so? A. No sir.

Q. Your company did sign a contract under the Hite and Haggerty Patents on February 10th, 1937, did they not? A. Yes sir, we did.

Q. And after you signed that contract, didn't your company receive from USG the metallized board bulletins? A. No sir, I don't think so.

Q. You don't think so? A. No sir.

Q. And didn't you have correspondence with USG concerning the meaning of the bulletins that were sent you? A. Not the bulletins, I think I had some correspondence relative to one bulletin.

Q. What bulletin was that? A. I couldn't tell you now.

5629 Q. And didn't you have an arrangement with USG that you would sell metallized board in accordance with the terms of USG's bulletins? A. No sir, we had no such arrangement.

Q. You know Mr. Grant Kelleher, don't you? A. I have met the gentleman, yes.

Q. Did you ever tell Mr. Grant Kelleher that you had an arrangement with USG to sell metallized board at bulletin prices? A. I don't think I told him anything like that.

Q. If you had told him about it would you have known it? A. I believe I would.

Q. Would you say now that you did or you didn't? A. That I did not, that is my recollection.

Q. You are positive of that? A. Yes sir.

Q. Did you sell at the same prices that USG specified in their bulletins?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as incompetent, as calling for a conclusion, and not the proper way to prove prices.

Justice Stephens: Will you read the question again, Mr. Grover?

(The reporter read the question as above recorded.)

Justice Stephens: The objection is sustained. We have sustained many objections to that form of question.
5630 If you want to prove the prices, you will have to prove them in a competent manner. You may ask what the policy was.

Mr. Lapey: May the record show objection on behalf of National as to this testimony of Mr. Chism's, relating to metallized board and lath. I realize that that point has been passed upon, but I think the record should show that objection.

Justice Stephens: You are simply making the objection for the purpose of preserving National's record in respect to this witness?

Mr. Lapey: That is correct, sir.

Justice Stephens: The objection is noted and is overruled.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. You testified before the grand jury in the District of Columbia on May 3, 1940, did you not? A. On approximately that date, yes sir.

Q. I wish that you would look at your testimony beginning at page 1408, where I have indicated with a pencil mark and continuing down to page 1409, where I have indicated with a pencil mark, please.

Mr. Bromley: May we see it first, if the Court pleases?

Justice Stephens: Yes, you may, and then the Court will look at it.

(The document referred to was handed to defendants' counsel for examination, and following that it was 5631 handed to the Court for examination.)

Justice Stephens: Now show it to the witness, Mr. Marshal.

(The grand jury minutes were handed to the witness, but were not examined by him.)

Mr. Johnston: If the Court please, before the witness looks at those grand jury minutes, or that part of the minutes which has been indicated, I want to make a request that we be permitted to see the grand jury minutes dealing with that entire subject, that is of this witness, so that we may see what his story was before the grand jury. I think it is an improper use of grand jury minutes here, and should not be permitted, in the first place, but if it is, then we should not be limited to three or four questions and answers, which have been singled out by the Government, but we should be permitted to read enough of the minutes so that we may get the context.

Justice Jackson: This is being used to refresh recollection?

Mr. Knuff: In the first instance it is—

Mr. Johnston: But it is not fair to the witness to single out four or five questions, and have him refresh his recollection from that, without seeing the whole story.

Mr. Knuff: I think the whole story on metallized board occupies less than four pages, and if you will hand the minutes back to me, I will mark that portion, as I under-5632 stand it, and I will hand it up to the Court, and see whether or not that is correct.

Justice Stephens: We think it is fair that the witness should see all of it. Mark it out, and then submit it to defendants' counsel and to the Court again, and then let the witness see it.

I might state, gentlemen, that unless it will inconvenience anyone, there will be no afternoon recess, but the Court will adjourn at 3:30. There is a conference of the judges of the Court of Appeals this afternoon, which I have to attend.

Mr. Knuff: If your Honor please, I want to pass up now for your Honor's inspection, the grand jury minutes beginning at the top of page 1406 and ending where I have drawn a line on page 1408. It is my recollection that that is the entire grand jury testimony of this witness in connection with metallized board, at this particular time. Whether he testified at any other time or not, I don't know.

Justice Stephens: Hand it to defendants' counsel first.

(The grand jury minutes were handed to defendants' counsel for inspection and were thereafter handed to the Court for inspection.)

Justice Stephens: Show it all to the witness now.

(The grand jury minutes were handed to the witness for examination.)

Mr. Knuff: It starts at the top of page 1406, fol-
5633 lowing: "By Mr. Haddock."

Justice Stephens: And read right down to the point indicated on page 1408—isn't that right, Mr. Knuff?

Mr. Knuff: That is correct, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: And take your time, Mr. Chism.

Mr. Knuff: Now that Mr. Chism has finished, may I have the grand jury minutes, Mr. Marshal?

(The grand jury minutes were handed to Mr. Knuff.)

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Is it a fact that you did tell Mr. Kelleher that you did have an arrangement with USG concerning the price at which you would sell metallized board?

Mr. Johnston: Just a minute. Now if the Court please, in view of the fact that these other pages that were disclosed to us, put an entirely different light and explanation on the testimony of this witness before the grand jury than those pages that were previously shown, I now object to the use of or reference to these grand jury minutes unless and until I am privileged to see all of the testimony of this witness before the grand jury, for the reason—and I am speaking legally now, I have no personal reference to counsel—I have only counsel's word that these few pages are the pages that have any reference to or any bearing on this subject.

Coming back to my original objection, I think the whole thing is an improper use of grand jury minutes, but 5634 at least I am entitled to look at the minutes and satisfy myself, and not take counsel's word as to whether or not there is any other testimony of this witness in there, and so is the witness entitled to see his testimony.

Now it is just 20 minutes from closing time this evening, and the minutes are not long, and it is not going to hurt anybody and will facilitate the trial and speed up things here, if that permission is granted, and I make that request and object to the use of or reference to these minutes in any manner until I see them.

Justice Stephens: Is there any objection to that, Mr. Knuff?

Mr. Knuff: Yes, I have an objection to it for this reason, your Honor.

In the first place I think it would create a very bad precedent as far as the Department of Justice is concerned. I don't think that the legal position that Mr. Johnston takes is well taken.

The leading case, or one of the leading cases on this subject, is the Madison Oil Case. In the Madison Oil case—

Justice Stephens: You needn't argue to the Court the propriety of using grand jury minutes for purposes of refreshing recollection. We have already ruled in your favor on that.

Mr. Knuff: I am not going to argue as to the 5635 propriety of their use, but I am going to say that the practice that was adopted in the Madison Oil case, and which the Supreme Court of the United States followed, was for the Court to examine the grand jury minutes to see whether counsel was making an improper use of the grand jury minutes, or not, and that the Court could then say whether or not counsel was making an improper use of them.

The grand jury minutes are, in and of themselves, confidential or secret—

Mr. Johnston: (Interposing) They are not, that is the trouble.

Mr. Knuff: They can be used to refresh the witness' recollection. But Mr. Johnston is not entitled, under any ruling that I know of, ever made by any court of competent jurisdiction, to look at the entire testimony of this witness, the entire grand jury testimony of this witness, to see whether or not the matters that are used here to refresh his recollection are the whole of his testimony.

I think that is the duty of the Court.

Justice Stephens: I thought that the theory of the rule was that once the grand jury's proceeding is terminated by indictment or trial, or what-not, that the rule of secrecy had been dispensed with, so that unless there was something of a defamatory character, or something of that sort in them, which might in the discretion of the Court be kept secret, they could be looked at properly.

5636 I thought we had ruled, Mr. Knuff, that both counsel and the Court must look at the minutes. If the Court alone looks at the minutes or the record of the grand jury investigation, then counsel for the opposite party must, without opportunity to argue to the Court, or to make objections, accept the Court's ruling, and that is a most unusual procedure. I don't see, myself, offhand, any unfairness at all in letting Mr. Johnston examine the testimony of this witness.

Mr. Knuff: That was the exact question that was raised in the Madison Oil case. They wanted the right to inspect the entire grand jury testimony of the witness who was being interrogated, as to whether or not he said so-and-so, before the grand jury, and the Court in that case ruled that they were not entitled to inspect the entire grand jury testimony of the witness.

Justice Stephens: Is that in the Supreme Court's ruling?

Mr. Knuff: Yes.

The practice in the Madison Oil case was this: The attorney for the Government would say, "Did you testify so-and-so before the grand jury?"

The witness then answered whether he did or whether he didn't.

Counsel wanted the opportunity to examine the entire grand jury minutes. The Government objected to 5637 that procedure on the ground that they were not entitled to do that, and that the most that they could ask would be for the Court to inspect the grand jury minutes to see whether or not counsel for the Government was making an improper use of them.

I haven't any objection to the Court here inspecting the grand jury minutes to see whether I am making any improper use of them. But Mr. Johnston, under the Socony-Vacuum case, is definitely not entitled to look at the entire testimony of this witness before the grand jury.

Justice Jackson: How are you using those minutes now; for what purpose are you having the witness look at them?

Mr. Knuff: To see if they refresh his recollection.

Justice Jackson: Why don't you ask him that? You don't object to such a question as that, do you, Mr. Johnston?

Mr. Johnston: I want him to see all of his testimony, or at least I want to see it first.

I would like to answer that argument of Mr. Knuff. That Madison Oil case was a criminal case—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) We will hear you, Mr. Johnston, but before you go on, Judge Jackson raises the proposition that perhaps we are wasting a lot of time here, as we have in many other situations in this case, where we have debated on whether or not a witness could answer, and it later turned out that he didn't know anything about the matter. Perhaps this witness' answer, if he were asked if it does refresh his recollection, would be in the 5638 negative. If so, what would be the use in going further with this matter?

Mr. Johnston: Well, I don't know whether what they have shown him does or does not refresh his recollection.

Justice Jackson: Of course you don't, and we don't either, until he answers that question.

Justice Stephens: You have looked over these minutes that have been submitted to you thus far, haven't you?

The Witness: Yes.

Justice Stephens: Do they or do they not—answer this yes or no—refresh your recollection as to what Mr. Knuff—

Mr. Knuff: (Interposing) Pardon me, your Honor, but I just want to say one thing. When Judge Jackson asked me that question I said that that was going to be used first—

Justice Jackson: (Interposing) Let first things come first and second things come second.

Mr. Knuff: I just didn't want to be placed—

Justice Jackson: (Interposing) I understand what you mean.

Justice Stephens: You asked this witness the question as to whether or not it refreshed his recollection—on what? I have forgotten what it was all about.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Have you looked at the grand jury minutes that I have shown you? A. Yes.

5639 Q. Do they refresh your recollection as to whether or not you told Mr. Kelleher that you had an arrangement with the USG concerning the price at which you should sell metallized board?

Justice Stephens: Answer that yes or no. Do they or do they not refresh your recollection on that subject?

The Witness: They do not.

Justice Stephens: Now what else do you want to use them for?

Mr. Knuff: The witness has said that he didn't have any understanding with United States Gypsum Company concerning the price at which metallized board was to be sold.

I want to now use the grand jury minutes to impeach that testimony.

Justice Stephens: What is the citation of the Socony-Vacuum case in the Supreme Court?

Mr. Knuff: I am sorry, but I don't have it with me. I can get it for you, shortly.

Mr. Bromley: It is 310 U. S.

Justice Stephens: Mr. Cantor, will you get 310 U. S. for me, so that we may look at it.

How much of the grand jury record is covered by the testimony of this witness? Do you know, Mr. Johnston? probably you don't.

Mr. Johnston: I have never seen that testimony.

5640 I just saw those two or three pages.

Mr. Steffen: It starts, as I have it here, at page 1399, and runs to 1436.

Mr. Johnston: You see the defendants are at a very great disadvantage in a case like this. The criminal case is closed, and the grand jury minutes are supposed to be sealed, if that is their idea, and yet, as to one side of this case they are not sealed. They have every access to them, and we have no access to them, and I just cannot understand that.

Then they come in here with these witnesses, and particularly with this witness, and pick out a page or two, and they have the advantage of knowing the entire testimony, and we are put in the position of only looking at two or three pages.

I think the Court should rule that I have the privilege of looking at those minutes over the recess this evening.

Justice Stephens: It seems, offhand, very unfair to me, but if there is a ruling in the Supreme Court that fixes it, we will have to follow the law. I don't see, myself, offhand, Mr. Knuff, how Mr. Johnston's rights could be protected for his client by merely having the Court examine all of the grand jury minutes showing the testimony of this witness, and then having the Court conclude that the witness ought or ought not to see more than he has been shown, because the Court, conceivably, might conclude otherwise if Mr. Johnston had a right to look at these minutes and make an argument on the subject.

5641 The theory of fair trial is that both sides should be heard, and it does seem unfair to me that the Government is the only one that is allowed to look at these minutes in full; but if there is something in that case, the Socony-Vac-num case, that compels it, of course we are here to apply the law no matter where the chips may fall.

Mr. Johnston: If the Court please, I want this thing kept in mind in considering that case, and that is, that that Madison Oil case is not an analogous case to our situation here at all.

The Madison Oil case was a criminal case. That was the matter involved; that was the matter before the grand jury then. In this case it is entirely different. We were not a party to the criminal case at all; we were not indicted.

Even if there was some reason in the Socony-Vacuum case why counsel should not be permitted to see the minutes, it would not be any argument that we should be denied that right in this case, it being an entirely different situation.

(The volume requested, 310 U. S., was handed to the Court.)

Mr. Knuff: Page 231, your Honor, I believe is where it starts.

Justice Stephens: The Court has now read that portion of the Socony-Vacuum case, 310 U. S. 150, especially from pages 231 to 234, and it, in the view of the Court, does not bear out your contention, Mr. Knuff.

5642

Mr. Knuff: Before you make a final ruling, I don't want to interrupt you, but I would like to make a statement.

Justice Stephens: We don't want to be unfair to Mr. Johnston. On the other hand, we don't want to allow any fishing expedition into the grand jury minutes, and it is my recollection now—I may be wrong—but it is my recollection now that pages 1406 to 1408 are the only pages in the grand jury testimony that relate to metallized board, or rather to the testimony by this witness regarding metallized board.

Justice Jackson: What fishing could he do if he just looked at the testimony that was given by this single witness?

Mr. Knuff: We are under a very strict rule, over in the Department, not to allow the entire testimony before the grand jury to be disclosed. I want to comply with your Honor's ruling, and I do not want to be adjudged in contempt of court, but please don't put me in a position where I am disobeying the rule, as I consider it, of the Assistant Attorney General. Before the Court makes this ruling, allow me to take this up with Mr. Berge, as I can't turn these minutes over without getting the permission of Mr. Berge.

I have never known of a case where the grand jury minutes have been allowed to be inspected. I have known where they have tried repeatedly to obtain that right, but 5643 I can say, in all sincerity, that I know of no case, not a single one, where the defendants have ever been allowed to inspect the minutes of a grand jury, the entire minutes of a grand jury.

Justice Stephens: Now, Mr. Knuff, that case that you called to our attention holds, first, that the grand jury minutes were used merely for the purpose of refreshing recollection and nothing else. It holds that under those circumstances it was not prejudicial error to refuse to submit the minutes to the inspection of opposing counsel. But it clearly rules that the use of grand jury minutes is within the discretion of the trial judge, and that once the function of the grand jury has been discharged, the grand jury minutes can be used in court within the discretion of the judge.

Now the rule of an Assistant Attorney General with respect to the intra-departmental use of minutes of a grand jury, doesn't supervene the rule of a United States District Court.

Our ruling is that those minutes may be shown, so far as the testimony of this witness is concerned, to Mr. Johnston.

We think the case supports that, rather than holds to the contrary.

Justice Garrett: If you wish to confer—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) Of course if you want to confer with Mr. Berge and have him appear here, you may do so and have him here tomorrow morning.

5644 Mr. Knuff: We don't want to have Mr. Berge appear here, but I wanted to acquaint Mr. Berge with the facts of the case.

Justice Garrett: I suggest that you might do that by withdrawing the question for the time being.

Mr. Knuff: I will do that, then. I will withdraw the pending question.

Justice Stephens: Very well. Of course that means that we will be delayed again tomorrow, because if you ask this question again, and the minutes have to be read at that time, there are 45 or 50 pages of testimony that will have to be read by the defendants' counsel and by the Court.

There can't be any question but what the District Court has discretion under the case which you cite. The Supreme Court of the United States says that it is within the discretion of the trial court. If that is true, your internal rules in the Department of Justice cannot supervene the ruling of the Court.

If you want to withdraw the question, all right.

Mr. Knuff: I will withdraw the question, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: Very well.

Announce the recess.

(Whereupon a recess was taken at 3:30 o'clock p. m. until 10:00 o'clock a. m. of the following day.)

5645 IN THE

DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Civil Action No. 8017

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

Plaintiff,

v.

UNITED STATES GYPSUM COMPANY; NATIONAL GYPSUM COMPANY; CERTAIN-TEED PRODUCTS CORPORATION; THE CELOTEX CORPORATION; EBSARY GYPSUM COMPANY, INC.; NEWARK PLASTER COMPANY; SAMUEL M. GLOYD, doing business under the name of TEXAS CEMENT PLASTER COMPANY; SEWELL L. AVERY; OLIVER M. KNODE; MELVIN H. BAKER; BROR H. DAHLBERG; HENRY J. HARTLEY; FREDERICK G. EBSARY; and FREDERICK TOMKINS,

Defendants.

Seventh Floor,
Internal Revenue Building,
Washington, D. C.,
Wednesday, March 29, 1944.

The above-entitled cause came on for further hearing at 10:00 o'clock a.m., pursuant to adjournment, before Honorable Harold M. Stephens, Honorable Finis J. Garrett, and Honorable Joseph R. Jackson, sitting as the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

APPEARANCES:

(Same as heretofore noted.)

5650 You may take the stand, Mr. Spencer.

Thereupon, H. DORSEY SPENCER called as a witness for and on behalf of the United States, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Will you state your full name, Mr. Spencer? A. H. Dorsey Spencer.

5651 Q. And where are you located? A. 420 Lexington Avenue, New York.

Q. Are you a member of the patent bar? A. Yes. I am also a member of the bar of Massachusetts, the bar of the State of New York, the Supreme Court, and various District bars.

Q. For how long have you been practicing? A. In general patent practice for 29 years. Before that I was with the Patent Department of the United Shoe Machinery Company for several years.

Q. Were you at one time a member of the firm of Newell & Spencer & Safford? A. Yes.

Q. I now show you what has been marked as Government's Exhibit 601 for Identification; also, what has been marked as Government's Exhibit 602 for Identification—the first being a letter purporting to have been sent by you, Mr. Spencer, under date of March 4, 1936, and addressed to Certain-teed Products Corp.; and Exhibit 602 being a letter addressed to Mr. S. C. Straub of the Certain-teed Products Corp., under date of December 27, 1933.

(The documents referred to were marked as Government's Exhibits Nos. 601 and 602 for Identification.)

(Government's Exhibits Nos. 601 and 602 for Identification were handed to the witness.)

5652 By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Can you identify Government's Exhibit 601 as being your letter? A. Yes, it is signed by me.

Q. And can you identify Government's Exhibit 602? A. Yes. Both appear to be the original letters as signed by me.

Mr. Steffen: We offer Government's Exhibits Nos. 601 and 602, Your Honor.

Justice Stephens: Have counsel had an opportunity to inspect them?

Mr. Steffen: Yes, they have had photostatic copies.

I might say, by way of identification, that the letters have been identified, and they were received from the Certain-teed Products Corportion's files. They bear the Item Nos. A-e-19 and A-e-61.

Mr. Adams: There is no question about that.

Mr. Steffen: The only question which I think might be raised is as to the attorney-client privilege, and this was passed upon by the Court in connection with Exhibit 269 some time ago, when the same question arose. That exhibit was admitted at page 2309 of the transcript, over Mr. Adams' objection raising the attorney-client privilege claim.

I might say further that the present letters are a little more in point, particularly the letter of 1936, 5653 inasmuch as it states many of the things that appear in the Certain-teed's answer to the Government's complaint, paragraph 119.

Justice Stephens: You say page 2309 of the record?

Mr. Steffen: At page 2309 of the record, it was admitted.

Justice Stephens: Let the Court read them.

(Government's Exhibits Nos. 601 and 602 for Identification examined by the Court.)

Justice Stephens: Is there objection?

Mr. Adams: Yes, if Your Honor please, I think I should ask for permission to ask just one or two questions of Mr. Spencer.

Justice Stephens: You may.

By Mr. Adams:

Q. Mr. Spencer, with respect to these two letters, Exhibits 601 and 602 for Identification, at which you have just looked, at the times that you wrote those letters you were, in your capacity as a lawyer, advising Certain-teed; is that correct? A. Yes.

Mr. Adams: Now, I object to the introduction of these in evidence on the ground that they are within the privilege existing between attorney and client. It has been testified that they were written while Mr. Spencer was act-5654 ing as counsel; they show on their face that they contain legal advice; and it is our position that they, therefore, are within the privilege, and we assert that the privilege has not been waived up to this time by any act of the defendant Certain-teed.

Justice Stephens: Do you raise any point different from what you raised in respect of the other similar exhibit, Exhibit No. 269?

Mr. Adams: No, I do not, Your Honor.

We had a point there under the answer to paragraph 119—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) We have it all in mind. I would be glad to hear you further, but we have it all in mind.

Mr. Adams: All right.

(The Justices conferred.)

Justice Stephens: The exhibits are admitted in evidence, consistently with the previous ruling, and for the reasons stated in respect of the ruling, in respect of Exhibit 269.

Mr. Finck: If the Court please, may the record show an objection on behalf of Baker and National, on the ground that these are incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and have no bearing on the issues as regards Baker and National in this case. They only relate to perforated lath, and of course, National, we contend—

5655 Justice Stephens: (Interposing) The majority of the Court, I believe, overruled a similar objection at the time of the reserved ruling.

Mr. Finck: That is true.

Justice Stephens: Your objection may be noted, but it is overruled.

Mr. Bromley: I thought the Court was only passing on the issues of competency, and therefore I did not earlier make my objection, which I do now. I object to both exhibits on the ground that they are immaterial and irrelevant, if they are offered as bearing upon the issues of the invalidity of the patent in question.

Mr. Steffen: While they are not offered for purposes of proving invalidity of the patents, I thought Your Honors' ruling covered that very thoroughly.

Justice Stephens: Yes, they are not being received to prove that the patents were invalid, but under the charge of lack of bona fides in the use of the patents as a basis for license agreements.

Mr. Bromley: I object to them further on the ground that they are immaterial and irrelevant because not in furtherance of any conspiracy, and not binding on any of the defendants other than Certain-teed.

I do not understand the theory of the Government when they offer this piece of evidence as to Certain-teed, 5656 a fact which, incidentally, is admitted in the answer, and I think they will admit that they have no evidence that USG ever had any advice that the patents were invalid. Its position was that they were valid, and they were going to enforce them. So unless the Government is prepared to state that they have further evidence to show the state of mind of the licensor, it seems to me that this evidence, by itself, has no materiality at all to the charge of subterfuge which, as I understand it, is the only theory on which it is offered.

Mr. Steffen: We say as to that, Your Honor, that proof of state of mind, or of the understanding of any one of the parties who have gotten together on the basis of these license agreements, is certainly admissible for purposes of showing the understanding of such party, and if it is upon an understanding that it might be desirable to use patents for purposes of price fixing, we contend that that shows subterfuge.

Justice Stephens: Well, I think that raises the same question that we passed on with respect to Exhibit 324, which had to do with the admission or asserted admission of Certain-teed in respect of the Beaver Products litigation. We ruled there that the mere admission of one alleged co-conspirator, although valid as against that co-conspirator, was not binding upon other co-conspirators unless it is shown to be in furtherance of or execution of the conspiracy; and we think the same reservation ought 5657 to be made here. The exhibits will be received in evidence, but subject to the usual reservation with respect to declarations of alleged co-conspirators, and not to be held binding upon the other defendants unless shown to be in furtherance of or execution of the conspiracy. We do not make a reservation requiring a showing that these exhibits are Certain-teed's act, because Certain-teed took a license under the Roos patent, on perforated lath, after the receipt of the Spencer letters.

Mr. Bromley: Well, I understand, then, that counsel does not state that he has or expects to produce any other evidence tying this up with any other defendant, and especially with the licensor?

Mr. Steffen: We make no such stipulation, Your Honor.

It is open to us now, I take it, or on rebuttal, to tie up this evidence with other defendants.

Justice Stephens: You have a right to try to do that.

(The documents referred to, marked as Government's Exhibits Nos. 601 and 602, were received in evidence.)

Mr. Steffen: I have one other preliminary matter. I would like to ask Mr. Adams in regard to Mr. Dowd, the reason being that I want to get our witness schedule straightened out.

Mr. Bromley: I wanted to be heard on that entire situation at some convenient time.

Mr. Adams: I, too.

Mr. Steffen: As it was left yesterday, I understood that Mr. Adams was going to contact Mr. Dowd, and 5658 that he would be presented as a witness.

Justice Stephens: What do you want to ask Mr. Adams? Do that first.

Mr. Steffen: I want to make sure that Mr. Dowd will be presented at an early date, so we can get our subpoena out for Mr. Redfield, if the Court rules that way, and get our witnesses scheduled.

Mr. Adams: What I said yesterday, perhaps Mr. Steffen misunderstood. I asked the Court, I think, when the Court would like to have Mr. Dowd presented, because of the fact that it might be difficult for me to get hold of him, and the Court said that he could be presented at the convenience of counsel and the Court. I have not, in the interim, done anything about trying to locate Mr. Dowd, since then. I do not know, as a matter of fact, that Mr. Dowd certainly can not be available in the East earlier than approximately the middle of April. Of course, we adjourn on Friday, anyway, for this period.

Justice Stephens: And take up on the 11th of April.

Mr. Adams: Yes, and I knew that Mr. Dowd could not be here until sometime about the middle of April, so I haven't taken it up with him in the meantime.

Justice Stephens: Will you do so as soon as you reasonably can, and acquaint Mr. Steffen with the probable date when you will bring him here?

5659 Mr. Adams: Yes. I think we can get together on that. As Mr. Bromley said, there is another phase of the matter which he and I would like to discuss with the Court, which we think might possibly be determinative of the whole problem.

Justice Stepehns: We will give you an opportunity to do that, if you wish to, Mr. Bromley, before the close of the present week's session; but we perhaps ought to get on this morning with the witness on the witness stand, because Mr. Chism, I think, is desirous of getting back to his business. Perhaps at the close of Mr. Chism's testimony you can raise that matter. Can you do that then?

Mr. Bromley: Yes, thank you.

Justice Stephens: Have you any further questions of Mr. Spencer?

Mr. Steffen: No, we have not.

Justice Stephens: Any cross-examination?

Cross Examination

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. Wasn't it your practice, Mr. Spencer, to advise your clients, in situations where you thought a patent was invalid, that while that was your opinion, it was entirely possible that you might be wrong? A. Oh, yes, that is always true, of course.

Q. And did you give that advice to the Certain-teed Company in connection with this Roos patent?

5660 A. I think it appears in the opinions, as I recall it, where I state that—Justice Stephens: (Interposing) Which exhibit are you referring to?

Mr. Bromley: Do you have in mind, Mr. Spencer, what you said at the bottom of page 2 of Exhibit 602?

The Witness: Yes. I also suggested—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) That is where you referred to the erudition in patent law of United States District Judges, isn't it?

The Witness: Yes. I also suggested that Certain-teed conduct certain experiments, which I don't think they ever did.

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. Where is that reference, Mr. Spencer? A. That is in the paragraph beginning near the bottom of page 4 of Exhibit 601.

Q. Would you point that out to me, Mr. Spencer, and tell me where the paragraph begins, what the words are?

Justice Stephens: (Leading) "I would suggest that if you wish to avoid the patent", and so forth.

Mr. Bromley: Thank you.

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. Now you say that the tests referred to in that sentence of Exhibit 601 were never made, so far as you know, 5661 is that right? A. I think not. You see, this opinion in 1936 was given shortly before the company changed hands, and as I recall it, they entered into the license agreement shortly after that.

Q. Now, you also pointed out to Certain-teed, did you not, in giving the advice, that a patent issued by the Patent Office is valid on its face? A. That is true, yes.

Q. You pointed out to Certain-teed, didn't you, that patent validity litigation is expensive, and the damages resulting from infringement might be very high? A. I think that is in both opinions.

Q. And you expressed the view to Certain-teed, didn't you, that as a business matter, it might, of course, be advisable for Certain-teed to take a license, even in spite of your opinion? A. I always advise clients to keep out of litigation if they can.

Q. And you, of course, told them, didn't you, Mr. Spencer, that in your judgment it would be unwise for them completely to ignore the Roos patent? A. I think that is in the letters, but I am not sure.

Q. Well, at any rate, in Exhibit 601, you suggest methods of avoiding the patent, do you not? A. Yes.

5662 Q. Particularly on page 3. A. Yes. And, of course, that was the purpose of the paragraph beginning near the bottom of page 4, also.

Q. Beginning with what words? A. "I would suggest".

Q. So that it is true, isn't it, that it was your judgment that Certain-teed would be very unwise completely to ignore the Roos perforated patent? A. That is true.

Q. And you told them that, didn't you? A. Yes.

Q. Now, you do not mean to suggest, in anything that you have said here, that Certain-teed did not act in entire good faith in taking the perforated lath license from USG, do you? A. I think their action was consistent with my opinion.

Mr. Bromley: That is all.

Justice Stephens: Mr. Adams?

Mr. Adams: I have no questions, Your Honor.

Mr. Steffen: We have nothing further, Your Honor.

Justice Stephens: You are excused, Mr. Spencer.

The Witness: Thank you.

(Witness excused.)

Justice Stephens: Do you wish to be heard fur-
5663 ther on the matter that was before the Court last night at the time of adjournment, with respect to the matter of impeachment through the grand jury testimony?

Mr. Steffen: Yes, Your Honor.

Justice Stephens: How long do you wish to be heard?

Mr. Steffen: Only for three or four minutes.

I have a suggestion to make. If Your Honor would care to take the morning recess right now, then we could carry right along following that.

Justice Stephens: Very well. We will take the usual morning recess.

(Thereupon, a short recess was taken, after which the trial was resumed as follows:)

5664 Mr. Steffen: I have one correction to make. Yesterday, when your Honor asked me how much grand jury testimony there was of this witness, I stated—this was while Mr. Knuff was out of the room—that it started on page 1399 and ended on page 1436. That was a total of 36 pages, approximately. I was looking, at that time, at the volume of grand jury testimony that Mr. Knuff was using.

It appears that in the preceding volume, which contains the testimony for May 2, 1940, Mr. Chism testified on pages 1293 to 1326—a total of 33 pages; on pages 1347 to 1396—a total of 49 pages. That makes a total, all told, of 118 pages of testimony.

We very carefully searched the total testimony again to determine whether the particular pages that we were reading, or having the witness look at yesterday, constituted his whole testimony upon the matter in question, and we are thoroughly satisfied that that is the case.

We recognize that the Court, at the end of the session yesterday, expressed, informally I take it, the opinion that it would be perhaps only fair to allow defense counsel to examine into the grand jury testimony to ascertain whether or not the Government is accurate in saying that the particular pages are the only pages having to do with the metallized board.

I want now to say briefly that from the practice of the Division, and I think that the Court also should con-5665 sider the position of the Government in this matter, there are 118 pages all told of testimony on various matters, and that it is a question of being fair to one or fair to the other. The defendants are, of course, entitled to satisfy themselves, or be satisfied, that the testimony in question is the only testimony dealing with metallized board by this witness.

Justice Stephens: Isn't it rather a question of being fair to both, Mr. Steffen?

Mr. Steffen: I should say that would be true, yes.

And to be fair to us, we feel that we would not wish to allow defense counsel to examine at their leisure, or, as Mr. Johnston suggested, that they take the minutes overnight—or at all—the entire amount of testimony.

Justice Stephens: Of this witness?

Mr. Steffen: That is correct.

Now, what we suggest doing as a way out of the predicament is simply to make an offer of proof of the testimony which we are offering to impeach Mr. Chism.

We do that—Mr. Knuff will make that offer—upon our representation, first, that this testimony is the only testimony having to do with the matter in question; and second, with the offer that the Court examine, if it will, the entire testimony to determine whether we have made an accurate and fair selection.

As I understand it, there is no question before the 5666 Court, or was not at the close of the session yesterday?

Justice Stephens: No, because you withdrew the last question.

Mr. Steffen: I don't think there was even a question pending. But we would now like to make an independent offer.

Justice Stephens: You may make an offer if you want to, for the sake of your record, and then we will hear from Mr. Johnston, following which the Court will make a ruling.

Mr. Steffen: Thank you.

Mr. Knuff: May it please the Court, we offer to prove that the witness, H. E. Chism, on May 3rd, 1940, appeared before the Additional Grand Jury of the District of Columbia in the proceedings entitled, "The United States of America v. United States Gypsum Company, et al", and testified as follows—

Mr. Johnston: (Interposing) Now wait a minute—

Mr. Knuff: (Interposing) This is a part of my offer, if your Honor please.

Justice Stephens: That is very true, but we have to hear objections to the offer, if counsel wishes to make them.

Mr. Johnston: I certainly object to his reading that into the record. That is just what we were talking about yesterday, and what we are talking about this morning. I renew my objection of yesterday. If he reads it into the record, then it is there.

5667 Justice Stephens: I thought the Government was making an offer for the purpose of obtaining a ruling to protect its record.

Mr. Knuff: That is right, your Honor.

Mr. Johnston: What are you going to do about keeping it out of the record; will that go out of the record?

Justice Stephens: If the Court rules that the Government is not entitled to make proof of the material contained within the offer, except upon the condition that it submits to you the testimony of this witness for examination, and the Government is not willing to accept this condition, then the Court would reject the offer and would not consider that testimony.

Complete your offer.

Mr. Knuff: I wonder if I hadn't ought to start all over again so that we can get it without any interruptions.

Justice Stephens: You may if you wish; how long is your offer?

Mr. Knuff: It is about a page of typewritten material.

Justice Stephens: Very well.

Mr. Knuff: We offer to prove that the witness H. E. Chism, on May 3, 1940, appeared before the Additional Grand Jury of the District of Columbia in the proceedings entitled "The United States of America v. United States Gypsum Company, et al", and testified as follows:

"Q. Since you became a licensee of United States Gypsum Company on February 10, 1937, have you re-5668 ceived from United States Gypsum Company any price bulletins covering metallized board? A. I believe the metallized board is included in their regular price bulletins; I am quite sure it is.

"Q. Do you recall having received quotations from United States Gypsum Company covering metallized board? A. Yes, we have.

"By Mr. Kelleher:

"Q. Why were you receiving price lists from USG for metallized board when you were not manufacturing it?

A. We were selling it, distributing it. We paid a royalty on that board.

"Q. Well, now, explain what your understanding of your arrangement with USG was concerning the price at which you would sell board purchased from some other company? A. I don't quite understand that question.

"Q. What arrangement did you have with USG concerning the price at which you would sell metallized board? A. Sell at their regular published price, bulletin price.

"Q. And on the basis of what negotiations did you arrive at such an understanding? A. In accordance with our license agreement.

"Q. Under the terms of your license agreement, are you obliged to sell metallized board purchased from another company at USG prices? A. That would be my interpretation.

"Q. And you did at all times? A. Yes."

That testimony appears on pages 1408 and 1409 of the transcript of the testimony of this witness before the grand jury. This testimony is offered for the purpose of contradicting and impeaching the witness H. E. Chism.

The testimony that is challenged appears on pages 5919 and 5920 of the present transcript.

As a part of this offer, we state that we have exhibited to counsel for the defendants, pages 1406, 1407, 1408, and the first 19 lines of page 1409 of the grand jury testimony.

As a part of this offer, we state to the Court that the testimony appearing on pages 1406, 1407, 1408 and the first 19 lines of page 1409 of the transcript of the testimony of H. E. Chism, constitutes all the testimony given by the witness before the grand jury concerning this subject matter.

As a part of this offer, we further offer to allow the Court to inspect the transcript of all the testimony given before the grand jury by the witness H. E. Chism, in order that the Court may assure itself that no other testimony upon the subject matter was given by the witness.

(The Justices conferred.)

Justice Stephens: Is there anything else from the Government?

Mr. Knuff: I think at this time, on the present state of the record, that our offer is sufficient for any objection, if one is made. I do not know whether an objection will be made or not.

Justice Stephens: The nature of the offer would seem to give the impression that Texas had a metallized board license. You don't contend that, do you?

Mr. Knuff: We do not, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: Is there any objection to this offer?

Mr. Bromley: May it please the Court, I object to the evidence offered, on the ground that it is immaterial, incompetent and irrelevant.

In the first place, the offer is obviously, on its face, incomplete and unfair because all in the courtroom know that there is testimony on pages 1406 and 1407 which bears directly on the testimony which Mr. Knuff has offered to prove. He does not, however, include that in his offer.

Now there may be, in the 118 pages to which reference has been made, evidence which completely explains this. I make that statement because of an experience I had in the criminal case. We went through this very sort of thing in the criminal case, where Mr. Kelleher confronted a witness with a page or two of his grand jury testimony, and after an argument, Judge Goldsborough ordered him to hand the grand jury minutes to me, and I took them 5671 and examined the witness from many other pages than those called to his attention by Mr. Kelleher. The effect of the examination was to show that the witness before the grand jury had changed his testimony and given a corrected answer. That was all demonstrated in the criminal case.

So I say it is not fair, and we should not be asked to rely upon the assurance of Government counsel in the light of that experience.

This situation is a complicated one. The testimony which has been read here, in this offer of proof, is subject to a simple, obvious explanation, if anyone understands the facts of the case.

That explanation is that the metallized board which the Texas Cement Plaster Company sold was board which it manufactured itself in the first instance, under its license, then took it across the street to the National plant and had the foil put on it.

Now as this very offer shows, the Texas Company had to pay a royalty on that board, and did pay a royalty because it manufactured it, and it was patented board manufactured under its general license. The price bulletins fixed the price of that board, as made, before the foil was put on it, and of course the Texas Company, if it sold that board, had to sell it for at least that price fixed for ordinary board.

Justice Jackson: That is already in the record
5672 through the testimony of Mr. Chism yesterday. He said that they made the board, and brought it to the plant of National, had it metallized, and then brought it back and sold it.

Mr. Bromley: Yes, your Honor, but he didn't take the final step and say why it was that the price of that board was fixed. It was fixed not at the price for metallized board, but at the price for ordinary plain board. Now the explanation is that he went ahead and sold it for a higher price than he could get for ordinary board, because the metallized board was more valuable.

I think this testimony is capable of a simple explanation, and I think we are entitled to show whether that wasn't given before the grand jury; but whether it was or not, counsel should know that that offer is a correct one.

Therefore I think the offer is incompetent and immaterial unless we be given an opportunity to look at it.

Justice Stephens: Do you wish to be heard further, Mr. Johnston?

Mr. Johnston: No, your Honor.

Mr. Knuff: May I be heard further?

Justice Stephens: Yes.

Mr. Knuff: I would like to answer Mr. Bromley in the order in which he took up his presentation to the Court.

Mr. Bromley referred to pages 1406 and 1407 of the grand jury testimony.

5673 There is nothing on pages 1406 and 1407 of the grand jury testimony that in any way contradicts Mr. Chism about what he said on the witness stand yesterday.

Pages 1406 and 1407 of the grand jury testimony relate entirely to the arrangement that Mr. Chism had with the National Gypsum Company as to whether or not he received National Gypsum Company's price lists, and as to how he found out about the National Gypsum Company's prices. He told us on those pages that he would pick up the price lists at somebody else's office. There was some discussion as to why he didn't write to National, and he said it would be rather a delayed manner of getting that information.

So there is nothing on pages 1406 and 1407 that in any way contradicts anything that is said on pages 5919 and 5920 of this record, which is the subject matter that I wish to impeach Mr. Chism on.

On pages 5919 and 5920 of this record, the following appears:

"Q. Your company did sign a contract under the Hite and Hagerty Patents on February 10th, 1937, did they not? A. Yes sir, we did.

"Q. And after you signed that contract, didn't your company receive from USG the metallized board bulletins? A. No sir, I don't think so.

5674 "Q. You don't think so? A. No sir.

"Q. And didn't you have correspondence with USG concerning the meaning of the bulletins that were sent you? A. Not the bulletins, I think I had some correspondence relative to one bulletin.

"Q. What bulletin was that? A. I couldn't tell you now.

"Q. And didn't you have an arrangement with USG that you would sell metallized board in accordance with the terms of USG's bulletins? A. No sir, we had no such arrangement.

"Q. You know Mr. Grant Kelleher, don't you? A. I have met the gentleman, yes.

"Q. Did you ever tell Mr. Grant Kelleher that you had an arrangement with USG to sell metallized board at bulletin prices? A. I don't think I told him anything like that.

"Q. If you had told him about it would you have known it? A. I believe I would.

"Q. Would you say now that you did or you didn't? A. That I did not, that is my recollection.

"Q. You are positive of that? A. Yes sir."

Now I submit that anything that is on pages 1406 and 1407 of the grand jury testimony of course could not 5675 impeach what I have just read from pages 5919 and 5920 of yesterday's transcript, and for that reason I did not offer the testimony appearing at pages 1406 and 1407 of the grand jury testimony. My offer was limited—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) Mr. Knuff, I don't understand Mr. Bromley to state that you were required to offer that. What he is stating is that the contents of pages 1406 and 1407 indicate that there may be material in the record, like that, which might tend to explain, if counsel were allowed to look at it, the asserted impeachment—isn't that right, Mr. Bromley?

Mr. Bromley: Yes, your Honor, that is right.

Mr. Knuff: I can assure the Court—I read this testimony last night, staying up until two o'clock—that the words "metallized lath", the words "metal lath", or the words, "foil board", do not appear in Mr. Chism's testimony before the grand jury at any other place than 1406, 1407, 1408, and the first 19 lines of page 1409.

I make that representation to the Court as an attorney, that there is no place in that grand jury testimony that even mentions the word "metallized," other than I have indicated, and we offer it to the Court, for the Court's perusal, that is the entire testimony of Mr. Chism, and we feel confident that if the Court will examine that testimony, the Court will sustain the position that I have taken. There can be no question—

5676 Justice Stephens: (Interposing) There is no question about the good faith of counsel's representations, Mr. Knuff, you needn't argue that.

Mr. Knuff: Thank you. There can be no question that the purpose of their request in this case is nothing more nor less than a fishing expedition—

Mr. Johnston: If the Court please, I resent that statement—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) Express your resentment a little later. Let's hear what Mr. Knuff has to say.

Mr. Knuff: They want to find out, as defendants have from time to time, almost from the beginning of grand jury investigations, what a witness has testified before a grand jury, and I submit that the courts have uniformly held that whether the request is made when the witness is called upon to testify, or whether the request is made concerning a plea in abatement on the basis of a motion to quash an indictment, or whether the question is raised on a motion to inspect grand jury minutes for irregularities that might appear before the grand jury—the courts have been almost uniformly consistent in their rulings that a defendant does not have that right.

Mr. Johnston has said that this is an unfair proceeding that the Government has access to these grand jury minutes.

Of course the Government has access to these grand 5677 jury minutes. It has always been the practice to allow the Government to have access to the grand jury minutes. Government's counsel appears before the grand jury. We are not asking the Court to create for us any new right, we are simply asking the Court to preserve a right which the Courts have consistently said that we have.

Justice Stephens: Are you through?

Mr. Knuff: Yes, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: Mr. Johnston, do you wish to be heard?

Mr. Johnston: Just to express my resentment of that kind of a statement, I think it is entirely improper and I don't think it is justified at all.

Mr. Bromley has restated my objections of yesterday, and I see no difference between this offer and the question that came up yesterday.

Justice Stephens: We think there is no basis in the record, and no basis in any conduct on the part of counsel for the defendants, which would warrant Government counsel charging them with carrying on a fishing expedition, which is a charge of an improper examination of the grand jury minutes.

The Court will rule on the matter, except that before doing so, the Court will ask Mr. Levi, who has been introduced to the Court this morning as Mr. Berge's first assistant, if he wishes to be heard on this matter.

Mr. Levi: No, I think not, your Honor.

5678 Justice Stephens: The Court has very carefully examined, since last night's recess, the case of U. S. v. Socony-Vacuum Oil Company, 310 U. S., 150, and particularly that portion in Topic VI, beginning at page 231, and running to the top of page 237, which has to do with the use of grand jury testimony in the course of a trial.

The Court thinks that the statement made by the Government yesterday concerning that case was not a correct statement of the case, and the Court wishes to call attention to some one or two items in respect of the case and its meaning, as well as to state the basis of the ruling which it is about to make.

The Court calls particular attention to the fact that in that case the minutes were being used only for the purpose of refreshing the recollection of the witness, and not for the purpose of impeachment, and that the ruling clearly, or by clear implication, differentiates the practice in respect of refreshing recollection and the practice concerning impeachment.

The Court calls attention also to the fact that in that case those portions of the grand jury minutes which were examined upon for the purpose of refreshing recollection were read to the witness by the Judge in the presence of defendants' counsel, so that they were not withheld from the attention of defendants' counsel, they were read in the courtroom.

The Supreme Court said: "* * * the court adopted
5679 the practice of inspecting the transcript and itself seeking to refresh the witness' recollection by reading from his prior testimony. At no time was the transcript shown to the witness."

Obviously, therefore, the reading must have been out loud in the courtroom; otherwise, the witness wouldn't have known what was in the transcript.

Now the Court has these observations to make upon the position of the Government.

In the first place, the use of minutes to refresh recollection is quite different from their use in respect of impeachment:

First—items which are used merely to refresh recollection are not put in evidence.

Second—if the part that is shown to a witness for the purpose of refreshing his recollection does not refresh his recollection, adverse counsel would not be interested in further portions to seek to refresh recollection—there would be no point in that.

Third—If the part shown to the witness does refresh his recollection, then other portions, if shown to the witness, could hardly, to coin a phrase, "unfreshen it".

Hence, there could be no harm in not showing all of the evidence, all of the witness' testimony, to adverse counsel in respect of refreshing recollection, and all that the Court 5680 in the Socony-Vacuum case held, Mr. Knuff, was that under the practice adopted there it was not prejudicial error to decline, under those circumstances to submit the actual minutes to adverse counsel, since their use was merely to refresh recollection, and since they were read out loud in the presence of adverse counsel.

Now contrast that with their use for impeachment. In the first place, the impeaching portion is put in evidence, that is to say, the orthodox practice in respect of impeachment is to ask the witness on his examination what he said, and then, after he has stated that, ask him if he didn't make a different or contrary statement elsewhere, and if he denies that, show him or prove to him the contradictory statement and put that in the record, so that the Court can determine what the nature of his credibility is.

The impeaching material is, of course, itself not direct evidence on the merits of the case, but it is in evidence in order that the Court may compare it and test credibility.

Second, other portions of a witness' statement, or other statements that he may have made in the course of the grand jury proceedings, may, if examined, prove to modify the effect of the impeaching material. Therefore, to withhold the witness' testimony from inspection of adverse counsel would be to deprive him and his client of the possible opportunity of qualifying or explaining the asserted impeaching material, and the opportunity, therefore, of attempting to re-accredit the witness in respect of what adverse 5681 counsel regards as favorable or truthful testimony.

No rule of which we are aware, and certainly not the Socony-Vacuum case, compels a party to rely upon the judgment of his adversary or his adversary's counsel as to what is a fair selection of material from previous testimony used for impeaching purposes, or upon the Court's selection of such material, and examination of such material. Such a rule would deny to a party, pro tanto, representation by his own counsel.

Such a rule would be obviously unfair, it would be a revival of Star Chamber proceedings, Star Chamber methods. It would deny to one of the parties to the case the opportunity of seeing material shown only to the Court and to the prosecuting authority.

The fact that this is a Government-called witness cannot affect the foregoing, for the attempted impeachment is upon testimony regarded by the Government as favorable to the defendants. It is for that reason, obviously, that the Government wishes to impeach this witness.

In addition to what I have said concerning the Socony-Vacuum case, and at the possible risk of some repetition, I wish to state further that the Socony-Vacuum case determines flatly and clearly that the use of grand jury minutes for the purpose of refreshing recollection, and, impliedly in respect of impeachment, is within the discretion of the trial judge.

All the Court held in the particular case was that it was not an abuse of discretion, that no prejudicial harm 5682 had been shown, for the Court to use the minutes, or allow the minutes to be used as they were in that case.

Second, the Court held that the reason for secrecy had passed, the grand jury proceeding having entirely ended.

Third, the Court clearly differentiated between impeachment and refreshment, so far as the need of displaying the witness' testimony to adverse counsel is concerned.

Fourth, the Court held in terms, at page 233, that: "Normally, of course, the material so used must be shown to opposing counsel upon demand, if it is handed to the witness."

The rule of the Department of Justice which has been asserted to exist, not to disclose grand jury minutes indiscriminately, may have some proper foundation, but that is one thing, but one entirely different from the situation which is presented here in the courtroom.

To lift the veil of secrecy in the prosecutor's office, or in respect of the grand jury minutes in the possession of the prosecutor, for his own use and advantage in the courtroom, and then to lower it again as against the adverse party, is an entirely different thing from withholding the grand jury minutes from indiscriminate inspection in the Department of Justice, and in the opinion of the Court it would be a grossly unfair proceeding, which a court of equity ought not permit.

The conclusion of the Court is that if the testimony
5683 of the witness before the grand jury concerning metallized board, the prices charged for it, and the like, is to be used for the purpose of impeachment by the Government, all of the testimony of the witness must be displayed to the Court and to adverse counsel, and also, subject to the Court's ruling after inspection and after hearing the Government and adverse counsel, to the witness. If the Government does not wish to abide this rule, then the use of that portion of the minutes selected by the Government for impeachment, and offered, is denied.

It is for you to choose, gentlemen for the Government; if you wish to conduct this proceeding in the manner which the Court regards as fair to both parties, then this offer of allegedly impeaching material may be received; but if you wish to abide the rule of the Department of Justice, that this material is not to be disclosed to adverse counsel and to the witness, then we reject the offer.

I may say that my colleagues fully concur in all of this ruling and in all that I have said.

Mr. Steffen: I want to say just briefly in regard to your Honor's last statement concerning the rule of the Department of Justice, that we had no purpose at all to set up a rule which, as you have pointed out, is for our own guidance, in opposition to anything that this Court should rule was what the law is on the subject, and 5684 we of course would be guided by our own conduct of the case, and as I say, we had no intention and no purpose to have that treated as in any way in contradistinction to the Court's ruling upon the law.

Justice Stephens: Very well.

Mr. Steffen: We still feel that it would not be desirable, in the conduct of our case, to take the time or to permit the full examination of Mr. Chism's testimony at this time. We have other questions that will come up, and we would rather not have all of that testimony examined now.

Justice Stephens: I might add this—in fact I intended to add it—that if the minutes of the witness' testimony are to be inspected, that is to say if you choose to make your offer upon the terms which the Court has laid down, if they are to be inspected by adverse counsel, the Court within its discretion would rule that the inspection should take place in the courtroom, not, Mr. Johnston, because of any doubt that it would be used improperly if taken out of the courtroom, but because grand jury minutes are frequently in only one set, and an accident on the street or elsewhere might possibly destroy them in some manner.

Mr. Johnston: That is entirely satisfactory.

Justice Stephens: Then the Court understands that the Government now chooses not to submit the minutes to the inspection of adverse counsel. Therefore, the Court's ruling will be made final that the offer is rejected.

5685 Mr. Knuff: Mr. Chism, take the stand, please.

Thereupon, C. E. Chism resumed the stand and testified further as follows:

Direct Examination (Resumed)

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Am I correct in my understanding, Mr. Chism—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) I may add one other thing to what I have said, which I think the Government ought to consider before it makes an ultimately final choice in this matter, and that is that the Court in this case is interested in finding the truth, the real facts in respect of this situation, and if this witness has contradicted himself in some manner so that his testimony here is asserted by the Government not to be dependable, the Court would like to know about those facts, because the Court has the duty of determining ultimately the truth and the accuracy of the facts with respect to this case, and if the Government decides not to use this allegedly impeaching testimony upon the terms fixed by the Court, the Government should have in mind that it is withholding from the attention of the Court what the Government has asserted is material which would affect the credibility of this witness.

You may proceed, Mr. Knuff.

5686 By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Mr. Chism, my understanding is—and you correct me if I am wrong—that sometime in September, 1938, you received a letter from the United States Gypsum Company offering to execute a license to the Texas Cement Plaster Company concerning perforated lath; is that correct? A. I don't recall the exact date. We did receive a letter to that effect in 1938.

Q. I would like to show you a letter from the United States Gypsum Company, and ask you if your recollection as to the date could be refreshed from reading it?

Mr. Knuff: We are not offering this as an exhibit, Your Honor, and don't intend to. We are simply trying to fix the date, that is all.

The Witness: Yes, sir, that is the letter we received.

Justice Stephens: Show it to defendants' counsel, please.

(The document referred to was handed to defendants' counsel for examination.)

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Has your memory been refreshed as to the date when you received the letter? A. Yes, I noticed the date, September 16, 1938.

Q. Now, previous to receiving this letter, my understanding is that you were manufacturing perforated lath 5687 for a period of 2 or 3 months previous to that time; is that correct? A. Well, I couldn't say about the exact period of time, there. We were manufacturing perforated lath along about that date.

Q. And if I understand your previous testimony, it is that that was just a matter of a few months, whether it would be 2, or 3, or 4, it was a short time before that? A. That is right.

Q. Now, before you started to manufacture perforated lath, I believe that you were buying perforated lath for about a year and a half, from National Gypsum Company; is that correct? A. Something like that period of time, yes, a considerable period of time.

Q. Your second license with USG was dated February 10, 1937, was it not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it was about the time of that second license that you started to purchase perforated lath from National Gypsum Company, or shortly thereafter? A. It might have been shortly after that, or it might have been a little before that, I don't know.

Q. But it was around about that time? A. Around that period, yes.

5688 Q. Now, for some time, perforated lath sold at a differential of 25 cents a thousand square feet above regular lath; is that correct? A. Yes, that is my recollection.

Q. And did your company maintain that differential—

Mr. Bromley: (Interposing) I object to that as calling for a conclusion, and therefore incompetent, so far as the use of the word "maintain" is concerned.

Justice Stephens: Sustained. Ask what the prices were.

Mr. Knuff: If Your Honor please, I am not trying to prove what the price was, I am simply trying to prove the differential; and if, under the ruling that the Court has made before—and I am not questioning it now—we have to go into all these invoices, I am afraid—

Justice Jackson: (Interposing) I think the objection is as to the form of your question.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Was there a differential in price on perforated lath over regular lath? A. There was.

Q. And what was that differential? A. Twenty-five cents per thousand square feet.

Q. And did you sell perforated lath that you purchased from National Gypsum Company, at a differential of 5689 25 cents over and above the price of your regular lath? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you maintained that differential for how long a time?

Mr. Bromley: I object to this as immaterial, and I object to the form of the question in so far as the use of the word "maintain" is concerned. There isn't any charge in the complaint that has to do with Texas and a differential, as I understand it.

Justice Stephens: What is your contention with respect to its materiality, Mr. Knuff?

Mr. Knuff: It is material, Your Honor, because there is a charge in the complaint that the defendants were regulating prices, and we have a situation where the United States Gypsum Company, and all the licensees of United States Gypsum Company, were selling perforated lath at a differential of 25 cents above the regular lath.

Justice Jackson: There is no dispute about that, is there?

Mr. Knuff: This company was not a licensee under the perforated lath agreement, but we contend that from the fact that this company was selling at a differential of 25 cents, the Court can infer that there was an understanding, or an arrangement to fix the prices, between this company and the other defendants.

5690 Justice Jackson: Well, he has already said that he sold it at a differential of 25 cents per thousand square feet. What more do you want? Do you want to ask him whether he always did that? If so, ask him when he quit?

Justice Stephens: The Court will overrule the objection as to materiality, but will sustain the objection as to form.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. At any time after 1937, did the price of perforated lath and the price of regular lath become the same?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that, unless he indicates whose price he means.

Mr. Knuff: I am talking about your price, and you understood that, didn't you?

The Witness: Yes, I think I understood that.

Justice Stephens: I didn't understand it, myself. I thought you were asking about prices generally, Mr. Knuff. But if you understand that Mr. Chism, you can answer that question.

Justice Jackson: In respect of your company.

The Witness: They did become the same, with respect to our company, at some time after this period when the 25-cent additional price was charged.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. It was your understanding, was it not, that National Gypsum Company, at the time you purchased perforated lath from them, was not a licensee of 5691 USG? A. I didn't know.

Q. Didn't you write a letter to National in order to find out whether they were or not? A. I don't recall whether that was before or after we were charging this 25 cents additional.

Q. I am not talking about the 25-cent differential now, I am talking about the time that you purchased lath from National Gypsum Company. At that time, you knew that National Gypsum Company was not a licensee of USG? A. Yes, I believe I knew that.

Q. And your company was never a licensee of USG under the perforated lath agreement, which related to Patent 1,938,354, was it? A. No, we never were.

Q. And your company has manufactured perforated lath since sometime in 1937 down to the present time, is that correct? A. Yes, I believe so, somewhere around in 1937.

Q. Has USG ever instituted any patent infringement suit against Texas Cement Plaster Company?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as immaterial.

Justice Stephens: What is your contention with respect to that, Mr. Knuff?

Mr. Knuff: Our contention with respect to that, Your Honor, is that we have said that the patent license 5692 agreements were not bona fide license agreements.

The fact that his company is manufacturing a perforated lath, and the fact that USG has never instituted any infringement suit to challenge the right of this company to manufacture perforated lath, would certainly be evidence of whether or not these license agreements were entered into bona fide, whether USG was acting in good faith, or whether they were acting in bad faith.

It seems to me that if USG felt their patent position was sound and strong, that the first thing USG would do would be to institute infringement proceedings.

Now, of course, USG can explain that, but I say from that evidence the Court can infer that the patent license agreements on perforated lath were not bona fide.

(The Justices conferred.)

May it please the Court, we will expedite the ruling and withdraw the question.

Justice Stephens: Very well.

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. I show you, Mr. Chism, what has been marked for identification as Government's Exhibit 603, the same being a letter dated March 16, 1939, addressed to the United States Gypsum Company, and signed Texas Cement Plaster Company by H. E. Chism.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 603 for Identification.)

5693 (Government's Exhibit No. 603 for Identification was handed to the witness.)

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. I first want to ask you whether that is your signature? A. Yes, sir, it is.

Q. Yesterday, at page 5919, I asked you this question:

"Q. And didn't you have correspondence with USG concerning the meaning of the bulletins that were sent you?"

And your answer to that was:

"A. Not the bulletins, I think I had some correspondence relative to one bulletin."

Is this the correspondence that you had in mind? A. This is the letter, yes.

Mr. Knuff: I offer in evidence Government's Exhibit No. 603.

Mr. Bromley: We make the usual objection; and also object to it on the ground that it is immaterial to any charge in the complaint.

Justice Stephens: The objection as to materiality is overruled; it is received in evidence subject to the usual reservation with respect to declarations of alleged co-conspirators.

Mr. Finck: If Your Honor please, may I also note the objection of National as to immateriality?

5694 Justice Stephens: Yes, that may be noted, and it is overruled.

(The document referred to, marked as Government's Exhibit No. 603, was received in evidence.)

Mr. Knuff: I haven't any further direct.

Justice Garrett: May I ask you, for my information, was there both a metallized board and a metallized lath?

Mr. Knuff: I think there is, but I am not certain. Maybe Mr. Chism can answer Your Honor's question.

The Witness: Yes, there was.

Justice Garrett: I notice in the first paragraph of Exhibit 603 it refers to metallized gypsum board; and in the second paragraph it refers to metallized lath.

Justice Stephens: We will take the noon recess at this time.

(Thereupon, at 12:15 o'clock p.m., a recess was taken until 1:45 o'clock p.m., of the same day.)

5695 AFTERNOON SESSION

(The trial was resumed at 1:45 o'clock p.m., pursuant to recess.)

Justice Stephens: Take the witness stand, Mr. Chism.

Thereupon, H. E. CHISM, the witness on the stand at the time of recess, resumed his testimony as follows:

Direct Examination (resumed)

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Mr. Chism, I show you what has been marked for Identification as Government's Exhibit 51.

(The article referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 51 for Identification.)

(Government's Exhibit No. 51 for Identification was handed to the witness.)

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Will you tell us what that exhibit is, please? A. That is the Texas brand of gypsum wallboard.

Q. What thickness? A. Three-eighths.

Q. And for how long have you been manufacturing this type of wallboard, sir? A. Since probably the latter part of February, 1937.

5696 Q. And this is the type of wallboard that is regularly and customarily sold to the wallboard trade, is that correct? A. Yes, sir.

Q. This is the type of board that is sold to your regular dealer trade? A. That is right.

Q. I show you, Mr. Chism, what has been marked for Identification as Government's Exhibit 52.

(The article referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 52 for Identification.)

(Government's Exhibit No. 52 for Identification was handed to the witness.)

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Will you tell us what Government's Exhibit No. 52 for Identification is, sir? A. That is the plain gypsum lath.

Q. It is the type of 3/8-inch gypsum lath that is manufactured by the Texas Cement Plaster Company, is that right? A. Yes.

Q. And for how long have you been manufacturing this same type of lath? A. For the same period.

Q. And this is the same type of lath that is regu-
5697 larly and customarily sold to your dealer trade, is that correct? A. Yes.

Q. I show you what has been marked for Identification as Government's Exhibit 53.

(The article referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 53 for Identification.)

(Government's Exhibit No. 53 for Identification was handed to the witness.)

By Mr. Knuff:

Q. Will you tell us what that is, please? A. That is a sample of the perforated gypsum lath that has been manufactured by the Texas Cement Plaster Company since sometime after February 10, 1937.

Q. It was made during the year 1937—I don't mean this particular board, but this particular type of board—was this particular type of board put into production sometime during the year 1937? A. No, I think it was put into production in 1938.

Q. In 1938? A. Yes.

Q. And what type of board were you producing in 1937, if you were producing any? A. We were producing the plain lath.

Q. You weren't producing any perforated lath in 5698 1937? A. That is my recollection now, that we didn't commence producing that until 1938.

Q. And this is the same type of lath that is sold to your dealer trade regularly and customarily, is that correct? A. Yes, it is.

Q. Mr. Chism, you have also been asked to produce for us certain strips containing patent markings. I don't believe you have those with you today, have you? A. I don't believe I have, no, sir.

Q. You will, at your earliest convenience, procure those and send them to us, will you? A. I will be very glad to.

Mr. Knuff: That is all of the direct-examination, Your Honor.

Justice Stephens: Are you offering these exhibits?

Mr. Knuff: Not at this time.

Justice Stephens: These exhibits are only sections, aren't they?

The Witness: Those have just been cut from the larger pieces.

Justice Stephens: What is the difference between the plain lath and the plain board?

Justice Jackson: The size?

The Witness: The size, for one thing. The lath standard size is 16 x 48, and the larger board is 4 feet wide 5699 and any length from 6 to 12 feet.

Justice Stephens: How about thickness?

The Witness: The thickness varies in the wide board. We only manufacture the 3/8 in the lath.

Justice Stephens: You may cross-examine.

Your last question of this witness, Mr. Knuff, reminds me to ask Mr. Varian, for Ebsary—he is not here, is he?

Mr. Oliver: No, he is not here.

Justice Stephens: Very well. You might tell him, Mr. Oliver, that Mr. Lenci was to furnish the Court some samples for our files. They haven't been received as yet.

Mr. Knuff: I have them over at my office, they sent them to me, Your Honor.

Justice Stephens: I see. All right, you may furnish them at your convenience.

Cross Examination

Mr. Bromley: May I see Exhibits 51 to 53?

(Government's Exhibits Nos. 51 to 53, inclusive, for Identification, were handed to Mr. Bromley.)

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. These exhibits, Mr. Chism, 51 to 53 for Identification, of course are not sold to the trade at all, are they, these little pieces? A. Not the little pieces.

5700 Q. These are just out from— A. (Interposing) They are cut from the larger standard sizes.

Q. Now in addition to the differences which you mentioned to the Court, in answer to the questions of the Presiding Judge, Exhibit 51, the wallboard sample, shows that its edge is perfectly square, doesn't it? A. Yes, that is right.

Q. Whereas, Exhibit 52, the lath sample, has a rounded edge? A. That is right.

Q. Now is there any reason for that difference in edge, in connection with the use of the respective boards? A. Yes, I think there is.

Q. The wallboard, when erected on the studs, is not plastered over, is it? A. That is correct.

Q. So that it is important, when wallboard is used as an interior finish, to have as close fitting a joint as possible so that the smooth effect of the wall will not be marred by a crack or a joint; isn't that right? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is not necessary, so far as lath is concerned, because lath is plastered over by coats of plaster; isn't that right? A. No, it is really better to have the 5701 round edge so that it will create a bond for the plaster to stick tighter.

Q. And it is the fact, isn't it, that a square edge is a more difficult edge to make? A. Yes, it is.

Q. Now, there is another difference between the lath and the wallboard, isn't there, in so far as the paper is concerned? A. Yes, there is quite a difference in the paper.

Q. What is that difference? A. Well, the big board has what we call an ivory face, it is cream-colored paper on the face side of it, which is heavier, and it is also a sized paper. The lath does not have that paper on it. It is more porous and it is unsized.

Q. And that is because the wallboard, after erection, not being plastered over, is in a condition to be decorated by paint? A. That is right.

Q. Therefore, you want as smooth and as regular a surface on wallboard, at least on the side exposed to the interior of the room, as possible, don't you? A. Yes, I would think so.

Q. So far as the lath is concerned, the type of paper must be entirely different from the wallboard paper, because the plaster gains its adherence to the wall merely by the crystals of the plaster impinging into the 5702 paper of the lath, isn't that right? A. Yes, it penetrates the paper.

Q. And therefore, you have to use, in lath, an unsized, soft paper, do you not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that plaster will adhere to it? A. That is right.

Q. You said in your direct-examination, between lines 1 and 10 of page 5900, that you took no part in the negotiations leading up to the execution of Exhibit 599, which is the Texas license of April 18, 1927—do you recall that? A. Yes, I recall that.

Q. It is a fact, isn't it, that you did participate in discussions with Mr. Gloyd, and others within your company, as to the advisability of taking a license? A. Yes, I did.

Q. And all you meant by your answers on page 5900 was that you, yourself, did not participate in discussions with any representatives of the licensor, United States Gypsum Company? A. That is correct, yes.

Q. You were familiar, weren't you, Mr. Chism, with the discussions had by Mr. Gloyd and others within his organization, and the reasons which motivated Mr. Gloyd to take this license, Exhibit 599? A. Yes, I knew 5703 quite a bit about it.

Q. You also testified on direct-examination, at page 5900, beginning at line 11 and running to the bottom of the page, that there were no patent studies or patent surveys made by Texas Cement Plaster Company before Exhibit 599 was executed. Do you recall that? A. Yes, sir, I remember that.

Q. Now, what were the reasons which caused Mr. Gloyd to take this license of April 18, 1927, Exhibit 599? A. Before that time, we were making an open-edge board, which proved to be very unsatisfactory to our trade and caused us to lose business, and we were constantly losing more; and the cost of manufacture was high, due to loss from bad board, what we called "peelers", and broken edges, and so forth, which made it almost prohibitive. We had to find some way to make a better board.

Q. And what about the attitude of your trade in 1927, as to whether they preferred the closed-edge or the open-edge type of board?

Mr. Knuff: May it please the Court, I didn't object to the last question, although I do think it was going beyond the scope of the examination-in-chief, and also I thought at the time that it was asking the witness to give hearsay testimony. I am not going to move to strike that testimony, but in view of the fact that this is going far beyond 5704 the scope of the examination-in-chief, I think I will and must object to it. He wasn't asked anything on direct-examination concerning the attitude of the trade, or anything else.

Justice Stephens: He was asked about taking out these licenses. Isn't defendants' counsel entitled to go into the reasons for taking them out?

Mr. Knuff: The question that I asked him about the licenses was—did he participate in the discussions with USG, and I think that was the way the witness understood it. I didn't ask anything about any discussions with any other person.

Justice Stephens: But you have offered the license in evidence, and you put him on as your witness to testify about the business of the company.

What do you say, Mr. Bromley?

Mr. Bromley: I say that it certainly is proper cross-examination just resulting from the fact that through this witness the license agreement was offered and received in evidence. But further than that, counsel brought out from this witness that there were no patent studies made, and I am attempting to develop the reason for that, what he knew about the patents, without any studies.

Justice Stephens: The objection is overruled.

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. You knew, didn't you, that this closed-edge
5705 board was a patented product? A. I had understood that it was, yes.

Justice Stephens: The question to which objection was made wasn't answered. If you want an answer to it, you are entitled to it.

Mr. Bromley: Yes.

Will you read it, please?

(The question was read by the reporter as follows:

"Q. And what about the attitude of your trade in 1927, as to whether they preferred the closed-edge or the open-edge type of board?")

The Witness: The attitude of the trade was that they preferred the closed-edge board, and we had to do something pretty quick to protect our business. The open-edge board just wasn't proving satisfactory.

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. And open-edge board was getting increasingly difficult to sell to the trade, wasn't it? A. That is right.

Q. Now, wasn't it your understanding, also, that USG owned patents on the machine necessary to make the closed-edge board? A. I think I knew that at the time. I am sure that the officers of the company did.

Q. And wasn't it your understanding, also, that 5706 USG had other patents which you concluded would be useful in the manufacture of gypsum board, such as the recessed edge, for instance? A. Yes, sir, I remember that.

Q. And the tongue and groove patent? A. Yes, that is true.

Q. Therefore, wasn't the primary reason of the Texas Cement Plaster Company for taking the license, the reason that it wanted to get the right to manufacture board under patents which you understood the United States Gypsum Company owned? A. Yes, it was.

Q. And as soon as you took out the license, or shortly thereafter, did you commence to make the closed-edge board at your plant? A. Yes, sir, we did.

Q. And have you made the closed-edge board at all times from that time down to the present time? A. Yes, we have.

Q. And after you took your license of February 10, 1937, did you commence to make this so-called light-weight or foam-bubble board? A. Just as soon as we could change our machinery or equipment.

Q. And have you continued the manufacture of 5707 that foam or bubble board down to the present time?

Mr. Steffen: Your Honor, I would like to have that simply as a general understanding of the present witness, if I may. I think that is the purport of the question, and that it does not go to the question of whether they were complying strictly with the patent.

Justice Stephens: I see what you mean.

Read the question.

(The question was read by the reporter.)

Justice Stephens: It doesn't seem to me, Mr. Steffen, that that question, as phrased, asks the witness to testify whether it was made under the patent or not. The objection is overruled.

Mr. Steffen: I simply wanted to be sure as to that.

Mr. Bromley: Will you answer that?

Justice Stephens: Read it again to the witness.

(The question was re-read by the reporter.)

The Witness: Yes, we have.

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. And since February 10, 1937, have you used starch to obtain bond between the paper and the core of your board? A. Yes—

Mr. Steffen: (Interposing) Your Honor, I think that does transgress the direct-examination. There was no question as to the composition of the board, or what 5708 was done by way of manufacturing the board.

Justice Stephens: What do you say to that, Mr. Bromley?

Mr. Bromley: It certainly goes to the charge of subterfuge. He has interrogated this witness about the license, and the charge in the complaint is that it was a subterfuge and not used in good faith, and it seems to me that I am entitled to show, on cross-examination, that the license and the patents were used by this witness in the manufacture of their board. He has said here that he made no patent studies before he took the license. That obviously was offered for the purpose of attempting to convince the Court that the license didn't mean anything to this licensee, that it was a fake or subterfuge. It certainly does not go beyond the limits of proper cross-examination for me to ask this witness if he didn't manufacture the board with the use of starch, because one of these patents covered the use of starch.

Justice Stephens: Objection overruled.

Read the question to the witness.

(The question was read by the reporter.)

The Witness: Yes, we have.

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. And isn't it the fact that after you took your license of February 10, 1937, USG sent engineers down there and instructed you how to manufacture this foam or 5709 lightweight board? A. They did, immediately after signing the agreement.

Q. And they showed you the patents, and they gave you drawings and blue-prints, and supervised the installation of the new machinery and taught you how to use it, didn't they? A. They did.

Q. And they gave you information with respect to the use of such patents as the recessed edge patent, didn't they? A. Yes, they did.

Q. In fact, isn't it true that with respect to every development that you used, in improving the quality of the board, which you felt came under your license or the USG patents, you went to USG and received instructions from them and the "know-how" as to how to use the patents and the inventions? A. I believe that is correct in every instance.

Q. Now, you have told the Court that the price fixing provision under Exhibit 599, the 1927 license, expired on August 6, 1929. That is right, isn't it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, isn't it true that your prices were not controlled thereafter, by anybody, until you took the license of February 10, 1937? A. That is correct.

Q. And you understood at all times, didn't you, that the price fixing provisions in the two licenses which you 5710 took, only applied to patented board manufactured and sold by you under the license? A. Yes, I did.

Q. And during the interim between August 6, 1929, and February 10, 1937, you never received any price bulletins at all? A. No, sir, we did not.

Q. Did your company, so far as you know, have any agreement or understanding on plaster prices, or the prices of miscellaneous gypsum products? A. No, we didn't.

Q. You never took, you told us, a license to manufacture metallized board, did you? A. We never did, no, sir.

Q. As a matter of fact, Mr. Chism, your company had no interest, or at least very little interest, in marketing metallized board, did you? A. Practically none at all.

Q. There wasn't any demand for it down in your country was there? A. Very little demand.

Q. Have you any idea of the amount of metallized board which you have sold up to the present time, over the entire period that you sold it? A. Approximately two carloads.

5711 Q. And that would be expressed, in thousand square feet, as how many thousand square feet? A. Somewhere between 80,000 and 90,000 feet.

Q. And that is all you have ever sold, at any time? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And this board you manufactured yourself, and took over to the National plant to have metallized, didn't you? A. In most all instances we did that, yes, sir.

Q. The board, then, that you took over to have metallized, was, as you understood it, manufactured under your license agreement and the USG patents? A. It was manufactured under that agreement.

Q. That board which you had National metallize was the same as any other board made under your license, wasn't it? A. That is correct, yes, sir.

Q. Now, am I correct in assuming that we are now talking about a period of time after February, 1937? A. That is my understanding.

Q. And that is your best recollection? A. Yes.

Q. Now, did you or did you not pay a royalty on this board which you had metallized by National, and then sold? A. Yes, we did.

Q. And you paid the royalty because you under-5712 stood it was manufactured under your general license? A. That is right.

Q. Now, that royalty was the regular, general license royalty, and not any special royalty for metallized lath; isn't that so? A. It was the same royalty we paid for the same kind of board not metallized.

Q. Now, wasn't it your understanding that when you sold this board that you had thus manufactured, whether it was metallized or not, you could not sell it for less than the minimum price established in your general license? A. That is correct, after February 10, 1937.

Q. That is the period of time we are talking about, isn't it? A. Yes.

Q. Now the fact is, isn't it, that when you sold it, you sold it for more than this minimum price? A. Yes, we did.

Q. How were you able to get more for it? A. You mean from the dealer?

Q. Yes, from the dealer. A. You are speaking of the metallized board, now?

Q. Yes. Was it worth more, or how did you happen to be able to sell it for more? A. We had to get more, 5713 because it cost us considerable money to have it metallized.

Q. How much would it cost to have it metallized? A. Well, anywhere from $7 to $9 or $10 per thousand square feet.

Q. Now, that was an additional cost on top of your cost of manufacturing it in the first place? A. That is right.

Q. Therefore, you would expect to get more for it when you sold it, wouldn't you? A. Certainly.

Q. And you did get more for it? A. Yes.

Q. Wasn't it a more valuable product to the dealer than plain lath, and therefore wasn't that the reason that he was willing to pay more for it? A. It was generally assumed that it was a more valuable product.

Q. Isn't it a fact, Mr. Chism, that this higher price which you were able to get, and did get, for the metallized lath, was not controlled by anybody, and you had no arrangement with anyone with respect to it? A. There was no one that controlled our price on metallized board.

Q. You knew that you were free at all times to sell the metallized board at any price, so long as it was higher 5714 than the minimum fixed in your general license, didn't you? A. Correct.

Q. And you had no understanding or arrangement or agreement with anybody as to what price you would charge for this metallized lath when you sold it, did you? A. No, sir.

Q. Now, did you ever receive from USG a metallized board license bulletin? A. No, sir, I never did.

Mr. Bromley: May the witness be shown Exhibit 603, please?

(Government's Exhibit No. 603 was handed to the witness.)

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. Did you ever receive a reply to Exhibit 603? A. No, sir, I didn't.

Q. You will notice in the first sentence you refer to "your price bulletin applying on metallized gypsum board effective March 1, 1937". Do you see that? A. Yes, I see that.

Q. Now, at or before the time that you wrote this letter, had you seen that document that you refer to here in this exhibit? A. I saw it at the time that I wrote the letter.

Q. Will you tell the Court whether that was a 5715 metallized board license bulletin, or merely a price bulletin or price list of USG? A. I wouldn't know. I knew it was a USG price list, at least. I didn't know what they called it.

Q. How did you happen to get it, will you tell us the circumstances and explain the transaction, please? A. Yes. We had a salesman in Missouri who was calling on our dealer at Warrensburg, Missouri, and he was offered an order with the provision that we could furnish a small amount of, I believe it was, metallized lath; and when the salesman started to take the order, the dealer called his attention to the fact that his price was too high.

Q. For metallized lath? A. For metallized lath, yes. So he compared the price that he had quoted with one that was quoted the dealer in this price list, or price bulletin, and found that our price was too high. So he immediately called me by telephone, and I told him that if such a price had been quoted and he could get written authority for it, to send that authority in to me, along with the order, and we would accept it and fill the order.

Q. Now, when you said "authority" you meant written evidence of the quotation, didn't yo A. That is right, price list.

Q. You wanted to see the written quotation which 5716 the dealer had told your salesman that the dealer had, didn't you? A. Yes, I did.

Q. In order to check up on his truthfulness when he said he had been quoted a lower price than the one which your salesman had quoted him, isn't that right? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, what happened thereafter? Did the salesman send the price list in to you which the dealer had given your salesman? A. He sent the price list and the order, and the order was filled.

Q. But he sent the price list? A. Yes, he did.

Q. And when you got it, you saw that USG was quoting, on metallized board, a price lower than you had told your salesman to quote; is that right? A. Yes, I did.

Q. And you thereafter accepted the order at the lower price, did you? A. Yes, we did.

Q. Now, was your purpose in writing Exhibit 603 anything other than merely to find out what the market price in the market was, in this area? A. That is what I was interested in.

5717 Q. And is that all you were interested in? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you didn't write Exhibit 603 because you had any agreement or understanding with USG at that time, or before or after that time? A. No, sir, I did not.

Q. And you had no agreement with USG as to what prices you were to charge for metallized lath at any time, did you? A. No, sir.

Q. You said, I believe, that in addition to the board you made yourself, and had metallized, there was a small quantity which you bought from somebody, already metallized; is that right? A. Yes, I believe there was.

Q. Can you tell us about how much that was? A. No, I couldn't. It was probably 10 percent of all that we sold.

Q. Did you include that board in your figure of 80,000 to 90,000 feet? A. Yes, I included in that figure all the metallized board that was sold by us at any time.

Q. Now, did you have any agreement or understanding or arrangement with anybody as to the resale price at which you would sell this small quantity of metallized board which you bought from some other manu-5718. facturer outright? A. No, sir.

Q. You told Mr. Knuff that for a time you sold perforated lath at 25 cents more per thousand feet than you charged for plain lath, is that right? A. Yes, we did.

Q. Now, will you tell the Court the circumstances surrounding your first information that you could get a 25-cent higher price for perforated lath than you could for plain? A. This information first came to me from our salesman in Dallas, Texas. In accepting an order there, he called me about it, and I think he first wanted to know if we could furnish that, and I told him we could; and then he wanted to know if he should charge the extra 25 cents on the perforated lath. As I recall it, that was new to me, and I asked him if that was the prevailing custom or price in the market there, and he said it was. I said, "If that is true, I want you to accept the order on that basis."

Q. At a 25-cent higher price? A. At a 25-cent higher price on the perforated lath. And he did that, and we furnished the lath on the order.

Q. That is the first time that you had ever heard that any manufacturer was charging more for perforated than for plain lath? A. Yes, sir, that is the way I remember it.

5719 Q. And up to that time, you hadn't been selling the perforated lath which you sold, at the same price as plain lath? A. I wouldn't say definitely that we had. I believe we had.

Q. At least, you weren't aware of the fact that dealers were paying 25 cents more for it from other manufacturers, up to this time, were you? A. That was the first time that I was aware of such a situation.

Q. Isn't it the fact that the sole reason that you thereafter charged 25 cents more for perforated lath was because you found you could get it? A. That is right, we could get it in the market, and we felt like we were entitled to it.

Q. And did you have any arrangement, agreement or understanding with anyone that you would charge a 25-cent higher price for perforated than for plain lath? A. No, sir.

Q. You never took a perforated lath license from USG, did you? A. No, we did not.

Q. Did you ever receive from USG any perforated lath licensee bulletins? A. No, we didn't.

5720 Q. When did you first start to manufacture perforated lath? A. My recollection is that it was about the middle of 1938, or maybe in the fall of 1938.

Q. And since that time, this perforated lath which you have manufactured and sold is the same kind of lath as is manufactured under your general license, isn't it? A. The same kind of lath, perforated.

Q. That is to say, after you make plain lath under your general license, you then perforate it and it becomes what is known as perforated lath, is that right? A. It is plain lath all the way through until it comes to a certain point on our board machine, and there it is made into a perforated lath.

Q. And that is made with a machine which punches the holes through it while it is still in a wet state, isn't it? A. That is right.

Q. Now the fact is, Mr. Chism, that your company, knowing of USG's perforated lath patent, has attempted to develop a type of perforated board which will avoid the claims of the USG patent; isn't that right? A. We didn't do that entirely alone. We assisted some machinery or equipment company in doing that.

Q. Well, you haven't gone out and made the same kind of perforated lath that USG is making, have you?

5721 A. You mean with reference to the size of the holes and the spacing?

Q. Yes. A. No, we don't make the same kind.

Q. You have been very careful to change not only the size of the holes, but the spacing of the holes, in order to avoid the claim of the USG patent, haven't you? A. Yes, we have.

Q. And did you consult with anybody from the National Company in order to see how you could avoid the claims of USG's patent? A. The National Company?

Q. Yes. A. No, sir.

Q. You worked this out by yourself, did you? A. Yes, in conjunction with our machinery company.

Q. And it is a fact, isn't it, Mr. Chism, that the Texas Company has never had a one-hour fire test on its perforated lath? A. No, we never have gotten a fire rating.

Mr. Bromley: That is all.

Justice Stephens: Is there further cross-examination by other defendants?

(No response.)

Justice Stephens: Mr. Johnston?

5722 Mr. Johnston: No, Your Honor.

Justice Stephens: Any re-direct-examination?

Mr. Steffen: May we have just a moment, Your Honor, please?

Justice Stephens: Yes.

Mr. Bromley: May I have the Court's permission to ask the witness about another subject which I inadvertently overlooked?

Justice Stephens: You may.

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. Mr. Chism, isn't it the fact that prior to the time you took your general license in February, 1937, you did not bundle your lath or wallboard in the same fashion that you did afterwards? A. No, we bundled it differently after receiving that license and signing that agreement.

Q. Prior to the time you took the license, how did you bundle your wallboard and lath? A. We didn't bundle the wallboard at all. We bundled the lath with wire ties.

Q. Will you describe briefly what wire ties are? A. Well, it is more like a baling wire, about the size of a baling wire or a little heavier. I don't know what size of wire you would call it. That was just simply wrapped around the bundle at both ends.

5723 Justice Jackson: Like you would bale hay?

The Witness: Just about the same process, yes, sir.

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. What can you say about whether or not that type of bundling was satisfactory or unsatisfactory? A. It was not very satisfactory.

Q. Why not? A. It caused too much breakage.

Q. And would the wire slip and cut the board, or the lath, rather? A. Yes, it would.

Q. After you took the license, you went to the USG system of bundling by the use of paper strips on both the board and the lath, didn't you? A. That is right.

Q. Have you used that invention ever since that time down to the present time? A. Yes, we have, and are still using it.

Mr. Bromley: That is all.

Justice Stephens: Mr. Bromley, you might bring out, if you care to, and if there is no objection, this matter:

In answer to one of your previous questions, the witness testified that they had sold, in all, approximately 80,000 to 90,000 square feet of metallized board and lath, or two carloads. That might perhaps be contrasted with 5724 the amount of ordinary lath and board manufactured and sold by this company during the same period. In other words, the figures standing alone don't mean much to me; 90,000 feet is a lot of feet to the uninstructed person. Perhaps in comparison with the other board, we could get some idea as to what the amount is, relatively speaking.

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. Can you give us your total production in the years 1937, 1938, 1939 and 1940, by years, of board and lath, in square feet?

Justice Stephens: That is, exclusive of metallized.

Mr. Bromley: Yes.

The Witness: It would average better than 20,000,000 square feet per year in those particular years.

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Mr. Chism, you stated that you changed your system of bundling in 1937; is that true? A. Yes, we did.

Q. And you said you formerly bundled with wire? A. Wire ties, yes.

Q. Was that true of your board? A. Not on board, no, sir.

Q. What was true in the case of board? A. We did not bundle board.

5725 Q. Did you use tape across the ends of the board A. No, we did not.

Q. Did you at any time have a process of using tape on your board for bundling purposes? A. Not for bundling purposes, no, sir.

Q. For what purposes? A. For advertising or decorative purposes.

Q. Did you have a process of tying two sheets of board together with a single strip of paper, by hand, as a type of bundling? A. Not prior to the signing of this agreement.

Q. And after the signing of this agreement, did you consider whether or not that was bundling under your license? A. There was some doubt about it in my mind at first.

Q. Is that the way USG bundles? A. That is our understanding.

Q. What was the doubt in your mind? A. It didn't occur to me that by taping the ends of two pieces of board, taping them together—

Q. (Interposing) By hand? A. I didn't think that that made up a bundle.

Q. And they told you that it did? A. They said it did, and others said it did, and we agreed with them.

Q. So you have been paying a royalty on that 5726 type of bundling? A. That is right.

Q. About this perforated lath, where did you buy your perforated lath when you first started getting it? A. I don't know, for certain. We bought the greater portion of it from National Gypsum Company.

Q. And did you negotiate the purchase? A. No, I don't think I did.

Q. Well, who did? A. Our plant foreman.

Q. Did he just step up and buy some board, some perforated lath? A. He probably called up the superintendent of the other plant and told him he wanted a load of perforated lath, or something of that sort.

Q. Did you or Mr. Gloyd know anything about that? A. Oh, yes.

Q. Did you at any time talk with any representative of National about that? A. I don't believe we ever did.

Q. Did your superintendent, to your knowledge, have any conversation as to the price of the board that he was going to buy? A. We had a pretty general knowledge of the price it was going to cost us.

5727 Q. And do you want to tell the Court here that you had no idea that perforated lath was selling at a mark-up of 25 cents, when you bought all that board from National? A. I don't understand your question.

Justice Stephens: I thought you were asking him about metallized board.

Mr. Steffen: No, perforated lath.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. You bought perforated lath for a considerable period of time from National? A. We bought some perforated lath.

Q. How much would you say you bought? Not just a car or two? A. No, from National we probably bought, altogether, 8 or 10 carloads.

Q. And my question is this: Did you pay more for that when you bought it from National, than you did plain lath? A. I don't remember now, I think we did.

Q. And yet you are telling the Court, as I understand it, that you didn't know that you would have to sell that perforated lath at a 25-cent differential, until some salesman in Dallas, or somewhere, called you up and said, "I have just learned that there is a mark-up of 25 cents on perforated lath"?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as incompetent be-5728 cause assuming facts not in evidence. He didn't testify that he would have to sell.

Justice Stephens: That objection is well taken. He didn't say that he had to sell it. Sustained.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Do you want to state that the first you ever heard of the difference in price was when this salesman called you up from Dallas; is that right? A. That is right.

Q. Even though you were buying board at an additional price from National? A. I can't even tell you whether I ever saw the price that National put on that lath.

Q. But you saw the invoices when they shipped it to you, didn't you? You knew you were buying it for more than ordinary board? A. It wasn't my business to look over those invoices.

Q. What was your business in that connection? A. I was manager of the business.

Q. And you were buying several carloads of lath— A. (Interposing) We didn't buy several carloads at a time; ordinarily it was in truckload lots.

Q. Well, that is your story, is it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. The first time you found out at all was when 5729 this salesman called you up and told you that he could get 25 cents more? A. My judgment would be that most of this lath that we bought from National occurred after this incident that I speak of. We bought lath from other sources.

Q. What other sources? A. I can't tell you definitely. I would say that we possibly bought some from Sweetwater.

Q. What does "Sweetwater" mean? A. That is the United States Gypsum Company mill—or through some dealer at that point.

Q. And when you bought it from the United States Gypsum Company, did you know that they were charging you more for that than for unperforated lath? A. I have no recollection of that now.

Q. It is more expensive to make perforated lath than unperforated lath, is it not? A. A trifle.

Justice Garrett: What was that answer?

The Witness: A trifle, a very small amount.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Now going to this matter of metallized board, Mr. Chism, you stated that you bought a quantity, possibly 80,000 feet, of metallized board—

Mr. Johnston: (Interposing) He didn't say that.

5730 By Mr. Steffen:

Q. That you marketed a quantity of about 80,000 feet of metallized board, is that correct? A. Altogether, we sold approximately that much.

Q. And you took a certain portion of your own production over to National, and had them metallize it? A. Yes.

Q. And the cost of metallizing it was $7 to $9 per thousand square feet, is that correct? A. Somewhere in that neighborhood.

Q. Give us the difference in cost between metallized and unmetallized board, to the dealer? A. I can't tell you. Somewhere in the neighborhood of $10, roughly.

Q. You don't mean to say that, Mr. Chism? What was the price, if you can remember, around 1937 or 1938, of ordinary board? A. Ordinary 3/8 inch board was about $23.

Q. And what was the dealer price for metallized board, of the same thickness? A. The dealer price would be somewhere around $30 to $33, in that neighborhood.

Q. For what? A. For 3/8 inch board.

Q. Plain board? A. Yes.

5731 Mr. Bromley: You mean metallized, don't you?

The Witness: Yes, that is what I mean.

5732 By Mr. Steffen:

Q. The price of metallized board in 1937 and '38 was only about $32 or $33 per thousand square feet, is that your testimony? A. Yes, that would be my recollection on it.

Q. What has been the price within the last two or three years of metallized board, three-eighths inch in thickness? A. I don't know, we haven't been able to get any.

Q. What was the price the last time you sold any, do you recall? A. I don't recall, it would be approximately the price I mentioned.

Q. Now this board that you bought already metallized, you testified you did buy some board already metallized, didn't you? A. Yes, I am quite sure that we did.

Q. Was there any difference in the way you sold that board from the way you sold the board which you had metallized by National?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as calling for a conclusion.

Mr. Steffen: I think he can draw that conclusion, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: Read the question.

(The reporter read the question as above recorded.)

5733 Justice Stephens: The question is very general, Mr. Steffen: Do you mean in price, or as to manner of distribution, or what?

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. I mean as to price, or were there any different instructions to your salesmen as to the board, whether it was manufactured by somebody else already metallized and sold to you, or whether you took your own board and had it metallized? Did you treat those as two separate types of transactions?

Justice Stephens: That question may stand. The objection to the question as asked is sustained on the ground that it was too broad, but the present question may stand.

The Witness: We just sold all of it at the price we were able to get for it in the field.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. And the price that you were able to get for it in the field was the prevailing price? A. The general market price.

Q. And you got your information as to general market price how, by asking dealers? A. Through our salesmen, and through our dealer friends.

Q. And what prices would they turn in to you, in order that you could ascertain the general market price? A. Various prices.

Q. Well, in the same locality for the same type of board, various prices? A. Well, you are covering a pretty wide field with your question.

Q. Well, I am asking you to limit it, if you must. A. You mean all types of board?

Q. No, I am talking about metallized board, Mr. Chism, and you said that you sold it at the prevailing prices, and I asked you how you got your prices, and you said from the dealers.

Now the next question was—was there any difference in the prices that your salesmen brought in from the dealers? A. Not from the same territory.

Q. They were always the same? A. Yes.

Q. Whether that board had been sold to a dealer by National or by USG or by any others, is that correct? A. I never made any inquiry about who sold the board in the territory.

Q. When you determined the prevailing price, was one price sufficient for your purposes in a particular territory? A. We found out what price we would have to sell that board at to the dealer, and we sold it to him.

Q. I want to know if your salesmen came in and said, "National is selling metallized board at such and such a price, in such and such a town"—if that was sufficient? A. If we found that to be the fact, it was sufficient, yes.

Q. And if USG were selling in a town, that would be sufficient for your purposes, if you had their price? A. Yes, it would.

Q. And was that true with regard to your sales of perforated lath, that you regulated your sales by what your salesmen told you National or USG or Certain-teed were selling to your dealers for, or to dealers in a particular territory?

Mr. Bromley: I object to the use of the word "regulated". I don't know what it means.

Mr. Steffen: I didn't mean to use the word "regulated".

May I have that question repeated?

(The reporter read the question as above recorded.)

Justice Stephens: The word "regulated" is conclusional in character. You may rephrase the question.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Was it your policy, Mr. Chism, to sell at the price, for perforated lath, that your salesmen reported to you, if it were the fact, that National or Certain-teed or USG were selling at in a particular territory at a particular time? A. Whatever the general market was there, we sold at that price, yes sir.

Q. And during that period do you recall, when you started selling perforated lath, any differences reported 5736 to you as to the prices at which National or USG or Certain-teed was selling perforated lath in a given territory? A. I expect I had a good many of those told to me.

Q. Do you recall any? A. No, I don't recall any.

Q. Did you find that true as respects plain board? A. Yes, there were always some differences reported to me.

Q. And what were those differences with respect to Mr. Chism? A. With respect to prices or competitive conditions in certain markets. Most of them we found were untrue.

Q. Now back in 1927, you testified on cross-examination, you had difficulty in selling open-edge board, is that correct? A. Yes, it is.

Q. Was Certain-teed selling in the same territory at that time? A. Yes sir.

Q. Were they selling an open-edge board? A. Yes, they were.

Q. And were they good competition?

Mr. Adams: I object to that. I don't know what he means by "good competition."

Justice Stephens: Sustained.

By Mr. Steffen:

5737 Q. Were they vigorous competition? A. It is my recollection that they were all vigorous.

Q. And they were selling an open-edge board? A. Yes, they were.

Mr. Steffen: Will you repeat the question and the answer to the question, just preceding the last question and answer?

(The reporter read the question and answer as above recorded.)

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. My reference had to do with Certain-teed. I asked simply whether Certain-teed was giving you vigorous competition.

Mr. Steffen: I move to strike everything as not responsive, as to the others. Certain-teed was vigorous competition, is that correct?

The Witness: Yes.

Justice Stephens: I don't understand what we are about. What is it you are moving to strike?

Mr. Steffen: I asked him whether Certain-teed constituted vigorous competition, and he answered, saying that they were all vigorous competition, as I understand it, and I have got to go into that.

Justice Stephens: Are you moving to strike that out as non-responsive?

Mr. Steffen: That is right, your Honor.

5738 Justice Stephens: It may go out.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Now in 1927, 1928 and 1929, you were operating under a license agreement? A. With the exception of the early part of 1927.

Q. I say with respect to 1927, 1928 and 1929 you were operating under a license agreement at that time? A. From April 18, 1927, we were.

Q. And who else in your territory was operating under a license agreement? A. I don't know.

Q. Was USG selling in your territory? A. Yes.

Q. And was Universal selling in your territory? A. Yes, they were.

Q. And were you in vigorous competition with Universal and with USG? A. Yes, we were.

Q. Now USG and Universal and yourselves were all in a license agreement, did you know that; that is, USG had licensed you and also had licensed Universal—did you know that?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as assuming facts not in evidence, and as being conclusional. I don't know what the phrase "all in a license agreement" means. Whatever it means, it isn't accurate.

5739 Mr. Johnston: Also, the witness said he didn't know whether the others had a license or not.

Mr. Steffen: It is in evidence, your Honor, that the United States Gypsum Company licensed Texas in 1927, and also Universal.

Justice Stephens: Well, that is true, but the objection is to the use of the phrase in your question, "all in a license agreement."

Mr. Steffen: I will withdraw that.

Justice Stephens: That may be stricken. Rephrase the question.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. It is true, Mr. Chism, that the United States Gypsum Company had licensed your company and also Universal in the years 1927 and 1928. Was your company in vigorous competition with USG and Universal during the years 1927, 1928, and 1929? A. Yes, we were.

Q. And did you mean, when you said "vigorous competition" that you cut prices on each other? A. Not at all times.

Q. Did you at any time? A. There possibly were times, particularly compared with the signing of this first agreement.

Q. Your first agreement was signed in 1927? A. Yes, but not until April 18th.

5740 Q. I am speaking of the time after April, 1927. Were you cutting prices at that time, after April, 1927, so that you were in vigorous competition with USG and Universal? A. We had been in vigorous competition without cutting prices.

Q. That is what I wanted to know. Then, by "vigorous competition", you mean not necessarily price competition, is that right? A. That is right.

Mr. Bromley: I object to this unless counsel agrees that all his questions refer only to board, and that we are not now getting into the unpatented field of plaster and so forth.

Mr. Steffen: That is right. Your answers have to do with board, do they not?

The Witness: The questions did not so state.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Then when you were saying "vigorous competition", you meant that that might have to do with plaster as well? A. It could have.

Q. My questions were intended to relate to board, and during this period after April, 1927, on through 1928 and into 1929, when you testified that you were in "vigorous competition" with USG and Universal, you say that that did not necessarily mean price competition, is that correct?

A. That is right.

5741 Q. And were you in any price competition with USG and Universal during this period, as to board? A. We were always in price competition with them.

Q. During that period? A. Yes.

Justice Stephens: We will take the afternoon recess.

(Whereupon a short recess was taken, after which the trial was resumed as follows:)

5742 By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Now this Exhibit 603, Mr. Chism, which is your letter to the United States Gypsum Company, asking for price information—do you recall that? A. Yes, I do.

Q. And how did you say that you got that price bulletin? A. Through our salesman in that territory.

Q. Was that a price bulletin that was sent out to dealers? A. I don't remember whether it was or not. It must have been, he got it from a dealer.

Q. And you say you never got a reply to this letter? A. No, I didn't.

Q. And by that, you mean you never got a written reply? A. I don't remember of ever getting any sort of a reply.

Q. Did you ever talk with Mr. Sadler or anybody from USG about this matter? A. I don't think so.

Q. Are you real sure? A. Yes, I am quite positive.

Q. Did Mr. Gloyd? A. Mr. Gloyd didn't have anything to do with those things.

Q. Did anybody from your company ever get a 5743 reply or get any information in response to this letter? A. Not to my knowledge, no.

Q. Isn't that a little odd? A. Not particularly.

Q. Doesn't USG usually answer their letters from you?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as incompetent. I don't think that that is material or competent.

Justice Stephens: The objection is sustained. That is a speculative matter.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Do you ordinarily get replies to your letters to United States Gypsum Company?

Mr. Bromley: The same objection.

Justice Stephens: Well, that is limited to this witness. We will let that in. Objection overruled.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Do you ordinarily get replies to your letters to the United States Gypsum Company? A. I think in the majority of instances we do, yes.

Q. Can you explain why a dealer might have a metallized board license, while you might not, when you were buying and selling metallized board?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as incompetent because assuming facts not in evidence. There hasn't been any evidence at all that a dealer had a metallized board 5744 license, or a metallized board license bulletin.

Justice Stephens: Read the question.

(The question was read by the reporter.)

Justice Stephens: Objection sustained.

Mr. Steffen: I would like to change that to price bulletin.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Can you explain, Mr. Chism, how it could come about that a dealer would have a United States Gypsum Company price bulletin applying to metallized gypsum board, while you would not? A. No, I wouldn't know how he had it.

Q. Did you ever ask USG for a price bulletin applying to metallized gypsum board, inasmuch as you were selling the product? A. No.

Q. Why not? A. We were not particularly interested in the metallized board at any time. We didn't want to sell it. We only sold it where it was necessary in order to get other business.

Q. I know it. Did you want to take chances on selling it at a loss? A. No, we took chances on finding the price that applied in each territory.

Q. Why wasn't the honest way to simply write to 5745 USG and simply ask them for their prices?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as incompetent and improper—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) The objection is sustained. The implication that it was dishonest to make inquiries in the market has no foundation.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Why didn't you write directly to USG and ask for prices? A. Perhaps I never thought about it until this particular case.

Q. Was it, perhaps, a little bit secret? A. I don't know; that was a good way to find out.

Q. And you didn't get any reply? A. No.

Mr. Steffen: That is all.

Justice Stephens: Any re-cross?

Mr. Bromley: No, Your Honor.

Justice Stephens: I would like to ask you one question, Mr. Chism. I understood counsel for the Government to ask you if the dealers, or your salesmen, turned in to you the prices, and I wasn't clear as to your answer. Did you mean that your dealers brought in to you, or that the dealers sent in to you, some actual price list, or that your salesmen reported to you in the usual course of their 5746 relations with you, or your dealers, what prices they were paying?

The Witness: On all types of board?

Justice Stephens: On board.

The Witness: Any kind of board?

Justice Stephens: Any kind of board.

The Witness: Yes, we have had occasions when some of our good dealer friends would send us lists of our competitors.

Justice Stephens: Thank you.

Do you want to make an examination, Mr. Adams?

Mr. Adams: One or two questions, if I may.

Justice Stephens: You may.

Mr. Bromley: I would like to ask the witness something in connection with Your Honor's question.

Justice Stephens: You may.

Recross Examination

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. Isn't it a fact that most of the instances where you got price information would come from your salesmen telling you what dealers were telling them they were currently paying in the market? A. Most of the information came that way.

Q. It would be very rare that your salesmen would bring in or send in a price list of some competitor—that would be rare, wouldn't it? A. Yes.

5747 Q. You kept yourself informed as to general market conditions by asking your salesmen what information they had gotten from dealer-customers in the field as to what the dealer-customers were being quoted by others, or paying to others—isn't that right? A. That was the source that we depended on entirely.

Justice Stephens: Proceed, Mr. Adams.

Mr. Steffen: May I ask in what capacity Mr. Adams is questioning? I believe he had no cross-examination. Is this re-cross, or what?

Justice Stephens: In what capacity? I suppose he is representing Certain-teed.

Mr. Steffen: My question—is he entitled to examine at this time, inasmuch as he had no cross-examination?

Justice Stephens: Oh, I see what you mean.

What is it you wish to do, Mr. Adams?

Mr. Adams: I want to ask him some questions about a matter which came out during the course of his last examination by Mr. Steffen.

Justice Jackson: This is re-cross on your part?

Mr. Adams: I have not previously examined the witness.

Justice Jackson: But you want cross-examination on evidence brought out on the re-direct?

Mr. Adams: That is right.

Justice Stephens: Do you object to that, Mr. Steffen?

5748 Mr. Steffen: No, Your Honor.

Justice Stephens: You may have that leave.

Recross Examination

By Mr. Adams:

Q. You told Mr. Steffen and the Court that the closed-edge board which you made after April, 1927, was a better product than the open-edge board that you had previously been making?

Mr. Steffen: I don't think he said it was a better product, Your Honor, at all. I object to that.

By Mr. Adams:

Q. Was it a better product? A. Yes, it was.

Mr. Steffen: I object to that on the basis that "better product" calls for a conclusion. It is a different product.

Justice Stephens: That is pretty general. We will sustain the objection. Make your question specific.

By Mr. Adams:

Q. With respect to this closed-edge board, was it better received in the trade than the open-edge board? A. Yes, easier to sell, liked better, more popular.

Q. Was it cheaper to make? A. Yes, it was.

Q. Did it involve less breakage? A. Yes.

5749 Q. And for those reasons, and others, it was better received by the trade; is that right? A. Yes, it was.

Q. Now, you were familiar with the open-edge board that was in competition with you, which was sold by Certain-teed, weren't you? A. Yes, quite familiar.

Q. And can you compare these two boards, with respect to the matters that I have mentioned? This closed-edge board was a better product than the Certain-teed open-edge board, wasn't it? A. Yes.

Q. And didn't the trade, after you began to sell the closed-edge board, prefer the closed-edge board that you sold, to the open-edge board which was being sold in that territory by Certain-teed? A. Yes, they did prefer it.

Q. And you began to take business away from Certain-teed, didn't you? A. We first commenced to regain what we had lost.

Q. You mean what you had lost as a result of making open-edge board yourself in competition with somebody else's closed-edge board? A. That is right.

5750 Q. And you first began to regain that; and then did your business begin to cut in on Certain-teed's business on open-edge? A. I presume that is true. Our volume increased.

Justice Stephens: Any further re-direct?

Mr. Steffen: No, Your Honor.

Justice Stephens: May this witness be excused?

Mr. Bromley: Yes, Your Honor.

Mr. Steffen: Yes, Your Honor.

Justice Stephens: You may be excused, Mr. Chism. Thank you for coming here.

The Witness: Thank you.

(Witness excused.)

Mr. Johnston: I wanted to ask if the Court wanted us to furnish extra samples of the board that were identified? We can do that.

Justice Stephens: I didn't quite understand you, I am sorry.

Mr. Johnston: I wanted to inquire if the Court wanted us to furnish additional samples of those boards that were identified but not introduced?

Justice Stephens: I would like to have them. I would like to have a complete file of each of the exhibits.

Mr. Johnston: Of course, they may not be introduced. I asked Mr. Steffen, and he said he had not introduced them, but he didn't tell me whether he was going to or not.

5751 Justice Stephens: I assume he will eventually introduce them.

5752 Mr. Johnston: One other thing, Mr. Steffen, do you want us to secure and send in samples of that tape?

Mr. Steffen: I think we requested your patented markings over a period of years, yes.

Mr. Johnston: Yes, you did, but we didn't have them here today. We will send them in.

Justice Stephens: Very well, and also send some additional ones for the Court's files.

Mr. Johnston: Yes, your Honor, we will.

Justice Stephens: Mr. Bromley, this might be an appropriate time to raise your question with respect to Mr. Dowd.

Mr. Bromley: May it please the Court, my point is that it seems to me that the Government, in fairness, should tell us now what they propose to show to connect this exhibit with the defendants—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) So that the record may show it, you are talking about Exhibit 233, I assume?

Mr. Bromley: Yes, that memorandum by Redfield with respect to some other patent.

The opinion of the Court, beginning at the bottom of page 5890—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) Let me get that now.

Mr. Bromley: It starts at line 24, page 5890.

Justice Stephens: Proceed.

Mr. Bromley: There your Honor reviewed my 5753 objection on the ground of immateriality, and then over the page, beginning at line 2 of page 5891, you said:

"The binding effect of the document on Certain-teed is difficult to see since it is not a statement by Certain-teed itself, but by its attorney. There is no present showing that his views were or became the company's views. Even as an admission of Certain-teed the document is not yet shown to be in furtherance or execution of any conspiracy so as to bind the other defendants. These elements may, however, be supplied by later evidence, and the document could be received subject to connection in these two respects."

I see no use taking up a lot of time and having Mr. Dowd here, and taking his testimony, and arguing the question of competency, when I believe it to be the fact and that the Government will admit it to be the fact, that it has no evidence, and does not intend or hope to present any, that the views of Redfield were or became the company's views, and I think before we embark on a time-consuming effort to establish the competency of the document, we have the rule of evidence applied that this document, and indeed others which are being received subject to connection, should not be received at all unless we have a promise, made on the professional integrity of Government counsel, that it is their present intention to connect it up, connect the document up, by some other evidence, and not leave us hanging in the air with no position taken by 5754 them as to whether that is what they intend to do, or not.

Now I understand the rule to be perfectly plain that if I state to the Court I want to offer evidence subject to connection, it is my duty as a lawyer to assure the Court that I have such connecting evidence, and intend to produce it, and if I don't do that, I don't think that evidence should be received subject to connection.

Justice Stephens: I have taken it for granted that all offers of evidence subject to connection contained an implied promise that it would be connected, an implied representation that the Government did have some means of connecting the proffered evidence.

Mr. Bromley: We, on the defense, know that Redfield's views did not become the company's views, nor were they ever the company's views; that he went off on an expedition of his own and wrote something about a patent which had no significance at that time, and has had none at any time since then.

My point is that before we call Dowd here, and examine and cross-examine him, we should have this assurance from the Government. I don't believe they can make it.

Mr. Adams: I have one further thought that I would like to add, and that is that it is my recollection from this exhibit, as originally produced in the courtroom at the time C. O. Brown was on the stand, that it, on its 5755 face, purports to be addressed to him. He was the officer of the company to whom it was addressed. He, however, was unable to identify the memorandum in any way, and your Honors will recall that we therefore passed the question of privilege until Redfield was brought here to identify it.

I mention that because it seems to lend support to Mr. Bromley's views, which certainly are mine, that since C. O. Brown, the officer to whom the memorandum was addressed, could not even identify it, that we are now entitled to some definite assurance on the part of the Government that they have evidence somewhere that will connect the exhibit with Certain-teed's knowledge. We say we don't know of any such evidence.

Justice Stephens: Do you wish to be heard, Mr. Steffen, or Mr. Knuff?

Mr. Steffen: Yes, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: Proceed.

Mr. Steffen: I am not prepared to give your Honors full assurance at this time that we have the evidence that Mr. Bromley insists that we should have. I want to say upon that, however, that was offered in perfectly good faith at the time, and of course at the time we expected that Mr. C. O. Brown, at the time the document was presented to him, would know something about it.

I am not at all sure—and I would like to check this 5756 more carefully—that there must be a showing that Mr. Redfield's views, as Mr. Bromley phrased it, became the views of the company.

Mr. Bromley: That was the Court's statement, not mine.

Mr. Steffen: Well, I haven't read the Court's statement in that respect.

Justice Stephens: That was our ruling. We said at the bottom of page 5890, and the top of page 5891:

"Mr. Bromley objected that proposed Exhibit No. 233 is irrelevant and immaterial because not shown to be in furtherance or execution of any conspiracy charged in the complaint. The binding effect of the document on Certain-teed is difficult to see since it is not a statement by Certain-teed itself, but by its attorney. There is no present showing that his views were or became the company's views. Even as an admission of Certain-teed the document is not yet shown to be in furtherance or execution of any conspiracy so as to bind the other defendants. These elements may, however, be supplied by later evidence, and the document could be received subject to connection in these two respects."

We of course have assumed that you expected to connect it. We worked out our views on this subject very carefully, as I said yesterday, and I think they are correct, and it does seem a reasonable request, in view of the expense of bringing Dowd here, and possibly also bringing 5757 Redfield back here, that the Government make some assurance that it does expect to be able to connect, or has some evidence in mind which will connect, the exhibit so as to make it binding, first against Certain-teed, and second against other defendants.

5758 Mr. Steffen: I take it that there are two grounds of admissibility, one as a declaration on the part of an alleged co-conspirator—and in order to do that we would have to show that it was a declaration by an authorized person, I presume. That was the purport of your Honor's ruling, was it not?

Justice Stephens: I don't think I could make the ruling much clearer than I have.

This Exhibit 233 was a letter from Redfield to C. O. Brown, which had to do with some Speer Patent, as I remember.

Mr. Steffen: That is right.

Justice Stephens: And it had some statements in it to the effect that the Speer Patent might possibly be used to bolster up a price-fixing arrangement, or for its nuisance value, or words to that effect.

Now that was the statement of Redfield, and you are offering it as a declaration of Certain-teed. Now it must, in some manner, be made to be the statement of Certain-teed, by some adoption or action which would make it operative, legally, as an admission of Certain-teed. If it became an admission of Certain-teed, then it could come into evidence against Certain-teed. Then after that, it must be shown to be in furtherance or execution of the conspiracy, to be binding upon other defendants.

Perhaps you would like to think this over until 5759 tomorrow morning and see if you can collect your ideas as to this additional evidence that may be necessary.

Mr. Steffen: We will have to check through to see what additional sources we have, and what standard we have to meet. I have not, as I say, read your Honor's opinion in the matter.

Justice Stephens: You may take the time to do that. We think the request is reasonable, however. Neither the time of the Court nor counsel, either for the Government or the defendants, nor the time of witnesses, nor the expense involved, should be used or incurred unless there is some reasonable likelihood of the exhibits being connected.

Who is the next witness?

Mr. Steffen: Mr. Tice.

Justice Stephens: Come forward, Mr. Tice.

Thereupon, HARRY H. TICE a witness called for and on behalf of the United States, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Will you state your full name, Mr. Tice? A. Harry H. Tice.

Q. Where are you located? A. South Gate, California.

Justice Jackson: How do you spell your name?

The Witness: T-i-c-e.

5760 By Mr. Steffen:

Q. And what company are you associated with? A. Schumacher Wall Board Corporation.

Q. The Schumacher Wall Board Corporation is located at South Gate, California? A. That is correct.

Justice Stephens: That is just outside Los Angeles, is it not?

The Witness: Yes.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. How long have you been associated with that company, Mr. Tice? A. Since July, 1926.

Q. How long has that company been in existence? A. The present Schumacher Wall Board Corporation has been in existence since July 6, 1926.

Q. And was there a predecessor of this company under the name of Schumacher? A. Yes, the predecessor organizations went back to 1913.

Q. Operating at the same place, South Gate? A. No, they operated in Los Angeles. Our plant was recently moved, in the last three years.

Q. On what date, do you remember? A. May, 1940.

5761 Q. You rebuilt your plant at that time? A. Yes.

Q. What does the Schumacher Wall Board Corporation manufacture, Mr. Tice? A. It manufactures gypsum wallboard, gypsum lath and gypsum roof plank.

Q. Do you manufacture plaster? A. No.

Q. Where does your company get its source of supply of gypsum? A. Near Las Vegas, Nevada.

Q. And what process takes place there? A. We only mine the gypsum and load it on the cars.

Q. And then it is shipped to South Gate? A. That is correct.

Justice Stephens: If you can lift your voice a little, we would appreciate it. We have a little difficulty hearing you.

The Witness: All right.

Mr. Steffen: Mr. Tice has a cold, and it is a little awkward for him to talk in a loud voice.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. What sales territory does your company cover, Mr. Tice? A. Practically all of the Pacific Coast States, 5762 including California, Arizona, Nevada, Idaho, Utah, Oregon and Washington.

Q. Roughly, how many board feet did you manufacture last year?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as immaterial.

Justice Stephens: What is the purpose of that?

Mr. Steffen: Simply to develop the scope of the business.

Mr. Bromley: It has no materiality. This man operates west of the Rockies; he is not a defendant or a co-conspirator.

Justice Stephens: Well, if it is preliminary to giving us an understanding of the witness' business, so as to make other testimony understandable, it may come in as preliminary only. We don't see the materiality of it now.

Mr. Steffen: That is the purpose of the question, your Honor.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Roughly, how much board and lath does your company manufacture per year? A. Over 100,000,000 square feet.

Q. And does your company make a perforated lath? A. Yes.

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as immaterial and move to strike the answer.

Justice Stephens: Is that on the ground that the conspiracy charged relates to the Eastern Area?

5763 Mr. Bromley: Yes, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: What do you say to that, Mr.

Steffen? What do you intend to prove by this witness?

Mr. Steffen: Well, that raises rather a broad question as to what we intend to prove. As has been developed by the evidence so far, Mr. Tice is outside of the Eastern Area.

We allege in the complaint that the conspiracy which is being established here, or the monopoly, took place within the area East of the Rocky Mountains.

We have had questions raised concerning the manufacture of board and the manufacture of perforated lath in the East.

Mr. Chism testified, for example, concerning the manufacture of board, closed-edge board, in his territory, and of the need to manufacture closed-edge board, using that as one example, in order that his company might survive.

There is also the question of whether the perforated lath of the sort manufactured under the USG Patent, No. 1,938,354, which is the Roos Patent, is a necessary form—let me get at it the other way around.

We consider that in the case there are at least two issues having to do with perforated lath. One will have to do with the general scope of patent No. 1,938,354, and when I bring that out I am bringing out an entirely new subject.

The other will have to do with whether Patent No. 1,938,354, the Roos Patent, completely covers the 5764 product, or the manufacture of perforated lath.

Now I think I should amplify the second, particularly, because it is a very important item of evidence in the Government's case.

Under the General Electric case, which is the decision upon which the defendants rely, it was stated by Chief Justice Taft at that time that the three patents which were in issue there completely covered the manufacture of tungsten filament lamps.

The Court proceeded upon the assumption, in fact it was stipulated by the Government in the case in a stipulation of facts, the case was tried upon a stipulation of facts, it was stipulated by the Government in that case that those patents, if not completely covering, at least were absolutely necessary to the manufacture of tungsten filament lamps in this country, in other words, that the Westinghouse Company would not have been able to manufacture and continue in business in the bulb business, unless they had the General Electric patents, or had the right to manufacture under the General Electric patents.

Now that, as I say, was assumed in that case. There was no evidence presented by the Government or anyone else indicating that there would be another type or a possible other type of tungsten filament bulb, and accordingly the case went off on a ground which we distinctly 5765 do not consider to be conceded in this case—

In other words, in this case we have consistently stated that we raise the question that whether or not the defendants' patents, all of them or any one of them, can be said to completely cover the product which they manufacture, in the fashion which was required in the General Electric case—

Justice Stephens: Will you explain a little more what you mean by "completely cover"?

Mr. Steffen: I don't have with me 272 U. S. 476, which is the General Electric citation, but we have sent for it. When I get it, I can give you the argument, because it is, as I say, a very important argument in our present case.

In that case, as I understand it, the Court and the parties assumed that the patents in question—and there were three of them—one on the filament, one on the means or method of excluding the air, and I have forgotten the third—but the three patents were held to completely cover the making of tungsten filament lamps. No one could make them, there was no possible lamp business left for the Westinghouse Company unless they had the patents which completely covered the making of tungsten filament lamps, or had the right to manufacture under those patents.

Justice Jackson: Well, a company could take a chance and manufacture them, couldn't they?

Mr. Steffen: Then they probably would get slapped down.

5766 Justice Jackson: Suppose they weren't sued by Westinghouse.

The Witness: There was a provision that the General Electric would protect their patents.

So that the case went off on—

Justice Stephens: I don't yet understand the use of your phrase, "completely cover".

Do you mean to indicate that in the General Electric case it was stipulated or assumed that it was impossible to manufacture any tungsten filament bulb except by the use of these patents, unless in an infringing manner?

Mr. Steffen: That is right, that is if anyone were to attempt to make a tungsten filament lamp, which was the type that superseded the old carbon filament lamp, which had gone by the board, and the tungsten filament lamp, as everyone knows, had become practically the only type of lamp that could be manufactured and sold—on that assumed set of facts, that the tungsten filament lamp patents completely covered—and I will read the language of Chief Justice Taft, at page 481, where the Court said: "These three patents cover completely the making of the modern electric lights, with the tungsten filaments," and so forth.

Then if you will carry over to the second branch of the case, beginning on page 488, where the Court takes up the question of the license agreements to Westinghouse, the first branch had to do with the agency sales arrange-5767 ments between General Electric and its own agents. The second phase had to do with the licensing agreement between General Electric and the Westinghouse people.

There the Court said:

"Had the Electric Company, as the owner of the patents entirely controlling the manufacture, use and sale of the tungsten incandescent lamps, in its license to the Westinghouse Company, the right to impose the condition that its sales should be at prices fixed by the licensor and subject to change according to its discretion?"

Now those two statements, appearing in the Court's opinion, were greatly amplified if you will read the briefs and the opinion of the lower court, and the stipulation of the parties with respect to the facts of the case, and the argument apparently proceeded very largely on the assumption that the Government had said that the only possibility of the Westinghouse Company continuing business in this case, that is continuing in the lamp or bulb business, was that they have the use of these particular tungsten filament lamp patents, for that period, and that they would have to go out of business completely unless they were to have the use of those particular patents.

Now, I point out that in this case there has certainly been no such concession on the part of the Government, and there is nothing in the pleadings which indicates, 5768 in any way, that these patents are the only and the necessary patents to the manufacture of board, or to the manufacture of lath; that they, on the other hand, are—what I am trying to say is that there is an issue in the case, therefore, which the defendants, as we have asserted in our trial brief, and I think the defendants have not denied it at any time—have an obligation as an affirmative defense to establish, once we have shown price fixing and a general control of the business, as we have in this case, that they have valid patents—your Honors will permit them the assumption that their patents are valid—that those patents completely cover the manufacture of board and that it would not be possible, in other words, to use the exact comparison, not be possible for other companies to manufacture a gypsum board and continue in business without the use of the USG patents under which they have licensed the licensees in this case.

Now we have made, in our trial brief, at least two point on that, or two arguments on that point.

In one we say that the makeup of the board is a matter of gypsum, paper, and one or two other ingredients that go into the manufacture of the board; that at most, a close analysis of the defendant's patents, as for example the patent on perforated lath, will show it to be a patent not completely covering the sale of the ingredients, the sale of the paper, but it is a matter of simply some holes 5769 in the board, it at most is an improvement in a board which had been manufactured for years, and a relatively, as we see it, unimportant improvement.

That follows through with their other patents.

But let's stay for a moment with the perforated lath patent.

If we can show—and this is our thesis here—that Patent No. 1,938,354, which is the perforated lath patent, is just one of a number of other ways of making board, perforated board, which will answer the same requirements as the board manufactured under the Roos Patent No. 1,938,354, we establish, as I see it, that the defendants have no defense, or in other words, that price-fixing based upon a patent which does not completely cover the manufacture of perforated lath, affords them no justification for price-fixing or for all of the other means of control that they have worked out in this case.

Now I want to say this, in order to make my position quite clear on the matter. That evidence, we think, is admissible in one respect as showing subterfuge on the part of the defendants, as respects the perforated lath, those companies which said, "Let's make a perforated lath, and let's figure a price of 25 cents by way of advance."

We say that as respects those companies picking out a patent which was not a necessary patent, and which certainly today is not a necessary patent, that they 5770 were attempting to fix prices and control the distribution of board upon or under a patent, which, by no stretch of the imagination, can completely cover the manufacture of perforated lath within the description of the General Electric case.

We feel that the defendants must stand upon the description, or rather the ruling of the Court, in the General Electric case, because no court, to our knowledge, has gone farther than that.

Justice Jackson: Does the Roos Patent purport to give the patentee a monopoly on all perforated lath, or just on a certain kind of perforated lath, that kind set out in the specifications and claims of the patent?

Mr. Steffen: It purports, your Honor—and this is a question that we are going to have to take up—simply to cover, as I think we will show when it is construed, a very narrow type of patent. We are not attacking the validity—

Justice Jackson: (Interposing) It is just a kind of perforated lath?

Mr. Steffen: Just a very limited kind of perforated lath.

Our first argument, therefore, and I think the first ground upon which the present evidence will be admissible, is that the fact is that there are other forms of perforated lath. We have already introduced the fact that the National people make a different lath than did the United States Gypsum Company under its patents.

5771 Justice Jackson: Are there any patents for any other perforated lath, besides the Roos Patent?

Mr. Steffen: There are a lot of them, your Honor, and we will introduce in evidence—

Justice Jackson: (Interposing) Each of them is a separate patent for a certain kind of perforated lath, set out in the patent?

Mr. Steffen: That is right. But what it comes down to, your Honor, is that there is no basic patent in the field, in the perforated lath field, today, that in any manner compares with the basic patents in the General Electric case.

Therefore, our first offer of this evidence would be, as I say, to show subterfuge, or to show that the defendants went into a very thin patent situation, and because it was thin, did so probably with the idea of obtaining patent control. That is a matter of argument upon inference.

Now the second point that we make—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) Before you go to the second point, I am sorry but I still am unable to define in my own mind just what you mean by your "subterfuge" charge. Do you mean now in this aspect of it the charge that the defendants did not think that the Roos Patent was necessary for the manufacture of the board manufactured under the Roos Patent?

Mr. Steffen: My answer, your Honor, is that to 5772 the extent that they thought that the Roos Patent, No. 1,938,354, was very thin, and it was therefore a medium largely to fix prices and gain this 25-cent differential, rather than because they were primarily interested in making this as the only possible perforated lath that they could make, within the terms of the General Electric case, that that would go to the showing that they entered into it for a purpose which the Sherman Act would contend—

Justice Stephens: That seems to be an entirely different question. That is the reason I asked you. I had thought that perhaps your charge of subterfuge was a charge that was intended as a charge that the defendants didn't really have any belief in the validity of their patents, and that therefore they were not acting in good faith. But isn't that a different thing from what you are now talking about as to the coverage of the patents?

Mr. Steffen: Well, I think there are different ideas on that, but if the patent isn't a broad patent, or as your Honor is speaking there, if it isn't a valid patent, either idea reaches the same result—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) I didn't raise the question as to its validity. I raised the question which I thought you were charging as to the defendants' belief in its validity. You have introduced some letters here which you have indicated will be connected, as tending to in-5773 dicate that the defendants had advice from their lawyers that they didn't really think that these patents were valid. I thought perhaps that was part of your subterfuge charge. But that seems to be entirely different from what you are now talking about as to the applicability of the General Electric case, where your contention, as I now understand it, is that in order to have a price-fixing system validly based upon the General Electric theory, you must have patents which cover all possible ways of manufacturing the article upon which the price is fixed. That seems to be a different contention. Perhaps I am not yet fully informed about it.

Mr. Steffen: Before this is closed, I would like to explain it very thoroughly.

Justice Stephens: We will hear you further, of course, but for the moment, so that we can get something before our minds to think about during the recess, what do you intend to prove by this witness under your theory about the coverage?

Mr. Steffen: What I intend to establish by this witness' testimony—I don't wish to be bound in detail by this, because I will probably go further—I want to show that his company has manufactured perforated lath out on the Pacific Coast since 1926, and that prior to that time there was perforated lath manufactured out there, and I would like to show at least the Makowski Patent which was issued in 1920, long before Mr. Roos got his patent, 5774 which was issued in 1935 or thereabouts, 1933 or 1935.

I want to show, furthermore, that the perforated board made by the Schumacher Company does sell in competition with the board of the United States Gypsum Company, sold in that same territory, which would indicate that it is perfectly possible to sell that perforated board under competitive conditions with the United States Gypsum Company.

I want to show further that the board which Schumacher people manufacture does pass the one-hour fire test, which is the principal argument which has been advanced for the Roos Patent perforated board.

When I have established that, I think I have shown that the Roos Patent is no basis whatever under the doctrine of the General Electric case, for price-fixing, and price control.

I want to call your Honor's attention in that connection to the fact that the Roos Patent was licensed on a 10-cent royalty basis for a period of about two years, in 1937 and 1938, and that thereafter, the United States Gypsum Company offered gratuitous licenses to the various companies which were its licensees, practically withdrawing it, but in their gratuitous license, they wrote the provision that it would become subject to all the terms and conditions of the general agreements of October or November, 1929.

Now those general agreements of course, are the 5775 ones that we are most interested in here because they provide for price fixing.

In other words, the perforated lath patent is now part of the general back-log of patents upon which the defendants are going to justify their price fixing, and it is our purpose to show that that particular patent at the present doesn't permit such a defense.

Justice Stephens: We will have to suspend at this time—

Mr. Bromley: (Interposing) I would like to say just one word, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: You may do so.

Mr. Bromley: It seems to me that Mr. Steffen's interpretation of the General Electric case is a very novel one, and one never heretofore suggested by anybody.

It results in this: If at the time these General Electric tungsten patents were taken out, somebody else had a way, or a patent to make a light by using aluminum instead of tungsten, then the fellow that had the tungsten patent couldn't fix prices on tungsten because there was another bulb in the field using aluminum instead of tungsten.

Nobody has ever heretofore suggested any such limitation on price fixing as that. That would mean that if I got a patent on a radio today, which is a valuable, novel, fundamental patent, the fact that Mr. Armstrong had a patent on a frequency modulation system would mean that 5776 I couldn't fix the price of my invention.

Nobody has ever said that before, nobody has ever suggested that before; and I don't believe the Supreme Court in its opinion in the General Electric case ever meant to intimate such a thing. All it was saying was that these patents are product patents that cover the light. Of course the patents didn't cover the glass or the screw, or the thread on the base, or the base. They just covered a particular kind of a lamp which had tungsten in it, and from which the air had been pumped out and gas put in.

Now the carbon light was still in existence and still could be used and still was manufactured—not as good, but it could be manufactured.

The very next day I might have discovered a new way, without the use of tungsten, to make an incandescent lamp, and I might have gotten a patent on it. Would that mean that the General Electric system must fall, that their price-fixing system must fall? There is no such intimation in the opinion whatsoever.

Justice Stephens: Well, thank you for your statement of your views, Mr. Bromley. We will consider the matter, and will now adjourn until tomorrow at ten o'clock.

(Whereupon, a recess was taken at 4:04 o'clock p. m. until 10:00 o'clock a. m. of the following day.)

5777 IN THE

DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Civil Action No. 8017

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

Plaintiff,

v.

UNITED STATES GYPSUM COMPANY; NATIONAL GYPSUM COMPANY; CERTAIN-TEED PRODUCTS CORPORATION; THE CELOTEX CORPORATION; EBSARY GYPSUM COMPANY, INC.; NEWARK PLASTER COMPANY; SAMUEL M. GLOYD, doing business under the name of TEXAS CEMENT PLASTER COMPANY; SEWELL L. AVERY; OLIVER M. KNODE; MELVIN H. BAKER; EBOR H. DAHLBERG; HENRY J. HARTLEY; FREDERICK G. EBSARY; and FREDERICK TOMKINS,

Defendants.

Seventh Floor,
Internal Revenue Building,
Washington, D. C.,
Thursday, March 30, 1944.

The above-entitled cause came on for further hearing at 10:00 o'clock a. m., pursuant to adjournment, before Honorable Harold M. Stephens, Honorable Finis J. Garrett, and Honorable Joseph R. Jackson, sitting as the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

APPEARANCES:

(Same as heretofore noted.)

5785 Now last night, we were hearing briefly from Mr. Bromley. Do you wish to be heard further, Mr. Bromley, with respect to the admissibility of the offered evidence of the Witness Tice?

Mr. Bromley: No, I think not, Your Honor.

Justice Stephens: What was the last question asked of this witness? Let's see what is before the Court.

Mr. Bromley: On page 6053, line 20, this question was asked:

"Q. And does your company make a perforated lath?" to which the witness answered:

"A. Yes."

That question was then objected to by me, on the ground that it was immaterial, and I moved to strike the answer.

Justice Stephens: Will counsel also refresh the recollection of the Court as to that part of the record in which Mr. Chism was asked the question whether or not USG had ever brought an infringement suit against Texas, 5786 and we, I think, ruled that out. I would like to see that part of the record.

Mr. Bromley: I think that question was withdrawn.

Justice Stephens: I think we expressed ourselves, nevertheless, on the subject, and I would like to see what we stated.

Mr. Bromley: Page 5983, the question was withdrawn just in time.

Mr. Steffen: What do you mean by "just in time", Mr. Bromley? (Laughter).

Justice Stephens: Yes, I remember now. The Court was in the process of considering whether that evidence was admissible or not.

Well, now, Mr. Steffen, I have re-read, myself, since the adjournment last night, the General Electric case, and my colleagues have given consideration to it, also; and I think I reflect their views when I say that we are not able, at the present time, to put the construction upon that case that you do,—that it rules, as I understand your contention, that there can be no valid or proper price fixing under a patent unless it is a basic, all-covering patent. But that aspect of the discourse yesterday seemed to me irrelevant, anyway, to the contention you were making; and I am still in doubt, myself, as to the admissibility of this evidence, offered through Mr. Tice, to prove that he was making and selling some sort of perforated board, 5787 in large quantities, outside of the Eastern area. I am still unable, myself, to see the relevance of it, unless upon some possible theory that if the defendants had faith in their perforated lath patent, under which they were manufacturing, they would have brought infringement suits against similar lath manufactured without benefit of license.

There is a charge in paragraph 46 of the complaint that the licenses were not bona fide, were not entered into bona fide, but merely as a cloak for price fixing. I am still, even on that theory, somewhat in doubt, and I would like to hear you a little further, if you care to be heard—and I think my colleagues would like to hear you a little further—on the materiality and relevancy, under the issues of the case, of the Tice testimony.

Mr. Steffen: I first would like to enter a caveat with respect to the Court's statement concerning the necessity of having a basic patent as a basis for price fixing. That, I take it, we will argue at more length later on, because it is going to be necessary to look at these patents rather carefully to determine whether they are of the significance of the patents which were before the Court in the General Electric case. In other words, as we see the matter, the defendants have pleaded—the United States Gypsum Company has pleaded in its answer, paragraph 35, that everything they have done in this case was done under 5788 the protection of Supreme Court decisions, and thereby they, I think, plead that they are within the terms of the General Electric case, inasmuch as the General Electric case is the leading authority upon price fixing agreements based upon patent licenses—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) Of course, we will not foreclose you from arguing what you think the General Electric case means, at the close of the Government's case, or at the close of the case as a whole, whatever time is appropriate. At the same time, we are bound to rule upon the admissibility of evidence, so far as we can, as the evidence is offered. Of course, there are sometimes questions as to the admissibility of evidence which are controlled by questions of substantive law, which are the main questions in the case, and under those circumstances the practice of the courts is usually to hear the offered evidence, subject to an ultimate ruling on the question of substantive law, which controls both the merits of the case and the admissibility of evidence. But I am not able to see, Mr. Steffen, yet, the relevance of the Tice evidence to your theory of the meaning of the General Electric case. That is to say, even if we accept, for the time being, your contention that the General Electric case means to forbid all licensing and price fixing under patents unless the patents are what you refer to as covering patents, still I don't see what the Tice testimony tends to prove under that theory of 5789 law.

Can the fact that Mr. Tice manufactured many hundreds of thousands or millions of square feet of perforated board, can that mere fact prove that the patents on perforated lath, which were the subject or the foundation of the license agreements in this case, were not basic or covering patents? I should think that would have to be proved not by the adventitious fact that somebody is manufacturing a lot of board, but by a patent expert.

Mr. Steffen: By the introduction of the patents?

Justice Stephens: Yes, by introduction of the patents, or testimony as to the nature of the patents in connection with the art.

Mr. Steffen: I think Your Honor is correct on that, that complete proof would certainly require the introduction of the patents in question, and in this case the Makowski patent, if a patent is necessary at all.

I will call your attention to the fact that the Schumacher people have held the Makowski patent since they started in business, and that it is probably the patent under which they operate, or were operating in the years from 1920 to 1937, that antedating by many years the Roos patent.

I want to say, next, that National, and some of the other defendants here, have made board, perforated lath, I mean, without benefit of any patent. So that you have the 5790 situation of three types of perforated lath on the market, that is, there are three sources of supply or sources of authority for perforated lath. You have the lath made by the Schumacher people, which may or may not be under the Makowski patent, but which I think can be shown to be; you have the National lath, made by the National Gypsum Company; and you have the lath purporting to be made under the Roos patent No. 1,938,354, which USG licensed to certain of the defendant companies.

Now, getting to the relevancy of this question—which, after all, as Your Honor points out, is the issue before us—we consider that in determining the question of good faith and the question of subterfuge of the companies which took out license agreements from USG under the perforated lath patent, it is important to determine what other available sources of perforated lath they could have had; and we wish to show, as we have already shown in the case of National, that they could make it without any patent.

We now want to show that on the Pacific Coast, the Schumacher people were manufacturing and had manufactured a perforated lath for a great many years; and to show, moreover, that that lath passed the one-hour fire test of the Bureau of Standards.

Now with that shown we can build an argument, as we see it, that the defendants, in taking their licenses
5791 under Patent No. 1,938,354, which is the Roos patent, were more, or fully as much interested in getting the price control that went with 1,938,354, as they were in getting the patent which the license covered.

That, in narrow compass, is the basis of our argument.

(The Justices conferred.)

Justice Stephens: Well, the Court will hear the testimony. The objection to the question is overruled; and the motion to strike the answer is denied.

Mr. Steffen: Mr. Tice, will you take the stand, please?

Thereupon, HARRY H. TICE the witness on the stand at the time of adjournment, resumed his testimony as follows:

Direct Examination (resumed)

Justice Stephens: The Court is receiving the evidence, I should add, under the charge of subterfuge. The Court does not see, at the moment, the relevance of the evidence to the question of substantive law, which is raised as to the meaning of the General Electric case.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Mr. Tice, I asked you yesterday the question whether your company made a perforated lath, and I believe you answered "Yes".

When did your company start making perforated lath?

5792 Mr. Bromley: May it be understood that I have an objection, on the same grounds as heretofore expressed, to all of this testimony?

Justice Stephens: Yes, that may be shown, and that the Court overrules it, so that your record is protected.

Mr. Bromley: With respect to this specific question, I object to it as incompetent unless counsel indicates what he means by a perforated lath.

Mr. Steffen: I will go into the type of perforated lath.

Mr. Bromley: Well, I object to this question as being too general.

Justice Stephens: That objection is sustained. We ought to have this made pretty definite, if it is going to have any bearing upon the very issue of subterfuge which you choose to relate it to; so ask him to describe the type of lath which he made, in some detail, if he can.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. You have answered that you do make a perforated lath? A. Yes.

Q. When you started making perforated lath, what type of lath did you make? A. We made a 3/8 inch, open-edge lath, 24 x 32 inches, with perforations 3/8 of an inch 5793 in diameter, spaced approximately 3-1/2 to 4 inches horizontally on the board, and 2 to 2-1/2 inches perpendicularly on the board.

Q. And what date was this? A. That is when the Shumacher Wall Board Corporation was organized, in 1926.

Q. Now in order to get that clear, do I understand that the size of the perforations in your lath was 3/8 of an inch in diameter? A. That is correct.

Q. And the perforations were in parallel rows to the side of the board, were they—

Mr. Bromley: (Interposing) I object to this as leading and repetitious. He has had the description.

Mr. Steffen: I want to make sure that we understand the description.

Justice Stephens: Well, this witness is testifying under difficulties, due to his cold. However, it is not desirable to repeat the same question in the record twice.

Why don't you have the Court Reporter read his answer.

Mr. Steffen: I got his answer, Your Honor. It is a long, detailed answer, and I thought it might be made clearer if we were to break it down.

Justice Stephens: I am sorry. I thought you said you didn't understand it.

Mr. Steffen: No.

5794 Justice Stephens: Will you read his answer?

(The answer was read by the reporter as follows:

"A. We made a 3/8 inch, open-edge lath, 24 x 32 inches, with perforations 3/8 of an inch in diameter, spaced approximately 3-1/2 to 4 inches horizontally on the board, and 2 to 2-1/2 inches perpendicularly on the board.")

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Perhaps I had better ask what you mean by the latter part?

Justice Jackson: Why don't you ask him whether or not they were staggered or in a straight line?

Mr. Steffen: That would be a way of getting at it.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Were they staggered or in a straight line? A. They were staggered.

Q. What was the distance between your vertical rows?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as repetitious. He stated that.

Justice Stephens: He may answer.

The Witness: From 2 to 2-1/2 inches.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. How close were the vertical rows to the outside edge of the board? A. That varied. Sometimes they were 5795 one inch, and sometimes an inch and a half.

Q. Could you state whether they were parallel with the edge of the board, the vertical rows?

Justice Jackson: Do you mean did they comprise a parallel line?

Mr. Steffen: Was the vertical row of perforations parallel with the edge of the board?

The Witness: No, they were staggered.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. No, I am speaking of the outside line. A. They still were not parallel, because every other row of holes was staggered from the other row, to form an irregular line.

Q. And did you subsequently change the size of the hole, or the perforation? A. Will you repeat that?

Q. Did you at any time change the size of the perforation? A. Yes.

Q. What size did you change it to?

Mr. Bromley: When, please?

Mr. Steffen: I will find that out.

The Witness: What size did we change it to?

By Mr. Steffen:

5796 Q. Yes. A. We changed it to several different sizes. Commencing in 1936, we manufactured lath with 9/16 inch perforations, and 5/8 inch perforations; 11/16 inch perforations; 3/4 inch perforations; and 13/16 inch perforations.

Q. And this was during what period of time? A. From 1936 to 1938.

Q. I show you what has been marked as Government's Exhibit 54 for Identification, and ask if you can identify it?

(The article referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 54 for Identification.)

(Government's Exhibit No. 54 for Identification was handed to the witness.)

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Is that a piece of your manufacture? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When was that made? A. When was this made?

Q. Yes. A. Probably very recently. I am not sure of the date.

Q. Is that a piece of perforated lath? A. It is.

Q. And what are the spacings of the holes in that 5797 exhibit? A. Well, these are spaced 3-5/8 inches on centers horizontally; and in the perpendicular rows, one spacing is 4-1/4 inches and the next set of spacings is 3-3/4 inches, and it continues that way throughout the length of the board, with alternate spacings of 4-1/4 and 3-3/4 inches.

Q. And how close to the edge of the board does the closest line of holes come? A. One and one-half inches.

Q. Is that true at each end of the board? A. Yes, that is true at the ends.

Q. How long have you been making board according to the type of Exhibit 54? A. Since early in 1938.

Q. Do you know whether your board passes the one-hour fire test?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as incompetent because calling for a conclusion.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Did you ever submit samples of your lath to the Bureau of Standards? A. Yes.

Q. And will you state what samples you submitted to them? A. We submitted above five different sets of board for conducting fire tests.

5798 Justice Jackson: Do you mean perforated lath?

The Witness: Yes, five different styles.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. And what was the first one, do you remember? A. The first one, I believe, was 11/16 inch holes.

Q. And were the holes staggered on the same pattern as appears on Exhibit 54? A. Yes; they were not exactly the same spacing, but with the same pattern.

Q. And then did you make another submission to the Bureau of Standards? A. Yes, we made five.

Q. All told? A. Yes.

Q. What was the second form that you submitted, if you remember? A. I believe the second form was a combination of perforations and indentations.

Q. What was that? A. The perforations on that board were 5/8 inches, and the indentations were approximately 1 inch long by a quarter of an inch wide, and about an eighth of an inch deep.

Q. And then you made, you say, two other submissions to the Bureau of Standards before you finally sub-5799 mitted the pattern of Exhibit 54? A. Yes, that is true.

Q. And can you state whether you understand that your board has passed the one-hour fire test?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as immaterial and incompetent. It seems to me that the report of the Bureau of Standards on the test is the best evidence.

Justice Stephens: His understanding whether it passed is not competent. If he has seen the fire test and seen his board stand up against fire for a given length of time, and can personally testify that it did stand up within his own knowledge, he can testify as to that; but as to whether it has passed some test of the Bureau of Standards would have to be shown by the Bureau of Standards report.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Did you witness any tests before the Bureau of Standards, Mr. Tice? A. No, I did not.

Q. Did you ever talk with the United States Gypsum Company in regard to perforated lath? A. No.

Q. Did you ever talk with Mr. Knode? A. Oh, yes. Yes, I talked to Mr. Knode.

Q. With regard to what matter, Mr. Tice? A. With regard to a license agreement on perforated lath.

5800 Q. Can you fix the time, approximately? A. It was in the fall of 1937, I believe, about the middle of the month of September.

Q. And how was the meeting arranged, where was it held? A. The meeting was arranged by a telephone appointment made by Mr. English of the United States Gypsum Company.

Q. Who was Mr. English? A. He is the District Manager for the United States Gypsum Company in California.

Q. And where was the meeting held? A. At the office of Schumacher Wall Board Corporation in Los Angeles.

Q. Were you present? A. Yes.

Q. Who else was present? A. Mr. Knode, Mr. English, Mr. A. R. Moylan, and myself.

Q. I neglected to ask you earlier, what is your office with the company, Mr. Tice? A. My position?

Q. Yes. A. I am Secretary and Assistant Treasurer.

Q. Now, will you tell us what transpired at this 5801 meeting? A. Mr. Knode remarked that he was informed, and was of the opinion, that we were infringing some of United States Gypsum Company's patents.

Q. Did he mention the perforated lath patent? A. Yes, he particularly mentioned the perforated lath patent, and he said that in view of the alleged infringement, he thought we should execute a license agreement.

Justice Jackson: That you should execute it, or that they should execute it?

The Witness: That we should accept one.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. What was said, if anything, to Mr. Knode? A. We told Mr. Knode that we were of the opinion that we were not infringing any of their patents.

Q. And did you take out a license? A. We did not.

Q. Was there mention made, in the conference, of a foam process? A. Yes.

Q. What was the conversation, if any, concerning that?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as immaterial, in addition to the general objection which I already have noted in the record.

Justice Stephens: Read the question. I wasn't 5802 quite able to hear it.

(The question was read by the reporter.)

Mr. Bromley: The ground of that additional objection is that the only charge in the complaint, as to which this evidence could be material, that is, evidence from Mr. Tice and what was done on the Pacific Coast, relates to the perforated lath patent, because there the complaint charges that the defendants, or some of them, had advice that it was invalid. Now there is no such charge in the complaint as to the Roos foam patents, and testimony with respect to those patents, in this connection, is immaterial to any charge in the complaint.

Mr. Steffen: We make the same point, Your Honor, here, also, that under the complaint there is a charge that not only the perforated lath licenses, but also the foam and the starch licenses, were obtained or taken under subterfuge. That is in paragraph 46. It is the contention, as I understand it, of the defendants, that they were strictly bona fide, and they state in their answers that they were taken as bona fide license agreements, and necessary agreements.

It is an issue, as we see it, whether or not it wasn't quite possible for a company to operate successfully not using the foam process. Therefore, it seems to me that on much the same theory, we can offer the evidence of the Schumacher people as to the form of board they made, 5803 and have this witness state whether they did or did not use the foam process.

Justice Stephens: We will take the morning recess at this time.

(Thereupon, a short recess was taken, after which the trial was resumed as follows:)

5804 Justice Stephens: With respect to the last objection before the Court, I might say this, Mr. Steffen. Of course we don't expect you to prove your case entirely out of the mouth of one witness, or from one witness by one sentence, but the theory under which we received this evidence I thought we made clear, concerning perforated lath, which was that it might be some evidence—we are not making any comment on weight—under the issue of subterfuge, and lack of bona fides in the license agreement, to show that a large amount of perforated lath was being made and sold without protest by USG.

Now unless you intend to show that this company also made something in the nature of the foam process board, and sold that on a large scale, I should think there might be some doubt about the admissibility of the answer to this particular question.

Mr. Steffen: My thought is to show that they sold the board they made in competition with Certain-teed, National and U. S. Gypsum, in California, and that they have been, throughout this period, making their own board without any licenses from USG.

Justice Stephens: You mean a board which has the qualities of the foam process board?

Mr. Steffen: It has qualities that allow them to compete with the foam process board.

5805 Mr. Bromley: You mean by that, Mr. Steffen, that it does not have the light-weight quality and other advantages of the board manufactured by the foam process?

Mr. Steffen: It isn't as light as the board which USG makes.

Justice Stephens: We will permit the question to be answered, subject to a motion to strike. But it seems to me that as you have now stated it, you are in danger of invading your own theory. Your own theory of the admissibility of this evidence with respect to perforated lath was that the perforated lath was made, in other words, lath which has holes in it and has the claimed qualities of perforated lath, notwithstanding the absence of a license, that it was made and sold in large quantities by this company, and that there was no protest by USG, and no infringement suit; and therefore that is some evidence as tending to show that USG did not have any faith in its own patents. That is the theory that you select to bring this evidence in on. Now it seems to me that consistently you ought to be offering to prove that there was a board something in the nature of the foam process board, made by this company and sold without protest by USG.

But we will hear your evidence, subject to a motion to strike if it appears not to be relevant on your theory.

Justice Jackson: You are not offering this, on 5806 that particular theory, are you?

Mr. Steffen: No, not on that theory at all.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Was there any question concerning the foam process during your conference with Mr. Knode? A. Mr. Knode made the statement that he thought it would be to our advantage to take out a license agreement on the foam process.

Q. And what did he say was the advantage? A. That the advantage would be lightening of the board, thereby saving freight charges and saving materials which would go into the manufacture of the board, principally gypsum.

Q. Did you understand also from Mr. Knode's offer, that there would be price-fixing?

Mr. Bromley: I object to his understanding as incompetent.

Justice Stephens: Objection sustained. State what was said. Say what else he said, if you will, please.

The Witness: He offered then to send us a detailed estimate of what these savings would amount to, which he did, by letter.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Did he make an offer of a form of contract to you? A. Yes.

Q. How many or what contracts were offered? A. There were two forms of license agreement, one of 5807 them containing a number of patents, including the foam process.

Q. And the other? A. The other one related to the perforated lath.

Q. And did those contracts, as offered to you, provide for price fixing, do you remember? A. They contained a clause retaining the right by the licensor to fix minimum selling prices.

Q. Now I want to show you what has been marked Government's Exhibit No. 604 for identification—

Justice Jackson: (Interposing) We do not have those exhibits, do we, Mr. Steffen?

Mr. Steffen: No, your Honor, you do not have that exhibit. I just barely got the photostating back.

Justice Jackson: Have the defendants seen them?

Mr. Steffen: No, they have not.

(The document referred to was marked Government's Exhibit No. 604 for identification.)

(Photostatic copies of Government's Exhibit No. 604 for identification were handed to the Court and to defendants' counsel. A copy was then handed to the witness.)

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. This purports to be a letter signed by Mr.
5808 Knode, addressed to Mr. Moylan, of the Schumacher Wall Board Corporation, under date of October 1, 1937. Have you examined Government's Exhibit No. 604, Mr. Tice? A. Yes.

Q. Is that a letter which you received? A. Yes, it was received by the Schumacher Wall Board Corporation.

Q. Now did your company subsequently take out a license under the foam patent or the perforated board patent from USG. A. No sir.

Q. Have you ever taken out a license from USG? A. No sir.

Q. I notice that Government's Exhibit No. 54 has a covered edge. When did you start making a covered-edge board?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that—in addition to my general objection—on the ground that there is no charge in the complaint with respect to any knowledge, or rather any advice to any of the defendants, as to invalidity of the covered-edge patent.

Justice Stephens: Well, in view of the theory under which this evidence is being offered and received, that objection is overruled.

By Mr. Steffen:

5809 Q. You may answer. A. In 1936.

Q. You started to make the covered-edge board in 1936? A. Yes sir.

Q. Will you state, Mr. Tice, how much your board weighs, your 3/8" board, per 1000 square feet? A. The 3/8" wallboard weighs approximately 1800 pounds per thousand square feet.

Q. And what does the 3/8" lath weigh, as you make it? A. 3/8" lath weighs about 1750 pounds per thousand square feet.

Q. And can you state what you use to make the core of your board, now? A. We use gypsum and sawdust.

Q. And about what percentage of sawdust, or how much? A. About 35 pounds per thousand square feet.

Q. 35 pounds of sawdust? A. Yes.

Q. What would that be in terms of cubic feet? A. That is about three cubic feet.

Q. And that would displace how much gypsum, by weight, approximately? A. Probably 75 pounds.

Q. And do you use any other ingredients in your composition of the core? A. Yes, we used processed corn flour.

5810 Q. And how long have you been using that? A. Since the latter part of 1928 or the first of 1929.

Q. And in what proportion? A. In the 3/8" board that runs about 10 pounds per thousand square feet.

Q. And the purpose of using that is what? A. The purpose is to form a binder and secure adhesion of the paper to the core.

Q. Are you familiar with the USG patents covering the making of wallboard? A. I don't know what patents you refer to.

Q. I think that was a very broad question.

Are you familiar, for example, with a machine patent, the Utzman Patent No. 1,330,413?

Justice Jackson: For a machine?

Mr. Steffen: For a machine for forming a closed-edge board, yes.

The Witness: I have read that patent many years ago.

Justice Stephens: Are you an engineer?

The Witness: No, I am not an engineer.

Justice Jackson: Are you a lawyer or a patent lawyer?

The Witness: No sir.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Did you have any advice from counsel concerning the way you manufactured board, as to whether it 5811 might be an infringement of USG Patent No. 1,330,-413?

Mr. Bromley: I object, unless it be shown whether it was in writing or not.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Did you have any oral or written advice of counsel concerning Patent No. 1,330,413? A. Yes, we had oral advice.

Q. And what did your counsel say?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as immaterial.

Justice Stephens: What is the question which was first stated before the objection was made as to whether or not it was oral or written. Read that question.

(The reporter read the question as above recorded.)

Justice Stephens: That relates to the closed-edge board, does it?

Mr. Steffen: That is right.

Justice Stephens: What is the theory of that?

Mr. Steffen: It has to do with machine. I think this is all substantially on the same theory, that is that the defendants in this case are contending that among other things they needed Patent No. 1,330,413, which was the machine patent, and we have on the stand Mr. Tice, whose company has made a closed-edge board since, I think he said, 1936, and we expect to show that that was made properly, notwithstanding the Utzman Machine Patent.

5812 Justice Jackson: On the same machine?

Mr. Steffen: No.

Justice Jackson: On a different kind of machine?

Mr. Steffen: Yes—indicating that it was not a necessary patent at all.

Justice Stephens: Then your theory here is the same as with respect to the perforated lath?

Mr. Steffen: Substantially the same, yes.

Justice Stephens: The objection is overruled.

Mr. Steffen: You have told us that you did have advice from patent counsel as to whether your machine for making folded-edge board, closed-edge board, constituted an infringement of the USG patent. Can you state what your counsel advised you on that point?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as immaterial and incompetent. There is no issue here as to what his counsel advised him.

Mr. Steffen: I think that may be properly withdrawn, your Honor.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. You did, as I understand your testimony, after receiving advice from your counsel, proceed to make a machine for turning or folding the edge, so as to put out a closed-edge board, is that correct?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as incompetent, because it is a question which creates an inference which is 5813 not warranted, as to what the advice was.

Justice Jackson: Ask him what he did.

Justice Stephens: The objection is sustained. Ask him what he did.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. What did you do with regard to making a closed-edge board in 1936? A. We built the machinery necessary to make it, and started making it.

Q. Did you ever receive from counsel for USG any notice of an infringement of Roos Patent No. 1,938,354? A. Yes.

Q. Did they ever bring suit against you?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as immaterial.

Justice Stephens: We will receive it under this general theory of subterfuge. The objection is overruled.

The Witness: No, they never did.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Your company is the owner of a Makowski Patent, is it not? A. Yes.

Q. Is that patent No. 1,349,778? A. I don't remember the number..

Q. I show you a soft copy of what purports to be Makowski Patent No. 1,349,778, which I ask to be 5814 marked for identification as Government's Exhibit No. 605.

(The document referred to was marked Government's Exhibit No. 605 for identification.)

(Government's Exhibit No. 605 for identification was handed to the witness.)

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. I will ask you if that is the patent which your company owns?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as immaterial, in addition to the grounds that I have already stated.

Justice Stephens: What do you intend to prove by the introduction of the Makowski Patent? Is that on perforated lath?

Mr. Steffen: Yes, your Honor, issued in 1920.

Justice Jackson: It is no longer a live patent?

Mr. Steffen: No, it has expired.

Justice Stephens: Well, I am again puzzled, Mr. Steffen. I thought the theory on which you were introducing this evidence with respect to perforated lath was that this company felt entirely free to make it without patents, and therefore that that was some evidence that USG did not have any faith in its own patents.

Now you are going to prove that the Schumacher Wall Board Corporation made board under a patent, apparently.

5815 Mr. Steffen: Your Honor stated that that was our position, that it was a question of whether or not the United States Gypsum people had any faith in their own patents or not. That was not quite the way—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) Then I think you are under an obligation to tell me so, Mr. Steffen, because I am trying hard to make rulings clearly and consistently, and to give full effect to any proper theory that the Government has, and if I misstate your theory, you ought to tell me.

Mr. Steffen: I am now doing the best I can.

Justice Stephens: Very well.

Mr. Steffen: While it might also show that the United States Gypsum Company didn't have faith in their patent—and I think it does as respects the perforated lath patent of USG—the theory is that the defendants, plus USG, and particularly Certain-teed, didn't care whether it was valid or not valid. They were primarily interested in stabilizing the market, and therefore they said, "Why should we even bother?"

As Mr. Spencer testified yesterday, the Certain-teed people never even made any tests to see if they could avoid—or make board, which didn't come within the terms of the Roos Patent. They said in effect, "We would very much appreciate, for business reasons" (I am speaking generally) "to go under the patent and have the 5816 advantage of price control and a 25-cent advance."

Now that, as we see it, is what the circumstances would indicate.

Now here is a company which has had a patent since 1920 covering a perforated board, which we will be able to establish by calling Mr. Ingberg from the Bureau of Standards, does pass the Bureau of Standards one-hour fire test.

I think that Mr. Tice will tell us that he has never been approached at any time by anybody to take a license under the Makowski patent—indicating, as we see it, that the defendants were not very much concerned, either on the one hand in getting a patent already in existence which would not require price fixing, or making a board which didn't come within any patents. They were primarily concerned, as we see it, with price fixing.

Justice Stephens: Well, I don't think now that I did misstate or misunderstand your theory.

Mr. Steffen: Well, I hope not.

Justice Stephens: As I understand still, the theory of the introduction of this evidence with respect to perforated lath is that since this company made, freely, large quantities of perforated lath of assertedly the same substantial qualities as the perforated lath of these defendants, and that the defendants did not protest, and USG didn't protest, that that was some evidence that the defendants, 5817 and USG, did not believe in their patents.

Now the question we have before us is whether or not this Makowski Patent should be received in evidence, under which patent some form of perforated lath could be manufactured. That is the point that is troubling me now, because it doesn't seem to me to be consistent with your own theory.

Take an illustration, clearly out of the field of this case, for instance, showing the trouble that I have in my mind, where one person, a manufacturer, has a patent, or a patent license, to manufacture a form of shoe device called buttons, shoe buttons, and he goes ahead and manufactures the shoes which contain those buttons. Is it any evidence that he doesn't believe in that patent, that somebody else has a patent who manufactures shoe laces?

Mr. Steffen: No, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: They both serve the same function, they both close up the fronts of shoes.

What does it prove in the way of bad faith on the part of one man who manufactures under his patent, that somebody else manufactures something else under a different one?

Justice Jackson: With respect to this patent, Mr. Steffen, isn't what you are attempting to show simply that the Schumacher Company made perforated board during the life of the patent, in accordance with the patent, and since then they have still been making it, although the patent has become public property?

5818 Mr. Steffen: Practically.

Justice Jackson: Now what inferences may be drawn from that, or what weight may be attached to it, would come later. That is the way I see it.

Mr. Steffen: Yes sir.

Justice Stephens: Well, my colleagues are of the view that the Makowski patent testimony may come in, subject to a motion to strike if its relevancy and materiality does not eventually appear. I think it would be consistent, myself, to continue to show, as you have already shown under the theory on which we have admitted this evidence, that large quantities of perforated lath were made without reference to patents. But I cannot myself see yet how it proves any bad faith on the part of the defendants to prove that somebody else was manufacturing similar material under a different patent.

But I defer to the views of my colleagues, and you may proceed with the examination.

Justice Garrett: May I make this statement in view of the statement of the presiding Judge?

Justice Stephens: Certainly.

Justice Garrett: I don't mean to indicate, by admitting this evidence, that I think it shows any bad faith. That is a question to be determined later on, and I wouldn't wish it to be thought that in agreeing to its admission, I in any way think it proves anything.

5819 Justice Stephens: I didn't mean to give a mis-impression of my colleagues' views. I simply meant that as I understood my colleagues' views, they thought it might have some tendency or some possible relevancy on that theory, and that I was not able to see it so far as the Makowski Patent is concerned. I have concurred in their rulings so far as your right to prove wholesale manufacture of perforated lath without reference to a patent.

Mr. Steffen: May I say about ten words in regard to your Honor's illustration regarding the shoe buttons and shoe laces?

Justice Stephens: Yes.

Mr. Steffen: Those I would regard as quite different things.

Let's go back to Mr. Bromley's illustration last night of a tungsten filament lamp and an aluminum filament lamp.

Assuming that they are equally good lamps, starting with that assumption, if it can be shown—this is an argument on relevancy—that the industry, all of the people making lamps, decide, "Well, let's take the tungsten filament lamp because we can fix prices on that," and the aluminum filament lamp is held by somebody else, and they say, "We will just squeeze them out,"—I would say that that would be definite evidence to show that they picked the tungsten filament lamp rather than the aluminum filament lamp, for purposes of getting together.

5820 In other words, if a group get together and suppress one and fix prices on another, it seems to me to be very good evidence of subterfuge.

In the present case the Makowski Patent was called to the attention of Certain-teed by Mr. Spencer, and it appears in his letters which were admitted yesterday.

I would like to ask the witness a question now.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Mr. Tice, did anyone ever apply to your company for a license under the Makowski Patent? A. No.

Q. Anyone at all? A. No.

Mr. Steffen: I wish to offer now—

Mr. Bromley: (Interposing) Just a moment, before you proceed, Mr. Steffen, did I understand you correctly to say that you represented to the Court that Mr. Ingberg of the Bureau of Standards would testify that lath made under the Makowski Patent passed the one-hour fire test?

Mr. Steffen: I will have Ingberg state that Government's Exhibit No. 54, or lath made according to that description—I don't know whether Mr. Ingberg can testify as to whether it was made under one patent or another, I don't think he is a technical man on that—but he will testify to the thickness of the lath, the spacing of the 5821 holes of the sample which was submitted by the Schumacher Company, and will state that it passed the one-hour fire test. I have here the report of the Bureau of Standards.

Justice Stephens: To pursue your illustration a little further, just for the purpose of testing out your theory and getting it clear in my mind, because I am afraid it isn't yet, and I want you to have every opportunity to convince me—as I understand your last statement, you contend that if there was a patent on an aluminum filament for incandescent lamps, and also a patent on a tungsten filament for incandescent lamps, the fact that a group of persons got together and took licenses under the tungsten filament patent would be evidence that they were taking it for business, rather than patent purposes?

Mr. Steffen: May I make this point—

Justice Stephens: I want to ask a further question. Suppose that one group took licenses under the tungsten patent, and another group took licenses under the aluminum patent—which group would you say then was acting under subterfuge?

Mr. Steffen: I would say this, your Honor, that we are getting out into territory that the Courts have not decided, or not ruled upon.

I start with what I understand is the law as stated by the General Electric case, which had to do, as the Court there said, with patents which completely monopo-5822 lized the making of a filament lamp of that general type. The difference between the old carbon filament lamp and the tungsten filament lamp was the difference between the horse and buggy and the automobile, practically.

So it was an entirely new basic field. And in that situation the Court said that where you have that type of patent, and that is the only one that is available, under the facts of the case, price fixing there was held permissible.

Now, we will, at some later time in these proceedings, argue in detail—I think Mr. Bromley will—the variances between the General Electric case, and one very sharp variance in this case, as we see it, is that there are a lot of other patents that were available, and that the patents upon which the defendants were operating were not basic in any sense.

I think that becomes a very important factor, because the moment you get the whole industry together under any patent, the argument can certainly be made from that circumstance, which was not true in the General Electric case, that they chose that with the idea of getting together, while they might have taken one, two or three other patents and stayed in a competitive field.

Justice Stephens: Well, I perhaps am leading the argument too far afield. I thought what the Court held in the General Electric case—I will try and hold my mind open to further persuasion on the final hearing of arguments in this case—but I thought that what the Court held in the General Electric case was that notwithstanding that it was a basic patent and covered the entire manufacture at that time, and notwithstanding that the industry was largely monopolized in the manufacture under the tungsten patent, that still price fixing was valid.

Mr. Steffen: My motion is just the reverse, your Honor, that inasmuch as they did have a good basic patent covering the process, going along to protect it, that they might fix prices.

Justice Stephens: Your contention necessarily leads you, then, does it not, to the proposition that there can't be any valid licensing or price fixing or royalty collecting upon anything except a basic patent; that no improvements can be licensed and price-fixed?

Mr. Steffen: Well—

Justice Jackson: You are going to argue this later on, aren't you?

Mr. Steffen: Yes, your Honor.

Justice Jackson: Then why spend too much time on it now?

Justice Stephens: I apologize to my colleagues. Perhaps I am asking too many questions at the time, but your evidence is being offered, as I understand it, under some theory with respect to the meaning of the General Electric case.

Mr. Stephen: That is right.

5824 Justice Stephens: Since I have to take the major responsibility in announcing the rulings, I would like to know what the theory is, and I still don't get it, and I still don't get how the fact that these people were manufacturing under the Makowski Patent proves anything with respect to the subterfuge of the defendants in connection with the Roos perforated lath patent, but I again defer to the views of my colleagues that it may have some tendency to prove subterfuge, and therefore you may proceed.

I apologize for taking so much time, perhaps unnecessarily.

Justice Jackson: I might put this one line into the record. I think I have made myself perfectly clear, but I wish to again state that the fact that I consider this to be properly admissible does not mean for a second as to what it proves in my mind. I don't know, and won't know until later.

Mr. Steffen: We offer Government's Exhibit No. 54, which is the sample of the perforated lath.

Mr. Bromley: I object to it as immaterial.

Justice Stephens: Objection is overruled. It will be received in evidence.

(The sample referred to was marked Government's Exhibit No. 54 for identification.)

Mr. Steffen: We now offer Government's Exhibit

5825 No. 604, Mr. Knode's letter, and I want to offer it on a somewhat different ground, which ground I will now state.

Mr. Knode's letter is a statement to the effect that under the foam process it is possible to make savings greater than the amount of royalty which he is charging. That same point came up in Mr. Avery's statement to the prospective licensees in May, 1929, and I think it is material to get this as a further admission on the part of United States Gypsum Company that in their view, when they were offering, in May, 1929, the foam patent, that it did not constitute any ultimate loss to the licensee, and that has a very definite bearing, as I see it, upon the nature of their offer, and on the showing or possible showing there of an agreement among the parties that, "Here is a good patent upon which we can fix prices, and which won't cost us anything after we take our savings."

Mr. Johnston: If the Court please, I hardly know what to say. I haven't seen this exhibit. I asked the Clerk yesterday if there were any exhibits, and he said there were none.

Mr. Steffen: That is right.

Mr. Johnston: I asked Mr. Steffen if there would be any exhibits, and he said there would be none. And now they are talking about some kind of a letter, or an offer, with the witness on the stand who says that he, like Texas, didn't take out this license. I don't know what position it puts us in.

5826 I don't want to be pestering counsel and the Court here so many times about the privilege of seeing these exhibits, so I think I will just let the record show my objection, a running objection, to the offering of any more exhibits of any kind by the plaintiff until I have had an opportunity to examine them.

Justice Stephens: Well, the Court has made a definite ruling that it will not consider or take into evidence exhibits that defendants' counsel haven't had an opportunity to examine. If you haven't seen this one, you can take your time now and look at it.

Justice Jackson: Have you seen this, Mr. Johnston?

Mr. Johnston: No, I have no idea what it is.

Justice Jackson: Then you may take my copy.

(Justice Jackson's copy of Exhibit No. 604 was handed to Mr. Johnston.)

Mr. Johnston: They take one set and give it to principal counsel, and of course I wouldn't take the responsibility of taking it away from him, and then they offer it in evidence here. That has happened at least twenty times in this trial, and the Court has admonished counsel for the plaintiff about it, but we get no results.

So I am just going to let my running objection stand in the record here, for whatever it may be worth.

Justice Stephens: That objection may be recorded,

5827 and if you will call to the attention of the Court the fact that you have not seen an exhibit, or a photostatic copy of it, the Court will not act on it until you have seen it and have had adequate time to examine it.

Mr. Steffen: I want to say, your Honor, that I think we have done a relatively good job in getting a large number of exhibits photostated. We have no purpose at all in trying to have exhibits admitted which have not been examined by counsel. As I stated to your Honor this morning, this exhibit got tied up in our photostating department. We cannot get these things through just as quickly as we would like to have them.

Justice Stephens: We understand that, Mr. Steffen, there is no culpability involved, I assume, but nevertheless the defendants have a right to look at these exhibits before we take them in evidence.

Mr. Steffen: We certainly agree to that.

Mr. Johnston: (After examining exhibit.) I want to also add, on behalf of Texas, our objection, because this has no relevancy or materiality, and could not in any manner be binding upon Texas.

Justice Stephens: Well, it is received in evidence under the general theory that one conspirator, if charged to be a conspirator, is bound by the acts or declaration of another in furtherance or execution of the conspiracy. It is received in evidence, subject to the usual reserva-5828 tion with respect to declaration of alleged co-conspirators.

(The document referred to, marked as Government's Exhibit No. 604 for identification, was received in evidence.)

Mr. Bromley: As I understand it, this Exhibit 604 is offered under some special offer which, as I understand it, is that it is because the licensor offered a license to a licensee and told him he could save money if he took the license, even though he paid the royalty—that then the price-fixing clause in the license became unlawful.

Mr. Steffen: I would state that a little differently—

Justice Garrett: (Interposing) But that does state the substance of what you said, doesn't it, the theory upon which you presented it?

Mr. Steffen: If you put it in the context of Mr. Avery's statement in 1929, your Honor, yes.

Justice Garrett: Now I thought so, and I had intended to make this statement, and I wish it to stand, so far as I am concerned, for others. The fact that we may admit some evidence here does not commit the Court, or certainly does not commit me, to the adoption of the theory upon which counsel may state that it is offered, and I want to make that clear. We may have an entirely different theory as to why it may possibly amount to something.

5829 Justice Stephens: Well, that is true. I think we all agree to that.

Of course a trial court is always under this difficulty, gentlemen, as you must well know from your experience as trial lawyers. If the substantive law of a case can be settled on a motion to dismiss the complaint, or on demurrer, then, if all of the substantive law can be settled in that manner, you don't get into these difficulties as to whether evidence is admissible or inadmissible, depending upon the substantive law.

But where there is a constant debate between counsel throughout the case as to what the substantive law is controlling the case, it is pretty difficult to make rulings with absolute finality where the admissibility of evidence depends upon substantive law.

We have to give each side a chance to present the case according to their own theories, and then hear the theories argued at the close of the case.

Mr. Steffen: Has Government's Exhibit No. 605 been admitted?

Justice Stephens: It has not been offered, as yet.

Mr. Steffen: Then I will offer it at this time.

Justice Stephens: That is also received, and the objections of counsel are overruled.

5830 (The document referred to, marked as Government's Exhibit No. 605, was received in evidence.)

Justice Stephens: You may cross-examine.

Cross-Examination

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. After you got USG's notice of infringement of the Roos perforated patent, you quit making that kind of lath, didn't you? A. Temporarily.

Q. Well, you didn't resume it again until after USG came out there in the market itself, did you? A. They were in the market before we ever made it, I believe, with that lath.

Q. After you got USG's notice of infringement of the Roos perforated lath patent, you stopped making the kind of lath you were making at that time, didn't you? A. Yes sir.

Q. Now you say that thereafter you resumed making perforated lath of some kind, do you? A. Yes.

Q. But the kind that you resumed with was a different kind, wasn't it? A. Yes.

Q. When you talked to Mr. Knode about his offer 5831 to you of two forms of license, or thereafter, you knew that the price-fixing provisions contained in the forms were limited to the right of USG to fix the prices of such board and lath as you should manufacture under the patents licensed to you, didn't you? A. Yes, that was my understanding.

Q. Now, did you have any discussion with Mr. Knode at all about this price-fixing clause in the proposed form of license? A. None whatever.

Q. And isn't it the fact, Mr. Tice, that you and your company were willing to take a license under the Roos perforated lath patent, but it was USG's position that you could not have it unless you took a general license too? A. No, that is not correct.

Q. That is not correct? A. No sir, it is not correct.

Q. In other words, you were unwilling to take a license? A. Yes.

Q. Up until 1936, isn't it the fact that the principal product of your company, which you have referred to as perforated lath, was really indented lath? A. Yes, the principal part of our business up until that time was indented lath.

Q. Now indented lath is lath which has no perfora-5832 tions in it at all, in the sense of a hole going completely through it, isn't that right? A. Yes sir.

Q. And indented lath is a lath product in which, by some machine or other, a little gouge is made on one side of the lath which penetrates the paper and core to a depth of an eighth of an inch, or less, isn't that right? A. That is right.

Q. That is just a little deep scratch or gouge on the surface of the lath, isn't it? A. No, the paper is pushed down into the core.

Q. But it is just a little gouge on one surface? A. That is right.

Q. And your company sold that under what name? A. Grip Lath.

Q. And that is what you have referred to, and what is frequently referred to, as perforated lath, as a general term? A. No, I wasn't referring to the indented lath when I was speaking of perforated lath.

Q. When you answered Mr. Steffen that you made perforated lath for this long time, you weren't referring to indented lath? A. No.

Q. Well, the fact is that this indented lath, up until 1936, was your principal product, isn't that right?
5833 A. Yes, that is right.

Q. You had a patent on that indented lath, didn't you? A. Yes sir.

Q. And you made that lath under the patent, didn't you? A. Yes sir.

5834 Q. Isn't it the fact, Mr. Tice, that the only perforated lath that you made prior to 1936, in the sense of a hole completely through the lath, was a lath which had 3/8 inch holes on 2-inch spacings, and you only made that on one or two occasions for one or two accounts? A. That is not entirely correct.

Q. Will you tell us what the facts are? A. The only perforated lath that we made with holes 3/8 of an inch in diameter would be from 1926 until about 1950. That was the principal product that we made during that time.

At about 1930, the indented lath became the principal product, and the production of the perforated lath dropped off to a very small amount.

Q. The perforated lath which you made during that period had 3/8 inch holes, didn't it? A. That is correct.

Q. And 2-inch spacings? A. No, they were spaced about 3-1/2 inches horizontally and about 2 to 2-1/2 inches vertically.

Q. Now, the purpose of these types of indented or perforated lath, out in your country, was to comply with a law requiring mechanical keys to exist between plaster and lath, in view of the prevalence of earthquakes out 5835 there; isn't that right? A. I believe that that is correct.

Q. And your 3/8 inch lath that you made prior to 1930, as you have described it, had no fire rating at all, did it? A. Not the perforated lath.

Q. That is what I mean. A. That is right.

Q. When you say "not the perforated lath", do you mean that your Grip Lath did have a fire rating? A. Yes, it had a fire rating on a test conducted by Smith, Emery & Company, which was accepted in California cities.

Q. That, of course, was not a Bureau of Standards fire rating? A. No, it was not.

Q. And that fire rating applied only to your Grip or indented lath, and not to this perforated lath with the 3/8 inch holes; isn't that right? A. Yes, that is right.

Q. Now, USG introduced its perforated lath on the Coast sometime around 1932, didn't it? A. No, I don't think so. I think it was 1935.

Q. 1935? A. Yes.

Q. Well, prior to the time that USG introduced its perforated lath, did you ever know of or see a perforat-

5836 ed lath with 3/4 inch perforations entirely through the board, spaced on 4-inch centers in parallel rows, which had a one-hour fire rating? A. No, I did not.

Q. You never made a closed-edge board until 1936, you say? A. That is right, 1936.

Q. And, of course, that was long after the expiration of the Utzman closed-edge patent, wasn't it? A. It was after the expiration of the original closed-edge patent.

Q. We know that here as the Utzman patent.

Now, is it true that you have never used the USG bubble or foam process? A. No, we have never used it.

Q. And your board is and has been heavy board; isn't that right? A. Heavier than United States Gypsum board.

Q. And isn't your situation with respect to the weight of the board somewhat different, on the Coast, because, generally speaking, your shipping distances are not long? A. Yes, that has a bearing on the matter, because our freight absorption is less because most of our business is concentrated in a small area.

Q. Isn't it your practice to make a thinner board 5837 than is used here in the East? A. Yes, we do make a 1/4 inch wallboard.

Q. Have you found it necessary, in the manufacture of your board, to use a starch derivative in order to secure bond? A. We use a processed corn flour.

Q. Which is a starch product, isn't it? A. Well, it is a converted corn flour which contains dextrin and some starch.

Q. You testified, Mr. Tice, at the beginning of your testimony today, I believe, that between 1936 and 1938, you made perforated lath with holes of various sizes? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And among the sizes which you listed, you said 3/4 of an inch; is that right? A. Yes.

Q. Now, isn't it the fact that during that period, 1936 to 1938, the only 3/4 inch hole perforated lath you ever made was for one special order? A. That is correct.

Q. And you thereupon received a notice of infringement from USG, did you not? A. That was in 1935 when we received the notice of infringement on some board which we had produced in October or November of 1935.

5838 Q. Well, was that board, of which you now speak, board with 3/4 inch holes in it? A. Yes, that was board with 3/4 inch holes.

Q. You made some of that for one order in 1935? A. That is correct.

Q. Then USG sent you a notice of infringement about it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you have never made it since? A. Not that same type of lath.

Q. That answer goes right down to the present time, doesn't it? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Bromley: That is all.

Justice Stephens: Any further cross-examination by other defendant's counsel?

(No response.)

Justice Stephens: Any re-direct-examination?

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. You were asked one question, Mr. Tice, in regard to the distances that you had to make shipments, and you said that your area was a smaller area. What were you comparing that with, what were you comparing your area with? A. I didn't exactly say it was a smaller area.

5839 I said that the large percentage of our business was concentrated within a small area, within a 100-mile radius of Los Angeles.

Q. How far do you ship? A. We ship as far as Salt Lake City, that is about the farthest distance.

Mr. Steffen: I have no further questions, Your Honor.

Mr. Bromley: No questions.

Justice Stephens: May this witness be excused?

Mr. Bromley: Yes, Your Honor.

Mr. Steffen: Yes.

Justice Stephens: You may be excused, then, and the Court will take its noon recess.

(Witness excused.)

5840 Mr. Steffen: Before you take the noon recess, I want to make an explanation.

We are approaching the end of the Government's case, as I think we told you a while ago, and we don't have as many witnesses, because there aren't as many witnesses left. We had expected to have Mr. Dahlberg this week, and Mr. Dahlberg had to be excused. We had also expected to work in, if we had any blanks in our schedule, many of the exhibits which we have sent out to have admissions upon. Those reports, or returns, are just coming in, although we granted further extensions of time at the request of each of the defense counsel.

Therefore we are in the predicament of not having anything ready this afternoon. We will be ready tomorrow morning.

Mr. Oliver: If the Court please, Mr. Haydon, whom the Government has called as a witness, has been here since early yesterday morning. He is an employee of the Celotex Corporation. I am most anxious that certainly by tomorrow evening, when we recess until April 11th, Mr. Haydon be on and off the stand, and excused, so that there will be no necessity for him to come back.

I believe it is only fair to ask that Mr. Haydon be put on the stand this afternoon, rather than proceed with the introduction of documents, which can take place at any time, and do not necessitate a man traveling back and forth 5841 from Port Clinton.

Justice Stephens: Can you put Mr. Haydon on today?

Mr. Steffen: I went over part of Mr. Haydon's testimony last night, with Mr. Oliver present. As he knows, we asked to have Mr. Haydon here earlier in the week, so we could get prepared. We did that after we had cancelled Mr. Dahlberg's appearance, at Mr. Oliver's request. That left us in a jam, and we worked last night going over Mr. Haydon's testimony. I wouldn't feel justified in starting his testimony this afternoon. I hope that we may tomorrow morning.

Justice Stephens: How long will his testimony take when he gets on?

Mr. Steffen: It will take probably a day.

Justice Jackson: Can't you put him on this afternoon and examine him as far as you are prepared to go?

Mr. Steffen: I would rather not, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: There isn't any particular point in having a witness, whose proposed testimony hasn't been gone over by counsel, put on, because that doesn't ordinarily save time, either for the Court or counsel. But it seems unfortunate that he has to make two trips here.

Mr. Steffen: We agree with that.

Justice Stephens: If he is going to be on all day tomorrow it means that he will have to come back, does it not? Do you mean that you will take all day tomorrow on direct, Mr. Steffen?

5842 Mr. Steffen: I didn't mean to imply that he would be on all day on direct, but what I meant to imply was that we will be able to finish with him tomorrow, both direct and cross. Of course that depends on the length of the cross-examination.

Justice Stephens: Well, all counsel can do is do the best they can.

Mr. Oliver: I think that Mr. Steffen could use some time today on the examination of Mr. Haydon, because he talked with Mr. Haydon last evening for about an hour and a half. Mr. Steffen has indicated that he has been delayed in this because Mr. Haydon arrived here only yesterday. I have a written statement here from Mr. Knuff requesting us to have Mr. Haydon here Wednesday morning, March 29th.

Now when we talked about Mr. Dahlberg, I told Mr. Steffen that Mr. Haydon had made his reservation to be here, and that was just about a day prior to the time he would have to take the train to get here, on the reservation I specifically had him arrange for, to be sure to be here on Wednesday, and it was my understanding from that conversation that he would go right ahead and be here Wednesday morning because he had a reservation, and it is hard to get reservations at this time, and from such a long distance, as we all know.

Justice Stephens: Would there be any possibility, Mr. Steffen, if we now adjourn until three o'clock this afternoon, of your putting Mr. Haydon on then? Would 5843 you have sufficient time between now and then to finish your preparation?

Mr. Steffen: It starts a new phase of the case, your Honor, and I would really feel not justified in putting him on. I understand that it is very awkward from Mr. Haydon's standpoint, but we have done our level best to meet everybody's convenience.

Justice Stephens: We think, Mr. Oliver, that we ought not to assume to compel the Government to put a witness on before they have had reasonable time to prepare their examination. It doesn't save time for anyone in the long run, and it appears that the Government is doing the best it can under the difficulties of a complicated case, with many exhibits and witnesses to deal with.

So we will try and finish with Mr. Haydon tomorrow, if we possibly can, but if not, he may have to come back.

We will now recess until tomorrow morning at ten o'clock.

(Whereupon a recess was taken from 12:20 p.m. until 10:00 o'clock a.m. of the following day, March 31st, 1944.)

5844 IN THE

DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Civil Action No. 8017

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

Plaintiff,

v.

UNITED STATES GYPSUM COMPANY; NATIONAL GYPSUM COMPANY; CERTAIN-TEED PRODUCTS CORPORATION; THE CELOTEX CORPORATION; EBSARY GYPSUM COMPANY, INC.; NEWARK PLASTER COMPANY; SAMUEL M. GLOYD, doing business under the name of TEXAS CEMENT PLASTER COMPANY; SEWELL L. AVERY; OLIVER M. KNODE; MELVIN H. BAKER; BROR H. DAHLBERG; HENRY J. HARTLEY; FREDERICK G. EBSARY; and FREDERICK TOMKINS,

Defendants.

Seventh Floor,
Internal Revenue Building,
Washington, D. C.,
Friday, March 31, 1944.

The above-entitled cause came on for further hearing at 10:00 o'clock a.m., pursuant to adjournment, before Honorable Harold M. Stephens, Honorable Finis J. Garrett, and Honorable Joseph R. Jackson, sitting as the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

APPEARANCES:

(Same as heretofore noted.)

5847 I would like to make one brief statement, Mr. Steffen. I would like to ask you one question, just to clear up my own mind.

In reading over this record last night, and in re-reading some of the leading cases recently, I have begun to wonder if perhaps this is the nature of your contention with respect to the evidence we were discussing yesterday, and the covering patent aspect of the General Electric case to which you referred. Is this what you are contending: that in the situation in the General Electric case, the only patent available which would successfully manufacture the tungsten filament, or an incandescent light filament, was the one owned by the General Electric Company, and that therefore the taking of licenses under that patent is not subject to the inference that it was done for any reason except to obtain the benefit of the patent; whereas, as you contend with respect to perforated lath, if there were other patents—like the Makowski patent, and others to which you may have referred—under which perforated lath or board could be made, the fact that the licensee defendants in the instant case took their licenses 5848 from the USG rather than from some of these other patentees is some evidence that they took their licenses from the USG for the purpose of price fixing, because forsooth, they might not have had to pay royalties under the other patents.

Is that the nature of your contention?

Mr. Steffen: I think that well states the nature of our position on the subterfuge argument; and that, of course, was the basis upon which we were offering the testimony.

Justice Stephens: I see.

Well, I didn't clearly understand it yesterday, and I want to be sure I understand, if I can, the contentions of each side.

You might make a brief comment on that, Mr. Bromley—

Mr. Steffen: (Interposing) May I make one more point, in connection with that?

Justice Stephens: Yes.

Mr. Steffen: I want to make a point which I think Your Honors might well consider, too, that there are various types of patents. That is, there are basic patents, and there are slight improvement patents, and there are process or machine patents, so-called, and there are combination patents. The price fixing feature has been allowed most clearly in the case of basic patents. Where a patent holder simply has a machine patent or has a process patent, we contend—and I think the defen-5849 dants practically admitted—that you can not fix prices on the article made.

If you have a combination patent, that is, use several elements in one combination, the Mercoid case has now decided very clearly that there may be no control of sales policy, and certainly not of price fixing, of any element going into that combination—

Justice Jackson: (Interposing) Any unpatented element going into the combination?

Mr. Steffen: Yes. And that is material here, because the Roos patent on metallized lath is nothing but a combination patent. The Roos patent is not an article patent, it is just a combination patent.

So that the first point is subterfuge; and the second point is that apparently, as a substantive matter, there has to be a patent of a particular quality before—even though there were no subterfuge—they would be permitted to fix prices, in the face of the Sherman Act.

Justice Stephens: Do you wish to make any comment upon that contention at this time, so that the Court will hear what both sides contend with respect to it, Mr. Bromley?

5850 Mr. Bromley: Yes, may it please the Court.

I think I should advert to the fact that the Roos perforated patent, the Roos perforated board, and the perforated license—that whole subject matter is treated in the complaint under the heading of Subordinate Licenses.

We are not confronted with a situation here where the only patent involved in the suit is the Roos perforated patent, and where everything was done under that. Of course I think it is perfectly apparent that we could have fixed the price of the Roos perforated lath under the general license.

Now since it was, as we maintain, a product patent, not a process patent—it was a different type of lath—we chose to issue a separate license concerning it, and to reserve the price-fixing right in the separate license. But the price could have been fixed under the general license.

Justice Stephens: For the reason that it is, in addition to being perforated, a closed-edge board?

Mr. Bromley: For the reason that in addition to being perforated, the closed-edge patent having expired, it used many other important fundamental patents, such as the Haggerty starch patents and the Roos foam patents.

So that the situation does not justify, even in the light of the allegations of the complaint, the emphasis which the Government is putting, it seems to me, on the Roos patent, and on the Roos lath and on the Roos license, 5851 because in their pleadings they treat it only as a Subordinate License.

Now in what your Honor has said at the outset this morning, I don't see that that changes the problem any from the way you posed it the other day.

Suppose there were other patents under which an electric light bulb could be made—a different bulb, but still it gave light—it hardly seems to me that those facts will raise any inference that either one set of licensees or the other had a purpose to secure price fixing, rather than the patent use.

If you had two sets of patents covering two different bulbs, but the bulbs were substantially the same in so far as they were made of glass and brass and wire, and gave off light, I don't see how anybody can say that because one group of men took licenses under one patent, that it should be inferred that what they were after was price fixing just because there was another patent that covered the same thing.

Justice Jackson: You mean that that would not be a logical inference?

Mr. Bromley: Yes, and it would not raise any inference at all, it seems to me, and I cannot see what difference it makes whether one group of men paid royalties or whether they didn't. Normally, royalties are paid; normally, the licensee gets more, in value, than the royalty he pays—else he wouldn't pay the royalty.
5852 If I pay a royalty of one cent a bulb for every bulb that I manufacture, I must figure that the right which I get is worth more than one cent, or I wouldn't pay the one cent.

So that I don't see what difference it makes, or I don't believe the fact that one set of licensees must pay royalty, and the other set needn't pay any, or that one set must pay a higher royalty than the other, raises any inference one way or the other. That is a matter of bargaining between the parties, just like with the purchase of any commodity. A licensee buys a right, and what he pays for it is arrived at by bargaining.

So that I don't see that the issue is changed at all.

Justice Stephens: Well, thank you, gentlemen, for making that statement. We are anxious to know what the contentions are on both sides as to each of these issues.

Call the next witness so that we can finish with him today, if possible.

Mr. Steffen: We would like to make a short statement, your Honor.

We have reached the happy stage where we don't have any more witnesses. We have practically completed the Government's case-in-chief. We had expected, and considered, with Mr. Haydon, the possibility of opening up an entirely different line of testimony. However, 5853 after very careful consideration we have decided that it will save the time of the Court, and make for a more orderly presentation, if we wait until after the defense has put on its case, and then we may or may not need to call Mr. Haydon at all. That is in the event, of course, that the defense puts on any case, in the event, in other words, that the case is continued after the Government rests.

Now having no other witnesses at this time, I want to make a short statement in regard to the week of April 11th. At that time we will have Mr. Dahlberg, who we were forced to continue—he was called for this week, but Mr. Adams and Mr. Oliver both asked to have Mr. Dahlberg put over until the next session.

We have also Mr. Stromquist who couldn't be here until the week of April 11th. We will also call Mr. Ingberg, who will give testimony concerning the fire tests on the National lath, on the Schumacher lath, and also on the USG lath.

Now I don't wish to be bound by just those three witnesses, as there may be one or two others, but I will say to the Court that that should—and as we now see it, will—complete the direct evidence of the Government.

Justice Stephens: You have also, have you not, some exhibits to offer, concerning which you requested stipulations of genuineness?

Mr. Steffen: Yes, your Honor, I want to make 5854 a comment on that.

In order to save time we sent out exhibits to three of the defendant companies. That would save calling, as we figured, several witnesses to identify the exhibits, and therefore save a great deal of time on the part of the Court. We have not yet received from Mr. Adams, of Certain-teed, the answers to our requests. We asked him, as of March 6th, to give his return, and that has not yet been received. USG and National have both made their replies.

We would like again, as a matter of orderly presentation, to get those things together and organized, and I think we can put them before the Court in a very few minutes at the beginning of the week of April 11th.

Justice Stephens: Even if there are stipulations of genuineness and stipulations as to the facts, of course there ought to be some showing, as each exhibit is introduced, of its relevancy and materiality under the issues, so we will know the purpose that it occupies in the case.

Mr. Steffen: Yes, your Honor, so there may be an opportunity for objection, and a ruling thereon.

We also have another matter concerning our notices or requests to produce. If you will remember, on January 19th, at transcript page 2957, we raised the question of whether the defendants would produce certain matters, 5855 and in particular we asked to have each defendant give us the patent markings that they used, or had used, upon their board from 1929 to date. We have already received Mr. Lenci's patent markings, or rather Ebsary's patent markings, and have assurances from Texas that they will supply their patent markings. We also have assurances from Mr. Oliver that Celotex will furnish their patent markings in the near future. In order to get this matter cleared up we would like to have the defendants produce, as promptly as may be, those matters, so that we can clear that up the week of the 11th of April.

Justice Stephens: Can you do that, gentlemen, within the next week?

Mr. Bromley: Yes, your Honor.

Mr. Steffen: I have one other question. We have searched the record and we do not find a definite commitment on the part of the defendants on this matter. If you will recall, when the North Holston plant matter was before the Court, and the question came up of inter-company purchases, at one stage of the discussion I think Mr. Bromley said that he thought they could furnish us with the amounts of board which USG sold not only to Certain-teed, but to other companies. We would like to have those figures, simply for the purposes of showing the substantial quantity of board which was bought and sold between companies. I don't want it specific as to amount, or as to year, but I would like to have the general amount, and if that could be produced by the 11th of April, we would like it.

5856 Mr. Bromley: That had to do only with metallized board, didn't it, Mr. Steffen?

Mr. Steffen: I think it had to do with all board, because the North Holston plant, you see, was buying their whole production of board, perforated lath, and so on.

Justice Stephens: That was the issue on which the majority of the Court ruled, in the reserved rulings, that you had a right to go into the alleged selling of purchased board, as distinguished from manufactured board, at bulletin prices?

Mr. Steffen: That is right.

Mr. Bromley: Well, I don't remember that we ever received any requests to furnish anything other than the figures with respect to metallized board, and I said then that I would initiate an investigation and see if I could find out what the figures were.

Mr. Steffen: That is right.

Justice Stephens: Do you want to make a request now for the figures on all purchased board?

Mr. Steffen: I should like to make a request now to be furnished with the figures which USG has concerning the sales of perforated lath, metallized board, and ordinary board, to licensees, by USG.

Mr. Bromley: That can only be done by checking the inventories, if it can be done at all.

Mr. Steffen: I don't want to get a precise in-5857 voice check, which I think would be impossible, but I am very sure that the USG people have records to indicate the rough amounts that they have sold to licensees.

Mr. Bromley: We have no records of rough amounts; the only records we have are the invoices. However, I will look at it again. Now you want all board, is that right, at North Holston?

Mr. Steffen: Generally.

Mr. Bromley: We can't do that. What do you mean by "generally", everything that USG ever sold to another company?

Mr. Steffen: Yes.

Mr. Bromley: We couldn't possibly do that.

Mr. Steffen: All we want is just the ledger showing, which can be gotten up, I think, in very short order, through the years, of the board sold to National, the board sold to Universal, and the board sold to each of the other companies.

Justice Stephens: Well, if the defendants can furnish it I am sure they will accommodate you. If they cannot, we can't, of course, compel it. It may not be possible to give it in view of the nature of the records and the extensive amounts involved.

Mr. Steffen: There is one other point that I wish to raise, if I may, and that is with respect to Mr. Dowd.

Justice Stephens: I was about to raise that matter myself. That is with respect to Exhibit 233?

5858 Mr. Steffen: Yes, your Honor.

We would like the record to show that we agree with Mr. Bromley that unless we can connect that matter up, we certainly ought not to call Mr. Dowd. All I can say is that we have not yet been able to get the connecting evidence which would justify us in asking to have Mr. Dowd called. If, in the next few days, we get that evidence, so that we feel justified, we will notify Mr. Adams.

Justice Stephens: Very well. Thank you for your frankness in that matter.

Mr. Johnston, do you have some matter to bring up?

Mr. Johnston: Yes, your Honor. Before we recess I want to make an inquiry. If we resume again on April 11th, when will the Court ordinarily take its next recess, if we go right along?

I make this inquiry because I have some other very pressing matters that I would like to readjust when I go home. I suppose, if the Government gets through at the time at which they indicated this morning that they would, that that would take up the week ending with April 14th. I suppose also that it is reasonably apparent to most all of us that at the conclusion of the Government's case there will be some motions filed for involuntary dismissals.

So I was just wondering what the Court's idea would be in considering those, whether the Court would 5859 want the briefs prepared and submitted prior to the argument, and then, after the argument the matter would be taken under consideration and decided before anything further would be done.

It is merely a matter of suggesting a schedule here now so that we may know what to do, both about this matter, and about other matters that we have. Therefore, I raise the question at this time.

Justice Stephens: Well, I don't quite see how it would be possible to fix a schedule. If the defendants are going to file motions to dismiss, and urge them, and in those motions discuss the record in detail, and discuss these questions of law that have been informally debated throughout the case, we would undoubtedly want the aid of written briefs before we determined them. As to how long it would take to argue the motions, or just when the Government's case will end, or when it would be within the proper power of counsel to submit briefs if we require them, I think it is impossible to say, Mr. Johnston. I don't see how we can make any prophesies.

Mr. Johnston: Well, if the case were to go in the same manner that it has been going on, and we would be putting on evidence yet in April, when would the next recess be? Would it be at the 28th of April, and if so how long would that recess last? I assume that we would recess on the 28th of April. In that event, when would we reconvene?

Justice Stephens: There would have to be a 5860 two weeks' session of the Court of Customs and Patent Appeals after that, so we would return here May 15th.

Mr. Johnston: That was particularly what I wanted to know about.

Justice Jackson: That is definite.

Justice Stephens: That is about all we can do, I suppose, at this time, by way of prophecy.

If there is nothing else, then, there will be an adjournment announced until the 11th day of April, at ten o'clock.

(Whereupon, at 10:40 o'clock, a.m., the trial was adjourned until Tuesday, April 11, 1944, at 10:00 o'clock a.m.)

The above-entitled cause came on for further hearing at 10:00 o'clock a.m., pursuant to adjournment, before Honorable Harold M. Stephens, Honorable Finis J. Garrett, and Honorable Joseph R. Jackson, sitting as the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

APPEARANCES:

(Same as heretofore noted.)

5867 PROCEEDINGS

Justice Stephens: In the last day's transcript, there was a small change at page 6141, line 5—the word "License" at the end of the line should be in the plural, "Licenses".

Have counsel any corrections to suggest?

Mr. Bromley: May it please the Court, at page 6137, in the third line, there is another slight change. The word "expression" is misspelled in Justice Jackson's statement.

Justice Stephens: That change may be made.

Does the Government have any corrections?

Mr. Steffen: No, Your Honor.

Justice Stephens: Call your next witness.

Mr. Steffen: Mr. Ingberg.

Thereupon, S. H. INGBERG, called as a witness for and on behalf of the United States, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Will you state your full name, please, Mr. Ingberg, for the record? A. S. H. Ingberg,—I-n-g-b-e-r-g.

Q. And what is your address, Mr. Ingberg? A. 7018 Hampton Lane, Bethesda, Maryland.

5868 And you are associated with the Bureau of Standards? A. Yes.

Q. How long have you been with the Bureau of Standards? A. Since 1914.

Q. What are your duties out there, Mr. Ingberg? A. I have charge of the fire resistance activities tests.

Q. Would you state briefly what those consist of? A. They consist in tests and standardization of tests relating to the fire resistance and fire hazard of materials, fire prevention, tests and standardization of requirements for equipment for detecting and extinguishing fire.

Q. Along in the period 1930 and 1931 and 1932, did you make any tests concerning gypsum board, fire tests, I mean? A. Yes.

Q. And can you state what tests you made at that time? A. In the period—

Q. (Interposing) Let's say 1930 to 1931? A. I will have to refer to my notes to get the dates right.

In the period 1930-1931, we made four tests with plaster on plain gypsum lath.

Q. By "plain", you mean not perforated? A. Not perforated.

5869 Q. Did you subsequently make some tests on perforated lath? A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever make any tests on perforated lath for the United States Gypsum Company? A. Yes.

Q. And for any other companies? A. Subsequent to the tests for the United States Gypsum Company, we made tests of the products of the National Gypsum Company and the Schumacher Wall Board Corporation.

Q. Going back to these tests in 1930 and 1931 on unperforated lath, did you ever make a report concerning those tests to a committee known as the C-11 Committee? A. Well, it was not a formal report. The results were discussed, I think, at a committee meeting.

Q. At about what time was that? A. I think that was in the fall of 1931.

Q. November 20, 1931? A. I think so.

Q. Did the tests on unperforated lath show that it could pass the one-hour fire test?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as immaterial, and incompetent if the results of the tests were in writing. But I don't see what the materiality of that is to this case.

5870 Mr. Steffen: I offer it simply preliminarily. I wish to establish simply that the tests upon unperforated lath did not pass the one-hour fire test, and I will go on from there.

Justice Stephens: You mean all unperforated lath?

Mr. Steffen: The tests that Mr. Ingberg made.

(The Justices conferred.)

Justice Stephens: Perhaps I misunderstood you. Does this questioning go to perforated or plain lath?

Mr. Steffen: Plain lath.

Justice Stephens: I misunderstood you. I don't see the materiality of that.

Mr. Steffen: Simply as background to make a comparison between plain and perforated.

Mr. Bromley: If it has any materiality, we concede that plaster on plain lath did not pass the one-hour fire test.

Justice Stephens: If that is conceded, it takes that matter out of issue, and you don't need to make any proof.

Mr. Steffen: I would like to ask one further question.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. How close did the unperforated lath come to passing the one-hour fire test?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as immaterial, and also as incompetent because calling for a conclusion.

5871 (The Justices conferred.)

Justice Stephens: Two of the Judges don't seem to see the materiality of it. If it is conceded that it didn't pass, what difference does it make, Mr. Steffen, whether it failed by a large or small measure, whether it got an A, B or a C?

Mr. Steffen: Well, I will go on from there, if I may.

Justice Stephens: Very well. Objection sustained.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. You stated, Mr. Ingberg, that you made tests of the Schumacher board. Can you give us the dates? A. The dates?

Q. If you please, yes. A. Well, we made a number for Schumacher, following the other tests. I have the record of the four latest tests here.

Q. All right, can you testify from your own recollection as to when those tests were made? A. The first one I have a record of here—there were two, I think, before that—was May 20, 1936. That was a board that had both indentations and holes.

The next test was on September 9, 1936, also on a board with both indentations and holes.

The next test was on November 24, 1937. That board had holes only.

The final test was made on March 17, 1938, on a 5872 board with holes only.

Q. Now, will you describe the size and arrangement of the holes in the board? A. In the last two tests, or in the last test?

Q. In the fourth test merely. A. In the which?

Q. In the March 17th test.

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as immaterial.

Justice Stephens: Read the question.

(The record was read by the reporter.)

Justice Stephens: What is the point of your objection to that, Mr. Bromley?

Mr. Bromley: I don't understand what materiality it has to any charge in the complaint. Our patent was issued in 1933. Here are tests of another type of board in 1936, 1937 and 1938. I don't see what difference it makes whether they passed the test or whether they didn't pass the test, whether they were patented or whether they weren't patented.

Justice Stephens: The theory that I thought you were introducing this evidence on, Mr. Steffen, was that if there were types of board, other than that licensed to the defendants in the instant case, which were equally satisfactory so far as the fire test was concerned, that it was some evidence of subterfuge that the defendants took out licenses on the perforated lath from United States Gypsum 5873 Company. Now if that is your theory, what materiality is there in going into these fire tests several years after the licenses were taken out?

Mr. Steffen: The first point is that the licenses were taken out in 1936, at different dates during that year. They were offered in 1936, and they were offered in 1938, a gratuitous license was offered in 1938.

The second point is that whether the Schumacher people finally got around to having their board tested until 1936 or not is more or less beside the point. They were making a board, as Mr. Tice testified last time, as early as 1924, which was perforated. So that there was a perforated lath on the market at the time which, as it is shown, in 1936 passed the one-hour fire test.

Justice Stephens: But if the defendants didn't know at the time they first took out these licenses that there was other board available which it was known would pass the fire test, what is the relevance on the subterfuge charge?

Mr. Steffen: I don't think it had passed the one-hour fire test until March 17, 1936—

Mr. Bromley: (Interposing) Do you mean 1938?

Mr. Steffen: March, 1938, yes.

The point I want to make on relevancy and materiality is that this board was on the market as a perforated lath from 1924 on. It was open to anybody to make a 5874 perforated lath certainly as late as 1938, and in fact earlier than that, because the National, I think we will show this morning, were making a perforated lath which probably did not come within the terms of the Roos Patent, at least it has been sold and has not carried a Roos Patent number.

We contend that the fact that there were at least two other forms of lath available to the industry at all times, which were shown in 1938 to be capable of passing the fire test, although they hadn't been shown to be capable of passing the test in 1936, is evidence from which the Court can infer that the defendants did not have to take out a license under USG, with price fixing, in order that they could make a perforated lath which would pass the one-hour fire test, or any other test; and that therefore, it is open to the Court to infer that their primary interest was, as I think we have shown some evidence upon, to fix prices and to organize the industry upon the basis called for in the license under USG Patent No. 1,938,354, which is the perforated lath patent.

The criticism, I think, goes to the weight—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) You have already shown by the testimony of the witness who was here at the last session, from the Schumacher Company in California, that there was another type of perforated lath on the market.

Mr. Steffen: That is right.

5875 Justice Stephens: That has already been shown. This witness isn't called to prove that. This witness is called to prove that there was a fire test on that board in 1938.

Now Mr. Bromley's objection, as I understand it, is that your charge of subterfuge is that at the time these licenses were taken out in 1936, the defendants were aware that other types of board, equally useful so far as fire tests were concerned, were on the market. Now this witness' testimony is after 1936, and I don't see the relevancy or materiality of it on that particular issue of subterfuge.

Have you anything else you want to say, Mr. Bromley?

Mr. Bromley: Except only this, may it please the Court, I don't think Mr. Steffen is correct in his summary of Tice's testimony. All Tice said was that never, prior to the time our lath came out, had they ever made a lath like ours. They had made some with indentations and some with much smaller holes, but they never made anything like ours until after we had gotten the patent, and we notified them of the infringement and they stopped.

Mr. Steffen: I don't think that is correct, strictly. That has only to do with one or two carloads, and had to do with the 3/4 inch hole.

I think the whole question goes back simply to relevancy—I mean to weight.

Justice Stephens: Of course it does—to relevancy.

5876 If you will permit me to say so, it seems to me that you don't really speak to the Court's trouble. The trouble that I have with the evidence that you are now offering is not the general theory of relevancy on which you are offering it. We have already ruled that you are entitled to show, if you can, that there were other types of perforated lath on the market similar to that being manufactured by the defendants. But this witness is called to prove that in 1938, the lath which he is now testifying about—that of the Schumacher Company—would pass a fire test. Mr. Bromley objects that regardless of this question of subterfuge, that in 1938 its passing a fire test is irrelevant to the state of mind of the defendants in 1936. How could they have known, in 1936, that it would pass a fire test in 1938?

Mr. Steffen: The argument is—and I think the whole trouble is with weight—the argument is that had they made any investigation, had they made any experimentation of their own, they might have ascertained whether or not an unpatented board would have passed the one-hour fire test. Instead of that, they chose to take the course which USG offered to them.

I want to make a second point which I think is more conclusive. Those initial license agreements were signed in 1936. In 1938, USG, in effect, withdrew those licenses, cancelled them, and offered in their place a so-called 5877 gratuitous license. Those licenses were offered in September, 1938, after the time when the Schumacher board had passed the one-hour fire test and after the time when the National board had passed the one-hour fire test. And our assertion as to those agreements which were entered into in September, 1938, is that they were designed primarily and almost exclusively for the purpose of writing back into the basic agreements this perforated lath patent as an additional support for price fixing, and a number of the companies signed those agreements. That is a matter of record. We have introduced them as several of the early exhibits.

Now this testimony would indicate, certainly as respects the gratuitous licenses, that their purpose was not primarily to get the USG patent because they wanted the patent, because they had to have it, but because of the fact that it did give them additional support for their price fixing and tended to promote harmony in the industry.

Justice Stephens: Those are two new points that have been made, Mr. Bromley. Will you reply to those if you care to?

Mr. Bromley: As I understand the first point, he says that a number—I think there were three companies—took gratuitous licenses subsequent to March, 1938. I think that is right, Newark, Certain-teed and Ebsary took gratuitous licenses subsequent to March, 1938.

5878 Now there isn't any evidence that prices were fixed under those gratuitous licenses. There are no perforated lath price bulletins under those gratuitous licenses, as I understand the state of the record.

Justice Stephens: Mr. Steffen's contention is that that is some evidence that the defendants were using the perforated lath license to give general support to the price fixing on board under other licenses; and he also makes the point that there is some relevancy in the 1938 test, even if the licenses were granted in 1936, in that if the defendants had chosen to investigate in 1936 they could have found out that the Schumacher board would have passed the fire test in 1936 as well as in 1938, and the fact that they didn't investigate is some evidence that they weren't interested in anything except price fixing.

The Court will overrule the objection. It seems very remote, Mr. Steffen, even as to weight, but it may have some slight relevancy, and consequently we will hear it.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. The question, Mr. Ingberg, was to describe the size of the holes and the arrangement of the holes in the Schumacher board. A. In the last test on March 17, 1938?

Q. That is right. A. There were 48 holes, 13/16

5879 inch in diameter. I have a sketch of it. They sort of staggered—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) There is one point I ought, in fairness to the defendants' objection, perhaps have gone into. I think you objected also on the ground of competency. Do you wish to raise the question of the propriety of the witness testifying orally rather than offering these records?

Mr. Bromley: Yes, if there is a report that is in writing, I think we ought to have the report.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Is there a report in writing on this test of March 17th? A. The report is in writing. I haven't it here.

Mr. Bromley: Then I move to strike out the testimony so far given with respect to the test.

Justice Stephens: I don't see any escape from the propriety of that objection. If this report is in writing and is available to the Government, and could have been brought here, we ought to have it rather than the witness' recollection.

Justice Jackson: Have you the report there?

Mr. Steffen: I think so.

Justice Stephens: The motion to strike is granted, but you may reexamine the witness on the basis of the actual report, Mr. Steffen.

5880 By Mr. Steffen:

Q. I show you what purports to be a technical report of building materials for use in the design of low-cost housing—

Mr. Johnston: (Interposing) What is the number of it?

Mr. Steffen: It hasn't been numbered yet.

It will be marked Government's Exhibit 606.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 606 for Identification.)

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. I ask if that is a report, on pages 20 and 21 thereof, concerning the tests with regard to which you have just testified? A. This report is entitled TRBM No. 8, issued by the National Bureau of Standards. It gives a summary of fire tests of wood and metal frame partitions made up to a certain date.

Q. Now, Mr. Ingberg, referring to this test of March 17, 1938, do you find that in that report? A. From the standpoint of the test of March 17, 1938, I don't think this report has any more status than the notes I have here before me, taken from the original report, for the reason that this report, as mimeographed and approved by the Bureau of Standards, was issued prior to March 17, 1938, 5881 and the tests of the Schumacher lath, Nos. 120 and 123, were made subsequent to that time, and they are written in here, typed in, subsequent to that date. If you want to accept it on that basis—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) If the witness has material in his own hands, in writing, you may examine him on that, if that has some official basis or if he made it, but it should be disclosed to the defendants.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Did you make that notation? A. Yes, the notation in the report here was made by me from the tests.

Justice Stephens: Did you make up the original report?

The Witness: Yes.

Justice Stephens: And you added that insert to it?

The Witness: It was added subsequently.

Mr. Bromley: Might I, with the Court's permission, ask this question?

Justice Stephens: Yes.

Mr. Bromley: There is a written report of the tests of March 17, 1938, prepared by you, isn't there?

The Witness: Yes.

Mr. Bromley: And you haven't that in the court room at all, have you?

The Witness: No, sir.

5882 Justice Stephens: Where is that, Mr. Ingberg?

The Witness: I didn't bring it, we have it in our office. I didn't know it would come up this morning.

Justice Stephens: You couldn't be expected to know that. Counsel should have informed you as to what you were to bring here.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. I show you what has been marked as Government's Exhibit No. 607, which purports to be a report BMS71, and particularly refer you to pages 20 and 21 thereof, and ask you if that is the report that you have in mind?

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 607 for Identification.)

A. This is our published report, BMS71—Fire Tests of Wood and Metal Frame Partitions, issued May 12, 1941, as a Bureau of Standards publication. That contains all tests made with perforated gypsum lath, as well as all other plaster bases; and on page 20 thereof, we have the results of the tests in question made on March 17, 1938, of the Schumacher Wall Board Corporation's perforated lath, which were of the lath that I described to you, having—

Mr. Bromley: (Interposing) Just a moment, please. This still isn't the written report about which I asked you, is it?

5883 The Witness: I might say that it is a published report based on the written reports. It has gone through the editorial process at the Bureau of Standards to make certain that it conforms with all the preliminary reports that were issued on these tests.

Mr. Bromley: But isn't there a very full, carefully prepared, written report of the tests of the Schumacher board which were made on March 17, 1938—isn't there such a thing?

The Witness: There is.

Mr. Bromley: And you do not have it in court, do you?

The Witness: No.

Mr. Johnston: I couldn't get his answer.

Justice Stephens: He said no, Mr. Johnston.

Mr. Steffen: Well, if there is objection, it is perfectly possible for us to get the written report, and the notes from which—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) The Court would appreciate it, Mr. Steffen, if the Government wouldn't waste time the way it has been wasted this morning. It is obvious that this material which has been offered so far, if it is met with an objection as to competency, isn't competent under the best evidence rule. We have been in recess for a week, and I should think the Government could have gotten the originals and have had them here.

5884 Mr. Steffen: Well, I would like to ask to withdraw the witness at this time, and we will call another witness.

Justice Jackson: Can't you telephone for them and have them brought down by messenger while you put on another witness?

Mr. Steffen: We will attempt to do that.

Justice Stephens: Since the Court has ruled in favor of the Government that this material is relevant, wouldn't it be possible for counsel to have an informal conference—and save the time of this witness, from the Bureau of Standards, having to make two or three trips here—as to what material he has, and have him bring in all that either side wants?

Mr. Steffen: I don't think there is any real question on the matter of the tests.

Mr. Bromley: Well, you see, these are confidential, I have never seen them, I don't know what is in them. We have never been permitted to look at them.

Justice Stephens: Then we will have to excuse you, and we will take a few minutes' recess, informally, remaining in the court room, and you may consult with Government counsel as to what you are to bring here; and then either send for it or bring it back. We are sorry to take your time, but we have to have the originals here. We try to be scientific here, as well as in the Bureau of Standards, when it is insisted upon.

5885 The Witness: Judge, what you will get is a copy of the original report. The original report, of course, has gone out.

Justice Stephens: Gone out to whom?

The Witness: To the Schumacher Wall Board Corporation, they get the report because they were sponsoring the tests. What you will get is a carbon copy of the report, that will have the Director's stamp on it; or we can probably have the Director verify the stamp or sign it, if that is what you want.

Mr. Bromley: I make no point of that.

Justice Stephens: We are not interested in formalities. All we want to get is either the original report or a dependable copy of it.

The Witness: Yes, sir.

Mr. Johnston: If the Court please, may I inquire, since counsel for the Government had the Schumacher people here as their witness, maybe counsel has that original report. I would just like to know.

Mr. Steffen: I will say that we do not have that, Your Honor.

Justice Stephens: Very well.

(Witness temporarily excused.)

(Short informal recess.)

Mr. Steffen: Mr. Stromquist.

5886 Thereupon, WALTER G. STROMQUIST called as a witness for and on behalf of the United States, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. State your full name, please, Mr. Stromquist? A. Walter G. Stromquist.

Q. And what is your address? A. 599 Hawthorne Street, Glen Ellyn, Illinois.

Q. And who are you connected with now, Mr. Stromquist? A. The Masonite Corporation, Chicago.

Q. Were you at one time connected with Universal? A. That is correct.

Q. At what time? A. From September, 1925, to February, 1931.

Q. February, 1931? A. That is correct.

Q. And after that, were you connected with the receivership for the Universal Company? A. The receivership was pending while I was with them.

Q. During the period that you were with them, what was your office? A. I spent the first two and a half 5887 years in Chicago, and the balance of the time in New York as Eastern Sales Manager.

Q. So throughout the period, you were Eastern Sales Manager, is that correct? A. Not for the first two and a half years.

Q. Except for the first two and a half years? A. Yes.

Q. And did that comprise some period during which the company was in receivership? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And do you know just what year it was when the receivership occurred? A. I can't recall the date that it started, Mr. Steffen, but it was pending when I left.

Q. Now it is in evidence, Mr. Stromquist, that your company was a licensee under the United States Gypsum Company patents—are you familiar with that? A. In a general way, yes.

Q. Did you attend, at any time, any licensee meetings? A. Oh, I think I attended probably two.

Q. And can you state where they were held and who was present? A. In Chicago.

Q. At about what time? A. I believe in 1927 or 1928, I can't say exactly.

5888 Q. 1927 or 1928? A. Yes.

Q. Now, can you tell us who was present at either one of those meetings? First, who represented USG? A. Mr. Henning was generally there, with counsel.

Q. Who was his counsel? A. Usually John MacLeish.

Mr. Bromley: I move that that answer be stricken out unless he actually recalls that one or both of these gentlemen were present at one or both of the meetings of which he speaks. All he said was that they were usually there.

Justice Stephens: It may go out.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Can you recall whether or not Mr. Henning was present? A. Yes.

Q. Can you recall whether or not Mr. MacLeish was present? A. Yes.

Q. What, if any, other companies were represented, and by whom? A. The Atlantic Gypsum Company.

Q. Who represented them? A. Mr. Fuller.

5889 Q. And anybody else? A. That is all I recall.

Q. Was there anybody from Texas? A. Mr. Sam Gloyd.

Q. Do you recall his having been at one of these licensee meetings? A. I am quite sure that he was present at one meeting.

Q. And was there anyone present from Beaver? A. I don't recall.

Q. Do you know Mr. Blagden? A. Mr. Gus Blagden, yes.

Q. Was he perhaps present? A. Not at the meetings that I attended.

Q. Did you know Warren Henley? A. Yes.

Q. Could you say whether or not he was present? A. I don't recall his presence.

Q. Who represented Universal besides yourself? A. I was there alone at one meeting, and I think Mr. Holland, Eugene Holland, was present with me at the other meeting.

Q. Now during this period of 1927 and 1928, did you receive price bulletins, did Universal receive price bulletins from USG? A. Yes.

5890 Q. Will you state, if you can, what the discussion was at your licensee meetings, at these two meetings that you remember? A. Principally dealing with the development of products, possible improvements in products, particularly with respect to Rocklath, or gypsum lath, commonly known as gypsum lath.

Q. What was the discussion, Mr. Stromquist? A. The general over-all plaster base picture, as it were, quoting the potential figures, quoting figures on wood lath sales, metal lath sales, as gained from Government documents, and citing the volume of plaster base business available to the industry if the product were properly sold and promoted; educational work done with architects, engineers, builders, contractors, dealers, and everyone interested in the field.

Q. What, if any, discussion was there as to the prices of the Rocklath or gypsum lath that would be sold? A. I don't recall any particular discussion of prices except as someone may have asked for an explanation of a bulletin that may have been issued, an interpretation of a bulletin that may have been issued.

Q. What were price conditions at this time, Mr. Stromquist, in the industry? A. Badly demoralized.

5891 Q. And will you describe what you mean by "badly demoralized"? A. If you know what I mean by price cutting and price wars, that is about the broadest way to explain it. You never knew from day to day what you were going to meet with in the way of new and lower prices. You couldn't be sure when you walked into the office of a retail lumber dealer just what price he had been quoted, what price he was paying. The market was extremely competitive.

I know we, at Universal, always tried to get the longest price possible, and we might ask a man $25 and find out that he was buying it for $22 and $23, and then we would have to meet the competition.

Q. Was there any discussion of such market conditions, that you recall, among the licensees? A. In the licensee meetings?

Q. Yes. A. No, sir.

Q. Well, you, as Eastern Sales Manager, had charge of what territory, Mr. Stromquist? A. I would say all the Eastern territory as far West as Cleveland, and down to the Carolina line.

Q. And among your customers, can you name any around Oakfield? A. Around Oakfield?

5892 Q. Yes. A. The Oakfield Gypsum Products Company. We had some lumber dealer customers there, too. I can't remember their names at the moment.

Q. Did you also sell to the Paragon companies? A. The Paragon Company at Syracuse, New York, yes.

Q. And did you know— A. (Interposing) And other companies in Syracuse.

Q. Did you know the American Hardwall Plaster Company? A. Yes; Utica, New York.

Q. Who did you know in the Paragon of Syracuse? A. Emil Hansen.

Q. Did you know him to be connected with Oakfield? A. Yes.

Q. Did you know Mr. Tom Eldred? A. Yes.

Q. And who was he connected with? A. American Hardwall Plaster Company, Utica, New York.

Q. Was he also connected with Oakfield? A. Yes, as a stockholder. I shouldn't say that he personally was a stockholder, I would like to correct that, but it is my understanding that his company owned part of the stock in Oakfield Gypsum Products Company.

Q. And did you know the company of which Mr.
5893 Merriman was a member? A. Mr. E. L. Merriman was with the Paragon Plaster & Supply Company at Scranton, Pennsylvania.

Q. Now I would like to show you Government's Exhibit No. 560, Mr. Stromquist. That is an excluded exhibit.

(Government's Exhibit No. 560 handed to the witness.)

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Will you examine the signature, Mr. Stromquist? A. Yes, sir, that is my signature.

Q. Will you please read the letter to yourself? A. Yes, sir, I have read it.

Q. Was it your practice, Mr. Stromquist, to send prices to the Paragon people, and also to Oakfield, at which they should resell board?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as incompetent because calling for a conclusion, in so far as the phrase "at which they should resell board" is concerned; and I object to it as immaterial in so far as the Paragon companies are concerned, there being no charge of the fixing of resale prices by Paragon.

Mr. Steffen: I will leave out the last portion of the question.

Justice Stephens: Rephrase the question so as to leave out the Paragon companies.

Mr. Steffen: I would feel that I would have to 5894 leave in the Paragon companies, Your Honor, because of the fact—which I think the Court is fully familiar with—that this is an involved situation, and we are not offering the answer to prove that they were attempting to fix or control the resale prices of the Paragon companies. We would like simply to bring that in as part of the general picture.

Justice Stephens: I see your point. We will not consider the exhibit, if received, or the testimony, if received, as tending to prove resale price fixing by the two Paragons or American Hardwall, because that is not charged in the complaint. You are entitled to go into the question of whether or not this witness was attempting to fix resale prices of Oakfield, provided you can competently prove that.

What is your objection as to competency, Mr. Bromley?

Mr. Bromley: That was only because of the last part of his question.

Justice Stephens: Very well, proceed.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. I want to direct your attention, Mr. Stromquist, to the fact that you said that you were selling both Paragon and Oakfield during the period 1927 and 1928, and I ask you if it was your practice to send dealer's prices to them, to both companies? A. Yes, we sent them to Oakfield and to the three other companies, Paragon, American Hard-5895 wall and Paragon Plaster & Supply Company.

Q. How did you send them, Mr. Stromquist? A. How did we send them?

Q. By mail? A. By mail, yes.

Q. Could you tell us what this letter, Government's Exhibit 560, means in that connection?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as incompetent because calling for a conclusion. The letter is not in evidence. Counsel is asking for an interpretation of it.

Mr. Steffen: I will offer the letter in evidence, Your Honor, but I think the Court will remember that the letter may be or might have been regarded as ambiguous, and I think Mr. Bromley so regarded it at the last time.

Justice Stephens: The letter was excluded before, as the Court remembers, first because at that time there was no identification of Mr. Stromquist's signature; and, second, because we were of the view that the letter did not, on its face, apply to the resale prices of Oakfield as distinguished from the two Paragons and American Hardwall, and Emil Hansen himself testified that he didn't regard the letter as applicable to Oakfield.

Mr. Steffen: I think that doesn't quite state it, Your Honor.

Justice Stephens: That is what I understood.

5896 Please correct me if I am incorrect.

Mr. Bromley: You are not incorrect, if the Court pleases. The letter was identified at page 5283, and the objection as to competency was overruled. It was excluded at page 5374 on the ground, as Your Honor has said, that the witness testified that it did not apply to Oakfield, but it was understood by him to apply to the Paragon company, and if it did so apply to Oakfield he paid no attention to it.

Mr. Steffen: Let me get that last clear, because Mr. Bromley has made the point that I want to make, that it applied to Paragon because it was addressed to them; and that it also applied to the sales to Oakfield, but that so far as he was concerned, if it meant to control the price at which Oakfield sold to Paragon, then they disregarded it.

Now we are going at this matter from the other end. We are asking Mr. Stromquist what he meant by quoting prices in the way that he did in Exhibit 560, and what Mr. Hansen meant or understood was an entirely different matter. What we are now offering to show is what the writer of the letter understood when he wrote it, and that is all that is material.

Justice Stephens: I am inclined to the view—if my colleagues disagree with me they will please speak for themselves—that the objection to this particular question as phrased is well taken. You are asking the witness 5897 to do something that the Court has got to do, say what the letter means on its face, so far as this question is concerned. But I think you are entitled to show, if you can, by this witness, what the dealings between the parties were, what the intention of this witness for Universal was, and what form of letters he sent as intended by him to express that intention, so as to convict him, if you can, of an attempt to fix the resale prices of Oakfield, and to bring to the Court's attention the course of dealings between the two companies, the circumstances covering the transaction.

Have you any objection to that, Mr. Bromley?

Mr. Bromley: No, sir; I will go farther, if the Court please. It seems to me that the question he ought to ask him is whether this witness intended this as a direction to Oakfield.

Justice Stephens: That is what I thought you ought to ask, myself, Mr. Steffen.

Objection sustained to the question as asked, but you may ask the question just suggested.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. You have read Exhibit 560, Mr. Stromquist, and you testified that you were selling board to Oakfield. Now was this letter, Exhibit 560, intended as a direction to Oakfield, and I refer particularly to the next to the last paragraph?

A. This particular letter was intended to cover only 5898 Paragon at Scranton, Pennsylvania, who had the privilege of buying for Oakfield, if they so chose, as as well as buying for their plant at Scranton and as well as buying for resale to their dealers in their trading area. Now somewhere in the files there should be another letter to the Oakfield Gypsum Products Company, if I may make that statement.

Q. Didn't you tell me in the office, Mr. Stromquist, that you, on occasion, wrote to Paragon for purposes of quoting both to Paragon and to Oakfield? A. May I take a moment and explain the relationship between Universal and Oakfield, if it is permissible?

Q. I should like to hear that. A. The Oakfield Gypsum Products Company at Oakfield, New York, was a manufacturer of calcined plaster products, primarily. That company was owned by the Paragon Plaster Company of Syracuse, New York, the American Hardwall Plaster Company at Utica, New York, and Paragon Plaster & Supply Company of Scranton, Pennsylvania. Just how the stock was split among the three companies, I wouldn't undertake to say, I don't know, but I do know that the entire ownership rested in those three companies.

The Paragon Plaster Company at Syracuse, the American Hardwall Plaster Company at Utica, and the Paragon Plaster & Supply Company at Scranton, were really in three different types of business. By that I mean 5899 classifications of business. At each point they functioned as a wholesaler or jobber of building materials to dealers in their respective trading areas. In their local markets, Syracuse, Utica and Scranton, they conducted a retail business, selling to contractors, builders and consumers, as well as to dealers who would buy from them in their home markets. Then they also acted in the capacity of manufacturers, since at each point they had what is commonly known as a mixing plant, a sanded plaster mixing plant. They were supplied their stucco, or plaster of Paris, from the Oakfield Gypsum Products Company at Oakfield, New York. The stucco was shipped to the three points and there mixed with the sand, retarder, and hair fiber, plus other ingredients, to form a finished product known to the trade as sanded plaster. That was sold by them to dealers and to contractors.

We, in Universal, were very intimately acquainted with the entire relationship, Oakfield and these other companies. It is my own personal opinion—

Mr. Bromley: (Interposing) I object to his opinion if the Court pleases.

Justice Stephens: State the fact and state your dealings, don't state your opinion.

Mr. Bromley: I don't see the relevancy of this answer, anyway, and I move to strike it out.

Justice Stephens: It has all been in the record 5900 before, through other witnesses, hasn't it?

Mr. Bromley: Yes.

Justice Jackson: As I understood it, the witness was going to explain why he made certain answers to you in your office this morning, and this was a voluntary statement to explain why he made them. I think on that theory he ought to be permitted to go on, without expressing an opinion.

The Witness: That is what I was leading up to.

Justice Stephens: Proceed, then. The motion to strike is denied.

The Witness: Our dealings were principally with Mr. Emil Hansen. Now when we dealt with him, we dealt both with respect to Oakfield Gypsum Products matters and Paragon Plaster Company of Syracuse matters. There were times when we would deal with Mr. Tom Eldred, of the American Hardwall Plaster Company, and we would finish any matters we had pending dealing with the American Hardwall Plaster Company business, and at times discuss matters concerning Oakfield. Since he may have been in New York, he would represent Oakfield, too, for Mr. Hansen. Likewise, there were times when we would deal with Mr. E. L. Merriman on matters concerning Paragon, and he would discuss matters affecting Oakfield.

Justice Jackson: That is Paragon of Scranton?

The Witness: That is correct.

Our letters were not always directed to each of the 5901 four companies, if I may put it that way. Most generally they were, but there would be times when we would write a letter to, let us say, Paragon Plaster Company at Syracuse, and we would send copies to Scranton and to Utica for their information, and they would accept those letters as applying to them as well.

It was probably poor business to handle it that way, but we knew all those men so well, and the relationship was so close that there was no question of responsibility, merely the intent of carrying a message to them and getting information to them, and they accepted our handling of the correspondence in that manner.

All of those companies had the right to buy for their respective markets, Syracuse, Utica and Scranton. They also had the right to buy for Oakfield, if they so chose, and we would sell them for delivery at Oakfield.

Justice Stephens: We will take the morning recess at this time.

(Thereupon, a short recess was taken, after which the trial was resumed as follows:)

5902 Justice Stephens: Proceed, gentlemen.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. You were telling us just before the recess, Mr. Stromquist, concerning the three parent companies of Oakfield—the two Paragon companies and the American Hardwall Plaster Company. I want you now to state what your dealings with Oakfield were. I think you testified that you sold to Oakfield. Did you furnish them at any time with dealer prices? A. We wrote some letters to Oakfield, quoting them prices and which applied for their own purchases, and for delivery to Oakfield only.

Q. And did you quote them dealer prices at which you sold such board? A. I beg your pardon?

Q. Did you quote Oakfield dealer prices from time to time at which you sold your dealer trade? A. No, we did not. We generally had a special price to Oakfield for Oakfield delivery.

Q. That is your price to Oakfield. I mean—did you also give them the price at which you were selling to dealers? A. I don't recall any such correspondence. I should say this, in answer, if I may, I am quite sure—

Mr. Bromley: (Interposing) I object to a volunteer statement; he has answered the question.

Justice Stephens: The question has been an-5903 swered. Suppose you ask him another question.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. I would like to show you what has been marked as Government's Exhibit No. 608.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 608, for identification.)

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. This purports to be a telegram—

Justice Garrett: (Interposing) Mr. Steffen, are you going to introduce that other exhibit?

Mr. Steffen: I am not going to offer it at the moment.

Justice Garrett: Will that be offered under Exhibit No. 560?

Mr. Steffen: If it is offered, yes.

Justice Stephens: Is it offered now?

Mr. Steffen: No, your Honor.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. I now show you what has been marked for identification as Government's Exhibit No. 608, which purports to be a wire from the Universal Gypsum Company to Emil Hansen, under date of July 10, 1929.

(Document was handed to the witness.)

Justice Stephens: Now hand it to defendants' counsel, unless they have seen it.

5904 Mr. Steffen: I think they have already seen it.

Justice Stephens: Have you seen it, Mr. Bromley?

Mr. Bromley: No, I haven't seen it, I don't believe.

Mr. Steffen: They saw it in the Hansen exhibits.

Justice Stephens: Perhaps they would like to refresh their recollection.

(The document was handed to the defendants' counsel for examination.)

Mr. Bromley: Is there a question pending, may I ask?

Mr. Steffen: No.

Justice Stephens: The witness was just asked to read the wire.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Are you familiar with Government's Exhibit No. 608, Mr. Stromquist? A. Is that the telegram you just showed me?

Q. Yes. A. I cannot identify that particular telegram, Mr. Steffen.

Q. Does that refresh your recollection as to how prices were furnished to either Oakfield or Paragon? A. I could say this, that there were times—

Justice Stephens: State whether or not it refreshes your recollection.

The Witness: Yes, it does, your Honor.

5905 Justice Stephens: All right, then state what your recollection is.

The Witness: There were times when we would notify Paragon at Syracuse, and Paragon at Scranton, and American Hardwall at Utica, and also Oakfield, by telegram, of price changes, and prices generally.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Now, state to the Court whether that telegram or telegrams of the character you are describing—how they would be addressed?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as entirely too general.

Mr. Steffen: What I want to get at, Mr. Stromquist is—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) That objection is sustained, and since the telegram is not in the record, it wouldn't mean anything in the record.

Mr. Steffen: That is right.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Did you, on occasion, write or wire to Mr. Emil Hansen, giving him dealer prices?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that unless the writtten communication is produced.

Justice Stephens: That objection is sustained. We have ruled that you can show the course of conduct between these parties with respect to these prices, but this is a very critical matter. You are seeking to establish 5906 resale price fixing by a manufacturing distributor, and if there is written evidence it should be produced.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Mr. Stromquist, state whether or not in quoting prices to Paragon you intended, on occasion, that they should also apply to Oakfield? A. Letters written to Paragon Plaster Company at Syracuse, New York, for example, would carry prices applicable to shipments to the Oakfield plant as well as to shipments to Syracuse, or on their orders direct to their dealer trade.

Justice Stephens: What kind of prices do you mean, prices to be paid you, or what prices?

The Witness: Prices to be paid Universal by Paragon at Syracuse. Now, if Paragon elected to purchase for delivery to Oakfield, they could do so on their order form, and the invoice would be rendered to the Paragon Company for such purchase. But that would be on a Paragon order.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. That is right. Did you have any Oakfield orders? A. Yes, we did.

Q. How did you quote prices to Oakfield? A. At times those prices were addressed to them direct, mailed to their Syracuse office. We did not always do that—it was probably a little bit loose on our part—sometimes we would take whatever prices we named in our letters to 5907 Paragon Plaster Company, for Oakfield delivery, and use those prices in invoicing to Oakfield Gypsum Products.

Q. When Oakfield was buying direct? A. That is correct, on their own order forms.

Q. Now, did you have any arrangement with Oakfield as to whom they might resell their board to? A. No, we did not.

Q. It was open to them to sell to dealers if they saw fit? A. That was their privilege.

Q. And did you ever quote to them the price at which you were selling to dealers? A. I don't recall any such instance for Oakfield. I don't think we ever gave Oakfield any prices that we were selling to dealers at. There would be no object in so doing, Mr. Steffen, for the reason that we never met them in competition, as such.

Q. During what years? A. During all the time I was in New York, for Universal. The competition came from the Paragon companies and the American Hardwall Plaster Company.

Q. Did you know Earl North? A. Yes, I did.

Q. What did you know about him in connection
5908 with Oakfield? A. I know that he was with them for a period, just how long I don't recall. What his duties were, I don't recall.

Q. You wouldn't know, or don't know, whether he sold for Oakfield direct to dealers, or not? A. We never met him in competition, as the Oakfield Gypsum Products Company or as Earl North, as a matter of fact.

Q. I now show you what has been marked as Government's Exhibit No. 609.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 609, for identification.)

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. This purports to be a letter of June 3, 1929, signed by Mr. Stromquist, addressed to the Paragon Plaster Company, together with two bulletin enclosures. This was not offered when Mr. Hansen was on the stand, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: Are there photostats of this?

Mr. Knuff: They were furnished to the Court in connection with Mr. Hansen's testimony.

(Copies were handed to the Court.)

Justice Stephens: Mr. Cantor informs me that all of the exhibits of this type were returned to Government counsel.

However, this is the one, is it, dated June 3, 1929, that we are dealing with now?

Mr. Steffen: It is the only one that I think we have,
5909 your Honor.

Mr. Knuff: On the reverse side of the one you have, your Honor, doesn't it say "Judge Stephens' copy"?

Justice Stephens: Yes.

Mr. Knuff: That is the one you handed to me, and I am handing it back to you.

Justice Stephens: Oh, yes.

Mr. Steffen: That is a 2-page letter, and attached to it are Bulletins Nos. 3 and 4, which are referred to in the first paragraph of the letter.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Have you examined Government's Exhibit 609, Mr. Stromquist? A. Yes, I have.

Q. And is that your signature? A. That is my signature.

Mr. Steffen: I offer Government's Exhibit No. 609.

Mr. Bromley: I object.

Mr. Steffen: (Interposing) I want to make a statement. Exhibit No. 609 has been identified as a letter written by Mr. Stromquist, and which was also taken from the files of the Paragon Plaster Company, which indicates that it has been received.

We offer it on two grounds.

The first ground is this, that we find here the 5910 Universal Gypsum and Lime Company quoting to Paragon Plaster Company, which we will assume for the moment is simply Paragon Plaster Company and not anything having to do with Oakfield, and telling Paragon Plaster Company what their prices shall be to the dealer trade. Now, there is no question but what the letter, this letter—and in fact, Government's Exhibits 560 and 561—constitute a showing that the Universal Gypsum Company was endeavoring to influence or to control the price at which the Paragon Plaster Company was reselling.

We are not, of course, offering it to show that they were controlling the price of jobbers, for the reason that there is no charge in the complaint to that effect. But we do say that when we have a concern as closely affiliated as was Paragon Plaster Company and the other two parent companies, with Oakfield, and where we find the parties dealing rather informally with one another, and instructing Paragon Plaster Company or the parent companies to resell at certain prices, which are the dealer prices—in this case, the two bulletins enclosed are taken directly from, or will conform, I call your Honors' attention, to the bulletin, Exhibit 404, which is a United States Gypsum bulletin—now, that, we say, is a showing of facts from which the Court could infer that the Universal Gypsum Company was endeavoring to control not only the price of Paragon, which is admitted practically, but to control the price of the Oakfield Gypsum Products Company 5911 if and when it sold to dealers.

We offer it secondly upon this ground. You will notice in paragraph 2 of the letter that it says, "Please make no price commitments or price guarantees", and language of that sort, in the middle of the paragraph, indicating that this was a rush matter.

Your Honors will note the date, June 3, 1929, which was very shortly after the May 21, 22 and 23 general license agreements had been signed.

We have in evidence already the fact that prices went up during this period. There were a series of bulletins issued. We find here, therefore, the Universal Gypsum Company sending bulletins saying to it, in effect, to beware, that prices are going up. We take that to be an admission on the part of Universal Gypsum Company that they expected prices to advance, and of course their expectations were not disappointed, because prices did advance during this period.

We therefore offer it as an admission on the part of Universal Gypsum Company indicating that prices were likely to, or that they expected prices to, advance during this period in 1929.

That, I think, is very relevant and very material to show that they went into the 1929 meeting with Mr. Avery out in Chicago with the idea of getting higher prices.

Justice Stephens: Do you wish to be heard, Mr. Bromley?

5912 Mr. Bromley: It seems to me, may it please the Court, that the offer of this exhibit comes directly within the ruling of the Court in connection with Exhibits 560 and 561, which ruling was made at page 5374, the exhibits being rejected on the ground that they were immaterial and irrelevant.

I see no difference at all between Exhibit 609 for identification and Exhibits 560 and 561 for identification.

Justice Stephens: We are of the view that the exhibit is not admissible upon the first theory because it doesn't, on its face, apply at all to Oakfield.

But what do you say with respect to the second theory, that it may be relevant, in the nature of an admission by Universal of an expectation of prices going up at about the time the license agreements were signed?

I think that was not involved in either Exhibit 560 or Exhibit 561, Mr. Bromley.

Mr. Bromley: No, it was not, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: We are inclined to the view that it is admissible on that theory, so far as relevancy and materiality are concerned; in other words, that the objection on the second theory goes to its weight, rather than to its relevancy.

Mr. Bromley: This is offered, then, as an admission by a company not a defendant, on the theory that Universal is a co-conspirator?

Mr. Steffen: That is right.

5913 Mr. Bromley: And an admission that it expected prices to go up after June 3. Well, it seems to me that any such admission is immaterial. Obviously, the sentences to which counsel has called the Court's attention are the usual sentences that any supplier would write to any purchaser who he regarded more or less as an agent, not to make price commitments in the future.

Justice Stephens: Well, I think that that is a matter of interpretation as to its weight, Mr. Bromley.

The Court rules that the exhibit is not admissible on the first theory for which it is offered, to prove resale price fixing by Universal with respect to Oakfield, because it obviously, on its face, does not apply to Oakfield, and the testimony of the witness seems to discountenance its application to Oakfield.

But it is received in evidence on the second theory.

Mr. Bromley: Shouldn't the portion received be limited to the second paragraph of page 1 of exhibit 609 for identification, if that is the theory on which it is received?

Mr. Steffen: I think, in order to comply with the complete evidence rule, as so frequently stated by Mr. Bromley, the entire letter ought to be received.

Justice Stephens: No, the Court will not limit it to that one paragraph, but the letter will be received for that one purpose and on that one theory only, and 5914 is received subject to the usual reservation with respect to declarations of alleged co-conspirators.

(Exhibit No. 609 received in evidence.)

Mr. Adams: May I be heard a moment on that last ruling, your Honor?

Justice Stephens: With respect to Exhibit 609?

Mr. Adams: Yes, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: Yes.

Mr. Adams: Your Honor stated that it was admitted on the theory that it was an admission, and then stated that it was received subject to the usual reservation with respect to declarations of alleged co-conspirators.

Justice Stephens: That is right.

Mr. Adams: I can't see how it could ever be anything but an admission—how could it be a declaration of a co-conspirator?

Justice Stephens: There is no difference between a declaration and an admission so far as the theory of admissibility is concerned. They are both hearsay, and if they come in, they come in as an admission under the exception to the hearsay rule.

Mr. Adams: It would seem to me that that could never be in furtherance of any conspiracy.

Justice Stephens: That is within the reservation. The usual reservation with respect to declarations of alleged co-conspirators is that there must be evidence, 5915 aliunde, the declaration or admission, to prove the conspiracy, and that the declaration or admission must be shown to be in furtherance or execution of the conspiracy.

Mr. Adams: It was my confusion with respect to the use of the word "admission" as distinguished from the word "declaration". I had in mind that there might be a distinction. Perhaps I am wrong.

Justice Stephens: Neither a declaration nor an admission, whichever name you apply, is admissible except as an admission, because otherwise it would be hearsay, and it isn't binding upon the other co-conspirators unless the conspiracy is first shown aliunde the alleged declaration, and unless it is shown to be in furtherance or execution of the conspiracy. All of this evidence is being received as subject to that same type of proof.

Mr. Steffen: I should like to show the witness Exhibit 402.

(The document was handed to the witness.)

Justice Stephens: Were these the exhibits in which the identification of Mr. Stromquist's signature was lacking before, Mr. Steffen?

Mr. Steffen: No. Mr. Lenci did not identify 402. I think he did identify 401.

Mr. Knuff: They were offered in connection with Mr. Lenci's testimony.

5916 By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Have you examined Exhibits Nos. 401 and 402? A. I have.

Q. Can you identify the signature? A. I can.

Q. Is it your signature? A. Yes.

Q. In both cases, as to Exhibits 401 and 402? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Steffen: I now offer Exhibits 401 and 402 and I want to make a very brief statement on the matter.

Exhibit 401 I think was offered earlier and rejected. I would ask your indulgence to make a further very brief statement concerning it.

Justice Stephens: Refresh our recollection about it, will you? What was the basis of the previous offer and rejection?

Mr. Steffen: The basis of the offer was—or rather the objection to the offer was made by Mr. Bromley on the ground that this was addressed to the Ebsary Gypsum Company and the Ebsary Gypsum Company didn't appear or wasn't listed as a manufacturing distributor, and of course that is perfectly true, and it is not now offered for the purpose of showing that this was an effort to control a manufacturing distributor's prices di-

5917 rectly; that is, that Ebsary Gypsum Company was, of course, a plaster manufacturer at the time, they hadn't yet started to make board, but they commenced making board and never actually bought board from the Universal Gypsum Company, according to the terms of this letter, as I understand it.

Now, we make this contention, that this letter is written by the Universal Gypsum Company to a company which was in the exact category of a manufacturing distributor, as Mr. Bromley has stated, although they were not named as a manufacturing distributor in the bill of particulars for the reason that they never actually became a distributor.

Our contention, therefore, is that if we can show, as here, that the Universal Gypsum Company was writing to a manufacturing distributor and telling the manufacturing distributor not only what their prices were but what their terms and conditions of sales were, concerning basing points and the arbitrary weight of board—1850 pounds—and all matters which come within the selling policies of the licenses under the license agreements, we say that that is a showing of facts upon which the Court can infer that the prices of other actually named manufacturing distributors were also being influenced or controlled, in this case by the Universal Gypsum Company or by the defendants generally.

Our second thought, and ground upon we urge the admissibility of the two letters, is that they constitute admissions at this time on the part of the Universal 5918 Gypsum Company, that they were endeavoring to carry out the terms of the bulletins and endeavoring to get others, in this case the Ebsary Gypsum Company, to carry out the terms of the bulletins as respects basing points, as respects the arbitrary weight of the board, and as respects resale prices. And it seems to me that on both those grounds, the two letters should be admitted.

I wanted, as I endeavored to do, to refresh your Honors because it had been rejected on the first ground, although I doubt that it had been perhaps fully presented at that time.

Justice Stephens: I don't recollect your having presented the exhibit on the first ground that you are now arguing, that it is evidence of a course of conduct on the part of one of the alleged co-conspirators. In other words, it is introduced on the analogy of "other crimes" so to speak.

What do you wish to say, Mr. Bromley, if anything?

Mr. Bromley: Exhibit 401 was rejected at page 4019 of the record, and between pages 4019 and 4029, the basis of the ruling is shown clearly, and it was to the effect that Exhibit 401 for identification was immaterial because there was no charge in the complaint naming Ebsary as a manufacturing distributor.

That objection, of course, would apply to Exhibit 402, although Exhibit 402, while mentioned at page 4043 of the record, was never formally offered. But the two documents are obviously in precisely the same class, 5919 and the ruling made as to 401 would apply as to 402.

Now, the new ground on which both of these exhibits are offered is, I assume, as your Honor has suggested, on some theory of "similar crimes".

Justice Stephens: Similar courses of conduct showing a common purpose or design. There is an exception—referring to the analogy of "other crimes"—I think I explained that in Martin v. United States this court has collated the rulings on that subject, and while the general rule is that other crimes or other wrongs are not admissible, there is a series of exceptions within which is included the one where the otherwise collateral matter tends to prove a common design or intent, or course of conduct.

I think Exhibit 401 was not discussed in that category on the previous ruling, was it, Mr. Bromley?

5920 Mr. Bromley: No, it was not. Neither exhibit was discussed in the light of that theory.

The difficulty that I have with that theory is this: I suppose that all would agree that as the Supreme Court said in the Softlite case just yesterday or the day before, it is perfectly lawful for a manufacturer who sells his goods to a purchaser, to say to the purchaser, "Now, I expect that in your resales you will follow my prices; and I tell you now, if you don't I am not going to sell you any more."

The Supreme Court held that in the Colgate case, as modified by the Beechnut case.

And the Supreme Court, in Justice Reed's opinion, reaffirmed, as I read it, the doctrine that a supplier can go a certain extent in trying to see to it that his customer does not undersell him in the market, and the line is between an agreement and understanding that the purchaser will observe fixed resale prices—that is illegal—on the other hand, it is perfectly lawful for the supplier or seller to say, "Now, I am not going to sell you any more if you undersell me and cut my market, and I will tell you in advance, and I will tell you what I expect you to do; I can't compel you to do it or coerce you to do it or have you agree that you will do it."

So that this letter on its face seems to me to be the mere expression of the exercise of a perfectly lawful 5921 right on the part of the Universal; unless this letter was followed up by some agreement or understanding on the part of Ebsary that they would observe fixed prices, then there is nothing wrong about it.

So it seems to me in this situation, even on the new theory, to be immaterial and irrelevant, because it goes to prove—giving it the worst effect possible—merely a course of lawful conduct, and not unlawful conduct.

Justice Stephens: We will receive these two exhibits in evidence under the theory stated by the Court. We think your objections probably go to the weight or ultimate meaning of the exhibits, Mr. Bromley. We do not receive the exhibts as tending to prove resale price fixing by Ebsary Gypsum Company as a manufacturing distributor, because that was not charged, but under the course of conduct theory we will receive these exhibits in evidence as perhaps having some relevancy and materiality, subject to the usual reservation with respect to declarations of alleged co-conspirators.

(The documents referred to, marked as Government's Exhibits Nos. 401 and 402, were received in evidence.)

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. I would like to show you what has been marked as Government's Exhibit No. 403, Mr. Stromquist.

5922 Mr. Steffen: This letter, I think, was never identified.

Will you please hand Government's Exhibit No. 403 for Identification to the witness?

(Government's Exhibit No. 403 for Identification was handed to the witness.)

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Have you examined Government's Exhibit 403 for Identification, Mr. Stromquist? A. Yes, I have.

Q. And is that your signature? A. That is not my signature, but I recognize it as my signature signed by my secretary at that date.

Q. Is that your letter? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Steffen: We offer now in evidence, Your Honor, Government's Exhibit 403.

Justice Stephens: On the same theory?

Mr. Steffen: This has to do with a different topic. It has to do with the charge that the defendants conspired, among other things, to influence or control the price of miscellaneous products other than gypsum board. This has to do with plaster. The charge in the complaint is very clear, and this is a letter which is exchanging price information between Universal and National con-

5923 cerning plaster in certain territories, and suggesting that Mr. Burley get in touch with Charley.

Who, by the way, is Charley, Mr. Stromquist?

The Witness: Mr. Charley Henning.

Mr. Steffen: Of the United States Gypsum Company?

The Witness: That is correct.

Justice Stephens: Any objection?

5924 Mr. Bromley: I object to it as immaterial and irrelevant.

Justice Stephens: The objection is overruled; the exhibit is received subject to the usual reservation with respect to declarations of alleged co-conspirators.

(The document referred to, marked as Government's Exhibit 403, was received in evidence.)

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Do you recall the occasion when you wrote this letter, Mr. Stromquist? A. Yes, I do.

Q. Had you had any conversation with Mr. Burley concerning this matter? A. Yes, I did.

Q. What was your conversation—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) Before you answer that question, is the bulletin attached to that, the sheet following it in these photostats that we have?

Mr. Steffen: Yes, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: Perhaps that should be marked Exhibit 403-A, then, because it is not attached to the other.

Mr. Steffen: Yes.

Justice Stephens: Mrs. Gillette, mark the bulletin as Exhibit 403-A; otherwise it may get lost in the record. And it will be admitted under the same theory as Exhibit 403 and subject to the same reservation.

5925 (The document referred to was received in evidence as Government Exhibit No. 403-A.)

Justice Stephens: Mr. Reporter, will you now read the question to the witness?

(The reporter read the pending question.)

The Witness: As I recall it, Mr. Burley phoned me from Buffalo. He was comparatively new in the plaster business at the time, and he had been making a rather careful study of the plaster business, of plaster prices, having had many reports from various sections of the territory, some reports from salesmen and some advices from dealers, as I recall his saying, and there was quite a wide variance in the prices as reported to him and he was a bit concerned as to what really was the going market price, because of these wide differences. He was merely making a study to determine what he would do.

He asked me if I had any objection to sending him a copy of the prices that Universal Gypsum & Lime Company had published, and which they had been using on sales of sanded plaster in that territory. I told him I would be glad to send him such a bulletin, which I did.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. What is the reference to "Charlie", "Charlie" Henning? A. Since my activity was primarily in the Eastern market at the time, and not being intimately 5926 acquainted with conditions in Michigan and Wisconsin and parts of Ohio, I wasn't able to tell him much about our findings in those territories, and I merely suggested that if he cared to talk to Mr. Henning about the situation, he might do so.

Mr. Bromley: On the basis of that testimony, may it please the Court I move to strike out Exhibit 403 and 403-A on the basis of the witness' explanation with respect to the letter in which he has stated clearly that it was merely an explanation to Burley who had requested prices from Universal in a territory with which Mr. Burley was not familiar but as to which Mr. Stromquist was familiar, and a suggestion that he see Henning concerning prices in that territory with which Mr. Henning w.s more familiar than Mr. Stromquist—and all of which concerned the price of plaster.

Justice Stephens: We will be glad to hear you, Mr. Steffen. We are inclined to the view that the testimony of your own witness has now shown that this document doesn't prove what you offered it for. That being true, it ought to go out.

Mr. Steffen: I offered it to show an exchange of price information between the licensees. It is true that very rarely are you able to prove an agreement on the part of anybody that they will abide by or follow exactly the prices that each has furnished the other. But the first step in any conspiracy, practically, to make it effective, is to supply each other with prices, and that is usu-
5927 ally regarded—and I think it will be by the Court here—as very material evidence.

It is true that Mr. Stromquist's statement concerning it as merely an exchange of information, goes to the weight of the matter—we grant that cheerfully.

Justice Stephens: Well, I am inclined to think you are right about that. The objection goes to the weight. The motion to strike is denied and the exhibits may remain.

Mr. Steffen: We are not clear as to whether we still have some exhibit that has not been ruled upon, or not.

Justice Stephens: Well, if you need a little time to consider this, we can take the noon recess at this time. I notice that Mr. Ingberg has returned. How long is he likely to be on the witness stand?

Mr. Steffen: I will have to talk to him for a couple of minutes before he goes on, anyway.

Justice Stephens: Then we will take the noon recess at this time.

(Whereupon, at 12:07 o'clock, p.m., the trial was recessed until 1:45 o'clock, p.m., of the same day.)

5928 AFTERNOON SESSION

(The trial was resumed at 1:45 o'clock p.m., pursuant to recess.)

Justice Stephens: The hearing will come to order. Take the witness stand, Mr. Stromquist.

Thereupon, WALTER G. STROMQUIST, the witness on the stand at the time of recess, resumed the stand and testified further as follows:

Mr. Steffen: We have no further questions, Your Honor.

Justice Stephens: Cross-examination?

Mr. Bromley: May it please the Court, before I start the cross-examination, I should like to move to strike Exhibits 401 and 402, and I make the motion now because I think I may have misled the Court in what I said this morning.

As I read the argument beginning at the bottom of page 4033, with respect to Exhibit 401, this point, in effect, was argued before, because I called the Court's attention, at the bottom of page 4033, to this situation, saying:

"Suppose, instead of being what it is, this letter was a letter from Universal, a licensee, to a dealer, in which Universal said, 'Now I am going to sell you my material, but, Mr. Dealer, you observe the price I tell you.'

"Would my friend say that that, under any con-5929 struction of the pleadings, would be material? There isn't any charge here that dealers' resale prices were fixed, and yet a dealer's price is a resale price, is a resale transaction, in the same sense that this is. We have got to stop somewhere. We couldn't, it seems to me, possibly permit testimony that this conspiracy, as alleged in these pleadings, was broad enough to include the 20,000 dealers."

Now in this situation we have a bill of particulars which names the manufacturing distributors, which does not name Ebsary; and it seems to me that the bill of particulars still should play a function in so far as the scope of the evidence is concerned. In other words, is it not possible that this ruling means, in principle, that they could prove, if they were able to, that these defendants attempted to fix the price of paints, or roofing, or all sorts of materials, or attempted to fix the resale prices of dealers and jobbers and others, all on the theory that they were not limited by the bill of particulars because they got around it, forsooth, on the theory that they were merely proving intent, that is, showing similar crimes.

Now there must be some limitation to that doctrine, even if we accept that doctrine as being applicable here. I have had an opportunity, over the noon recess, to read the Martin case, to which Your Honor referred, and as I understand that case the only possible exception 5930 to the rule that other crimes cannot be proved, which could have any applicability here, is the theory of common scheme or plan, as to which your Honor, the Presiding Justice, in his opinion in the Martin case said:

"Some connection between the crimes must be shown to have existed in fact and in the mind of the actor, uniting them for the accomplishment of a common purpose, before such evidence can be received. This connection must clearly appear upon the evidence. Whether any connection exists is a judicial question. If the court does not fairly perceive it, the accused should be given the benefit of the doubt and the evidence rejected."

Now here we have evidence that the only sales that Universal made to a manufacturing distributor were to the Oakfield company, and we have evidence from this witness that he never sent any price list to the Oakfield company.

So what does proof of a prior crime tend to show in this situation? It certainly cannot be said that there is any connection between what he did with Ebsary and what it now appears he did not do with Oakfield. In other words, there is no evidence here of any principal crime as to which evidence of prior crimes might color the question of intent.

Furthermore, there is no evidence that what he did with respect to Ebsary was part of any common scheme or design as to what he may have done with the Oakfield company.

5931 So that it seems to me that in effect this argument, although not expressed in words, was considered before by the Court, and that this ruling this morning in effect is reversing the position of the Court; and it seems to me that the theory of "other crimes" just doesn't fit this situation.

Justice Stephens: Well, the Court will not hesitate to reverse itself if convinced that its original ruling was incorrect. It is more important that we be right than that we be consistent, of course, in these rulings. But if we were right in the first instance, then we want to be consistent so as to rule rightly the second time.

It may be that your contentions now made are well taken.

Do you wish to be heard in response, Mr. Steffen?

Mr. Steffen: Just briefly, your Honor.

As I get the argument, when these exhibits, 401 and 402, were before your Honors previously, it seems to me that Mr. Bromley was endeavoring to show that there is no limit to the admission of papers of this sort, and he instanced the fact that we might even have to do with 20,000 dealers. I thought we met that this morning rather clearly by indicating that the Ebsary Gypsum Company was in a class by itself, it was not a dealer and it was not a jobber like Perry, for example.

The Ebsary Gypsum Company was a plaster manufacturer, in this little unique class of people who we have labelled manufacturing distributors, and the only 5932 reason it was not a distributor is because it never distributed. It became a manufacturer before it got into the distributing business.

Now, on the matter of the second point, which is with reference to the Martin case, unfortunately I have not read the Martin case because I was relying on your Honor's ruling.

It seems to me, if I understand the Martin case, that it hasn't anything to do with a conspiracy. We are here establishing, I think, that not only Universal, but as we have shown also Ebsary and Kelley, and the other companies which have sold to manufacturing distributors, have all, more or less, adopted this same manner of influencing or controlling the resal prices and terms and conditions of resale, by manufacturing distributors. So this is not an isolated instance. This is a matter of one of the alleged co-conspirators, the Universal Gypsum Company, making an effort, as we see it, to control and influence the price of a plaster manufacturer, the resale price, and it seems to me, therefore, that the Martin case, on that reasoning, would not apply at all,—what I mean to say is that Mr. Bromley's statement that it would not apply, would not stand up for the reason that here we have a connection shown in the fact that Universal and Ebsary and the other companies who were selling to manufacturing distributors, were also sending their price information. This happens to be a little more explicit. Universal has told Ebsary 5933 that they shall sell according to such and such conditions, and shall follow such and such prices. That is right in keeping with all the other evidence that we have introduced between the other manufacturers and manufacturing distributors. And while, of course, as we pointed out this morning it is true that the Ebsary Gypsum Company never actually sold or went through with this type of bargain, that is immaterial for our charge is that they endeavored to influence or control, and the fact that they have written letters of this sort for that purpose is certainly evidence on the "other crimes" theory, to indicate that they did, or wanted to, control the price of manufacturing distributors generally.

Mr. Bromley: May it please the Court, there must be some limit to the Government's right to change its position and not be bound by the bill of particulars, and I now desire to call your Honors' attention to the fact that at page 4029 of this record Mr. Knuff has said:

"We don't contend—and this is one of the few times that you will hear me say that we admit something—we don't contend that the Ebsary Gypsum Company was a manufacturing distributor. What we say the Ebsary Gypsum Company was, is that it was a manufacturer."

Now, there must be some limit to the Government's right to change its theory and its position, not only with reference to the bill of particulars, but during the trial of the case.

Of course, it is absurd to say that the Ebsary Gyp-5934 sum Company was a manufacturing distributor, it just never was; it was a manufacturer which took a license from us to make the board.

Mr. Steffen: We never have changed our position on that. We do not now, and never did, contend that they were a manufacturing distributor. We said that they were a plaster manufacturer in the same category as Connecticut Adamant and Oakfield and Grand Rapids and many other companies, at the time this letter was sent.

Justice Stephens: Will you please hand to the Court, Mr. Marshal, the portions of the transcript where the Court's ruling on these two exhibits appears? I do not have my copy of the record with me.

(The transcript was handed up to the Court.)

Mr. Bromley: At page 4035 I think is the final ruling.

Justice Stephens: Where were they offered?

Mr. Bromley: At page 4009.

Mr. Steffen: I believe Exhibit 402 was never offered. It was never identified until today.

Mr. Bromley: I am talking about 401, but the two things are the same.

Justice Stephens: (After examining transcript) I don't see, Mr. Bromley, where, up to page 4035, we discussed this Martin case theory.

Mr. Bromley: We didn't.

5935 Justice Stephens: Was that after that?

Mr. Bromley: We didn't discuss that in the previous ruling. All I said was that my argument, I think, was applicable to the Martin case theory.

Justice Stephens: I see.

Well, we think, upon still further consideration of the matter, gentlemen, that we ought to abide the previous ruling; even on the Martin case theory, since this Ebsary company was not charged as a manufacturing distributor, you don't get within the theory that you can introduce evidence of another wrong to prove something that is charged, because this isn't proving what is charged.

We call attention to the fact that at page 4035 the Court said that it "does not, by this ruling, restrict the Government from proving the genesis of the consipracy, and the dealings between the licensees, and the litigations and transactions and tradings alleged, but we think the objections to this particular exhibit are well taken."

So we will exclude both Exhibits 401 and 402.

Wasn't your motion directed to both exhibits, 401 and 402, Mr. Bromley?

Mr. Bromley: Yes.

(Government's Exhibits Nos. 401 and 402 were excluded.)

5936 Justice Stephens: You may cross-examine.

Cross Examination

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. Mr. Stromquist, have you Exhibit 403 before you? A. Yes.

Q. At the time you wrote Exhibit 403, that is, in January, 1930, you knew, didn't you, that Mr. Burley of the National Gypsum Company was new, so far as the plaster business in Ohio, Michigan, Wisconsin and Illinois was concerned? A. That is right.

Q. And it was your understanding, wasn't it, that he was not familiar with the going market price of plaster in those States at that time? A. That is correct.

Q. And isn't it a fact that all that he told you in the telephone conversation to which you have testified, was that he had been trying to find out what the going market price of plaster in those territories was? A. That is correct.

Q. And that he had not been able to determine what it was so far as his salesmen's reports to him were concerned? A. That is right.

Q. And he asked you if you would mind telling him what your company charged for plaster in the terri-

5937 tories mentioned, isn't that right? A. That is right.

Q. And as a result of that conversation, you wrote him the letter of January 8, 1930, Exhibit 403, and enclosed your price list to the trade for that territory, didn't you? A. That is right.

Q. Now did you, at that time, or at any time, have any understanding or arrangement or agreement of any kind, with Burley or anyone from the National Gypsum Company, as to what price or prices the National Company would or would not charge for plaster anywhere in the world? A. Positively not.

Q. When you wrote, in Exhibit 403, "However, I suggest you check this with Charley the next time you are in Chicago to make sure", you merely meant, didn't you, to suggest to Burley that he ask Henning what USG's prices for plaster were in those territories? A. That is correct.

Q. As a matter of fact, the United States Gypsum Company had had a much wider market experience in plaster sales in those territories than you had had for your company, at that time? A. That is correct.

Q. And you thought probably that Henning knew more about the going market price in those territories 5938 than you did, didn't you? A. I knew that he knew more than I did.

Q. Now was it your purpose to suggest to Burley that he approach Henning for the purpose of entering into any arrangement or agreement or understanding with Henning as to what prices should be charged by anybody for plaster in the Middle West territory? A. Will you kindly restate that question again?

Mr. Bromley: Will you read it, please?

(The question was read by the reporter.)

The Witness: No.

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. Did you have any arrangement or understanding or agreement with Henning, or with anybody else in the USG Company, as to what prices should be charged by you or by USG for plaster anywhere? A. Absolutely not.

Q. Now there always has been the strongest and the most vigorous kind of competition in plaster, including price competition, hasn't there, all the time that you were in the gypsum industry? A. That is correct.

Q. By the way, you said at one point in your direct-examination that there was strong competition in board in 1927 and 1928, I believe. Do you remember that? A. Yes, sir.

5939 Q. Well, isn't it the fact that at all times during your connection with the gypsum industry, there was strong competition among the manufacturers in the sale of gypsum board? A. Yes, I think that is a correct statement.

Q. And your experience in the gypsum industry goes down at least into 1931, doesn't it? A. It goes back to 1919.

Q. And ended at least as late as 1931, didn't it? A. That is right.

Q. You knew at the time you wrote Exhibit 403 that you could not lawfully agree with any of your competitors as to prices they should charge for plaster, didn't you? A. Yes.

Q. And you never had any price agreements as to plaster with anybody at any time, did you? A. Absolutely not.

Mr. Bromley: Will you show the witness Exhibit 609, please?

(Government's Exhibit No. 609 was handed to the witness.)

Justice Stephens: Exhibit 609 is in evidence, is it not?

Mr. Bromley: Yes, Your Honor, for the limited purpose suggested by paragraph 2, of showing that this wit-5940 ness had an expectation of a price rise in board at the time he wrote this letter.

Justice Stephens: That is right.

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. You had no special reason, did you, Mr. Stromquist, for suggesting to Emil Hansen that he make no future price commitments beyond the period for immediate delivery? A. None other than the fact that the Universal Gypsum & Lime Company, operating under receivership at the time, was very low in funds, working capital, did not want to make many sales of board products at prices prevailing at that time, which showed no profit to them.

Q. And isn't it the fact that when you wrote that second paragraph, you were afraid that if Hansen committed himself at a price for a long period in the future, that you would be forced to sell him at a price then prevailing, in spite of the fact that prices might have risen? A. That is correct.

Q. And you didn't want to get in that situation? A. That is absolutely right.

Q. You did the same thing with all of the people to whom you were selling board at that time, didn't you? A. That is right.

Q. That is, you didn't want to be committed to them simply because they had taken orders for advance 5941 delivery at a time when prices were low, and you hoped they might go up; isn't that right? A. That is correct.

Q. Did you have any knowledge or information of any kind that USG would increase prices to its licensees at or about this time, in June? A. No, sir.

Q. As a matter of fact, you weren't even aware of the fact that four additional companies had signed license agreements in May, 1929, as of the date you wrote this letter, were you? A. No.

Q. And you had no thought, had you, in your mind, of any kind, that USG might do something at about this time to increase the price which you could charge for board? A. No.

Q. You never at any time had any agreement, arrangement or understanding with the Oakfield Company as to what resale prices they would charge, did you? A. No, sir.

Mr. Bromley: That is all.

Justice Stephens: Any further cross-examination by other defendants' counsel?

(No response.)

Justice Stephens: Any re-direct-examination?

5942 Mr. Steffen: I hope Your Honors will hear me for just a moment on Exhibits 401 and 402.

As I got Your Honors' ruling, you were staying with the ruling which had previously been made as respects a declaration or as respects its bearing upon resale price control?

Justice Stephens: That is right.

Mr. Steffen: And I offered them this morning on one other ground, and I want to make sure whether Your Honors considered that in making your recent ruling. The other ground was that we had one of the co-conspirators, the Universal Gypsum Company, writing a letter in which they make what I would contend is an admission, and I would offer it on the basis of an admission, that they were of a mind to control and fix prices and means and methods of sale. Whether that constitutes a declaration, whether it is designed for purposes of influencing the actual resale price of any manufacturing distributor or not, it seems to me proper to say that it constitutes an admission on the part of the Universal Gypsum Company, and as such that it would be admissible, the admission being that they are prepared to control resale prices and prepared, moreover, to set up a system of pricing concerning sales terms and conditions, which would be dictated under the license agreement.

So that I should think they would be admissible 5943 as an admission, whether or not upon the ground that was previously argued.

Justice Stephens: Do you wish to be heard as to that, Mr. Bromley?

Mr. Bromley: It doesn't seem to me that it does any good to argue it on the basis of an admission, unless the admission is as to something that is charged in the complaint. Suppose this witness testified that he was of a mind to control the resale prices of the 20,000 dealers in this country—what probative force has that admission with respect to any issue in the case, since there is no charge that anybody ever tried to control the resale prices of dealers? Suppose he was of a mind to control the prices of roofing that his company manufactured? Since there is no charge that anybody ever attempted to, or ever did any such thing, of what probative value is his state of mind? It seems to me none.

Mr. Steffen: I can point out simply that Mr. Bromley, if he resorts to roofing manufacturers, might as well have resorted to ice cream cones. They are utterly irrelevant. This hasn't anything to do with ice cream cones; it has to do with their state of mind with respect to plaster manufacturers' resale prices, and that is charged in the complaint.

Mr. Bromley: There is no charge as to Ebsary in the complaint, anywhere.

5944 Mr. Steffen: We have gone through that argument. There is a charge in paragraph 45(e), I think, that there is a conspiracy here to influence and control the resale prices of manufacturing distributors. We have indicated in argument that while the Ebsary Gypsum Company was not named a manufacturing distributor, which is perfectly clear, that they were at least the same type of manufacturer that all the other manufacturing distributors were. They are not roofing manufacturers or something else, or 20,000 dealers. They are the same type of people. And this shows, as I see it, a state of mind to control the resale prices by that type of person, that is, a plaster manufacturer. It is right down the line.

Mr. Bromley: That is just suggesting a way, it seems to me—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) You need not reply, Mr. Bromley.

We are sorry, Mr. Steffen, but we are now convinced that Exhibits 401 and 402 are not admissible in evidence under the charges in the pleadings. We don't think that your last argument raises any new question. If they are not admissible for the reasons we have just stated, they are not admissible as admissions to prove the same thing for which they were offered.

I am sorry, but we can't seem to agree with you about that.

5945 Redirect Examination

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Mr. Stromquist, you testified concerning the nature of the competition in the industry during the years 1927 and 1928. Do you recall that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what was your description of it? A. Strong competition.

Q. And did you say that prices were demoralized? A. Yes.

Q. During that period? A. Yes.

Q. Would you say that the competition that existed after May, 1929, when the various license agreements were signed, was of the same character? A. I would say so, because prices were still not profitable.

Q. What do you mean by that, Mr. Stromquist? A. It was impossible for the Universal Gypsum & Lime Company, speaking as one organization, to make a profit on the prices that prevailed.

Q. You mean that the prices were too low? A. They were too low, that is correct.

Q. And when you said "demoralized", did you mean that they were too low, or that they varied? A. They 5946 were also too low.

Q. Which did you mean, both? A. Well, you had a range of prices, the prices were not identical in all territories, but the entire range had a low level.

Q. And you testified, I think, that you might be offering your board at $23 or $24, and a dealer would tell you that he got it for $22? A. Yes.

Q. And that prices, in that sense, were demoralized; is that what you meant to say? A. Yes.

Q. It has been testified here that after May, 1929, the licensees sold board at uniform prices fixed by USG. Is that your information? A. USG did establish minimum prices.

Q. So that the competition after May, 1929, was not on a price level, is that what you mean to say? A. I beg your pardon?

Q. The competition after May, 1929, was not as respects prices? A. The general situation was not without competition. There were still prices lower than those set by USG in the field, although probably not as bad as prior to May, 1929, but there were still some low prices being quoted.

5947 Q. You mean they were selling contrary to the USG bulletins? A. That is right.

Q. How long did you stay in the business? A. Until February of 1931.

Mr. Steffen: That is all.

Mr. Bromley: No further questions.

Justice Stephens: You are excused, Mr. Stromquist. Thank you for attending the Court.

(Witness excused.)

Mr. Steffen: Mr. Ingberg, will you resume the stand?

Thereupon, S. H. INGBERG recalled as a witness for and on behalf of the United States, having been previously sworn, resumed the stand and testified further as follows:

Justice Stephens: The Court will say, Mr. Steffen, in respect of the testimony of Mr. Ingberg, that it was not the understanding of the Court, when this witness was being examined this morning, that you were asking him to testify of his own knowledge with respect to these fire tests. He was testifying, obviously, from data that he had on the desk before him as to what was written therein, and we understood you were seeking to prove what was recorded; and therefore, the best evidence rule being invoked, 5948 we were obliged to apply it. We didn't intend the ruling to forbid the Government from asking this witness, if the Government thinks it is relevant and necessary to its case to do so, whether or not he personally conducted these tests, and what he personally learned or saw in them. We didn't understand, however, that you were going into that.

Mr. Steffen: That is exactly what I wanted to go into, Your Honor, and I am sorry if I didn't make myself clear, because Mr. Ingberg—I would like to ask him some questions along that line.

Justice Stephens: We understood you were trying to prove the contents of exhibits.

Mr. Steffen: No.

Justice Stephens: And that being true, the best evidence rule was necessarily invoked and properly ruled upon. But if you want to ask this witness if he conducted these tests personally, and what he saw happen in them, you may do that.

Direct Examination (resumed)

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Did you conduct this test on March 17, 1938, on Schumacher board? A. Yes.

Q. Did you do that personally? A. I was present at the test.

Q. What is your position out there, are you in 5949 charge of the division? A. I am in charge of the section.

Q. And how many people do you have with you? A. From ten to fifteen.

Q. Who is your assistant? A. N. D. Mitchell.

Q. And did he participate in the tests of the Schumacher board? A. He did.

Justice Jackson: Were the tests made under your supervision?

The Witness: That is right.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. And you drew up the report, did you? A. I think Mr. Mitchell drew up the report.

Q. Did you examine it? A. Yes.

Q. And did you approve it? A. Yes.

Q. Well, now, I would like to have you describe the board submitted by Schumacher as respects the size of the holes and the arrangement of the holes, if you can do so?

Mr. Bromley: I object to it as immaterial.

Justice Stephens: We have overruled that objection previously, and that will be overruled again.

5950 Let the Court explain to you, Mr. Ingberg—I am not sure whether you are familiar with our practice in the courts or not—if you have an independent recollection of something, which you personally saw or observed or participated in, of course you can tell about that. And if you have any data which refreshes your recollection, you may consult that and then testify as to your own recollection. But if what you are testifying to is merely, without reference to your recollection, what is recorded in exhibits, then we have to have the original exhibits. If you will keep those discriminations in mind, we will appreciate it.

The Witness: Well, Your Honor, we conduct so many hundreds of tests that, of course, the details of each individual test can not remain clear in our minds. We have to refresh our recollection.

Justice Stephens: Well, if these items you have in front of you refresh your recollection so that you can, after looking at them, tell us from your own recollection what happened, then you may freely do that. But if you frankly don't remember anything about it except, in a general way, that a test was held, and are therefore really reading to us the contents of exhibits, then we ought to have those exhibits to read them ourselves, with your help.

The Witness: Well, Your Honor, I might say that the original incident wouldn't be in my recollection ex-5951 cept as the main results of the test have been refreshed from time to time by reading of various reports, and so on.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Tell us, if you can, now, consulting your reports and according to your best recollection, what type of board Schumacher submitted to you for the test on March 17, 1938, as respects size of holes and arrangement? A. I had their records gone over only during the past week or two, and a sketch prepared showing the arrangement of the holes. That is the best I can do—

Mr. Bromley: (Interposing) Who prepared the sketch?

The Witness: The sketch was prepared by my assistant, Mr. Mitchell.

Mr. Bromley: And you don't remember anything about the board that was tested, at all, do you?

The Witness: So far as the details of the holes are concerned, I would have to depend on the records in our record books that he consulted in preparing this sketch, and also we have a photograph showing the board.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Can you tell us now, Mr. Ingberg, the size of the holes and the arrangement of the holes in the Schumacher board?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as incompetent unless the original report in which these details were, I 5952 assume, carefully recorded at the time, is produced.

Justice Stephens: Mr. Steffen, in a desire to be entirely fair in our ruling towards the Government and to give the Government every proper opportunity to prove by this witness what the witness knew, we opened the door to you to call on this witness to testify as to his own knowledge; but it now appears that he doesn't recollect, himself, and couldn't be expected to, because he is the man in charge of dozens of these tests. So it seems to me we are back where we started, that you really haven't got a witness that can testify from his own recollection but a witness who can identify records. So you had better proceed along that line.

Mr. Steffen: He hasn't said yes or no to my question, Your Honor. I have asked him now several times whether he can tell us, after consulting his records, what the size of the holes was in the board submitted by Schumacher, and their arrangement.

Can you tell us that now, Mr. Ingberg?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that, because it is apparent that he can only do it by reading it off the paper.

Justice Stephens: That is obvious, Mr. Steffen. He is reading it to us. The witness is frank and honest, and states that he can't remember the details at all. That being true, he is just giving us the contents of the 5953 records. Why not put the records in?

Do your records show the size of these holes, Mr. Ingberg?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

Justice Stephens: Why not have the records, Mr. Steffen?

Mr. Steffen: The witness hasn't really answered the question.

Justice Stephens: Very true, but the question is objected to upon the ground that it is obvious he is not answering from his own knowledge, but from the contents of records, and therefore the records ought to go in. We sustain that objection.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. What records would you refer to, Mr. Ingberg, to ascertain the size of the holes and their arrangement—I mean the original records? A. We have the construction records—I am not sure whether they are here now—and of course, we have the report—

Justice Jackson: (Interposing) A copy of the report that you sent to Schumacher?

The Witness: Yes.

Justice Jackson: Does that give all the details?

The Witness: Yes.

5954 Justice Stephens: Why not have that?

Justice Jackson: That is the report that was made.

Justice Stephens: There is no objection to that being raised. Mr. Bromley stated before the recess that he would raise no objection as to its being a copy as distinguished from the original.

Mr. Steffen: I will say to Your Honor that we have no objection, so far as the Government is concerned, to introducing these reports. This is a highly competitive industry, not on a price level, but in other regards, and I don't think that the defendants are altogether entitled to look at what is a confidential communication between the Bureau of Standards and the Schumacher people, or the National Gypsum Company, as to the way their boards tested, and so on, and so on, and so on.

Mr. Ingberg conducted the tests. While it is true that he can't remember all the little details, it is very usual for a witness to look at records and from those records to testify. It is past recollection recorded, and on the basis of past recollection recorded he is entitled to testify directly.

Justice Stephens: I am sorry, but we have been through all this. When past recollection recorded is relied upon, then the record comes into evidence. When present recollection refreshed is being used as the expedient to 5955 prepare testimony for admission, then the records may be consulted, but if they refresh recollection the witness testifies.

Obviously this witness doesn't—and he frankly states he can't be expected to—remember all these details himself, and these items don't refresh his recollection.

Mr. Finck: I would like to state that I would be glad to waive any objection that I might have as to the secrecy of any of the tests.

Justice Jackson: Does it make any difference what size the holes are, in your testing, your fire tests?

The Witness: Within certain limits—

Justice Jackson: (Interposing) What do you mean, "within certain limits", within a certain time? For instance, if you were testing board or lath, perforated in any manner, or indented, that would pass an hour's fire test, would it make any difference whether they were big holes or little holes?

The Witness: I think it would.

Justice Jackson: It would?

The Witness: Yes. If they are too small, they don't seem to afford strength to hold the plaster in place.

Justice Jackson: How about a 3/16 inch hole?

The Witness: The plaster wouldn't enter the small holes as readily as the large ones.

Justice Jackson: But if it did enter it, it would 5956 pass the fire test?

The Witness: Under practical conditions of application, it probably wouldn't enter a small hole.

Justice Stephens: I don't see what more we can do, Mr. Steffen. We have tried to be very fair with the Government in respect of this witness. We had thought this noon we had perhaps misunderstood you. But now, if you are relying upon these records, which you obviously are, you can't have your cake and eat it. If you want to rely on them, they will have to come in. I don't see how we can exclude them on the theory that they contain trade secrets, unless somebody raises that objection.

The Witness: On the matter of secrecy of our reports, Your Honor, anyone is entitled to witness any of our tests, and naturally that means that whoever witnesses the tests will know something about the construction. Whereas, we may not send out these reports to anyone that asks for them, we do not put them in anything approaching either a restricted or secret status.

Justice Stephens: You do not do what?

The Witness: We do not put our reports in any restricted or secret status.

Justice Stephens: Although you don't send them out indiscriminately, you do permit people with a proper interest to have access to them?

5957 The Witness: Yes.

Justice Stephens: That would seem to end the trouble. Thank you for your statement.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. I now show you what has been marked Government's Exhibit 610, which purports to be a report of the National Bureau of Standards under date of March 31, 1938, having to do with the Schumacher Wall Board Corporation board.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 610 for identification.)

Mr. Steffen: I regret I don't have any copies, but I think the reason is well understood.

Justice Stephens: Well, we will have to look at it, or those portions of it which are relevant.

(Government's Exhibit No. 610 for Identification handed to the witness.)

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Will you examine Exhibit 610, Mr. Ingberg, and tell me whether that is a copy of the report, the original of which was sent to the Schumacher Wall Board Corporation? A. It is.

Mr. Steffen: We offer in evidence Government's Exhibit No. 610, which is the report upon the fire test of the Schumacher perforated wallboard.

5958 Justice Stephens: Submit it to counsel, please, after the witness has examined it further, if he wishes.

(Government's Exhibit No. 610 for Identification handed to defendants' counsel for examination.)

Mr. Steffen: I will now ask to have this marked as Government's Exhibit 611 for Identification. My thought in doing that at this time is that it is the same type of report, having to do with National, and I felt that the Court could be looking at this copy while Exhibit 610 is being examined by defendants' counsel. This purports to be a report on the National Gypsum Company lath, under date of December 31, 1936, signed by Mr. Briggs as Director of the Bureau of Standards.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 611 for Identification.)

(Government's Exhibit No. 611 for Identification was handed to the witness.)

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Will you please examine Government's Exhibit No. 611, Mr. Ingberg, and state whether or not that is a copy of the report which was sent to the National Gypsum Company? A. Yes, it is.

Justice Stephens: Hand it to defendants' counsel.

(Government's Exhibit No. 611 for Identification
5959 was handed to defendants' counsel for examination.)

The Witness: Your Honor, would you permit me to explain a little further on the availability of reports of the National Bureau of Standards, in order that the record might be clear?

Justice Stephens: Yes, in just a moment. Let counsel give their attention first to examining these exhibits, because they will want to hear you, also.

(Government's Exhibits Nos. 610 and 611 for Identification were handed to the Court for examination.)

Justice Stephens: Announce the afternoon recess.

(Thereupon, a short recess was taken, after which the trial was resumed as follows:)

5960 Justice Stephens: Proceed, Mr. Steffen.

Mr. Bromley: We object to both exhibits on the ground that they are immaterial and irrelevant.

Justice Stephens: That objection is overruled, and Exhibits 610 and 611 are admitted in evidence.

(Government's Exhibits Nos. 610 and 611 were received in evidence.)

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Can you tell us—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) Pardon me, Mr. Steffen.

You wanted to make some further statement, did you not, Mr. Witness?

The Witness: The remarks I made should apply to the types of tests concerned. We undertook these tests with the understanding that we would be permitted to include the results in publications, that is, it was a part of a general research testing program on the fire resistance of partitions, and on tests of that kind the reports are not privileged, and we intended to include them in the publication which is a part of the exhibit here, and that is available to anyone.

Justice Stephens: Thank you. Proceed, Mr. Steffen.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. By way of translation, Mr. Ingberg, can you say whether or not the Schumacher lath submitted for test on March 17, 1938, as reported in Exhibit 610, passed 5961 your so-called 1-hour fire test? A. It did.

Q. Can you say the same thing with regard to the lath submitted by National, which is reported in Exhibit 611, under date of December 31, 1936? A. It passed it within the tolerance limits that we apply in tests of that kind.

Justice Stephens: Judge Garrett is moved to inquire whether or not this is the only copy that the Bureau of Standards has, or have you other copies of these exhibits?

The Witness: We can permit these copies to remain in the records of the court.

Justice Stephens: Very well, thank you.

Mr. Steffen: That is all we have.

Justice Stephens: Cross-examination.

Cross-Examination

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. Mr. Ingberg, as I understood you, you just told Mr. Steffen that the lath submitted by the Schumacher Company for test, and reported on in Exhibit 610, passed the 1-hour fire test—is that what you said? A. That is right.

Q. Now, as a matter of fact, Exhibit 610 covers two separate tests of two entirely different laths manu-5962 factured by Schumacher, doesn't it? A. It does.

Q. And in Exhibit 610 the first board tested bears Test No. 120, does it not? A. That is right.

Q. And the second lath bears Test No. 123, doesn't it? A. That is right.

Q. And the fact is that the Schumacher lath tested under Test No. 120 failed to pass the 1-hour test, isn't that right? A. That is right.

Q. And it was only the lath tested several months later, under Test No. 123, which did pass the test, isn't that right? A. That is right.

Q. The 1-hour fire test. A. That is right. Could I qualify that?

Q. Yes. A. I understood Mr. Steffen to give the date of the test.

Mr. Steffen: Yes, March 17, 1938. That was Test No. 123.

The Witness: Yes.

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. So your answer was meant to only indicate just the particular lath submitted by the Schumacher Com-
5963 pany and tested under Test No. 123, which test occurred on March 17, 1938, that only that lath passed the test? A. That is right.

Q. And the other lath tested under Test No. 120 did not pass the test; did it? A. That is right.

Q. The 1-hour test? A. That is right.

Q. Now, there was a difference between the two pieces of lath, that is, a difference between the Schumacher lath tested under Test No. 120 and the lath tested under Test No. 123, was there not? A. There was.

Q. What was the diameter of the holes in both the tests? A. 13/16ths inch.

Q. 13/16ths of an inch is 1/16th inch more than 3/4ths of an inch, isn't it? A. Yes.

Q. So that 13/16ths of an inch is pretty close to 3/4ths of an inch in diameter, isn't it? A. It is.

Q. Now, the lath of the Schumacher Company that was tested under Test No. 120 had 42 holes for each 5964 piece of lath, did it not? A. That is right.

Q. And the lath tested under Test No. 123 had 48 holes for each lath, did it not? A. That is right.

Q. And each lath tested under Test No. 120 and Test No. 123 had the dimension of 16" x 48", did it not? A. That is right.

Q. So that while the diameter of the holes was the same in both laths tested under both tests, the spacing of the holes was different, is that right? A. That is right.

Q. Would it be correct, Mr. Ingberg, to say that in Test No. 120 the holes were farther apart than in Test No. 123? A. On the average they would be.

Q. And the fact is that the board with the 42 holes failed to pass the test, while the board with the 48 holes passed the test, isn't that right? A. That is right.

Q. Now, doesn't that mean, Mr. Ingberg, that wherever a municipal building code calls for fire resistant 1-hour fire test board, the only board of Schumacher which could be sold for that use is the 48-hole board?

Mr. Steffen: I wonder if that question isn't going too far in that it seems to ask for the construction 5965 of the building ordinances or building codes.

Mr. Bromley: I will withdraw the question for a moment.

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. You are an expert on building codes and ordinances, aren't you, Mr. Ingberg? A. I have worked with them for some time.

Q. And among the many reports which have come out of the Bureau of Standards under your guidance, is a report issued in 1942 which considered very carefully the provisions of the buildings codes of most of the larger cities of this nation, isn't that right? A. Do you refer to our BMS92?

Q. Yes A. Yes.

Q. That is right, isn't it? A. Yes.

Q. So you would say that you have a pretty comprehensive knowledge of building codes throughout the United States? A. I have had contacts with them from the standpoint of fire resistance requirements.

Q. And isn't it true, generally speaking, that these building codes throughout the United States have very definite requirements with respect to whether materials can be used, based on whether they pass your 1-hour fire 5966 test or whether they don't? A. For use in certain locations in buildings, the building codes will require certain fire resistance.

Q. And isn't it fair to say that this Schumacher board tested under Test No. 120, with the 42 holes in it, could not be used anywhere in the United States in places where board having a 1-hour fire rating was required? A. On the basis of these tests, it would not qualify for the 1-hour rating, that is, the plaster construction and board together.

Q. Now, in the National tests, covered by Exhibit 611, you likewise tested two laths, didn't you? A. Yes.

Q. And there again one lath passed the test and one did not, isn't that right? A. That is right.

Q. In Exhibit 611 what were the test numbers? A. 78 and 89.

Q. 78 and 89? A. Yes.

Q. The lath tested under Test No. 78 did not pass the 1-hour fire test, did it? A. The construction, of which the lath was a part, did not pass.

Q. On the other hand, the lath tested under Test
5967 No. 89 did pass the 1-hour fire test, didn't it? A. The construction of which it was a part did pass the 1-hour fire test.

Q. What were the differenees between those two boards? A. The lath tested under Test No. 78 had 54 holes, 5/8ths inch in diameter; that lath in Test No. 89 had 54 holes, 7/8ths inch in diameter, both with the same arrangement.

Q. What was that arrangement in both cases, staggered? A. It was a staggered arrangement, three in a row in the short direction of the board, staggered.

Q. These two laths were of the same size, that is 16" x 48", as the Schumacher laths, weren't they? A. That is right.

Q. Now, you have tested a great many kinds of gypsum lath, haven't you? A. Well—

Q. (Interposing) Over the years? A. Yes.

Q. And you have found out, haven't you, Mr. Ingberg, that there is a very definite relation between the size of the holes and their spacing, so far as ability to pass a 1-hour fire test is concerned? A. Within certain limits there appears to be such a relation. May I extend my explanation?

Q. Do, yes. A. We, however, call attention in our 5968 publication to the fact that the strength and quality of the plaster is a very important consideration in the fire resistance obtained in this type of construction.

Q. And did you ever find any kind of a perforated lath, which had a hole less than 3/4ths of an inch in diameter, which successfully passed the 1-hour fire test? A. In our tests, we did not.

Q. And isn't it a fact that you never found a perforated lath which would pass the 1-hour fire test which didn't have holes arranged so that there was about one hole to every 16 square inches of surface of lath? A. It would be approximately of that order.

Q. And in this report, BMS92, to which you referred, don't you make this statement—Have you got it there, by the way? A. No.

Q. Have you got it in court with you? A. I don't think so. I might recognize the quotation.

Q. Don't you say on page 34 as follows:—

Mr. Steffen: (Interposing) I wonder if the witness cannot be shown a copy of that, if Mr. Bromley is going to question him about it.

Justice Jackson: He said he thought he would recognize the quotation.

By Mr. Bromley:

5969 Q. Don't you say at page 34 of BMS92:

"gypsum plaster on 3/8-in. perforated gypsum lath, one 3/4-in. diameter hole or larger per not more than 16 in.^{2} of lath surface"—a 1-hour fire rating, according to your test? A. That is not for 1-3/4-inch diameter holes, but for 3/4-inch diameter holes.

Q. I was reading just as it appears in this book.

I will read it again.

"gypsum plaster on 3/8-in. perforated gypsum lath, one 3/4-in. diameter hole or larger per not more than 16 in.^{2} of lath surface"—1-hour fire rating. A. That is correct, according to the result of our test.

Q. And don't you also say:

"gypsum plaster on 3/8 in. gypsum lath, plain, indented, or perforated other than as above"—45 minutes fire rating. A. That is correct according to our test.

Q. Now, those two sentences sum up the results of all of your tests over the years, don't they, on perforated lath? A. They do, except I would have to have incorporated in that the same qualifications I recently gave, that the perforations in the lath are not the only factor in determining the fire resistance of the construction.

Justice Stephens: Didn't you conduct these tests
5970 with plaster of a constant quality, so far as each test was concerned, so you would have a control on that?

The Witness: We did not have consistent quality of plaster; it varied quite widely, and we saw the results in the tests. In fact, we have results where, in construction in which we applied lath conforming with these requirements, it did not pass the 1-hour fire rating, apparently on account of the quality of the plaster.

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. Now, you make no such qualification as you have just given, in BMS92, do you? A. I think we do, sir. If you look on page—Not in BMS92, no, but in BMS91 which is an exhibit here.

Q. I am talking about BMS92. You don't say anything about what you have just told the Court in BMS92? A. I cannot recollect whether something to that effect is in BMS92 or not. We had—

Q. (Interposing) Wait a minute. BMS92 was issued October 7, 1942, wasn't it? A. Yes.

Q. And that is the latest publication of the Bureau of Standards on the subject of fire-resistant perforated lath, isn't it? A. But it is a very brief summary.

Q. Whether it is brief or long, it is your latest 5971 publication, isn't it? A. It is.

Q. Now, whenever you have reported on these tests, such as in Exhibits 610 and 611, you have carefully given all of the characteristics of the plaster, haven't you? A. We have defined the plaster used.

Q. That is to say, you haven't gone in here with a blind test, not knowing whether you had what you call a good plaster or a bad plaster; have you? A. We made tests on the plaster that would determine, at least in considerable part, the properties of the plaster.

Q. For instance, in Exhibits 610 and 611, you publish, as a part of the report, just what kind of plaster it was and just what characteristics it had as to tensile strength and compressive strength, and how much sand there was in it, and how much water there was in it, and all about it, don't you? A. That is right.

Q. And that has been your practice with each one of the tests you have made? A. That is right.

Q. So that there isn't any mystery, so far as your report is concerned, as to the kind of plaster used, is there? A. No.

Q. Wouldn't you say no to that, Mr. Ingberg?
5972 A. No, there isn't.

Q. Now, quite apart from the grade of plaster which was used, isn't it the fact, sir, that there never has been any perforated lath which passed the 1-hour fire test, which did not have at least a 3/4-inch hole, and one hole to each 16 square inches of surface? A. As far as our tests are concerned, that is correct.

Q. And you found, didn't you, that where you got smaller holes, such as Justice Jackson referred to a few minutes ago, or differently spaced holes, the board just would not pass the 1-hour fire test, isn't that so? A. There was an indication that the conditions for meeting the requirements were better with the larger holes.

Q. Now, you tested, yourself, the perforated lath which USG has sold since 1933 or thereabouts, didn't you? A. Yes.

Q. And you made that test in 1932, didn't you? A. Yes.

Q. You remember that board which you there tested had 3/4-inch holes, one hole to each 16 inches of surface, spaced in parallel columns?

Mr. Steffen: I object to any examination concerning the USG test. I don't think, in any strict or loose sense, that we have opened the subject of the USG test. If the defendants wish at the proper time to put in evidence 5973 concerning whether USG lath passes or does not pass, that will be appropriate.

Justice Stephens: Is there anything in the exhibits which have been offered or introduced which relate to the U. S. Gypsum Company test?

Mr. Steffen: The two exhibits are specific on Schumacher and National.

Mr. Bromley: One of counsel's first questions was whether or not the witness had not made tests of USG, National and Schumacher lath, and the witness said that he had.

Now, my friend puts in tests of the Schumacher and National lath and leaves out the USG test. Certainly the foundation is there for cross-examination as to the USG test. He brought it out.

Mr. Steffen: I asked the question, your Honor, but we did not go into the USG test at all. It was merely a preliminary question.

Justice Stephens: I am afraid you have opened the door, if you asked that question, and you concede that you did. Otherwise the record would have the inference that the USG lath was not good and that this other lath was. Counsel is entitled to explain that, if he can. The objection is overruled.

Mr. Bromley: Will you read the question, please?

(The question was read by the reporter.)

The Witness: Yes.

Mr. Steffen: I object to that. We must have 5974 the best evidence in this case. It seems to me, the witness being unable to answer on direct examination practically the same type of questions with respect to National and Schumacher, and your Honor overruling any effort on our part to get such recollection, that we should insist, when the same matter is coming up with respect to another company, that the best evidence rule should be applied.

Justice Stephens: Well, the Court ruled that if this witness could answer from his own recollection he was permitted to answer. But he stated that he couldn't. Now, we will apply exactly the same rule on both sides of this examination.

Mr. Steffen: Your Honor, may I say that I don't think he stated that he couldn't. There was an objection made every time, for about 15 or 20 times, and he didn't have an opportunity to answer.

Justice Stephens: I am sorry, Mr. Steffen, but I think the witness told the Court clearly, with voluntary statements, on his part, that he conducted a great many of these tests, some of them with the assistance of assistants, and that he did not purport to remember all the details of them or remember them himself, and the Court observed that he was reading from documents. However, the Court of its own motion opened the door, Mr. Steffen, to you, and asked if you wanted to examine this witness as to his own recollection, and you said yes, that that is what you had called him for.

5975 Then, when you proceeded to do that, it was made clear, I thought, that he didn't have a recollection of his own.

Now, if he still has one, if either side can bring that out we are perfectly willing to listen to this witness as an expert, as to what he knows himself as to these tests.

Mr. Steffen: May I ask that the data which he has before him be removed?

(The papers immediately in front of the witness were removed.)

Justice Stephens: That was on the witness stand when you examined him, Mr. Steffen.

Mr. Steffen: I didn't attempt to examine him on his recollection, because when he looked at it, as he has for Mr. Bromley, we were simply told that he was reading from the document.

Justice Stephens: Mr. Steffen, it seems to the Court that it has been extraordinarily patient and fair and liberal, but if you still think, seriously and sincerely, that this Court has denied you an opportunity to probe this witness' own recollection, we will re-open the direct examination.

Mr. Steffen: I think that would serve no purpose now, your Honor, and I make no point of it.

Justice Stephens: Very well.

Mr. Steffen: We have introduced the two exhibits, and that settles the matter, but I think so far as further

5976 examination is concerned—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) We will apply exactly the same rule, of course, on both sides.

Mr. Steffen: Thank you.

Justice Stephens: If this witness has an independent recollection, he may give it; if he hasn't, then you will have to examine on the records, Mr. Bromley.

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. Well, you answered my question "Yes", didn't you, Mr. Ingberg? A. That is correct, as to the—

Q. (Interposing) 3/4-inch holes, one for every 16 inches of surface, and in parallel rows. A. Yes.

Q. And that means that there were 48 holes in each lath 16" x 48", doesn't it? A. Yes.

Q. That board which you tested in 1932 passed the 1-hour fire test, and you gave it a 1-hour fire rating, did you not? A. That is right.

I might explain to the Court, if I may, the reason my recollection is better on this, because it is a regular arrangement of holes; it isn't a staggered arrangement such as we were up against on the other lath.

5977 Q. And as a matter of fact the board which you tested for USG was the first perforated lath which you had ever tested, was it not, which passed the test? A. Yes, the first we had subjected to fire tests.

Q. And it was the first one ever to pass the 1-hour fire test, wasn't it? A. That is right.

Mr. Bromley: That is all.

Justice Stephens: Do other defendants wish to cross-examine?

(No response.)

Justice Stephens: Is there any redirect examination?

Mr. Steffen: We have no further questions, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: Mr. Ingberg, please let me be sure that I understood you correctly. Did I or did I not understand you correctly, in answer to my questions and in your voluntary statements, to say that with respect to the National and Schumacher tests, you were under the necessity of referring to the exhibits themselves, rather than testifying from your own recollection?

The Witness: That is right.

Justice Stephens: In other words, they did not refresh your recollection, you had to look at them and see what was in them?

The Witness: I had to, sir, on account of the irregular arrangement and staggered pattern.

5978 Justice Stephens: Very well. Thank you very much.

(The witness was excused.)

Justice Stephens: Have you any other witness today?

Mr. Steffen: No, your Honor, we have no other witness. However, we have some requests for admissions that we could take up at this time.

Justice Stephens: Very well.

Mr. Steffen: I might, however, raise one question.

In connection with Exhibit 233, in the Dowd matter, as you remember, we got in contact with Mr. Alexander S. Speer, and I have asked him, because of the shortness of time, to come. I would like to have authority to subpoena him. He is the man about which the report has to do, and I think he will be able to connect things up.

Justice Stephens: You may have authority to subpoena Mr. Speer.

Mr. Steffen: Thank you. He will appear Friday.

Justice Stephens: Very well.

Mr. Knuff: May it please the Court, in connection with Mr. Emil Hansen's testimony, Exhibits 561, 562 and 563 were offered, I believe, and received, and at that time we did not have photostatic copies of the exhibits for the Court, and the Court asked me to have them prepared. I have those exhibits now and will hand them up to the Court.

Exhibit 561 bears the date of February 4, 1929;
5979 Exhibit 562 bears the date of July 31, 1929, and Exhibit 562 bears the date of April 1, 1940.

Exhibit 563 was not received, it was excluded, but it was offered in evidence.

Mr. Bromley: Exhibit 561 was not received in evidence, was it, Mr. Knuff?

Mr. Knuff: It may not have been. I was under the impression that it had been. It was offered in evidence, although it may have been excluded. Whatever the record shows will of course govern.

Mr. Bromley: It was excluded; it is only an exhibit for identification.

Mr. Knuff: It is still a part of the Judge's book.

Justice Stephens: Yes, I, at least, have been keeping a set of all these exhibits, so that I can understand the record where reference is made to them, whether they have been admitted in evidence or not.

Mr. Knuff: Now, in connection with Government's Exhibit 605, which was identified and offered in evidence through Mr. Tice, being the soft copies of the Makowski patents, I also have copies for the Court. I do not have copies for the defendants.

(Copies of Government's Exhibits 561, for identification 562, 563 for identification and 605 were handed up to the Court.)

Justice Jackson: They can get all the copies they 5980 want down at Patent Office, can't they?

Mr. Knuff: That is right.

I would now like to have marked as Government's Exhibit 612 for identification certain answers of the United States Gypsum Company to the Government's interrogatories. This exhibit contains certain interrogatories and the answers to them of the United States Gypsum Company. It is prepared in exhibit form. We have, in the past, used some of the interrogatories and answers thereto, although we haven't used all of them, but in order to be sure that we have all the interrogatories and the answers thereto, of USG, which we think are material to the Government's case, we have taken out of the interrogatories of the Government and the answers of the USG, those that we want to introduce in evidence and have, as I say, combined them in exhibit form.

Exhibit 612 will be a Government's exhibit containing certain interrogatories on behalf of the United States of America and answers thereto by the defendant, United States Gypsum Company.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 612, for identification.)

Mr. Knuff: Government's Exhibit 613 for identification will be certain Government interrogatories and answers thereto by National.

5981 (The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 613, for identification.)

Mr. Knuff: Exhibit No. 614 for identification will be certain interrogatories by the Government and the answers of Certain-teed.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 614, for identification.)

Mr. Knuff: Exhibit No. 615 for identification will be certain interrogatories by the Government and the answers thereto of Ebsary.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 615, for identification.)

Justice Stephens: Are these offered in evidence?

Mr. Knuff: Yes, I would now like to offer in evidence Government's Exhibits 612, 613, 614 and 615.

Justice Stephens: Is there any objection as to form, on the ground that these are copies, rather than the originals of the interrogatories and answers? If not, if there is any other objection?

Mr. Bromley: There is no objection as to form, subject to our right to compare them.

As to materiality and relevancy, I should like to 5982 have an opportunity to read them and find out just what it is that they are putting in. I would like to reserve that objection until the morning.

Justice Stephens: Very well, we will not rule on them until tomorrow morning, in order to give counsel and the Court both a chance to examine them.

5983 Mr. Knuff: Now I would like to have marked for identification as Government's Exhibit 616, a report of the Sales Department of the United States Gypsum Company, for the year 1926, addressed to Mr. S. L. Avery, and signed C. Henning, Vice President in Charge of Sales. Exhibit 616 for Identification has noted on the original, "Approved by Board of Directors, February (the date is indistinct) 1927", and it is signed by Mr. Bear, Secretary.

(The document referred to was marked for identification as Government Exhibit No. 616.)

Mr. Knuff: I would also like to have marked for Identification as Government's Exhibit 617, a report of the Sales Department of the United States Gypsum Company for the first quarter of 1927. It is addressed to Mr. S. L. Avery and is signed C. Henning, Vice President in Charge of Sales; and Exhibit 617 has noted on the original, "Approved by Board of Directors, May 11, 1927—R. G. Bear, Secretary."

(The document referred to was marked for identification as Government Exhibit No. 617.)

Mr. Knuff: I would like to have marked for identification as Government's Exhibit 618, a report of the Sales Department of the United States Gypsum Company for the first half of 1927, addressed to Mr. S. L. Avery and signed 5984 C. Henning, Vice President in Charge of Sales—and on the first sheet thereof appears the notation, "Approved by Board of Directors, August 11, 1927, R. G. Bear, Secretary".

(The document referred to was marked for identification as Government Exhibit No. 618.)

Mr. Knuff: I would like at this time to also have marked for identification, as Government's Exhibit 619, a six-page report of the Sales Department of the United States Gypsum Company, for 1927, addressed to Mr. S. L. Avery, and signed C. Henning, Vice President in Charge of Sales. Appearing on the first page thereof is the notation, "Approved by Board of Directors, February (I believe it is the 8th) 1928, R. G. Bear, Secretary.

(The document referred to was marked for identification as Government Exhibit No. 619.)

Mr. Knuff: I would also like to have marked for identification as Government's Exhibit No. 620, a five page exhibit headed, "Report of Sales Department—First Half 1928", addressed to Mr. S. L. Avery and signed C. Henning, and having a notation on the first page, "Approved by Board of Directors, August (I believe it is the 18th) 1928, R. G. Bear, Secretary."

(The document referred to was marked for identification as Government Exhibit No. 620.)

5985 Mr. Knuff: I would also like to have marked for identification as Government's Exhibit 621, a three-page exhibit headed, "Report of Sales Department—First Quarter 1929", addressed to Mr. S. L. Avery, and signed "C. Henning, V.P.S.", and having noted on the first page, "Approved by Board of Directors, May 8, 1929, R. G. Bear, Secretary."

(The document referred to was marked for identification as Government Exhibit No. 621.)

Mr. Knuff: At this time I would like to offer in evidence Government's Exhibits 616, 617, 618, 619, 620, and 621.

Justice Stephens: Is there any objection.

Mr. Bromley: I object to them as immaterial and irrelevant.

Justice Stephens: We haven't had an opportunity to examine them, and if there is serious contention on that we will have to ask counsel for the Government to demonstrate their relevancy and then we will have to read them and hear your objections to them, Mr. Bromley. What is the contention as to their relevancy, Mr. Knuff?

Mr. Knuff: Their relevancy, your Honor, is to show the competitive conditions in the gypsum industry for the years and for the periods specified by the various exhibits. They show just what the conditions in the industry were during those years. They are reports of Mr. Henning to the Board of Directors. Take the first report, Exhibit 616 for 5986 identification. On page 3, under the heading "Sheetrock", in the second paragraph, it is stated:

"The Certain-teed competition is severe, due to the fact that they have made a price decline of ten per cent in all markets on both plaster wallboard and plasterboard. We have not as yet met this price decline. The larger markets in the East are being flooded by 'seconds' which are presumably 'firsts', and are changing $30 markets to $20 markets. We are meeting this competition where necessary to hold our—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) In order not to get all this in the record, unless it is going to come into the record, just point out to us the parts which you think are relevant, the paragraphs which you think are relevant—or if that is sufficient you can make your argument based upon that.

Mr. Knuff: I think that, in general, will indicate the general scope of the offer. I can point it out paragraph by paragraph in each one, if desired.

Justice Stephens: You don't need to do that; we can read them.

Mr. Adams: If the Court please, may I add to Mr. Bromley's objection, one as to competency. If the purpose here is to prove what the conditions were in the industry, by a report of this kind, it seems to me that that is going beyond the proper rules. I might call the Court's attention to the fact that Mr. Henning is dead. I notice that 5987 Mr. Knuff read something there about what Certain-teed was doing. I don't admit that that is what Certain-teed was doing, and I don't concede that it can be proved in this way.

Justice Stephens: Well, they might be admissible as declarations of USG. They are hardly binding upon other companies as to the statements made by USG concerning those other companies.

Mr. Finck: Before ruling on these exhibits, if the Court please, may we have an opportunity of seeing them? We will try to do that tonight.

Justice Stephens: Yes, I think it would be better if we did not make a ruling on them until tomorrow, so that we may have a chance to look through them ourselves, and so that counsel may also have a chance to examine them.

(Judge Jackson's and Judge Garrett's copies of Exhibits 616 to 621, inclusive, for identification, were handed to Mr. Finck and Mr. Johnston, respectively, for use over the recess.)

Justice Stephens: Have defendants' counsel copies of these interrogatories and answers?

Mr. Finck: We do not have copies.

Mr. Knuff: I handed them over just a minute ago.

Mr. Adams: One set was handed to Mr. Bromley.

(Judge Jackson's and Judge Garrett's copies of these exhibits were loaned to defendants' counsel for use over recess.)

5988 Justice Stephens: Announce the recess until tomorrow morning at ten o'clock.

(Whereupon, at 4 o'clock p.m., the trial was recessed until Thursday morning, April 13, 1944, at 10:00 o'clock.)

5989 IN THE

DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Civil Action No. 8017

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

Plaintiff,

v.

UNITED STATES GYPSUM COMPANY; NATIONAL GYPSUM COMPANY; CERTAIN-TEED PRODUCTS CORPORATION; THE CELOTEX CORPORATION; EBSARY GYPSUM COMPANY, INC.; NEWARK PLASTER COMPANY; SAMUEL M. GLOYD, doing business under the name of TEXAS CEMENT PLASTER COMPANY; SEWELL L. AVERY; OLIVER M. KNODE; MELVIN H. BAKER; BROR H. DAHLBERG; HENRY J. HARTLEY; FREDERICK G. EBSARY; and FREDERICK TOMKINS,

Defendants.

Seventh Floor,
Internal Revenue Building,
Washington, D. C.,
Thursday, April 13, 1944.

The above-entitled cause came on for further hearing at 10:00 o'clock a.m., pursuant to adjournment, before Honorable Harold M. Stephens, Honorable Finis J. Garrett, and Honorable Joseph R. Jackson, sitting as the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

APPEARANCES:

(Same as heretofore noted, with the following additional appearances:

WALTER G. MOYLE, ESQ., Washington, D. C., NORMAN WAITE, ESQ., Chicago, Ill., and ANDREW J. DALLSTREAM, ESQ., Chicago, Ill., for defendants Celotex and Dahlberg.

5994 Page 6233, from line 18 to line 23, inclusive, the Presiding Judge expressed himself so clumsily, using the plural in some instances and the singular in others, in referring to two exhibits, that the statement will have to be rewritten, I think, to read as follows—it will be easier to redictate it than to make the corrections:

"We are sorry, Mr. Steffen, but we are now convinced that Exhibits 401 and 402 are not admissible in evidence under the charges in the pleadings. We don't think that your last argument raises any new question. If they are not admissible for the reasons we have just stated, they are not admissible as admissions to prove the same thing for which they were offered."

Apparently the Court Reporter has a correction. Page 6258, line 6, the word "diamater" should have an "e" instead of an "a"—"diameter".

Thank you, Mr. Grover.

Does the Government have any corrections in the afternoon session?

Mr. Steffen: We have none, Your Honor.

Mr. Moyle: If Your Honor please, I would like to move the admission of two of my associate counsel, or rather, the main counsel representing The Celotex Corporation, from the Illinois Bar.

5995 This is Mr. Andrew J. Dallstream; and this is Mr. Norman Waite—both of the Illinois Bar, representing The Celotex Corporation, and one or both may desire to participate in the cross-examination.

Justice Stephens: You are admitted for the purpose of this trial, gentlemen; you are welcome here.

Mr. Steffen: We will proceed either with a ruling on the exhibits that were offered last night, or will call Mr. Dahlberg immediately.

Justice Stephens: I should think that perhaps we had better proceed with the witness so as not to take his time here while we are discussing the exhibits, unless the exhibits are to be entered without objection. Will there be contest on the exhibits, ruling on which was reserved?

Mr. Bromley: Yes, Your Honor.

6064 Mr. Adams: If the Court please, I should like to return to Exhibit 233, the so-called Redfield memorandum.

At the last session we suggested that the Government be called upon to give us some assurance that that memorandum would be connected. The Government stated yesterday that they had a witness named Speer. They didn't say that he would connect it, but they said they thought he would. I suppose we can take it that they thus intended by that statement to give us the assurance which I understand we are entitled to under the cases.

Now earlier, when Your Honors' ruled upon this question, you said that it might be desirable, in the interest of saving the bringing of other witnesses, to call Mr. Dowd, because, if the Court found that Mr. Dowd had no such conversation, then the privilege was not waived, and 6065 that it would not be necessary to call any other witnesses with respect to it.

By good fortune, and by accident, Mr. Dowd is available, and it would seem to me that I might be able to be of some assistance to the Government and the Court in that respect, particularly as the Government has said that it intends to call Mr. Speer from, I take it, outside the city. I think he lives in Buffalo, or some place like that.

If I could call Mr. Dowd this afternoon, as I think the Court indicated I could in its earlier ruling, and if the Court could then make a determination on that phase of it, we might save the trouble of examining another witness with respect to that exhibit.

I therefore have Mr. Dowd here, and would like to have an opportunity to call him now.

Mr. Steffen: I would say this, Your Honor, as I told the Court last night, that we had gotten in touch with Mr. Speer, and that Mr. Speer was the man who made the invention which was in question, and he is referred to in Mr. Redfield's memorandum; and that I had requested him to come here and that I asked authority to subpoena him. Mr. Speer, I think, is now in the city, and therefore there is no possibility of saving any money on this matter.

When I said that I thought we could connect up the matter of Certain-teed and this memorandum, I said what 6066 any careful lawyer would say, that I expected by this witness to be able to establish that connection.

I have had a long distance telephone talk with him, just as I did with Mr. Stromquist, and if he will stand up under careful discussion with him as to what took place, and so on, as he did over the telephone, I am very sure that he will be able to connect the Certain-teed Company with the Redfield memorandum, and show that it was an authorized memorandum, and not something that blew in the window.

And I did that because Mr. Bromley and Mr. Adams both said that they didn't want to call Mr. Dowd unless they were sure that we were going to be able to connect this, and I told Your Honors that I felt that was a justified proposition, and that I would see whether I could connect it. I have made such efforts as I can, and I think that we have now in the city Mr. Speer, prepared to testify, that is, as soon as I can get over and talk with him; and our plan, as I told you last night, was to have him here tomorrow morning.

I should like to have the privilege of then putting on Mr. Speer. That seems a little odd, I might say, that they could get Mr. Dowd by this fortunate accident at this late date.

Mr. Adams: That is one of the characteristic insinuations of Government counsel, and if the Court wants me to state the reason that Mr. Dowd happens to be in 6067 the vicinity of Washington, I will.

Justice Stephens: No, the Court will not draw any inference that there is any impropriety on either side. We think the Government fairly did give the defendants an assurance that they would not expect them to produce Mr. Dowd unless the Government gave its professional assurance or made some showing of connection, and apparently the Government is attempting to do that through Mr. Speer.

Now we ruled, in summary, on this exhibit, that a prima facie showing on voir dire had been made of the waiver of privilege, so that in the absence of convincing contradictory evidence as to the fact or content of the asserted Redfield-Dowd telephone conversation, the exhibit would be admissible, subject to a showing that it is an admission by Certain-teed, and subject to the usual reservation—and that means subject to a showing of the conspiracy, aliunde, and a showing that the admission was in furtherance or execution of the conspiracy; but that Certain-teed might call Dowd; then the Court, after hearing his testimony, would rule as to whether the exhibit was admissible; and if it is received, it will be received subject to recall of Redfield for further cross-examination.

Now do you object, Mr. Steffen, to having Dowd on now while he is here? This controversy between you gentlemen now is largely a matter of order of testimony. Of 6068 course, normally the Government would make its case with respect to this exhibit first. In the ordinary course we would hear the Government's testimony to qualify the exhibit first, and then hear Dowd afterwards.

Mr. Adams: May I say this, Your Honor, that at page 5892 of the record, Your Honor said, after we had discussed the return of Mr. Redfield for further cross-examination, that:

"Justice Jackson suggests that we hear the Dowd testimony first, and if we should then rule that there has been no telephone conversation, or that the contents do not constitute a waiver, then it might not be necessary to recall Redfield."

That is why we have Mr. Dowd here. He is here in town, and I might say that it would be extremely inconvenient to hold him over until tomorrow.

Justice Stephens: We are inclined to the view, Mr. Adams, that the Government ought to be allowed, in the absence of a showing of extreme inconvenience, to put on its case with respect to this exhibit first. It may not be ready to cross-examine Mr. Dowd until it first has a talk with Mr. Speer, or has some other preparation; and unless the inconvenience is very great, it would seem to us that we ought not to vary the usual order of the testimony.

Couldn't Mr. Dowd stay here until tomorrow?

Mr. Adams: I would like to say on that, that it
6069 would be a matter of grave inconvenience to Mr. Dowd, who actually should not be here. The Government said a week ago, or more than a week ago, that they would let me know about Mr. Dowd's testimony, and they never said a word about it until yesterday.

Now Mr. Dowd made all his other plans, involving a scheduled stop today in Philadelphia, and departing immediately from there to New York, and from there immediately to Chicago. All his transportation has been arranged, and it would be extremely inconvenient to him, and also would result in a serious business disadvantage to the company.

Justice Jackson: He didn't anticipate testifying when he came down here, did he? He just came here accidentally. What difference does it make? Call him some other time.

Mr. Adams: If he is here, why can't we use him?

Justice Jackson: Because we think it would be unjust to the Government to do it right now.

Justice Stephens: The Government might want to cross-examine Mr. Dowd, and if Mr. Dowd is going to leave tonight it might not have the opportunity to do so, it might not have the opportunity to prepare for cross-examination. If the exhibit is critical, the Government ought to have a fair chance to prepare its attack on Mr. Dowd's testimony, if any.

Mr. Adams: Mr. Steffen, do you object to calling 6070 Dowd today?

Mr. Steffen: Yes.

Mr. Adams: That is merely a matter of the Government's statement on that point. I certainly can do no more than to say that in all sincerity I was endeavoring here to comply with what I understood to be the Court's intention, that we should call Dowd first and then, if Your Honors were able to make a ruling prior to recalling Redfield—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) I don't think that is quite correct, Mr. Adams. During the discussion of the admissibility of this exhibit, it is true that the suggestion was made by Justice Jackson that Mr. Dowd might be called first, and that might end the matter. But when the question of the admissibility of this exhibit was ruled on, and after the colloquy which succeeded that, it was made clear, for the convenience of defendants' counsel, that Mr. Dowd needn't come until the Government had either given assurance or made a showing of connection. So I don't think that any harm has been done.

Do you think it would be a serious disadvantage to you gentlemen to proceed to examine Dowd now?

Mr. Steffen: We are not prepared; I would much prefer to put it over until tomorrow morning, and the reason that I didn't tell Mr. Adams was because I wanted to make my own assurances as to whether I wanted to put on 6071 a witness to connect it, and I told him that I would do that. So I don't feel that we have been in any way misleading, Mr. Adams.

Mr. Adams: Maybe not intentionally, but I certainly have been definitely misled, and I have brought Mr. Dowd here with the hope that we could dispose of this today.

Justice Stephens: I am sorry, Mr. Adams, but I think that wouldn't be fair, under all the circumstances. If you want to hold him here until tomorrow morning, the Government will apparently put Mr. Speer on then; and then we could get Mr. Dowd disposed of and perhaps he wouldn't have to make another trip back here. Of course, he may not have to anyway, we don't know what the Government is going to be able to show.

Mr. Adams: May I say this, Your Honor, that as I understood, Mr. Dowd's testimony is only testimony on the voir dire.

Justice Stephens: That is right.

Mr. Adams: And is not any part of the defendants' case.

Justice Stephens: It only goes to the preliminary question of fact bearing upon the admissibility of the exhibit. It doesn't go to the merits of the case.

Mr. Adams: As I understand it, the Government is drawing to the end of its case, and it is almost physically impossible for me, under the circumstances, to put in the proof which I regard as essential.

Justice Stephens: We will give you an opportunity, if the case reaches the point on the voir dire, 6072 that is if the Government makes such a showing, in view of the Court's ruling, as to connect the exhibit in the manner in which we have indicated it must be connected to make a prima facie showing, then you will be given an opportunity to call Dowd on voir dire, because we have ruled that that preliminary question of fact must be disposed of within the Government's case.

Mr. Adams: Well, I should like to point out only one thing further, Your Honors, and I am sorry if I appear to over-stress this point, but it is because I know of the inconvenience that will result from this order of proof,—that is that Mr. Steffen apparently wants to consult Mr. Speer. Mr. Speer could not under any conceivable state of facts have any knowledge about an alleged telephone conversation between Mr. Dowd and Mr. Redfield in June of 1940. It just couldn't be possible that Speer could have anything to do with it—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) That isn't the subject on which it would be expected Speer would testify, Mr. Adams. He would testify, or any other witness they call would testify, we assume, under the Government's assurances, as to some fact on the basis of which the Court might connect this exhibit with Certain-teed as an admission.

Mr. Adams: Thank you, Your Honor.

Would Your Honors indulge me one moment?

6073 Justice Stephens: Yes, surely.

Mr. Adams: I have this one further suggestion, Your Honors. I have only, I think, four or five questions to ask Mr. Dowd. It would seem reasonable that I might put him on, ask him those questions, and let the Government cross-examine him; and if they think, then, that they have to hold him over another day to examine him about four or five questions, they could do so.

Justice Stephens: I am sorry, Mr. Adams, we are all of the view that the normal course of presentation of the foundation for this exhibit ought to be followed. Mr. Dowd ought to remain here if he can, and if not he can come back later if needed.

Mr. Adams: Thank you, sir.

Justice Stephens: Now we have some rulings on exhibits to consider.

Mr. Knuff: 612 to 615, inclusive, were the interrogatories and the answers, respectively, of the United States Gypsum Company, National, Certain-teed, and Ebsary; and I believe the matter was left last night with the thought in mind that the defendants would like to compare what we had inserted in the exhibits with what they had included in their answers. I think that would be the first group that the Court should pass upon at this time.

Mr. Bromley: May it please the Court speaking
6074 now only for the defendants United States Gypsum Company, Avery and Knode, we have no objection to Exhibit 612 for Identification, being the answers of United States Gypsum Company to certain of the Government's interrogatories.

Justice Stephens: What have the other defendants to say with respect to that exhibit?

6075 Mr. Johnston: On behalf of Texas we object to Exhibit 612 as having no competency or relevancy or materiality, and as in no manner binding upon Texas.

Justice Stephens: Are there any objections from other defendants?

Mr. Oliver: We object on behalf of Celotex and Dahlberg.

Mr. Adams: I take it that all these objections will inure to the benefit of all the defendants without making it necessary for us all to state them?

Justice Stephens: That is correct.

Of course the statements of USG in response to interrogatories asked it, wouldn't be, without more, binding upon anyone else. But these may be offered in the nature of declarations of alleged co-conspirators, and I assume they are?

Mr. Knuff: No, they are not, your Honor. Exhibit 612 is simply offered as an admission of USG, not binding on anybody else. Exhibit 613 is offered as an admission of National, not binding—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) You don't offer them as binding upon anybody except the particular defendant?

Mr. Knuff: Not at all.

Justice Stephens: I was about to say that we would receive them, if you were, subject to the usual reservation, but if you are not offering them except to bind the particular parties which have answered them, then they are re-6076 ceived for that purpose only. So Exhibit 612 is received as binding upon USG only.

(The document heretofore marked as Government Exhibit 612, was received in evidence.)

Mr. Finck: We have no objection to 613.

Justice Stephens: Exhibit 613 is therefore received as being offered for and as binding only upon National.

(The document heretofore marked as Government Exhibit 613, was received in evidence.)

Justice Stephens: How about Exhibit 614, Certain-teed?

Mr. Adams: Well, Certain-teed takes the same position except that as to Interrogatory No. 24, and the answer thereto, we object on the ground that it doesn't tend to prove anything in this case, and therefore is immaterial.

Justice Stephens: That answer is: "We are unable to supply the answer to this interrogatory from any company record or the memory of any present employee competent to speak."

Do you offer the interrogatory, Mr. Knuff, in view of that answer, to prove anything?

Mr. Knuff: No, your Honor, No. 24 can be stricken.

Justice Stephens: Very well; then we will receive Exhibit 614, except for Interrogatory No. 24, and the answer thereto, which are not offered, as to Certain-teed only.

Each of these exhibits is being offered and received 6077 as binding only upon the particular company that answered the interrogatories.

(The document heretofore marked as Government Exhibit 614 was received in evidence.)

Justice Stephens: Exhibit 615—Ebsary. Who is here representing Ebsary today?

Mr. Finck: I wouldn't undertake to admit anything for Ebsary, but I can find out by tomorrow morning from Mr. Varian, if you would like. I will call him tonight.

Justice Stephens: I should think there could hardly be any proper objection to it. At the same time, he has a right to be here and therefore we will reserve ruling on that until tomorrow morning, and you will get in touch with him, Mr. Finck. We will not rule on Exhibit 615 until tomorrow.

Mr. Knuff: Now if your Honor pleases—

Justice Stephens (Interposing): Who is local counsel for Ebsary?

Mr. Knuff: Tumulty and Tumulty.

Justice Stephens: That is right. Mr. Tumulty is not here, is he? Judge Garrett suggests, and I think properly, that if foreign counsel cannot be present, local counsel ought to be, so that we don't have to hold up our rulings. But in this instance we will suspend action on Exhibit 615 until tomorrow morning.

6078 Mr. Knuff: Now in connection with Government's Exhibits 616 to 621 for identification, inclusive, we offer these exhibits as declarations of a co-conspirator. They are not simply admissions of USG, they are offered as a declaration of a co-conspirator in furtherance of the conspiracy.

Mr. Bromley: We object to these exhibits, 616 to 621, inclusive, for identification, on the ground that they are incompetent, immaterial and irrelevant, and specifically, that they are incompetent and immaterial because they are not in furtherance of any conspiracy and could not possibly be so construed. Therefore, under the theory on which they are offered, they are neither material nor competent.

They are further incompetent because they are conclusions, and, at most, represent a lot of hearsay statements as to assumed conditions in the market.

Justice Stephens: Do any of the other defendants wish to be heard?

Mr. Adams: I stated yesterday, your Honor, that we wished to object so far as any statements concerning Certain-teed were concerned, as contained in these reports, on the ground that they could not possibly be binding on Certain-teed.

Justice Stephens: What do you offer to show by them—pardon me, Mr. Johnston, do you wish to be heard?

Mr. Johnston: In addition to what Mr. Bromley has said, I want to emphasize that they are merely inter-
6079 company communications of the United States Gypsum Company and have no bearing at all on anything that can bind Texas.

Mr. Finck: I would just like to record the objection of National and Baker to these exhibits, as not binding upon them.

Justice Stephens: They are very voluminous documents, and must have a great deal of material in them that isn't of any importance. What paragraphs are you especially relying upon, and what do you want to prove by them?

Mr. Knuff: Does your Honor care which question I answer first? You asked two questions.

Justice Stephens: No, you can answer them in any order you please.

Mr. Knuff: We think they are in furtherance of the conspiracy and are descriptive of conditions that existed at the time of the conspiracy. We further think that they are admissions by USG of conditions that existed at the time of the formation of, and during the continuance of the conspiracy. There are statements in here that show the state of mind of USG.

Whether or not these statements are true, or whether or not they are not true, is immaterial. The statements are nevertheless declarations and admissions of USG.

They are offered on the same theory that the Court has passed on similar exhibits, that is Exhibits 328 to 332 inclusive, which appears at page 2864 of the record.

6080 Those exhibits were the exhibits relating to Mr. Avery's reports to the stockholders.

Justice Stephens: Yes, I remember those.

Mr. Knuff: The particular things that we rely upon here are contained in Exhibit 616, on page 3—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) Will you carefully point out each paragraph in each exhibit that you rely on, because otherwise we are ruling in the dark. I went through these last night as well as I could, but they are very voluminous and I would like to have you be specific.

Mr. Knuff: The entire page 3 of Exhibit 616.

Justice Stephens: Let us look at that.

(The Court examines the portion of the exhibit indicated.)

Justice Stephens: Now what is the next?

Mr. Knuff: Exhibit 617, on page 2, beginning under the general subject "Sheetrock and Sterling", and continuing over to page 3, down to the general heading, "Partition Tile".

Justice Stephens: Let us read that.

(The Court examines the portion of the exhibit indicated.)

Justice Stephens: All right, the next.

Mr. Knuff: Now on the same exhibit, Exhibit 617, on page 4, under the general head, "General Competitive Conditions", and continuing through page 5, through 6081 page 6, through page 7, through page 8, and down to the heading, "California District".

Justice Stephens: Let us read that.

(The Court examines the portion of the exhibit indicated.)

Justice Garrett: Mr. Knuff, where these paragraphs refer to "wall board" as being sold by this company and that company, does that mean patented wall board, or not?

Justice Stephens: These antedated the patents, didn't they?

Mr. Knuff: No—which exhibit are you referring to?

Justice Stephens: I didn't mean that they antedated the patents, but the licenses.

Justice Garrett: I am reading from page 5 of Exhibit 617, where it says, "The Certain-teed Company are shipping into the Sea Board markets from their Texas mill, offering wallboard regularly," and so forth. I don't care to read it all into the record. Does that mean patented wallboard, or not?

Mr. Knuff: I don't believe that that paragraph on page 5 of Exhibit 617 has reference to patented wallboard, because at that time I do not believe Certain-teed was a licensee. Certain-teed did not become a licensee until May of 1929, and this report is for the first quarter of 1927.

Justice Stephens: Now as to Exhibit 618, what portions do you rely on?

6082 Mr. Knuff: Particularly page 3 of that exhibit, beginning under the main topic, "Plasterboard", and continuing over on page 4 down to the main topic, "Partition Tile." Also the last page of that exhibit, the 5th paragraph.

Justice Jackson: You mean starting with the words, "In general we are going through a keen competitive price,"?

Mr. Knuff: That is right. Also the last paragraph, the 5th and last paragraphs.

(The Court reads the portion of the exhibit indicated.)

Justice Stephens: Now as to Exhibit 619.

Mr. Knuff: Page 2, the first paragraph; then on page 4, beginning under the heading, "Plasterboard", and continuing down to the topic, "Partition Tile." On page 6, beginning with the topic, "General", and from there to the end.

(The Court examines the portion of the exhibit indicated.)

Justice Garrett: Would you refresh my memory about the meaning of "Sheetrock"?

Mr. Knuff: "Sheetrock" is a trade name that the United States Gypsum Company uses for their wallboard. Is that correct?

Mr. Bromley: Yes, for their patented wallboard.

Justice Stephens: Now, as to Exhibit 620.

Mr. Knuff: On page 2, the first paragraph; then on page
3, the paragraph under the heading, "Plasterboard", 6083 and continuing down to the paragraph marked,
"Partition Tile"; then on the last page of that exhibit, the paragraphs following the heading, "General."

(The Court examines the portion of the exhibit indicated.)

Justice Stephens: Now as to Exhibit 621.

Mr. Knuff: Particularly page 2, under the subheading, "Plasterboard", and extending down to the general heading, "Partition Title."

(The Court examines the portion of the exhibit indicated.)

Justice Stephens: We will take the afternoon recess at this time.

(Whereupon a short recess was taken, after which the trial was resumed as follows:)

Justice Stephens: Mr. Oliver, do you have a statement to make?

Mr. Oliver: If your Honor pleases, may I record my objection to Exhibits 616 to 621, inclusive, as not binding upon Celotex and Dahlberg.

Justice Stephens: Are there any other comments on any of these exhibits?

(No response.)

If not, the Court will rule.

The Court sees no distinction between these Ex-6084 hibits 616 to 621, inclusive, and Exhibits 328 to 332 inclusive. Those least mentioned exhibits were admitted because they contained statements in the nature of admissions descriptive of the industry situation prior to the time of the 1929 license agreements. We were of the view that they were admissible as the admissions of a party, to-wit the admissions of USG, which might possibly be taken in connection with other testimony as a foundation for the Government's contentions with respect to the alleged reasons for entering into the license agreements.

We did not receive them as binding upon other parties unless shown to be in furtherance of the conspiracy, and unless the conspiracy itself was shown by evidence aliunde.

We see no distinction between the proferred exhibits, 616 to 621 inclusive, and 328 to 332 inclusive, in these respects.

We are not able to see, on the face of them, Mr. Knuff, how they may be said, at the present time, to be in furtherance or execution of the conspiracy. But we will receive them in evidence, particularly the portions referred to by counsel, as admissions of a party, to-wit USG, and not binding upon the other parties unless a conspiracy is shown aliunde, and unless the admissions are shown to be in furtherance or execution of the conspiracy.

Mr. Knuff: I think that ruling is consistent with the previous ruling, your Honor.

6085 (The documents referred to, marked as Government's Exhibits Nos. 616 to 621, inclusive, were received in evidence.)

Justice Stephens: We note, Mr. Knuff, that in part the exhibits just received cover the same years as those previously received, but they are more detailed than the former exhibits.

Mr. Knuff: That is correct.

Justice Stephens: The former being more generalized.

Mr. Knuff: Yes, your Honor.

Mr. Bromley: May it please the Court, the Court's ruling on Exhibits 328 to 332 inclusive, appears at page 2873 of the record, and as I understood that ruling it was that those exhibits would be received as binding only on USG.

I do not understand that in that ruling the Court indicated that the production of any other proof of any kind could transform that evidence into the declarations of a co-conspirator; that no matter what evidence was received, that those documents remained merely as admissions binding only on USG, because that ruling said specifically that they were not in furtherance or execution of any conspiracy.

Justice Stephens: Well, that is true, Mr. Bromley. We have been receiving dozens of declarations or admissions of various parties here in the case which didn't, on their face, seem to be in furtherance or execution of the 6086 conspiracy, however, subject to the usual reservation, which reservation has always embraced two items, first, that the conspiracy must be shown, aliunde the declarations or admissions; and second, that the declaration or admission must be shown to be in furtherance or execution of the conspiracy.

Suppose, with respect to Exhibits 328 to 332, some evidence should come into the record later, which showed that those admissions were in furtherance or execution of the conspiracy. It is difficult to see how such evidence could show that, but if it could show that, wouldn't they then become admissible, provided also a conspiracy had been shown aliunde, that is, admissible against all defendants?

Perhaps it is a highly technical conception, but isn't it theoretically correct, to make the reservation with respect to any type of an admission?

Mr. Bromley: I think that probably is theoretically sound, but I don't understand that there is any offer here to connect these any further.

Justice Stephens: Is there? Do you expect to connect these any further?

Mr. Knuff: We think they have already been connected, and we will point out at the proper time the connection.

Justice Stephens: We disagree with you there. We don't see, at present, anything in the record which indicates that these exhibits which are now being considered, any 6087 more than Exhibits 328 to 332, are themselves in furtherance or execution of the alleged conspiracy, and if you think there is something to that effect, you ought to point it out to us now.

Mr. Knuff: Well, I am not prepared to do so now. We thought that that would arise on the question of a motion to dismiss, whether or not the conspiracy had been shown, and at that time we will be prepared to point out the matters that we think show clearly the existence of a conspiracy.

Justice Stephens: I am not asking you about the existence of the conspiracy, I am asking you about evidence showing that these admissions were in furtherance or execution of the conspiracy.

Mr. Knuff: Maybe I didn't state myself clearly, your Honor.

We will, at that time, endeavor to point out how they furthered the conspiracy.

Justice Garrett: That will be a matter of argument.

Mr. Knuff: Yes, that is a matter of argument.

Justice Stephens: Well, that is true, but of course in a case as complicated as this, it has been necessary to take a lot of items of evidence into the record subject to connection, subject to motions to strike.

We are trying to avoid all reserved rulings, so far as possible, and we thought if you could show us now how these are in furtherance or execution of a conspiracy, 6088 we might be able to rule more explicitly.

Justice Jackson: Well, your stand is that you have already proven a conspiracy.

Mr. Knuff: We think so, your Honor.

Justice Jackson: And of course the defendants will argue that you haven't.

Mr. Knuff: Yes, your Honor.

Justice Jackson: And later on we will determine who is right.

Mr. Knuff: Yes.

Justice Stephens: That isn't exactly the thing that is concerning me at the moment. That is a matter of course, which we will have to hear argument on later. Mr. Bromley's argument is that these admissions, on their face, cannot be in furtherance of the conspiracy, and therefore they ought to be received at the present time only as binding upon USG. I am inclined to the view that that is correct, and that is the reason that I made these reservations, that these exhibits are admitted only as admissions of USG, and at the present time are only binding upon USG and are not binding upon anyone else, unless there is some further showing made, first as to a conspiracy, and second as to the admissions being in furtherance or execution of the conspiracy.

That seems to me to protect the other defendants, Mr. Bromley, because if we are not shown anything, or 6089 convinced by any other argument, that there is anything presently in the record which makes these admissions in furtherance or execution of the conspiracy, then they stand right where they are now, binding only upon USG.

Mr. Knuff: I want to take up next, if your Honor please, the requests for admissions that we have served on certain of the other defendants, and I had thought at this time to call up the requests on Certain-teed. However, I don't see Mr. Adams here.

Justice Stephens: Mr. Marshal, ask Mr. Adams to return, will you?

(Mr. Adams returned to the courtroom.)

Justice Garrett: The Clerk has handed me a batch of papers. Aren't these all in these several—

Mr. Knuff: (Interposing) Requests for admissions?

Justice Garrett: Yes.

Mr. Knuff: They are, your Honor, but we thought, since you would want a copy of each pleading, that you wouldn't want to tear one pleading apart and put it in the exhibits, and that is the reason we gave you an additional set of them.

Justice Garrett: All right, thank you.

Incidentally, I notice that Certain-teed and National have answered, and that USG has not.

Mr. Knuff: USG has answered.

Justice Garrett: Well, I have no copy of its answer.

6090 Mr. Knuff: I can't speak for them. They served a copy of their answer on me.

(There was a discussion off the record.)

Mr. Bromley: While we verified and served a response to the requests for admissions, we did not file it, understanding the law to be that this is an extra-judicial proceeding, with which the Court has nothing to do, and that it is not proper for Government counsel to call it to the attention of the Court or to ask the Court to pass on it, or make any ruling with respect to it.

If a party upon whom a request for admissions as to genuineness is served, files an answer and does not admit any of the requests, there is nothing that the Court has any power to do about it,

The rule says that the Government should then proceed to prove the documents in the regular way, and assess the expense against the party who has failed to admit genuineness.

So we conceived of this as an extra-judicial proceeding which it was not proper to bother or burden the Court with.

As far as our admissions are concerned, and of course in our case we admitted most of the documents, all the Government has to do is offer them in evidence and our admission stands as a bar to any objection on the ground of incompetency because of lack of identification.

Justice Garrett: Thank you for that explanation.

6091 Justice Stephens: What is that Rule?

Mr. Knuff: It is Rule 36, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: That has been my view. I suppose that is without contest, isn't it, Mr. Knuff, that the Court has nothing to do with this matter unless you need to call the attention of the Court to the fact, if it be a fact, that—well, let me put it this way:

The rule provides:

"Each of the matters of which an admission is requested shall be deemed admitted unless, within a period designated in the request, not less than 10 days after service thereof or within such further time as the court may allow on motion and notice, the party to whom the request is directed serves upon the party requesting the admission a sworn statement either denying specifically the matters of which an admission is requested or setting forth in detail the reasons why he cannot truthfully either admit or deny those matters."

Unless that aspect of the rule has to be called to the attention of the Court, so as to lay a foundation for an implied admission, through failure of the opposite party to serve, as provided in the rule, there is nothing for the Court to do, is there; if these documents have been admitted as to genuineness, then you simply offer them, don't you, and call our attention to that, and if the defendants, on the other side, don't deny it, then we discuss the 6092 question of relevancy and materiality?

Mr. Knuff: I think that is correct. The reason the Court was given copies of the requests is because I construe the rule—I can't seem to locate it right now—that every notice served upon the other side shall be filed, within a reasonable time, and since we served this on the other side, I construed this rule to mean that I would have to file the notice in court.

Justice Stephens: Well, there is no harm in doing that, of course.

Mr. Knuff: Will the Court pardon us just a moment, please?

Justice Stephens: Yes, indeed.

(Government counsel conferred together.)

Justice Stephens: Before we proceed further, the Court would like to reiterate and expand a little its statement informally made before the recess that each of the defendants ought to have some representation in this courtroom at all times. We realize that lawyers who have a small office staff, are under difficulty in attending a long trial like this at all times, but we think that either local counsel should be here, or if not, that some arrangement should be made with the lawyers who are here regularly, to speak for such defendants as are not represented, and each of them, because we ought not have to postpone rulings, or rule in the absence of representation.

6093 Perhaps I am whipping, in these statements, the absent counsel who are not here to receive the whip, and perhaps we will have to communicate with them through the Clerk; but possibly you can informally indicate to them, if you have contact with them, that they ought to have representation here at all times.

Mr. Bromley: We will assume the burden of communicating that information to those who are not here.

Justice Stephens: Thank you very much, Mr. Bromley.

Justice Garrett: Mr. Knuff, I would like to ask you, before you begin having these exhibits marked for identification, do you propose to have all of them marked, or just those that have been admitted here?

Mr. Knuff: Just those that have been admitted.

Justice Garrett: I don't think that Certain-teed has admitted to any exhibits.

Mr. Knuff: Yes, your Honor, they have.

Justice Garrett: Well, then, I misread their statement. National has, I know.

Mr. Knuff: When I said I was only going to offer those that had been admitted, I misspoke myself. We think that there are some, particularly of the United States Gypsum Company, where they have not admitted them, that we are going to offer anyway on the ground that they are circumstantially admitted by another admission that they have made in here.

6094 Justice Garrett: Thank you.

Mr. Johnston: I would like to have the record show that we, who did not receive these requests for admissions, of course don't know anything about what they are. In this bunch of exhibits there are probably two or three hundred pages, none of which I have ever seen.

Justice Stephens: Well, even if the defendants to whom these exhibits immediately relate, have admitted their genuineness, we still have the question before us, Mr. Johnston, of materiality and relevancy, on the pleadings, of each one of them, and we will have to examine each one of them as it is offered in evidence, and you will have an opportunity at that time, at least, to see it and you can borrow one of these sets also during the evening's recess.

Mr. Johnston: That is what I wanted to be understood.

Mr. Knuff: I think Mr. Johnston possibly has misspoke himself because on Tuesday evening, in my office, in the prerence of Mr. Steffen, I handed over to Mr. Johnston the very documents that I am now going to offer, gave him copies of them, on Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. Johnston: When I was in counsel's office, he returned to me the documents of Texas that we had delivered to him; and then he handed me a package, which I did not open, but delivered to Mr. Bromley, as chief counsel, and I don't know what was in the package.

6095 Justice Stephens: Very well, we will see that you have time to examine each one of these exhibits.

Mr. Knuff: I would like to have marked for identification Government's Exhibit 624 through 640.

Exhibit 624 is a statement, signed by George P. Krug, sworn to on the 20th day of August, '29; Exhibit 625 is a statement signed by George P. Krug and sworn to on the 17th day of September, 1929; Exhibit 626 is a statement, signed by George P. Krug, sworn to the 21st day of October, 1929; Exhibit No. 627 is a statement, signed by George P. Krug, sworn to on the 20th day of November, 1929; Exhibit 628 is a statement, signed by George P. Krug, and sworn to the 20th day of December, 1929; Exhibit 629 is a statement, signed by George P. Krug, and sworn to on the 20th day of January, 1930; Exhibit No. 630 is a statement, signed by George P. Krug, sworn to the 3rd day of March, 1930; Exhibit 631 is a statement, signed by George P. Krug, sworn to on the 15th day of March, 1930; Exhibit 632 is a statement, signed by George P. Krug, sworn to the 16th day of April, 1930; Exhibit 633 is a statement, signed by George P. Krug, sworn to the 14th day of May, 1930; Exhibit No. 634 is a statement signed by George P. Krug, and sworn to the 17th day of June, 1930; Exhibit 635 is a statement, signed by George P. Krug, and sworn to the 15th day of July, 1930; Exhibit 636 is a statement, signed by George P. Krug, sworn to the 14th 6096 day of August, 1930; Exhibit 637 is a statement, signed by George P. Krug, sworn to on the 15th day of September, 1930; Exhibit 638 is a statement, signed by George P. Krug, sworn to the 18th day of October, 1930; Exhibit 639 is a statement, signed by George P. Krug, and sworn to the 14th day of November, 1930; and Exhibit No. 640 is a statement, signed by George P. Krug, sworn to the 17th day of February, 1931.

(The documents referred to were marked for identification as Government's Exhibits Nos. 624 to 640, inclusive.)

Mr. Knuff: The genuineness of these exhibits, so marked for identification, is not denied by Certain-teed.

Mr. Adams: Your Honor, I have to differ with the statement.

The first of the requests for admissions was that these statements were signed by George P. Krug on behalf of Certain-teed Products Corporation. That we admit.

Justice Stephens: I can't hear you, Mr. Adams.

Mr. Adams: That fact we admit; we admit that they were signed by Mr. Krug.

Justice Stephens: You admit that Exhibits 624 to 640, inclusive, were signed by George P. Krug?

Mr. Adams: That is correct. But I do not admit—which counsel stated that I did—the genuineness of these documents.

6097 Justice Stephens: I don't quite see the distinction. If he signed them in his capacity as auditor, you don't contend that he signed them improperly, do you, or without authority?

Mr. Adams: No, your Honor, but there are handwritten portions of these documents which we do not admit. I just wanted to make that clear. There is no question but what Mr. Krug signed the documents, and also that they are Certain-teed's documents, but later on somebody else wrote certain things on them.

Justice Jackson: Are they admitted, then, except for the handwriting that appears on them?

Mr. Adams: Yes, although there is one further limitation that I should state, and that is that we do not admit that Exhibits 628 to 640, both inclusive, are statements of plaster wallboard and gypsum wallboard manufactured and sold by Certain-teed Products Corporation, license under agreement dated May 22, 1929, between United States Gypsum Company and Certain-teed Products Corporation, during the various periods referred to in those exhibits, since the plaster wallboard and gypsum wallboard manufactured and sold by Certain-teed subsequent to November 5, 1929, was manufactured under a license agreement with the United States Gypsum Company, dated October 15, 1929, and not dated May 22, 1929.

Each of these exhibits, your Honor, subseqeunt to Exhibit 627, to and including 640, and I believe some after that—6098 Justice Stephens: (Interposing) And including Exhibit 628?

Mr. Adams: Including Exhibit 628—state at the top, as your Honors will see, that it is a statement of plaster wallboard and gypsum wallboard manufactured and sold during the period named on each exhibit, by Certain-teed Products Corporation, licensed under agreement dated May 22, 1929, between United States Gypsum Company and Certain-teed Products Corporation.

Justice Stephens: Well, Mr. Knuff?

Mr. Knuff: The way these exhibits are here is the way we received them from USG. They were reports, I presume, that Certain-teed filed with USG. USG handed these reports over to us, and we photostated them, just as we received them from USG.

Mr. Adams: I am not raising any suggestion that there has been any change made by the Government in these exhibits. I am merely stating that we cannot admit what is obviously not a statement of truth.

Justice Stephens: In other words, you reserve the right to contend—and you do not admit—that Mr. Krug's statement as appears at the top, or as the title, is correct, for the reasons you have just stated.

Mr. Adams: That is right, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: Well, it seems to me, Mr. Knuff, that with respect to those exhibits, the correctness of which is in dispute, you will have to call a witness, won't you?

6099 Mr. Knuff: After they have admitted the genuineness of the signature, your Honor? If there is a mistake here, it is a mistake that can be explained at the proper time by Certain-teed. They have admitted that this signature is genuine. I think that there is a mistake, personally. I think that it was a mistake on the part of Certain-teed; I think Certain-teed should have said that it was under an agreement dated such-and-such a date in November. But it was Certain-teed's mistake, not ours.

Mr. Adams: I don't know whose mistake it is—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) The Court isn't interested in that, either. The Court is interested in getting things in that are true and correct.

Mr. Adams: As I take it, your Honor, under the Rule, I can be required to admit the genuineness of documents. I think I have admitted that. The precise language of this request for admission is somewhat important here.

They ask first whether: "The following statements, photostatic copies of which are attached hereto, made a part hereof, and marked Exhibits 1 through 34 (which include the exhibits now under consideration) were signed on behalf of Certain-teed Products Corporation by Geo. P. Krug."

The answer is yes.

But I do not say that the alleged statements of fact appearing on the papers signed by Mr. Krug are true, 6100 and I cannot be required so to admit.

Justice Stephens: This is a novel situation, and we will have to discuss it with counsel.

How are you in any different situation, Mr. Adams, than you would be if Mr. Krug were called to the witness stand? Suppose he was called to the witness stand and handed this document, and asked if he signed it, and he said yes, and stated that he signed it as the general auditor of Certain-teed. That would identify it, wouldn't it?

Mr. Adams: There is no question about that, we admit that he signed these, and moreover that he signed them on behalf of Certain-teed.

Justice Stephens: Of course, these are being offered as Government exhibits. Is it your contention that you are entitled to have Mr. Krug here to cross-examine him as to the correctness of the statements contained in these exhibits?

Mr. Adams: Yes, your Honor.

Justice Jackson: What statement is it that you say is incorrect, merely the date of the license?

Mr. Adams: Yes.

Justice Jackson: And that is the only point, is it?

Mr. Adams: I think I should go further, if I may be permitted to do so, your Honor, since we are discussing this whole matter.

I don't know whether your Honors have before 6101 you the requests for admission, but No. 4 of the requests is—

Mr. Knuff: I haven't taken that up as yet.

Mr. Adams: I know that, and I don't know whether I am premature on this or not, but I think I should say that No. 4 of the requests for admissions, asks us to admit that:

"The statements of fact contained in Exhibits 1 through 64 are true."

Exhibits 1 through 64 include the exhibits now under discussion.

Well, now, in my reply, I have refused to admit that the statements of fact contained in these exhibits are true, and I take the position that if the Government desires to prove these facts, they are required and compelled to produce the witness here so that we can cross-examine him; and as a matter of fact, the notice is improper in form, under the cases, in any event, since the cases hold that you cannot hand your adversary a document and ask him to admit that the statements of fact contained therein are true, because that places upon him the burden of deciding what is a statement of fact and what isn't, at his peril. You must, rather, ask him to admit what facts are true and are not true. That has not been done by the Government in this case.

Justice Stephens: What is that rule again, Rule 36?

Mr. Knuff: Rule 36, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: (Reading) "At any time after 6102 the pleadings are closed, a party may serve upon any other party a written request for the admission by the latter of the genuineness of any relevant documents described in and exhibited with the request or of the truth of any relevant matters of fact set forth therein."

The party who receives such a request is, of course, not obliged to grant it. It would seem to me, Mr. Knuff,—I will be glad to hear you and my colleagues will also of course—that all you have shown so far by the admission of Certain-teed is the genuineness of the documents, in the sense that they have been identified as documents signed by an auditor of the company, Mr. Krug.

But if there is a dispute, or the absence of an admission as to the correctness of what is in these documents, since the Government is relying upon them, and offering them, I have some difficulty in seeing how you can avoid calling a witness for cross-examination.

Mr. Knuff: Well, here is the position I take. Suppose we forget for one moment that there has been a request for the admission of the genuineness of these documents, and suppose we have George P. Krug on the witness stand. Then I would ask Mr. Krug, "Is this your signature?" And he would say, "It is."

Passing for one moment the relevancy and materiality, or anything like that, I would then offer these documents in evidence, and they would be, prima facie, admitted.

Mr. Adams: Then we could cross-examine Mr. Krug.

Justice Stephens: Yes, because we have ruled a dozen times here that where you call a witness to the witness stand and have him identify a document, and thereby accredit it, you have opened the door to cross-examination as to the correctness of the document, because you are offering it to the Court as correct.

Justice Jackson: Are you questioning the mathematics and figures on these, Mr. Adams? Do you want to cross-examine your own auditor as to that?

Mr. Adams: He is not our own auditor.

Justice Jackson: He was then, though?

Mr. Adams: Yes.

Justice Jackson: You want to question him on that, do you?

Mr. Adams: I have, myself—

Justice Jackson: (Interposing) If you do, you haven't any other recourse except to call him.

Mr. Adams: May I go further, your Honor, in answer to Judge Jackson's inquiry? This includes this whole group of exhibits. We have been requested to admit a lot of other facts which we think we ought to have an opportunity to examine witnesses about.

As far as I am concerned, I have gone just as far as I can by admitting that these are—there is no question about it—authentic documents on our part.

Justice Stephens: This rule, Mr. Knuff, is a Rule of convenience to try to save the necessity of proving facts which can be admitted, and of proving signatures, which can be admitted. But I am fearful that your position that when you have once had a witness testify to a document, in the sense of identifying the signature upon it, and stating that it is a document that he signed, that that puts the document in for all purposes, without cross-examination, cannot be sustained.

The Court ought to know, before the close of the Government's case, what every exhibit means, and we can't tell what it means unless the opposite party has had an opportunity to cross-examine on it, if you rely upon it for the statements therein, as you undoubtedly do.

Mr. Knuff: We are not asking Mr. Adams at this time to make a binding admission, we haven't come to that, and I am not going to ask Mr. Adams to make a binding admission that the facts stated therein are true. I don't care whether they are or not for the purposes of the Government's case.

We say that we have made up a prima facie admission on the part of Certain-teed, and that is what we are offering these for, as prima facie admissions. If they want to deny them at the proper time, that is all right, we don't care. We are not asking them to make an admission 6105 now that will forever bind them from questioning the authenticity or the genuineness or the correctness of these documents.

Justice Stephens: But you do not meet the point that troubles me, and I think troubles my colleagues. You say you are offering it only as a prima facie admission. Well, what you apparently mean by that is that once you get these documents in as prima facie admissions, the defendants are not permitted to attack them until they get to their part of the case. Well, now, I don't think that is the law on the procedure with respect to trials.

This Rule 36, which has to do with admissions, is a rule of convenience, with the idea of saving time for the Court and counsel, but it doesn't abolish the rules of evidence or the right of cross-examination.

If you put a document in, in your direct case, as the Government's document, and the defendants haven't admitted the correctness of the statements of fact therein, the Court has a duty to find out, and defendants' counsel have a right to attempt to show the Court, that it is not correct, if it is not correct, before it is considered as a part of the Government's case, because the Court must know, before the close of the Government's case, what it can rely on and what it can't rely on, with respect to every item of evidence, and what that means; if it has a 6106 meaning different from what it says on its face, and that can be brought out on cross-examination, the Court ought to know it, as a matter of duty, and defendants' counsel have a right to bring that out.

I don't see how you can escape, if there is a dispute as to the contents of these documents, in any particular, how you can escape the necessity of subjecting the witness who prepared them, to cross-examination.

I will say this, however, to Mr. Adams, that we think he ought to go to such limits as he possibly can to make admissions in these matters, because the time of the Court can be very greatly saved if that great mass of material can be put in through Rule 36, rather than through the lips of witnesses under cross-examination.

Mr. Adams: I quite agree, your Honor, with that. But you see one difficulty that I have here is that we are being asked to admit wholesale statements of fact contained in these exhibits. I simply cannot do it. These documents did not come out of our files.

Justice Jackson: They came out of the files of the United States Gypsum Company, did they not?

Mr. Adams: That is right.

Justice Jackson: And they were reports from your company to United States Gypsum Company, weren't they?

Mr. Adams: That is correct.

Justice Jackson: Didn't you have copies of them?

6107 Mr. Adams: No.

Justice Jackson: Is Mr. Krug available?

Mr. Adams: I have no idea where Mr. Krug is. He is not in our employ. But I wanted to call your Honor's attention to one case, which is the only case I could find on the subject, which I think, had the Government followed, might have facilitated this matter.

In that case the court held that the proper practice is for the party seeking the admission to ask the other party to admit facts. Now we haven't been asked to admit facts. Every place I have been asked to admit a fact, I have done so, where I could. But they go ahead and say that they want admissions that the statements of fact contained in these exhibits are true. I don't know what facts they are talking about.

Mr. Knuff: As I said, I haven't come to that portion of my request at all. What I have now offered goes simply to Paragraph 1 of my request, that is, a request for an admission that:

"The following statements, photostatic copies of which are attached hereto, made a part hereof, and marked Exhibits 1 through 34, were signed on behalf of Certain-teed Products Corporation by Geo. P. Krug."

Justice Stephens: That has been admitted by Mr. Adams.

Mr. Knuff: And that is all I am asking at this time for Certain-teed to admit.

6108 Justice Stephens: Very well, perhaps this is all unnecessary. Perhaps there is nothing before the Court. Mr. Adams, I thought, however, was objecting to the admission of these documents on the ground that they were not correct, and he ought to have a chance to cross-examine on that.

Mr. Adams: I think I precipitated that in trying to answer a question by Judge Jackson. I wanted to make it perfectly clear that while we admit the genuineness of these documents, we cannot admit what is in them.

Justice Stephens: Then, at the present time, there is nothing before the Court.

Mr. Johnston: Let me call the Court's attention to this fact, that if this class of exhibit is to be admitted under these circumstances, then we, who represent other defendants, are foreclosed from any right or opportunity to cross-examine any witness about them, and I don't know what is in them. I imagine that there are some, at least, about which we would like to make inquiry, and if this procedure is followed, then we have no opportunity at all to make any inquiry about any of these exhibits.

Justice Stephens: Well, your rights might be protected, so far as that is concerned, by a ruling that they will bind only the persons who make the admissions. I don't think this Rule is limited to a case with only one defendant.

However, there is nothing before the Court at the present.

6109 The Court has this suggestion to make to you, Mr. Adams and Mr. Knuff. Why can't you, informally, since there appears to be no dispute between you, stipulate that that date is in error up in the title of this exhibit, or these exhibits, concerning which you were speaking?

Mr. Knuff: I will stipulate right now that it is probably a mistake. I think it is; I think I told the Court that it was. I make no point of anything that is included in the capital letters at the top of these statements at all. It is only a matter of identification, that is all.

Justice Stephens: We will now adjourn until tomorrow morning at ten o'clock.

(Whereupon a recess was taken at 4:10 o'clock p. m. until 10:00 o'clock a. m. of the following day, April 14, 1944.)

6110 IN THE

DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Civil Action No. 8017

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

Plaintiff,

v.

UNITED STATES GYPSUM COMPANY; NATIONAL GYPSUM COMPANY; CERTAIN-TEED PRODUCTS CORPORATION; THE CELOTEX CORPORATION; EBSARY GYPSUM COMPANY, INC.; NEWARK PLASTER COMPANY; SAMUEL M. GLOYD, doing business under the name of TEXAS CEMENT PLASTER COMPANY; SEWELL L. AVERY; OLIVER M. KNODE; MELVIN H. BAKER; BROR H. DAHLBERG; HENRY J. HARTLEY; FREDERICK G. EBSARY; and FREDERICK TOMKINS,

Defendants.

Seventh Floor,
Internal Revenue Building,
Washington, D. C.,
Friday, April 14, 1944.

The above-entitled cause came on for further hearing at 10:00 o'clock a. m., pursuant to adjournment, before Honorable Harold M. Stephens, Honorable Finis J. Garrett, and Honorable Joseph R. Jackson, sitting as the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

APPEARANCES:

(Same as heretofore noted.)

6116 Mr. Tumulty: May it please the Court, my attention was called, following the afternoon session yesterday, to the desire expressed by the Court that all defendants be represented at all times, either by foreign or local counsel, or by some arrangement with some of the counsel who are here.

I have conferred with Mr. Varian regarding that, and he asked me to express his regret that he had found it impractical to be here all the time, and to say that after considering the matter we feel the best solution of it is to authorize Mr. Finck, one of the counsel who expects to be here, to act for Ebsary, with full authority to make any admissions or objections as matters are raised in the course of the trial. As a matter of fact, Mr. Varian had requested that Mr. Finck enter objections for him, but apparently that authority wasn't broad enough to cover the mat-6117 ter that came up yesterday.

I also want to express our regret that that omission has possibly caused some inconvenience to the Court.

Justice Stephens: No serious inconvenience. We simply wish to avoid inconvenience in the future, Mr. Tumulty. There apparently will be a great many offers of documents from now on, and there may be a good deal of colloquy and objection, and someone ought to be here to represent each defendant. Thank you for appearing, and for your explanation.

Are there any other defendants who are not represented? I suppose not, now. Mr. Adams is here for Certain-teed; Mr. Finck for National; and I guess everyone else is represented.

That makes it possible to make a ruling and clear the record, Mr. Knuff, on Exhibit 615. That was one of the interrogatory exhibits, the one for Ebsary.

Is there any objection to that, Mr. Finck, on the part of Ebsary?

Mr. Finck: No, Your Honor.

Justice Stephens: Then Exhibit 615 is received in evidence as binding only upon the particular company, to-wit, Ebsary, which answered the interrogatory.

(The document referred to, marked as Government's Exhibit No. 615, was received in evidence.)

6118 Justice Stephens: Are there witnesses present this morning that we can call to the witness stand, before proceeding to other colloquies which might take more time?

Mr. Steffen: Mr. Speer is here, Your Honor.

Justice Stephens: You may call him, then, and we will proceed to these other matters afterward.

Thereupon, ALEXANDER S. SPEER called as a witness for and on behalf of the United States, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Will you state your full name, Mr. Speer? A. Alexander S. Speer.

Q. And where do you live, Mr. Speer? A. 108 Depew Avenue, Buffalo.

Q. Buffalo, New York? A. Yes.

Q. How long have you lived there, Mr. Speer? A. Twenty-four years.

Q. Were you at any time connected with one of the gypsum companies? A. First with Beaver Products, and then with Certain-teed.

6119 Q. And about what years were you connected with the Beaver Products Company? A. In 1919.

Q. And in what capacity, Mr. Speer? A. I was a consulting engineer.

Q. And do you recall that at some time the Certain-teed Products Company took over the Beaver Products? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember about when that was? A. 1928. I don't know the exact date.

Q. I think it has been testified to as being April, 1928. A. All right.

Q. Did you continue with the Certain-teed Products Company in the same capacity? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that was what, Mr. Speer? A. As a consulting engineer.

Q. Consulting engineer? A. Yes.

Q. And how long did you continue with Certain-teed Products as a consulting engineer? A. Well, I am still under contract.

Q. I want to know—

Justice Jackson: (Interposing) Are you still 6120 with them as a consulting engineer?

The Witness: I still have a contract on account of certain patents.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. What did you do as a consulting engineer for Certain-teed? A. Well, my duty was to produce improved articles.

Q. Of what sort, Mr. Speer? A. Well, in the roofing line, and also plasterboard and beaverboard, and wallboard in general.

Q. And did you ever take out any patents on your work? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could you tell us roughly how many—or what you did? A. Well, I think it is a little over 80 or a hundred.

Q. Patents? A. Yes, sir. Altogether, since I started, not since I was with the Beaverboard.

Q. You mean that is since you started with Certain-teed, or all-told, both with Beaver and Certain-teed? A. It would be about 40.

Q. For Certain-teed? A. For Beaverboard and Certain-teed.

Q. Did you at any time work on an invention or a 6121 device for making a closed-edge board? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you tell us about when that was? A. About 1924 or 1925, or it may be earlier.

Q. And did you ever file an application for a patent on that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. On a closed-edge board? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever make any samples of the board that you were working on? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did you do that before you made application for a patent? A. Yes. My policy always has been to make the articles first and then apply for the patent afterward.

Justice Garrett: Will the witness kindly raise his voice a little? I am having some difficulty in hearing him.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Will you please talk louder, Mr. Speer, for the Court? A. Yes, sir.

Justice Stephens: When did you say you first commenced to work for Beaver?

6122 The Witness: In 1919.

Justice Stephens: And when for Certain-teed?

The Witness: In 1928.

Justice Stephens: Thank you.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. I now want to show you Mr. Speer, what has been marked as Government's Exhibit 641 for Identification.

(The article referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 641 for Identification.)

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. I will ask if you can tell us what that is?

(Government's Exhibit No. 641 for Identification was handed to the witness.)

A. This is a closed-edge board.

Q. And do you know how it was made, or who made it? A. I know how it is made.

Q. Who made it? A. I had a man assisting me to make it.

Q. It was made by you or under your supervision? A. Yes.

Q. At about what time?

Mr. Johnston: We can't hear the witness at all, down here.

Justice Stephens: Raise your voice, if you can, 6123 Mr. Speer.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Do you remember about what time that was made, Mr. Speer?

Justice Jackson: You mean this particular exhibit?

Mr. Steffen: Yes.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. This exhibit before you. A. About 1926 or 1927. Of course, I couldn't remember exactly.

Q. Did you file an application for a patent based on the product which is Government's Exhibit 641 for Identification? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember what the date of that application was? A. I don't recollect now.

Q. Could your recollection be refreshed on that? A. Around 1927.

Q. I show you what has been marked as Government's Exhibit No. 642 for Identification.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 642 for Identification.)

By Mr. Steffen:

6124 Q. This purports to be a patent issued to you under date of January 27, 1931, No. 1,790,252, and ask you to look at that and see if that refreshes your recollection, Mr. Speer, as to when you filed your application? Look at that first page.

(Government's Exhibit No. 642 for Identification was handed to the witness.)

A. According to this paper—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) Just answer whether or not that refreshes your recollection. Don't read from the paper. Does it refresh your recollection?

The Witness: Yes, Your Honor.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. About when would you say you filed your application? What is your best recollection as to when you filed your application for the patent? A. January 12, 1927.

Q. Who was the attorney, if you remember, who represented you in filing the application? A. Mr. Robinson.

Q. And with what firm was he associated, if any? A. He was working for the Beaver Products Corporation.

Q. At that time? A. At that time.

6125 Q. Now, Mr. Speer, after you became a consulting engineer for Certain-teed, did you have any conversations at any time with the officers of Certain-teed? A. Well, I did, yes.

Q. Who did you know among the officers? What officers did you know, if any? A. Mr. George M. Brown; Mr. Whittemore; and Claude Brown.

Q. Did you know Mr. Van Hagan? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you know Mr. Straub? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. L. R. Walker? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Now, did you ever have occasion to talk to patent counsel for Certain-teed during this period from April, 1928, when Certain-teed took over the Beaver Products, upthrough the year 1928 and the year 1929? A. Mr. Redfield was the patent counsel, and I did talk to him.

Q. Did you talk to anyone else, any other patent counsel? A. There was no other patent counsel.

Q. Who was Mr. Chaffee? A. He was General Counsel of Certain-teed.

6126 Q. And when you say that Mr. Redfield was patent counsel, what do you mean? A. Well, he was a patent attorney. He had the right to apply for patents in the Patent Office.

Q. And where were his offices, do you remember? A. partly in Mr. Chaffee's office and partly in Certain-teed's office.

Q. And what was the address? A. 100 East 42nd Street.

Q. New York City? A. Yes.

Q. Where was your business address? A. It was in Buffalo, at Certain-teed's office.

Q. And did you see any of the officers of Certain-teed in Buffalo? A. Frequently.

Q. Where was Mr. Van Hagan's office? A. Van Hagan was in the same office building.

Q. And what was his capacity, Mr. Van Hagan's capacity? A. He was Manager of the Plaster Division.

Q. Do you remember when the claims of your application were first allowed? A. About 1928.

Q. What month? A. I wouldn't remember.

6127 Q. Was it in the latter part or the early part—December, or June, or some other month? A. As I recall it, it was early in 1928.

Q. Could your recollection be refreshed on that, Mr. Speer?

Your answer is that it might be? (Laughter).

Justice Stephens: I think that is a highly speculative question which the witness can hardly answer until he sees the alleged refreshing document.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. I want to show you what has been marked Government's Exhibit 643, which is the file wrapper covering the patent which is Exhibit No. 642, and ask you to look at the page that has been marked, the top of the page and the last line.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 643 for Identification.)

(Government's Exhibit No. 643 for Identification was handed to the witness.)

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. I will ask if that refreshes your recollection as to the date when your claims were allowed? A. December 7, 1928.

Q. Now can you remember that? A. Now I re-

6128 member it.

Q. It was in December, 1928? A. Yes.

Q. Well, Mr. Speer, perhaps it will help you if you consider whether you had any meetings at any time—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) He said, "Now I remember it."

Mr. Steffen: Yes.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. I want to see if it will help you further to consider whether you had any meetings at or about the time that the various claims of your patent were allowed, with Mr. Chaffee or Mr. Whittemore or anyone? A. I did, yes.

Q. Can you tell us the occasion and where you had such a meeting? A. About this patent?

Q. Yes. A. Of course, I had meetings about various patents.

Q. What I want to know is—can you recall any occasion when you had a discussion with officers of Certain-teed, on or about the time that these claims of your patent had been allowed, in New York or elsewhere? A. In both places, New York and Buffalo.

Q. And will you tell us, if you can, what conference, if any, you had in New York? A. I couldn't remember.

Q. Well, what was your practice—were you ever in New York? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when you went to New York, who would you see, if anyone?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as speculative and too general.

Mr. Steffen: It is preliminary, Your Honor, to see if I can locate a date—

Justice Jackson: Well, it might run from the date of the man's birth until now.

Justice Stephens: It is too general. Objection sustained.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. I want to ask you with regard to the year 1928, after the Certain-teed people had taken over the Beaver plants and you were engaged, as you say, as a consulting engineer for Certain-teed—during that period from April, 1928, and on through that year, did you have occasion to go to New York? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when you went to New York, who did you see in connection with the matter of your duties as a consulting engineer for Certain-teed?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as too general, and as immaterial. If he has got some conference in mind, why doesn't he ask him about it?

Justice Stephens: Well, that is purely a preliminary question to bring out who he saw. I think that objection should be overruled.

The Witness: Mr. Chaffee and Mr. Whittemore, and Mr. Redfield.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Can you say how frequently you went to New York?

Justice Stephens: Now you should fix the time and place, since your preliminary question is over with, so far as you reasonably can.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Can you say how frequently you were in New York and saw Mr. Chaffee or Mr. Whittemore or both of them? A. At least once a month, on the average.

Q. And those conferences were with regard to your duties as a consulting engineer? A. Yes.

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as leading.

Justice Stephens: The witness should not be led.

Mr. Steffen: Yes, Your Honor.

By Mr. Steffen:

6131 Q. Then when you saw Mr. Chaffee, can you tell us what you talked with him about?

Mr. Adams: I respectfully object to that question on the ground that that involves a communication between attorney and client, and is consequently privileged.

Mr. Steffen: I would make the point, Your Honor, that this is preliminary, and that it would usually result also in a conference with Mr. Whittemore, and that the matter of privilege, I should think, would stand on the same ground that this whole question of privilege stands upon, —that is, we are leading to the Redfield memorandum, which is Exhibit 233, and these are the preliminary conferences. If the Redfield memorandum is not within the attorney-client privilege, the conversations preliminary to and giving effect to, and out of which the Redfield memorandum grew, it seems to me, would be equally outside of the attorney-client privilege. That is the basis of that line of questioning.

Justice Stephens: You are attempting to establish here, I assume, that the Redfield document was the act, by adoption or acquiescence or action of some sort, of Certain-teed?

Mr. Steffen: Yes, Your Honor, and make the connection which Your Honor has pointed out needed to be made in order to show that this was in some sense a declaration of a member of Certain-teed, either that they acted 6132 upon the declaration or that it is declarative of the purpose and intent and understanding of the members of Certain-teed.

Mr. Adams: It is perfectly clear, Your Honor—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) Well, it seems to me, Mr. Adams, that your objection is a little premature. We don't know yet what the nature of the conversation was. Not every conversation between a lawyer and his client is privileged. It depends upon the content of the conversation.

On the other hand, Mr. Steffen, I should think you can't lift yourself by your bootstraps. The mere fact that there is a question as to whether or not Exhibit 233 escapes the privilege, and that you have to build a foundation to get it out of the privilege, doesn't, I think, lower the bars of the rules of evidence with respect to conversations which you may wish to go into on that topic. If they are privileged, they are privileged.

We will have to hear the answer to that question before we can know whether these particular conversations you are going into now are privileged.

Mr. Steffen: All right.

Justice Stephens: You may reserve a right to move to strike, Mr. Adams, if it turns out that the conversations which are now being related were privileged.

Mr. Steffen: Perhaps I had better restate the matter, Your Honor.

6133 By Mr. Steffen:

Q. I want to refer now, Mr. Speer, to any meetings which you may have had with Mr. Chaffee or Mr. Whittemore, or both, after the time when your claims were allowed, in December, 1928, and can you recall any occasion when you were in New York and had such a conference concerning your closed-edge board patent? A. Yes, I spoke to Mr. Chaffee and also to Mr. Whittemore.

Q. And did you ever have a conference where both of them were present? A. My recollection is that I did have.

Q. And was there anyone else present at that conference? A. Well, occasionally some of the other officers, officials, came in, probably for a few minutes.

Q. And who would you mention? A. Walker—

Q. (Interposing) Mr. L. R. Walker? A. Yes, he was the General Sales Manager.

Q. And can you say what was said at this conference by yourself?

Mr. Adams: I object, Your Honor, on the ground that this witness has not testified yet about any conference, and particularly has not identified the persons who were present. He says occasionally other people came in 6134 to these conferences.

Justice Stephens: Let me ask the witness a question.

Are you talking now about some particular conference that you had in mind, at which Mr. Chaffee and Mr. Whittemore were present; or are you simply stating that there were, from time to time, conferences at which those two men were present and that on those occasions sometimes others dropped in?

The Witness: Yes, Your Honor.

Justice Stephens: The latter?

The Witness: Yes, Your Honor.

Justice Stephens: I had some doubt, myself, as to whether the witness was talking about any particular conference.

Objection sustained, but you may proceed further, Mr. Steffen.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. What we want to know, Mr. Speer, is whether you can remember a particular conference at which both Mr. Whittemore and Mr. Chaffee were present, at which you discussed the matter of your patent, the claims of which had been allowed in December, 1928. Now do you have a recollection of a meeting? That is what I am asking you. A. I don't have a definite recollection, because it wasn't the only subject we discussed.

6135 Q. But do you have a recollection of a meeting at which this subject was discussed? A. I don't think so.

Q. Did you ever, at any time, discuss with Mr. Whittemore the possibility that the company should make a board according to your patent? A. Yes—

Mr. Bromley: (Interposing) Just a moment. I object to that as leading and suggestive, and also on the ground it has already been answered; and move to strike the answer.

Justice Stephens: Read it, please.

(The question was read by the reporter.)

Justice Stephens: It is leading, and therefore the objection is sustained; and it has been answered in the negative.

Mr. Steffen: The negative answers heretofore were that he could not remember particular conferences. I asked him whether he had a conference at any time at which it was suggested that the matter of making the board under his patent had been considered.

Justice Stephens: Perhaps I misunderstood your objection. I thought it had been answered in the negative.

Mr. Bromley: I thought it had. I thought he had theretofore said he couldn't remember any conferences.

I move to strike this answer "Yes" on the ground
6136 that the question was a leading question, and therefore improper.

Justice Stephens: I think it is not proper to lead here, Mr. Steffen. We want to be reasonably lenient, within our discretion, on preliminary questions, but whether a conference was had on this particular topic is apparently critical. You ought to ask the witness what conversations he had, and when, and what was discussed in them, and not suggest what was discussed in them.

Objection sustained and the motion to strike is granted.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Now, Mr. Speer, we want to know any conversation that you had with Mr. Whittemore or Mr. Chaffee concerning the matter of making a board—

Mr. Bromley: (Interposing) I object to that as repetitious on the ground that it has already been answered.

Mr. Steffen: He said he did have a conversation. I don't know how I can direct him to the subject matter better than by asking him whether he ever had a conversation regarding the making of the board according to his patent.

Mr. Bromley: The witness has told counsel that he had no recollection of what transpired at any conversation that he may have had.

Justice Stephens: No, I think he didn't state that, Mr. Bromley. What he stated was that he didn't have a 6137 recollection of a particular conference. The witness does testify that he had conferences from time to time with Whittemore and Chaffee, ar[illegible] that from time to time other persons would drop in. He apparently couldn't recollect any particular conference.

The objection is overruled to that last question.

Mr. Steffen: Let's have an answer to the previous question. Will you read it, Mr. Reporter?

(The question was read by the reporter.)

Justice Jackson: That is no question, is it? You are not asking him anything.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. My question is: Will you tell the Court what was said if anything, at any conference that you had with Mr. Whittemore or Mr. Chaffee, concerning the possibility that the company might make a board according to your patent?

Mr. Adams: I object to that on the ground that it is suggestive, in the first place, and leading; and in the second place, that the time and place of the conference should be fixed, and I think it is particularly important here, because the witness has already said that he couldn't remember any particular conference, or what transpired at any particular conference.

Justice Stephens: Is that true, Mr. Speer? Do you or do you not remember any particular conference that you 6138 had with these gentlemen that you have mentioned?

The Witness: I don't, I don't remember. It is not clear to me.

Justice Jackson: But you do remember that you did have conferences with them about this subject matter?

The Witness: Yes.

Justice Jackson: But you can't fix any specific rate or any specific conference?

The Witness: Yes.

Justice Jackson: But you had conferences with them concerning it?

The Witness: Yes.

Justice Stephens: Can you tell where those conferences took place?

The Witness: Mostly in New York.

Justice Stephens: In whose offices?

The Witness: In Mr. Whittemore's office or Mr. Chaffee's office.

Justice Stephens: Can you say within what period they took place? If you can't remember a particular date, can you say approximately within what period they took place?

The Witness: Within a year.

Justice Stephens: What year?

The Witness: 1928.

Justice Stephens: Well, we haven't ruled hereto-
6139 fore in this case that conferences should be limited to a particular day. If they can be fixed with reasonable certainty so that the defendants can have a chance to prepare themselves to cross-examine them, that is sufficient.

I should think those last answers are sufficient, if he now remembers what was said. If there are objections to that, they may be shown in the record on behalf of the defendants, and overruled.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Will you tell us what was said at these conferences between you and Mr. Chaffee and Mr. Whittemore, about the matter of making a board? If you can't remember the exact words, can you give us the substance?

Mr. Adams: Was this in the year 1928?

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. This was in 1928, and did you have conferences in the early part of 1929? A. Yes, sir.

Q. During the latter part of 1928 and the early part of 1929, then, tell us what was said, if you can, or the substance of what was said, concerning the matter of making a closed-edge board? A. Well, I just simply wanted Certain-teed to start manufacturing this particular board.

Q. You did? A. Yes.

6140 Q. And what did you say along that line? A. That is about all I said. I tried to get them to use it.

Q. You tried to get them to use it? A. Yes.

Q. Why did you think they should use it?

Mr. Adams: I object to that, if you please.

Jutice Stephens: Yes, why he thought they should use it is immaterial, I should think. Objection sustained.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. State, if you can, what reasons you may have advanced for them using your board?

Mr. Adams: I object—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) It is exactly the same question you asked before, except a little more explicitly stated. You asked him what his reasons were—just a minute, there is a division on the bench. Judge Jackson disagrees with me. If my colleagues differ with me, I am very happy to consult them.

What do you say about it, Judge Garrett?

(The Justices conferred.)

Justice Stephens: How do you claim his reasons as to why they should make the board are material?

Mr. Steffen: I want to get the conversation to 6141 show the discussion that took place, if it did—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) You didn't ask for that, you asked him what his reasons in his own mind were, as I understood, as to why they should use the board.

Mr. Steffen: What reasons did he urge upon the company, if any.

Justice Stephens: He may state the conversation, and if the conversation included reasons, he may state those. I thought you were inquiring as to what his inner reasons were as to why they should use it.

Mr. Steffen: No.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Did you advance any reasons to Mr. Whittemore and Mr. Chaffee why it might be desirable for the company to make a board according to your invention? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what were they? A. In the first place, I consider the board superior—

Mr. Bromley: (Interposing) I move to strike that out.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. What did you say to them?

Mr. Bromley: May that answer be stricken?

Justice Stephens: It may go out, although I think plainly the witness means that that is what he told them.

Mr. Speer, don't give us your own thoughts, either 6142 then or now, as to why the board should be used.

Tell us what you said to them. You don't have to tell the exact words. Of course, we don't expect you to be superhuman in your memory. But if you can remember the substance of what you said to them, tell us that.

The Witness: Well, my main reason was—

Justice Jackson: (Interposing) Is this what you told them?

The Witness: Yes, that is what I told them, that my reason was that the board was superior to anything they had at that time.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Why was it superior, did you say, if you did?

Mr. Adams: I object again to this. It seems to me that this is much too suggestive and leading. The witness obviously has a very vague recollection on this.

Justice Stephens: I don't think that last question is improper. If the witness told them why it was superior, that is a part of the conversation. The objection is overruled.

You may proceed on that question, Mr. Steffen.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. If you told them that it was superior, in what particulars did you say that it was superior? A. The edge was reinforced, that is what I told them.

Q. Can you show, by your sample there, what you 6143 mean by the edge being reinforced? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you do that for the Court, please?

Justice Stephens: That exhibit is not in the record yet, Mr. Steffen.

Mr. Steffen: All right.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Simply describe, Mr. Speer, what you told them? A. Well, this board—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) Don't describe it from that exhibit, because, unhappily, it isn't in the record, and therefore the description, if you refer to the board, won't be in the record, won't be proper. Just lay it aside and tell us what you told them as to its superior qualities.

The Witness: I told them it had a double reinforced edge; and that it would withstand nailing better than anything they had at that time. That is what I told them.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. And did Mr. Chaffee—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) If you feel it is necessary to your presentation of this witness, you may offer this exhibit as illustrative of his testimony.

Mr. Steffen: I should like to do that, Your Honor.

Justice Stephens: Any objection?

6144 Mr. Bromley: I object to it as immaterial, only.

Justice Stephens: It will be received as illustrative of his testimony.

(The article marked as Government's Exhibit No. 641, was received in evidence for the limited purpose stated.)

Justice Stephens: Now you may describe, if you wish, what you told them in terms of that exhibit. Did you have it there with you?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

Justice Stephens: Very well.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. And what did you tell them about it, Mr. Speer, if you can tell us any more, using the board that you have before you?

Mr. Bromley: Could we see the board, the exhibit, please?

Mr. Steffen: Surely.

(Government's Exhibit No. 641 handed to defendants' counsel.)

Justice Stephens: We will take the morning recess at this time.

(Thereupon, a short recess was taken, after which the trial was resumed as follows:)

6145 Justice Stephens: Proceed.

Mr. Steffen: Will you return Exhibit 641 to the witness, Mr. Marshal?

(Exhibit 641 was again handed to the witness.)

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Just before the recess we were talking about this meeting at which you were advancing reasons to Mr. Whittemore why they should produce your board. Can you state any additional reasons that you may have mentioned to Mr. Whittemore? A. Yes, I can.

Q. Would you state them, please? A. Well, they had trouble about the open-edge, and wanted to get away from it, and I told Mr. Whittemore that this would be a good board to take the place of the open-edge board.

Q. Do you know whether Certain-teed was making an open-edge board at this time? A. I couldn't remember distinctly. I know they were making open-edge board, but I don't know whether it was at the same time.

Q. I notice that the exhibit, Government's Exhibit No. 641, has a colored insert in there—could you tell us what that is?

Did you mention that to Mr. Whittemore? A. I

6146 did, it had an advertising value, a sales value.

Q. What would be the advertising value if they used that? A. It was something entirely different from any board on the market.

Q. Now, I notice that the edge is rounded on Exhibit 641. Can you explain that, or did you mention that to Mr. Whittemore or to Mr. Chaffee? A. No, I wouldn't say anything about the shape of the edge, because I told Mr. Whittemore that they could make any shape. In fact, I did have samples when I spoke to them.

Q. What did Mr. Whittemore say?

Mr. Adams: This is also subject to my objection as to privilege, I suppose. I take it that Mr. Chaffee was present.

Justice Stephens: Yes. The Judges can't tell whether a document or a conversation is privileged without looking at it or hearing it. We will have to hear the testimony first, but you may move to strike it if it turns out to be privileged.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. What, if anything, did Mr. Whittemore say in response to your statements? A. Well, he didn't say very much.

Q. Well, how would you describe what he said? What did he say? A. He didn't say very much, I repeat it again.

6147 Justice Jackson: Did he say anything?

The Witness: Well, he said that he had to look into it.

Mr. Steffen: Now this may be privileged, your Honor, and within Mr. Adams' objection.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. What, if anything, did Mr. Chaffee say to Mr. Whittemore while you were there, concerning whether the company should make or should not make closed-edge board of the sort you had? A. Mr. Chaffee favored it. He told Mr. Whittemore and myself—I was present when he told Mr. Whittemore—that he would like to see this board go over.

Q. And did he give any reasons? A. He did give reasons.

Q. And what reasons did he give? A. One of the reasons was that Certain-teed could license this particular board and collect royalties on it.

Q. Now do you recall any other conversation at this time concerning the board? Did Mr. Walker or anybody else who may have been present—

Mr. Adams: (Interposing) May I interrupt here? Mr. Steffen is proceeding into a new series of conversations, your Honor, I believe.

Mr. Steffen: I intended to stay with this one conversation.

6148 Justice Stephens: He hasn't yet identified one conversation. The witness has been frankly describing the contents of conversations or conferences that were held in 1928 and early 1929, without fixing a particular date. He says that at those conferences, other persons dropped in from time to time.

What is your objection, Mr. Adams?

Mr. Adams: I think I am premature, then.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Do you recall any conference during this period, the latter part of 1928 and the first half of 1929, when Mr. Walker was present, and can you tell us anything that he may have said, if he was present? A. Well, I couldn't remember.

Q. I see. Well, now, you have told us that you made the test, and made the sample which is before you, which is Government's Exhibit 641 in evidence, while you were still a consulting engineer for Beaver Products. Do you recall at any time having made a sample board while you were connected with Certain-teed? A. Yes sir.

Q. And can you give us approximately when that test was made? A. I should say around 1929.

Q. And did you sail for Europe during the summer 6149 of 1929? A. Yes sir.

Q. And does that help you place in any way the time when you made a test for Certain-teed? A. I don't know, I don't think I would remember distinctly, so many things happened then.

Q. What I wanted to get at simply was--was your test or your sample board made for Certain-teed before you sailed for Europe or after, can you tell? A. Before and after.

Q. I see. When did you sail for Europe? A. It was, as I recall it, in July, and I stayed there until September 15, about.

Q. Will you describe to us what sort of a pilot test you made for Certain-teed at this time?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as immaterial.

Justice Stephens: What do you claim for this by way of laying a foundation for Exhibit 233? It may be preliminary, I don't know.

Mr. Steffen: It is partly preliminary, and partly, I think I should tell your Honors, for a second purpose which I have in connection with Mr. Speer's testimony.

I wish to introduce this evidence to indicate that the Certain-teed people were actually making tests on a closed-edge board at the time, that is in 1929, and I do that for the reason that I think one of the important issues in 6150 this case, as certainly Mr. Bromley will claim, is that there is a question as to whether the Utzman closed-edge board was the only closed-edge board that could be made. Here we have, I think, the Certain-teed people experimenting with a board in the period around May, 1929, and it is very relevant, it seems to me, to show what that test was and whether that test was successful, for the purpose of showing that it was not essential for Certain-teed to take out a license under the closed-edge board patent in order to get a closed edge, they had one right in their own works; they held the patent and the claims had already been allowed, as the file wrapper will show, in December, 1928. And I want to introduce that.

But it is also preliminary to the Redfield matter, for the reason that there were conferences with Mr. Redfield at this same time, out of which grew the discussion which resulted in Exhibit No. 233.

Justice Stephens: Do you wish to be heard further, Mr. Bromley?

Mr. Bromley: I don't understand the materiality of it. This patent was not issued until 1931.

Mr. Steffen: As respects that, the claims were allowed in December, 1928, and as Mr. Redfield states in his memorandum, and as your Honors will understand, when they were allowed the patent could issue in a very short time thereafter.

Mr. Adams: I object to the statement concerning 6151 what appears in the Redfield memorandum.

Mr. Steffen: I make it on the broad proposition that when the claims are allowed, as does appear in the file wrapper which I will offer in evidence, you have, then, positive evidence that they did have nine claims covering a closed-edge board, the very closed-edge board which is Government's Exhibit No. 641; and that those claims could have been issued, as your Honors know, in a patent, very shortly after, in a matter of a few weeks.

I want to show also that they were making experiments on that board, making tests of it, in their plant at Buffalo, and that Mr. Speer conducted them, and that they were successful.

Justice Garrett: The matter didn't get in interference, I suppose, after the claims had been passed?

Mr. Steffen: No, your Honor, because the file wrapper shows that the patent was issued in 1931.

Justice Garrett: There was a period of more than a year after the claims had been marked "Allowed," before they actually took out the patent?

Mr. Steffen: That is right.

Mr. Bromley: Approximately three years.

Mr. Steffen: December, 1928, to January, 1931, when the patent was issued.

(Discussion off the record.)

Mr. Steffen: We will introduce the patents, and 6152 your Honors can tell from that just how broad or how narrow the claims were. Our contention is that the claims were sufficiently broad to allow them to manufacture this board, regardless of the Utzman Patent.

Justice Jackson: They could manufacture this board, but not the Utzman board?

Mr. Steffen: That is right.

Justice Stephens: So far as Mr. Adams' objection to the reference to the contents of Exhibit 233 is concerned, that objection is well taken, and we will not consider the comment of counsel for the Government, made in respect of that, as part of the record.

But as far as this question of materiality is concerned, we suppose you are offering this under the theory of subterfuge, are you not?

Mr. Steffen: That is right, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: You are attempting to show that the defendants knew, or might reasonably have known, that they could have manufactured a closed-edge board without paying royalties and having licenses, is that right?

Mr. Steffen: That is right, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: Well, we think it is material on that issue, and the objection is overruled. The objection apparently goes to its weight rather than to its materiality or relevancy.

Mr. Stephen: May we have the last question,
6153 please, Mr. Grover?

Justice Stephens: Before you read that, Mr. Grover, I would like to make this suggestion to you, Mr. Steffen.

Insofar as you can—it may be, to use a mixed figure of speech, that you can't unscramble the testimony—but insofar as you can, if you could separate the testimony which has to do with the asserted foundation for Exhibit 233, from the testimony that goes to the subterfuge theory, it will make the record clearer, because we ought to have all the testimony together on the subject of Exhibit 233. But if you can't accomplish that, if they are all related and interrelated, we can't expect you to do the impossible.

Justice Jackson: You are really on the subterfuge issue now, are you not?

Mr. Steffen: This immediate testimony will have to do with that, and then it leads into the conversation, which I think we can show, with Mr. Redfield.

Will you read the pending question, Mr. Reporter?

(The reporter read the question as follows:

"Q. Will you describe to us what sort of a pilot test you made for Certain-teed at this time?")

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Will you please do that, Mr. Speer, describe the test you made? A. We built a miniature machine, a pilot machine.

6154 Q. Where did you build that? A. In Buffalo, at the Certain-teed plant.

Q. And will you describe the machine more fully? A. Well, it was practically the same as a large machine, except on a smaller scale.

Q. And did you run off some samples of board on that machine? A. I did.

Q. Do you recall ever having taken those samples anywhere? A. Yes.

Q. To whom did you show them? A. I showed them to Mr. Chaffee, to Mr. Whittemore, and to Mr. Van Hagan.

Q. And can you tell us what any one of them told you about the samples? A. Well, the only one who liked them was Mr. Chaffee.

Q. Can you say anything that Mr. Whittemore told you about them? A. Well, he liked the samples, but he didn't commit himself whether we should go ahead or not.

Q. Did you have any talk with Mr. Van Hagan, who you say was in the same building with you? A. Well, he saw the machine and he saw the process.

Q. And did he express an opinion concerning whether it was a good or a bad product? A. He didn't, 6155 as I recall it.

Q. He did or did not? A. He did not.

Q. Now, that machine that you built,—could you give us an estimate of how much it cost? A. There was quite considerable labor involved.

Q. How long did it take to make it? A. I couldn't answer that.

Q. Could you say roughly how long, one month or ten months? A. No, I don't think ten months, less than that.

Q. And what authority did you have to get, if any, to make it? A. Well, they had to approve the appropriation for it.

Q. And when you say "they", who do you mean? A. Well, I really don't know who approved that, but Mr. Whittemore was supposed to approve any appropriations. He was the final authority in approving them.

Q. When did you first meet Mr. Redfield, or do you remember having met Mr. Redfield? A. I remember meeting him, but I don't remember the time.

Q. It appears that you had nine claims in your patent allowed in December, 1928. Was there ever, at any time, an amendment to your claims, were there ever any 6156 further claims? A. Yes.

Q. And do you recall about when that was? A. I am not positive about the time.

Q. Will you refer to Government's Exhibit No. 643 for identification, and see if that will refresh your recollection? A. I can read it so I remember it.

Q. Well, can you tell us now about what it was?

Justice Stephens: Is there any dispute about it? Couldn't we stipulate on that and save this time?

Mr. Steffen: It was June 5, 1929.

Justice Stephens: Show the file wrapper to counsel for the defendants.

The Witness: June 12, 1929.

(Exhibit 643 for identification was handed to defendants' counsel.)

Mr. Bromley: I will stipulate that the applicant Speer made an amendment to his claims on June 5, 1929.

Justice Stephens: Thank you. That will save proving this.

Mr. Bromley: His answer, June 12, was incorrect.

Justice Jackson: What is that?

Mr. Bromley: The witness answered, June 12, 1929. That is the date on which he revoked a power of attorney.

The Witness: That is the date I read, the date of the power of attorney.

6157 Mr. Bromley: We weren't interested in that; we wanted to get the date when you filed your amendment.

The Witness: I will have to look at that.

Mr. Bromley: That was June 5, 1929.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Mr. Robinson had formerly been your counsel, had he not, Mr. Speer? A. Yes sir.

Q. And do you remember when Mr. Redfield became counsel? A. Yes sir.

Q. About when was that, at about this same time? A. Well, he became attorney for the Certain-teed when Certain-teed took over the Beaver Products Corporation. He was already employed by them at the time they purchased the Beaver Products Corporation.

Q. Now you say he was employed by Certain-teed—what do you base that upon?

Justice Jackson: Who is this, Mr. Redfield?

Mr. Steffen: Yes.

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as calling for a conclusion.

Mr. Steffen: I know it, and that is why I want to correct it, if it is not based on actual information. I think his answer is a conclusion.

Mr. Bromley: Then I move to strike his answer.

Justice Stephens: It may go out.

6158 By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Do you know whether Mr. Redfield was hired by Certain-teed? A. I do not.

Q. Do you know where his offices were? A. Yes sir.

Q. And where were they—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) Is it necessary to take time on this? Isn't it already on the record that he was a member of the Chaffee organization, which was counsel for Certain-teed?

Mr. Steffen: I believe that is correct, your Honor.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Now, do you recall having a conversation with Mr. Redfield on or about this time in June, 1929, concerning the matter of your patent and the possibility of making a product under your patent? A. Yes sir.

Q. Can you tell us about where that conversation was held? A. I can't remember the exact time.

Justice Jackson: He asked you where, the place.

The Witness: It was either in Buffalo or New York, or Chicago. We had correspondence just then, various correspondence, and I met him in Chicago, and also I 6159 met him in New York and Buffalo.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Did you have more than one conference with Mr. Redfield at about this time in June, 1929? A. Yes sir.

Q. Did you also have a conference, or any conferences, with Mr. Chaffee, during this time? A. I did.

Q. And do you recall ever having discussed, either with Mr. Redfield or Mr. Chaffee, the USG or Avery license agreement?

Mr. Adams: At this point I object with regard to these conversations, on the ground that they are privileged. These, I believe, are new and different conversations than the previous ones referred to.

Justice Stephens: You want to make your record. Yes, your objection may be recorded and is overruled, subject to a motion to strike, if the conversations turn out to be privileged.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Do you recall ever having conversations, either with Mr. Redfield or with Mr. Chaffee, at about this time, concerning the USG license agreement? A. I had conversations with Mr. Chaffee, but not with Mr. Redfield.

6160 Q. At that time? A. Yes.

Q. And did you ever see the license agreement? A. I did.

Q. And did you ever have a copy of it? A. I did.

Q. I now would like to have you tell me what your conversation with Mr. Redfield was concerning the matter of making a closed-edge board according to your patent? A. Well, I don't remember it exactly.

Q. We want simply the substance of your conversation. A. Well, I told Mr. Redfield about this particular edge, how they could utilize it for Certain-teed, meaning how they could use it, and how they could collect royalties.

Q. And what did he say to you, or what discussion did he have with you? A. That is about all I remember.

Q. Did you discuss the general situation in the industry with Mr. Redfield?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as leading and suggestive.

Justice Stephens: Yes, this is supposed to be a critical matter with respect to the admissibility of Exhibit 233. You shouldn't lead. Objection sustained.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. State what you did discuss, if anything, in addition to the matter you have just mentioned?

6161 Mr. Bromley: He has already said he didn't remember anything more.

Mr. Steffen: This goes to Mr. Speer's conversation with Mr. Redfield.

Justice Stephens: Have you stated everything that you talked to Mr. Redfield about, so far as you remember, in substance and effect?

The Witness: Well, I don't think I remember anything more just at this minute.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Did you have any further discussion with Mr. Chaffee about the matter of the license agreements? A. I did.

Q. What did he say? A. Well, he was very downhearted about it.

Mr. Adams: I move to strike that, your Honor, that Mr. Chaffee was "downhearted", although I think probably he should have been. (Laughter)

Justice Stephens: Well, technically it is a conclusion. It may go out. Tell us what Mr. Chaffee said, in substance and effect.

The Witness: Well M.. Chaffee said that Certain-teed signed that agreement against his advice. I remember that distinctly.

By Mr Steffen:

6162 Q. And did you talk with Mr. Redfield concerning that? A. I don't think I did, I don't remember ever discussing it with him. He was a patent lawyer, and that is all. (Laughter)

Justice Stephens: Mr. Olson,, that is pretty hard on you. (Laughter)

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. I want to show you Government's Exhibit 233, Mr. Speer, and ask if that refreshes your recollection on any conversation you may have had with Mr. Redfield?

(The document referred to was handed to the witness.)

A. I would like to take my time just to read it over, because it happened many years ago.

Justice Stephens: Take your time and read it.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Have you examined Exhibit No. 233, Mr. Redfield's memorandum, Mr. Speer? A. Yes sir.

Q. And does that recall to your mind anything that you discussed with Mr. Redfield? A. Well, I would say that substantially—

Mr. Adams: (Interposing) Just a minute, please. May the witness be instructed here—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) That may go
6163 out. Just lay aside that document for a moment.

All you are being asked now is whether or not the reading of that document refreshes your present recollection as to anything you told Mr. Redfield, or that he discussed with you. Just answer that yes or not. Does it or does it not?

The Witness: Yes, your Honor, it does.

Justice Stephens: It does?

The Witness: Yes.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Tell us what it brings back to your mind.

Mr. Adams: I suggest that the witness be given a full opportunity, of course, to read the document, but I don't think that he should now be permitted in effect to read from it.

Justice Stephens: All you are being asked now, Mr. Speer, since you say your present recollection has been refreshed as to what you told Mr. Redfield, is to tell us what you did tell him in addition to what you have already told us.

(At this point the witness laid Exhibit 233 face down.)

The Witness: I told Mr. Redfield that this plasterboard, this patent itself, would be a very good trade with United States Gypsum Company in their new agreement. That is one thing. The other was that it had a distinctive feature. Also, we looked up the patents, and we saw 6164 that the Utzman Patent was about to expire, the next year, and they should have something, some patent, which would be still in force. That is about all.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Do you recall any further discussion with Mr. Redfield about this matter? A. No sir.

Q. Or any other discussions with Mr. Chaffee, about the same matter? A. I think I discussed it exactly the way I just stated. Whether Mr. Chaffee was present or not, I discussed the same thing.

Justice Stephens: I don't quite understand you. Do you mean that you don't know whether Mr. Chaffee was present or not?

The Witness: I don't think, as far as I remember, that Mr. Chaffee was present.

Justice Stephens: Very well.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Now, you have told us that you went to Europe in the summer of 1929, and got back in September? A. Yes sir.

Q. Do you remember any conversations thereafter with Mr. Redfield or with officers of the corporation, concerning the desirability of using your patent?

6165 Mr. Adams: Since this appears to be concerning a new group of conversations, I would like to interpose my usual objection.

Justice Stephens: Your objection may be recorded, and it is overruled. You may reserve the right to move to strike in the event it appears to be privileged.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Do you remember any conversations with officers of the company after September, 1929, when you returned from Europe, concerning the desirability of using your patent in making board? A. I do.

Q. About when? A. I can't fix the time just now.

Q. Will you tell us as nearly as you can? A. I would be guessing, and I don't want to guess.

Q. That is all right. Was it within the next year? A. I should say within a year or a year and a half.

Q. Can you tell us whether the company ever has made a product according to your patent? A. No sir.

Q. You mean that they haven't made it, is that it? A. They haven't made it.

Mr. Steffen: I now offer in evidence, your Honor, Government's Exhibits 642 and 643. Exhibit 642

6166 is the Speer Patent, which was issued on January 27, 1931, and concerning which Mr. Speer has testified—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) You are offering that on the subterfuge theory, I assume?

Mr. Steffen: We are offering that, and Exhibit 643, which is the file wrapper, on the subterfuge theory.

Mr. Bromley: I object to them as immaterial.

Justice Stephens: The objection is overruled; they are received in evidence.

(Government's Exhibits Nos. 642 and 643 for identification were received in evidence.)

Mr. Steffen: I believe that Exhibit 641 was introduced in evidence—

Justice Stephens: Merely as illustrative of the witness's testimony, and it was received for that purpose.

Mr. Steffen: I would like now to offer it broadly as a sample of the board which could be made in accordance with the Speer Patent.

Justice Stephens: Is there any objection?

Mr. Bromley: Not other than that it is immaterial.

Justice Stephens: The objection is overruled; it is received in evidence.

(Government's Exhibit No. 641 for identification was received in evidence.)

6167 Mr. Steffen: We now reoffer Government's Exhibit No. 233, your Honor, and I want to make a short statement on that.

Justice Jackson: Just one minute. Have you assigned your patent to Certain-teed, Mr. Speer, the one you have been testifying about?

The Witness: Yes, your Honor.

Justice Jackson: When was the assignment made, do you know?

The Witness: Before the patent application.

Justice Jackson: I see.

Mr. Adams: I don't want to interrupt Mr. Steffen's statement, but I have some motions to strike, which I would like to make, and it would seem to me that it would be appropriate to make them now.

Justice Stephens: That is right. We ought to know what is before us before we hear the argument on whether or not Exhibit 233 has been qualified.

Are you moving to strike out Mr. Speer's testimony of his conversations with Chaffee and Redfield, as privileged?

Mr. Adams: That is right, your Honor.

I call particular attention to the fact that the first group of conversations included testimony with respect to Chaffee's views as to licensing under this patent—clearly a legal matter.

Secondly, this witness testified that with respect
6168 to the later conversations, Chaffee told him that when Certain-teed entered into this license agreement, that it was contrary to Chaffee's advice—again purely a legal matter, and he was obviously expressing a legal opinion on a legal subject, one in which Chaffee apparently was interested, and upon which he must have been consulted in his professional capacity.

The later discussions were with Mr. Redfield, and had to do with the use of the patent, and the matter of collecting royalties under it. They had looked up the patents and discussed the various matters with relation to the patents, and their legal status. It seems to me to be clear that all of those matters would fall within the attorney-client privilege, and therefore should not be allowed in evidence.

Justice Stephens: Do you think the conversations appear to have been for the purpose of eliciting legal advice, and that they were conversations between a client and his lawyer?

Mr. Adams: Clearly. You see Mr. Speer was acting here as a consulting engineer for the company. He was called into conference with counsel for the company, and executives, for the purpose of discussing the use by the company of a product. Obviously, Mr. Chaffee wasn't there as a businessman. Obviously, he was concerned, as the witness has testified, about the license agreements, and the position of Certain-teed with respect to the license agreements.

I do not think, however, your Honor, that I am 6169 compelled to take the position that he must have been present for the purpose of eliciting legal advice. I think that is what you said. I think it is sufficient that the purpose of the conference or the meeting or the communication, rather, was to—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) Mr. Wigmore states that the privilege covers all matters discussed by the client with a view to advice—and no others. Mr. Hughes, in his work on evidence, says in effect, the same thing, that the purpose of the communication must be to elicit legal advice—otherwise there is no privilege.

It seems to me that in part these conversations were merely an attempt on the part of Mr. Speer, naturally enough, an inventor of this Speer edge, to demonstrate to his employer its advantages. Is there anything privileged about that?

Mr. Adams: I think that, standing alone and not taken in relation to the whole of the circumstances in this case, it would probably not be privileged. I think that we can ask the Court reasonably to look at all the circumstances which would attend upon this situation.

It seems to me that in the light of all those circumstances, where you have the company having had an experience with this open-edge board, we know from the record that they had been and were considering the question of securing the Utzman board, which they deemed to be better; we know that they consulted their counsel about it; we know that their counsel was 6170 concerned about the question of the license agreements; and now we have this witness who comes along and discusses, as a consulting engineer, another product which would obviously relate to a very vital legal matter.

I therefore say, it seems to me at least, that we could reasonably regard this as part of the whole situation as it existed at that time, and that we cannot therefore fairly separate it from the context of all that had gone before, and what went after.

Justice Stephens: Mr. Steffen, do you wish to be heard on this aspect of whether or not these conversations were privileged?

Mr. Steffen: I might say just a word or two.

It seems to me that in regard to the first conversation, at which Mr. Chaffee was present, and talked, concerning whether they should or should not manufacture board according to the Speer Patent, and he urged in effect that they should, I don't see any legal advice or professional capacity there at all. That was straight business. Therefore I would think that under no rule whatever would they come within the attorney-client privilege.

Then in the May conversations, Chaffee makes the statement, according to this witness, that he was opposed to the company's having gone into the May, 1929, agreement. That, again, I don't think is anything more 6171 than a statement of his general position on the matter. Certainly, it was a past event at that time, the contract had been signed in May, and he had opposed it, or he was now saying that he had opposed it.

Then coming down to the discussions last testified to by Mr. Speer, at which Mr. Redfield or Mr. Chaffee, or both, discussed the desirability of finding some patent upon which they could operate, as related in Government's Exhibit No. 233 for identification, we say again that that, to the Government's mind, doesn't constitute a case coming within the attorney-client privilege.

It seems that it gets closer to the line—we are frank to grant that.

It seems to us that this is matter largely, again, of finding a business device, or bartering device, that they could use in their dealings with USG. It doesn't involve any great amount, so far as the conversation was related to the Court, of professional advice, as I see it. It seems to me more a business device of getting something to barter or trade with, and that clearly would not be a matter within the attorney-client privilege.

There was nothing confined by the client to the attorneys concerning that. They were actually functioning as, in effect, officers of the company, and of course as your Honors know, in most industries, it is true that 6172 your patent men are probably better advised, and they work in close conjunction with the company concerning patent matters, and they really are the company on the business aspects of the matters that they handle.

So it seems to me that is not within the attorney-client privilege either.

But we make the second point on that, which we think should be controlling, and that is that if we can have Exhibit No. 233 introduced as being an exhibit which has been taken out from under the attorney-client privilege, in other words, if we have made a prima facie showing, as your Honors have held, that the privilege was waived as respects Government's Exhibit No. 233, it seems to me necessarily that the conversations leading to the writing of Exhibit 233 would be waived likewise.

You cannot simply waive a document and then say that the conversations or matters having to do with the writing of the document are not likewise waived.

That is not a case of lifting ourselves by our bootstraps in any sense, it seems to me. It is simply a case of carrying a waiver to the logical extent to which I think it goes.

So that on either ground—I think the first two conversations are clearly not within the attorney-client privilege, and I think the third conversation, much of it, and we contend none of it, is within the attorney-client 6173 privilege—but moreover, even though your Honors were to hold that it was, we would say that that likewise had been waived by the prima facie waiver which we have established in connection with Exhibit 233.

This is, as I understand it, merely a matter of connecting it with Certain-teed and the acts and purposes of Certain-teed.

Justice Stephens: Do you wish to reply, Mr. Adams?

Mr. Adams: I don't think there is any substance or anything in this record at all that indicates or justifies

Mr. Steffen's suggestion that the patent counsel here, or the other counsel, were acting in a business capacity. They were not; it is clear that they couldn't be. They were acting here, even on his theory that they wanted to get a device to avoid the other patents in the field, they must have been acting for the purpose of examining the legality of the position of their client, and they would have to give advice on that subject, because that would be the keynote of avoiding any such situation, of avoiding the other patents, I meant to say.

So that you can't say that that is a business matter, because it is precisely the contrary, and it has to be precisely the contrary.

Secondly, of course I don't think there is any substance to the suggestion of counsel that where a man waives a privilege on a document to be presented to a grand jury, that he has waived all the conversations with respect 6174 to the whole matter, and other matters between him and his client. It seems to me that that is, as your Honor suggested, clearly pulling yourself up by your bootstraps.

(The Judges conferred among themselves.)

Justice Stephens: We would like to know more about why these conversations were held. If this witness was there as an engineer of the company, or for the purpose, as an engineer of the company, of getting legal advice, if that was in substance and effect the reason he talked to these lawyers, we would like to know it. If, on the contrary, he was simply pushing his product, so to speak, we would like to know that. We are now engaged in a form of voir dire. The Government is trying to prove the connection of Exhibit 233 by certain conversations. Now an objection has been raised as to whether or not we can consider those conversations. Those are on voir dire. I should think that you might cross-examine Mr. Adams, or you might pursue the matter further, if you wish, Mr. Steffen, at this stage, to bring out a little more clearly what the conversations were for, what these conferences between Mr. Speer and these various persons were for. I don't require you to do that, but we feel considerably in the dark yet because I don't think the examination has yet clearly brought out why this gentleman was consulting these lawyers.

It seems to me, speaking for myself alone, that 6175 he was simply trying to get the company, and any officers that he could find to talk about it, to adopt this product.

Mr. Adams: Might we have an opportunity to consider that, your Honor?

Justice Stephens: Yes, we will take the noon recess at this time.

(Whereupon a recess was taken at 12:15 o'clock p.m. until 1:45 o'clock p.m.)

6176 AFTERNOON SESSION

(The trial was resumed at 1:45 o'clock p. m., pursuant to recess.)

Justice Stephens: Have you something more to say, Mr. Adams?

The Court had better make a brief statement before either counsel says anything. We have reached, I think, some conclusions on the pathway toward a decision on this waiver question which, if we state them, will help counsel, perhaps.

It should be borne in mind that our previous ruling as to Exhibit 233 was that a "prima facie showing on voir dire has been made of a waiver of privilege in respect of the proposed Exhibit 233." I emphasize the words "voir dire" to call the attention of counsel to the fact that we are simply engaged thus far in a preliminary inquiry as to a preliminary question of fact, bearing upon the admissibility of Exhibit 233, to-wit, concretely, whether or not the alleged Redfield-Dowd conversation did take place and contained the words which Redfield testified it contained. That is the primary undertaking which we are now carrying on.

Now we continued with our ruling to say—or to repeat it in summary, "the Court rules that a prima facie showing on voir dire has been made of a waiver of privilege in respect of proposed Exhibit U. S. 233, so that in the absence of convincing contradictory evidence as to the 6177 fact or content of the asserted Redfield-Dowd telephone conversation, the exhibit would be admissible subject to a showing, first, that it is an admission by Certain-teed; and, second, subject to the usual reservation, that is, a showing that it was in furtherance or execution of the conspiracy."

Now at the moment—I mean today—we are going into that topic just mentioned, that is, the question whether or not this Redfield document, which on its face is merely a letter written by Redfield to Certain-teed, can be taken to be the act of Certain-teed as an admission, and that is all we are going into at the present time. We haven't yet ruled on the question whether this exhibit is admissible, even if it was the act of Certain-teed, because we haven't yet heard Dowd, since the Government objected to hearing Dowd yesterday. We are only engaged now in the question whether or not, by Mr. Speer's testimony, it can be shown that the Redfield exhibit, if it should later be held to have been waived so far as privilege is concerned, is Certain-teed's act or admission.

Now that being true, Mr. Steffen, it seems to us there isn't anything to your contention that what you refer to as a prima facie showing of waiver would include a waiver of these conversations we are talking about this morning, because you would only be in a position to make that contention if we had already heard Dowd and had de-6178 cided that the Dowd-Redfield conversation was what Redfield testified to, and had then ruled that the exhibit was admissible in evidence, the preliminary question of fact having been determined in the Government's favor. Then you might be in a position to make the contention that the exhibit having been ruled as admissible, subject to connection with Certain-teed,—that is, admissible so far as the waiver question is concerned,—carried with it a waiver of the preliminary conversations which we are now dealing with. But even if that were true, we don't think there is anything to the contention that, if there is an established waiver so far as Exhibit 233 is concerned, that would carry with it a waiver of all conversations preceding the execution of Exhibit 233, which in any way related to it. It might carry with it a waiver of the very conversation in which Exhibit 233 was asked for or prepared or discussed. That might be said to be merged in the instrument. But we don't think it would carry with it a waiver of preliminary conversations.

Therefore, we are of the view that we have got to determine independently whether these conversations that have been testified to this morning are privileged or not privileged. But we feel—and we say this to both the Government and the defendants—that we haven't yet been shown the real nature of these conferences. If Mr. Speer, 6179 as an engineer of the company, of Certain-teed, was authorized to consult these lawyers concerning legal matters relating to the Speer device, or the Speer product, and was acting, therefore, for Certain-teed in getting legal advice, the conversations may well be privileged. If, on the other hand, he had some personal interest in pushing his own product, and was simply trying to get the company to adopt it, and was therefore calling it to the attention of these lawyers and officers, if he had some special interest by way of bonus or commission, or something of that sort, which made it a personal matter, or even if, just as an engineer, he was merely personally interested in the success of his work as an engineer for the company, and tried therefore to call the product to the attention of the lawyers and other officers, but was not acting for Certain-teed in consulting them and getting legal advice, it would seem to us that these conversations might well not be privileged.

It seems to us that neither the Government nor the defendants have really yet gone beyond the fringe of these conversations, and that we ought to have some questions asked here as to why he was consulting these people, and who authorized him to consult them, if anyone, and what he was consulting them for, and in what capacity he was consulting them.

We want to know the real facts as to the nature
6180 of these conferences and the reasons for them.

Mr. Steffen: There is a motion to strike certain of the testimony before the Court, I believe. I would like—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) We haven't passed on that yet, and we are not going to pass on it until we get further light on the nature of these conferences between Speer and these lawyers, if counsel are willing to go into that subject.

Mr. Steffen: I will ask Mr. Speer to take the stand.

Mr. Adams: How will this examination be conducted, Your Honor? I think that the Government having made its showing, perhaps I should apply for permission to examine him on voir dire.

Justice Stephens: Well, if Mr. Steffen has anything more, let him finish it, and then you can cross-examine.

Take the witness stand, Mr. Speer.

Thereupon, ALEXANDER S. SPEER the witness on the stand at the time of recess, resumed his testimony as follows:

Justice Stephens: We may also have to take a few moments to have Mr. Grover read us some of these conversations. We tried to do that during the noon hour, but were not able to get in touch with him.

Direct Examination (resumed)

6181 By Mr. Steffen:

Q. When you first came with Certain-teed, Mr. Speer, who did you talk with, with whom did you make your arrangements when you first came with Certain-teed? A. With Mr. Whittemore and Mr. Chaffee.

Q. Did you ever talk with Mr. George M. Brown? A. I don't think I had any talk with him about the contract.

Q. Can you tell us what the discussion was with regard to what your duties were to be? A. Well, I don't think there was any discussion at all, because I had a previous contract.

Q. Well, let's go into that in more detail. What did you do when you were working for Certain-teed? A. Well, I was getting up new processes and new articles.

Q. And how many, or what number did you get up, can you tell us that? A. Previous to Certain-teed coming in?

Q. No, I want to start with Certain-teed. A. Start with Certain-teed?

Q. That is right. A. Probably 15.

Q. And did those result, or some of those result,

6182 in patents? A. Yes.

Q. And did you ever make any reports to Mr. Whittemore or to anyone else concerning your work, from time to time? A. I did.

Q. And how were they made? A. I didn't understand your question.

Q. How were your reports made, and how often were they made? A. They were made verbally, as well as in writing.

Q. And when they were made verbally, where were they made? A. In New York.

Q. And to whom? A. And also in Buffalo.

Q. And to whom did you talk in New York? A. I talked to Mr. Whittemore and Mr. Chaffee.

Q. And what was the nature of your reports?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as incompetent because calling for a conclusion.

Mr. Steffen: The question is broad. I would like to ask him broadly as to what he told Mr. Whittemore concerning the work he had under way.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Can you give us any detail as to that?

6183 Justice Stephens: Just a minute, there is an objection here. We will have to rule on it. If you are dealing with written reports—

Mr. Steffen: (Interposing) We are talking about verbal reports, Your Honor.

Justice Stephens: He has already told us about them, hasn't he?

Mr. Steffen: I don't think he has in detail. I want to know the nature of the reports that he made to Mr. Whittemore in order to lead into whether they were strictly technical or whether they had to do with the business aspects.

Justice Stephens: He may answer. The objection is overruled.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Tell me the scope of the reports that you made verbally to Mr. Whittemore, and to Mr. Chaffee, on these occasions when you were in New York? A. They were purely technical.

Q. And had to do with the products that you were making? A. Yes, sir—not only the products I was making, but the products that somebody else was making. I was acting as an expert.

Q. And by "somebody else", who do you mean?

6184 A. Somebody else in the company. And also, I had several outside inventions submitted to me, and I passed them on.

Q. And they had to do also with some of your own inventions? A. Yes, they did.

Q. Now these inventions that you made, were they your property or did you transfer them to Certain-teed? A. I transferred them to Certain-teed.

Q. And can you tell us whether you had to advise with Mr. Chaffee or anyone concerning the patents or those inventions? A. I had to go either to Mr. Whittemore or Mr. Chaffee, or to both.

Q. With regard to your— A. (Interposing) Inventions.

Q. (Continuing)—to your inventions? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you have told us of your conversations with Mr. Chaffee, in part. Can you give us any more detail as to your conversations with Mr. Chaffee concerning these inventions which you were getting patents upon?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as repetitious. He has given us the conversations. Shouldn't the man be asked whether he went to see Chaffee as an employee of the 6185 company consulting legal counsel for legal advice?

Justice Stephens: That is what we are interested in, Mr. Steffen:

Mr. Steffen: I think that would be objectionable if I asked it in that way. It calls for a conclusion.

Mr. Bromley: I won't object.

Mr. Adams: I won't object.

Mr. Steffen: What I want to do is to find out what he did, from which you can conclude whether what he did was for the purposes of getting legal advice.

Justice Stephens: The Court gets the impression that neither Mr. Adams nor Mr. Steffen is quite willing to go into the essence of this question.

Mr. Adams: If I could ask that question that Mr. Bromley asked just now, I would ask it.

Justice Stephens: Perhaps I prejudged you, because you haven't had a chance.

The objection to the last question is sustained, because we have heard this witness testify as to all he can remember about these conversations. What we want to know is whether or not he was consulting these people for the purpose of getting legal advice from them. I don't think you will find any objection to those questions if you are willing to ask them, Mr. Steffen. Of course, we don't compel you to ask them. You must try your own case.

6186 Mr. Steffen: I would like to ask him in a little more detail.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Did you consult with Mr. Chaffee concerning the form of the patents that you were taking out on your own inventions? A. I didn't quite get you.

Q. Did you consult with Mr. Chaffee concerning the form of the patents that were being taken out?

Mr. Adams: I think that ought to be clarified as to what he means by the "form of the patents". If he means was he asking him, as a lawyer, about how to get a patent, that is one thing; but the form of a patent is an established thing.

Justice Stephens: I don't know quite what the question means. Why don't you ask him the direct question—of course, Mr. Steffen, I don't want to put you in the difficult position of bringing out matters that you fear may be inimical to the interests of the Government. If you want to drop the examination, you are entitled to do so. But I would like to ask the witness a question, and perhaps this will save time.

Mr. Steffen: I would be willing to have Your Honor ask just what is in your mind.

Justice Stephens: Very well.

6187 Mr. Speer, when you went to consult Mr. Chaffee, or talk to Mr. Chaffee and Mr. Redfield, as you testified this morning, for what purpose did you go to see them?

The Witness: Well, I wanted to get their advice about the whole thing.

Justice Stephens: What kind of advice?

The Witness: I would say legal advice.

Justice Stephens: Did you ask them, in those conversations you have testified to this morning, for legal advice?

The Witness: Well, I don't know how to answer that question.

Justice Stephens: Well, did you ask them for their counsel or judgment on legal questions relating to your proposed patents?

The Witness: I did, I asked Mr. Redfield and also Mr. Chaffee about these patents.

Justice Jackson: What did you ask them?

The Witness: I asked Mr. Redfield what he could do about getting up these different claims for the patents.

Justice Jackson: About getting up the claims for the patents?

The Witness: Yes. He acted as patent attorney.

Justice Jackson: Naturally you would ask him that. What did you ask Chaffee?

The Witness: I asked Chaffee also—

6188 Justice Jackson: (Interposing) The same thing?

The Witness: Not exactly, because he wasn't a patent attorney.

Justice Stephens: Now what was your interest in asking him those questions? Were you proceeding in behalf of yourself, or of the company, in asking those questions?

The Witness: Both.

Justice Stephens: State what authority had been given you by anyone, in the way of words or writing, to consult these gentlemen about these patent questions?

The Witness: I had a contract with the company, and the contract provided that I was to submit these patents to the company, to the Beaver Products, and also to Certain-teed, who purchased the Beaver Products, and that was my authority.

Justice Jackson: Under your contract, Mr. Speer, were you additionally compensated for your patents that were adopted by your employers?

The Witness: No, I was benefited by the royalty that they would collect, if they collected.

Justice Jackson: And when they collected royalty, you would participate in that royalty?

The Witness: One-fourth of the royalty, to be exact.

Justice Jackson: Then you had a personal interest in having your own patents adopted?

6189 The Witness: Yes, Your Honor.

Justice Stephens: Do you want to ask any questions, Judge Garrett?

Justice Garrett: You say any royalties that they might collect, you would have a participation in. I suppose that meant, did it, that if they licensed anyone under the patent and obtained royalties, then you would get a fourth of the royalties?

The Witness: One-fourth of it over and above a guarantee that I had. There was a certain guarantee attached to it.

Justice Garrett: In the event they used the patent alone, and did not license anyone under it, were you to receive anything for its use by them?

The Witness: No, I was not. They had to license outsiders.

Justice Garrett: And when you referred this morning to the matter of consulting with reference to how royalties could be collected, you had reference to those royalties that might result from any licensing of the patents?

The Witness: That is correct, Your Honor.

Justice Garrett: That is all.

Mr. Bromley: I would like to ask this: When you said you had a guarantee under your contract, you meant that you had a salary of some $15,000 or $20,000 a year under the contract, didn't you?

6190 The Witness: I had a part salary and part royalty guarantee. I didn't have to put all my time into my work, I could do something else on the outside.

Mr. Bromley: But you had a salary?

The Witness: It was a guaranteed royalty.

Mr. Bromley: That was a flat sum per year, wasn't it?

The Witness: Yes, it was a flat sum.

Mr. Bromley: And then if the company licensed somebody else under patents which belonged to the company but which covered your inventions, you got over and above that a share in whatever royalties the company collected?

The Witness: I would like to just elaborate so as to make it clear. I was to receive a certain amount of guarantee—it happened to be $15,000. Now all the royalties they collected from the outsiders, outside firms, they figured out the total amount, and they deducted the guarantee. It actually worked, in many cases.

Justice Stephens: Have you got a copy of this contract under which you were working for the company, with you?

The Witness: Yes, Your Honor.

Justice Stephens: Have you it here?

The Witness: Yes, I have it here.

Justice Stephens: I still think that we perhaps haven't yet quite got down to the question whether or not, when this witness was talking with these two lawyers, 6191 Chaffee and Redfield, he was, within the scope and course of his duties, consulting them for the company.

Mr. Steffen perhaps might, on the part of the Government, object to the Presiding Judge's questions on that topic as to their conclusional character.

I would like to see this contract. If he had some instructions from the company to consult lawyers, that is one thing. If he was going there to consult these lawyers because of his own interest in royalties, that is another thing.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Did Mr. Redfield or Mr. Chaffee consult with you on occasion? A. They did.

Q. And did they on many occasions? A. I would say yes.

Mr. Steffen: I have here, Your Honor, a contract, which is dated, however, in 1930—and the only reason I haven't introduced it is that it is dated in 1930. It purports to cover and be similar to all prior contracts. There have been a number of contracts between the company and Mr. Speer.

Justice Stephens: It is subsequent to these conversations, isn't it?

Mr. Steffen: This is subsequent, and that is the 6192 reason I haven't used it. I don't have any of the original, earlier contracts.

Justice Stephens: Perhaps if we let Mr. Adams conduct some examination—

Mr. Steffen: (Interposing) Maybe Mr. Adams has some earlier contracts.

Mr. Adams: I don't have these earlier contracts—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) I want to be sure Mr. Steffen is through.

Mr. Steffen: I think I am, for the moment.

Mr. Adams: I do not have these earlier contracts, but if I might look at this one, I might be able to—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) You may, there will be no objection to that.

(The contract referred to was handed to Mr. Adams.)

Justice Stephens: If you can bring out from the witness that this is in substance the same as the previous contracts and nobody objects to the use of secondary material, you can find out from that, maybe, what this man had authority to do. It seems to us that if this man was consulting these lawyers in his own private capacity that is one thing; but if he was going there to consult them as an engineer for the company, about patent law, that is another thing.

Mr. Steffen: He has told us that he has a one-6193 quarter interest and the company has a three-quarters interest in every invention that he made while he was employed by the company; they were all assigned over to the company; they might be used one way or the other; and he was consulted by Redfield and Chaffee just as much as he consulted them. He was also consulted by Whittemore, and he consulted Whittemore; and he was also consulted by Van Hagan and he consulted Van Hagan.

Mr. Bromley: Would it help to find out whether this man paid the lawyers?

What is the fact, Mr. Speer?

The Witness: The fact is that the company paid the lawyers. According to my contract, I wasn't to pay any legal fees.

By Mr. Adams:

Q. Mr. Speer, I have here a document which purports to be an agreement, dated June 4, 1930, between you and Certain-teed. That is the one that you produced and gave to Mr. Steffen, isn't it, that we are talking about? A. Yes.

Q. And this agreement is really substantially a continuation of your earlier agreement with Beaver, isn't it? A. That is correct.

Q. And does it contain substantially all of the provisions that the contract you had with Beaver con-6194 tained? A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that what you did, when you came with the Certain-teed Company, was to cancel your Beaver contract and take a new contract? A. Yes.

Q. Which, so far as you were concerned, put you in the same place with Certain-teed that you had been with Beaver? A. No, it didn't, I received less money. (Laughter).

Q. But so far as what you had to do, it was the same thing, is that right? A. Exactly the same.

Q. Your obligations under the contract were the same? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And so far as you recall, the provisions in the Certain-teed contract were substantially the same as the ones in the Beaver contract? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Adams: Under those circumstances, Your Honor, I offer this document in evidence, however with the condition attached to my offer that I should not like to have it deemed to be a defendants' exhibit, but merely offered on the voir dire.

Justice Stephens: This is only on voir dire. We are 6195 now on a subordinate voir dire, so to speak. We are now on a voir dire as to the admissibility of these conversations between this witness and Redfield and Chaffee, and are pursuing the question of the admissibility of those conversations in order to determine whether or not this Exhibit 233, if privilege has been waived in respect of it, can be connected with Certain-teed. We are merely on voir dire now, on the right to have these conversations come in evidence.

Mr. Adams: I have no doubt. I am merely being overcautious, but I simply wanted to make that offer.

Mr. Steffen: I will be glad to introduce this contract.

Justice Jackson: Is that the original?

Mr. Steffen: Yes.

Justice Jackson: Probably Mr. Speer would want to go home with that in his pocket, so why not have copies made of it?

Justice Stephens: We can have copies made, and then the original withdrawn. Let it be marked and introduced as an exhibit, with the understanding that the original may be withdrawn and a copy substituted.

Mr. Steffen: There is no question, I take it—it is signed by Mr. Speer and Mr. Whittemore.

Mr. Adams: There is no question about it.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. I show you what has been marked Govern-
6196 ment's Exhibit 644 for Identification, and ask you if that is your contract?

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 644 for Identification.)

A. Yes.

Q. Is that your signature at the foot of it? A. Yes, it is.

Q. And the other signature is whose? A. Mr. Whittemore's.

Mr. Steffen: We offer Government's Exhibit No. 644 in evidence.

Justice Stephens: It will be received.

(The document referred to, marked as Government's Exhibit No. 644, was received in evidence.)

Mr. Adams: Would Your Honors care to examine it?

Justice Stephens: You may examine upon it or examine it yourself.

Mr. Adams: Would you like to look at it, that was my question?

Justice Stephens: We would like to have those portions pointed out which have any bearing upon this man's duty to consult lawyers for the company, or not.

Mr. Bromley: I think paragraph 5 is the important one.

6197 Mr. Adams: I simply call attention to Paragraph 5, and thought perhaps the Court would like to look at it.

(Government's Exhibit No. 644 handed to the Court for examination.)

Justice Stephens: Proceed, Mr. Adams, if you wish to ask this witness some questions.

(Government's Exhibit No. 644 handed to the witness.)

By Mr. Adams:

Q. Mr. Speer, will you look at the fifth paragraph of Government's Exhibit 644? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now it is the fact, isn't it, Mr. Speer, that when you had anything relating to an invention, under that agreement— A. (Interposing) Applying to building, I would like to qualify that, because I had other things.

Q. All right. (Continuing)—that that became the property of Certain-teed; isn't that right? A. Yes.

Q. And you had to disclose to them anything that you had in that line? A. Yes.

Q. And you were working for the company under 6198 that contract? A. Just a certain portion of my time, and it specified the major portion.

Q. The major portion of your time in relation to these products? A. Yes.

Q. And from time to time, you took up these matters with Certain-teed's counsel, with respect to those inventions, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And your conversations and dealings with them were in the interest of Certain-teed, weren't they? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Certain-teed's counsel were considering these various inventions from any number of various point of view, weren't they? A. Yes, sir.

Q. In respect of Certain-teed's legal position, isn't that right? A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that you would take the matters up with them so that they could act upon them in their capacity as lawyers for Certain-teed; isn't that right? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And if Certain-teed happened to use one of these inventions, you might later benefit, is that correct?
6199 A. That is correct.

Q. But the purpose of your consultation with Certain-teed's counsel was so that Certain-teed's counsel could act with reference to these matters in a legal way; isn't that right? A. Yes.

Q. And when you were taking these matters up with Certain-teed's lawyers, you were going to see them as an employee of Certain-teed under that contract, weren't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And in accordance with your duties, as you understood them? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And they were paying their lawyers, weren't they? A. Yes, so far as I know. (Laughter).

Justice Stephens: That is a very conservative answer, Mr. Speer.

By Mr. Adams:

Q. Mr. Speer, you embarrass me. A. Well, they wouldn't work for the company unless they got paid.

Mr. Adams: That is all.

Justice Stephens: Mr. Bromley, you objected to this exhibit on the ground that it hadn't been connected. I think it was you who raised the question of the 6200 connection of this exhibit with Certain-teed, even if it was said not to be privileged or if the privilege was said to be waived. Do you wish to examine this witness, or contribute any illumination to this subject?

Mr. Bromley: You mean do I wish to examine him as to Exhibit 644, the contract?

Justice Stephens: No, when I mentioned an exhibit, I meant Exhibit 233—I meant on the subject of his testimony this morning with respect to these alleged privileged conversations, which are relied upon by the Government to connect 233 with Certain-teed.

Mr. Bromley: I have nothing further on this preliminary question. If all this stays in, then I do have some cross. (Laughter).

Justice Jackson: Are you through?

Mr. Steffen: I think Mr. Adams has done a very good job of showing that Mr. Speer was consulting these lawyers in his capacity as an agent or employee of Certain-teed, and that therefore he was very definitely authorized to act for Certain-teed, not limited, necessarily, as his testimony shows, to technical questions, but very broadly, as the contract shows, to promote products.

And, Mr. Speer, in promoting new products, was it limited to technical questions of patent law?

Mr. Adams: I submit that that would be im-
6201 material, Your Honor. Patent law is just as valid as any other part of the law.

Justice Stephens: Objection overruled.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Were you limited, in your duties, to discussing questions of patent law? A. No.

Q. Will you tell us what the scope of the duties of a promoter of a new product may be?

Mr. Bromley: I object to that as speculative.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. What were your duties, as a promoter of new products?

Mr. Bromley: We have the contract in evidence, and I object on the ground that the contract is the best evidence.

Mr. Steffen: I will ask him what he did. An agency contract is simply general authority. It is not a limitation on what he may or does do.

Justice Stephens: I think he may go into it. It has been gone into pretty fully already, but if you think it is necessary to go further into what he actually did, Mr. Steffen, you may do so. We went into the contract for the purpose of determining his authority to consult lawyers, as far as we could.

Mr. Steffen: I will defer the matter.

Justice Stephens: I told you you might ask the question.

6202 By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Could you tell us the scope of the duties and the things that you did as a promoter of new products for Certain-teed? A. I did experimental work, either myself or delegated it to somebody else, and saw that the work was perfected, and also saw to it that the process of manufacturing was the correct one.

Q. Did you consult as respects sales? A. Yes, sales—naturally, you have to be Jack-of-all-trades when you promote a new article.

Q. And with the company, who did you consult concerning the sales qualities of a new article? A. I talked to Mr. Whittemore and Roos—

Q. (Interposing) Who was Roos? A. He was an assistant general sales manager.

Q. And did you consider the advertising possibilities of a new product? A. Yes, sir; some times I got up the advertising myself.

Q. Now I want to ask you a question in regard to Mr. Chaffee. Did you have any talks with him on matters beyond law? Was he an inventor? A. He was.

Q. And did he ever discuss with you, ideas con-
6203 cerning products? A. He did.

Q. Now in regard to Mr. Redfield, I think you have testified that his offices were with the Certain-teed company, is that not correct? A. So far as I know, because I always saw him at Certain-teed.

Q. And how did he communicate with you, on what forms?

Mr. Bromley: Didn't this witness testify this morning that Redfield had an office with Chaffee?

Mr. Steffen: Let's get that clear. I don't think he did.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Where was Mr. Redfield's office? A. I always saw him, as I recall it, at Certain-teed.

Q. And that was at 100 East 42nd Street? A. Yes, sir, the same place as Mr. Chaffee's office.

Q. The same building, you mean? A. Yes, sir, the same building.

Q. And on what forms did Mr. Redfield communicate with you, if you know? A. On Certain-teed's stationery.

6204 Q. He used Certain-teed's stationery? A. Yes.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 233, and ask if that is what you mean by "Certain-teed's stationery", or "Certain-teed's form"?

(Government's Exhibit 233 was handed to the witness.)

A. Of course, this is a copy, it is not the original.

Q. Merely as to the form?

Mr. Adams: I don't see the materiality of this, Your Honor. It wouldn't make any difference how counsel communicated with anyone else. He was still associated with Mr. Chaffee, and that is Mr. Redfield's own testimony in this case.

Mr. Steffen: I want to bring out, Your Honor, what I stated orally, and that is that patent counsel may be members of the bar, but they also have a business quality; and in this case Mr. Redfield, as Mr. Speer testifies, had his offices with Certain-teed rather than with Chaffee, who had his general offices in the same building. He communicated with Mr. Speer using the ordinary forms—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) You may ask the question.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Exhibit No. 233 is such a form?

Justice Jackson: You have asked him if that is 6205 such a form?

Mr. Steffen: Yes.

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. I want to show you, to refresh your recollection, what purports to be a memorandum from Mr. Redfield to you under date of January 10, 1929, which I ask be marked Government's Exhibit 645 for Identification.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 645 for Identification.)

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. Do you recognize that as the type and form upon which you received communications from Mr. Redfield? A. Yes, I do. This is it.

Q. That is the type of form? A. Yes.

Q. And is that the same type of form as appears on Government's Exhibit 233? A. Well, this is just a copy, they wouldn't send it like this, but they would also send it on this stationery.

Mr. Steffen: I think I have no further questions, Your Honor, on this level.

Justice Stephens: Mr. Adams, do you have something further?

Mr. Adams: Yes.

6206 By Mr. Adams:

Q. Mr. Speer, when you did these various things on the matters that you were working on, that Mr. Steffen asked you about, you also took up the legal phases with the counsel for the company, didn't you? A. To what extent?

Q. You talked with Mr. Roos or somebody else, perhaps, about the sales possibilities, or something like that, but when you came to the legal phases of it, you took those matters up with Mr. Chaffee and Mr. Redfield, didn't you? A. That is correct.

Q. And you took those matters up with them in their capacity as the counsel for the company, isn't that right? A. Well, I don't know whether I should define it the same way—

Q. (Interposing) It was dealing with legal matters, wasn't it? A. Yes, sir.

Justice Jackson: I am a little bit uncertain yet. All of Mr. Adams questions have been general as to what you generally did. Now with respect to the conversations that you related this morning to Mr. Steffen, wherein you said you spoke to Mr. Whittemore and Mr. Chaffee and others, did you go into those conferences for the purpose of securing legal advice on behalf of Certain-teed, from 6207 Chaffee or Mr. Redfield?

The Witness: I did.

Justice Jackson: You did?

The Witness: I did, yes.

Mr. Adams: I have nothing further.

Justice Stephens: Well, if there is nothing further, we are ready to rule.

It seems to us clear that these conversations with Redfield and Chaffee were privileged, and the motions to strike must be granted, and they are granted.

Mr. Steffen: May I ask, Your Honor, does that apply to all of the conversations? I will take the very first one, if I may be heard for a moment, the one concerning the conversation at which Mr. Chaffee and Mr. Whittemore were present; and the only conversation that was had, irrespective of what the purposes might have been, the only conversation that we offered there at all was that Mr. Speer recommended to Mr. Whittemore that they bring out a closed-edge board of the type that he was manufacturing. Now that certainly is not privileged at that point, that is a conversation between Mr. Speer and Mr. Whittemore.

Justice Stephens: There isn't any motion to strike out the Whittemore conversation, as I understand it. As I understand it, there is a motion to strike out the conversations at which Chaffee and Redfield were present.

6208 Mr. Steffen: Only these latter conversations in May or June, then?

Justice Stephens: We are striking out all of the testimony of this witness directed to his conversations with either Chaffee or Redfield. He has testified that Whittemore and others dropped in, from time to time, but nevertheless he has clearly answered both Judge Jackson and myself, on specific questions, and the more general questions of Mr. Adams, that when he talked with Chaffee and Redfield he was there to get legal advice for Certain-teed.

Now if there is a conversation in the record, a separate conversation with Whittemore, about his desiring to have a product promoted, of course Whittemore isn't a lawyer and that conversation can stay in.

Mr. Adams: I did not understand that there was any such conversation. There I am only relying on my recollection of the record. My notes indicate that he talked with them, Mr. Chaffee and Mr. Whittemore,—that Mr. Chaffee was present.

Justice Stephens: Well, the record is there; and the Court will make the ruling, reiterate it, that all testimony of this witness as to conversations between himself and Mr. Chaffee, and himself and Mr. Redfield, are privileged and are therefore stricken out. If there is any evidence in the record of a separate conversation with Mr. Whit-6209 temore, on the subject just described by Government counsel, that is not stricken out.

Mr. Steffen: May I make a point concerning that?

Justice Stephens: Yes.

6210 Mr. Steffen: As I understand it, if Mr. Redfield were here, and we had him identify his memorandum, Exhibit No. 233, and he then testified that he had a conversation with Mr. Dowd, and your Honors would rule that prima facie that constituted a waiver of any attorney-client privilege, it would then be open to us, as I understand it, to ask Mr. Redfield anything at all about the way he put that memorandum together.

I don't see how it can be avoided, because if you were going to say that the memorandum was waived by the waiver that he testified to, you have to allow the writer to talk about it, and Mr. Redfield, therefore, would be able to talk and state just what information he had, and what he acted upon when he wrote that memorandum.

Therefore, his conversations would certainly not be privileged.

Now, I have asked for the other end of the conversations. I have now got Mr. Speer saying that he talked with Mr. Redfield. Now I don't care in what capacity he talked with Mr. Redfield. I think it is all the better that he talked with him as an employee of Certain-teed, rather than as just some independent promoter.

He was an interested party in the sense that he got some percentage himself. But three-quarters of his interest was as a representative of Certain-teed.

6211 Now it seems to me that if we are to be permitted at all to connect Exhibit No. 233, and to show that it is something more than just a piece of paper that Mr. Redfield wrote, and Mr. Redfield could talk and tell us, and tell the Court that he wrote that, not because he was simply a patent counsel, but because he, as most of these people, had additional duties, and additional understandings as to what he was to do. He was employed in a sense as a patent counsel, but he was also employed or had offices in Certain-teed's plant. He handled a large number of things concerning promotions, he wrote a memorandum in which he said the various things set out in Exhibit 233.

Now it seems to me that Exhibit 233, if there is no attorney-client privilege with respect to it, then the writer could testify, and the person could testify as to conversations he had with people in the company. You have to tie it in with Certain-teed, and Mr. Adams has shown that Mr. Speer was in the company, and that he saw Mr. Redfield as a member of Certain-teed—tying it right up with Certain-teed.

Now we say simply that the conversations upon which Mr. Redfield acted, when he wrote the memorandum, are not privileged, because of the fact that Mr. Dowd, according to Mr. Redfield's testimony, has waived the privilege.

Accordingly, it seems to me that Mr. Adams has 6212 beautifully connected up the fact of the writing of Exhibit 233 and the fact that it emanated from people connected with Certain-teed, Mr. Speer and the other people that talked with Mr. Redfield when he wrote the memorandum.

And if, as I say, Mr. Redfield is to be allowed to talk concerning how and why and when he wrote that memorandum, the people that talked to him are equally allowed to talk.

Justice Stephens: I wish, Mr. Steffen, that you would make these arguments before the Court rules, instead of afterwards.

Mr. Steffen: I am awfully sorry, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: I am not scolding you, but we need the benefit of all that counsel has in his mind before we rule, and we need to have the opportunity of hearing everything applying to a question before we rule.

I thought I gave you a full opportunity to say everything you wanted to, but you wait until we have ruled adversely, and then make a new speech, and then we have to reopen the thing for the lawyers on the other side.

Mr. Steffen: I am following Mr. Adams' technique.

Justice Stephens: I don't approve of it, no matter whose technique it is.

Please get these matters over with once and for all, if possible.

Mr. Adams, do you want to reply?

6213 Mr. Adams: It seems to me that that argument is founded on any number of false assumptions. The simple question here is whether this witness went to counsel to get legal advice. That was the question which Judge Jackson asked him, and which I asked him. Everything that he talked to them about concerned matters of legal advice.

Mr. Steffen pulls right out of the air something and says that that connects him or Redfield with this memorandum. It doesn't do anything of the kind, it doesn't even come close to it.

Justice Jackson: I think possibly that this is a trifle untimely, because the situation couldn't arise, Mr. Steffen, until after we had decided whether or not the privilege was waived with respect to Exhibit 233. Then, in that event, you can make this argument, can't you?

Justice Stephens: I explained that, Mr. Steffen, when I came along on the bench this afternoon. It seems to me the answer to your present contention is that we haven't yet ruled that this exhibit is admissible. We have ruled that, on its face, it is a privileged communication. We have ruled that a voir dire prima facie showing has been made by the Government under the Redfield testimony that the privilege was waived, but we have said that we cannot decide that voir dire question bearing upon the admissibility of the document as a privileged, but privilege-waived document, until we have heard Mr. Dowd.

6214 Now, you had an opportunity to hear Dowd yesterday, but decided that you didn't wish to do so. You are now engaged in an undertaking to connect the Redfield document with Certain-teed before we have ruled whether or not it is admissible.

That being true, I don't think you have reached the question you have argued yet.

I still think you have to meet the question, which I also commented upon when I came on the bench this afternoon of waiver of privilege with respect to a particular document, perhaps including a waiver of the very conversations out of which that document grew, I don't think it includes the waiver of every other conversation had with the witness on the general subject involved.

It seems to me your argument is premature. We haven't yet ruled that the privilege on this document has been waived, because we haven't yet heard Dowd. We are simply giving you an opportunity now, out of order, to try and connect the Redfield document with Certain-teed.

Mr. Steffen: May I say just a word?

Justice Stephens: Yes.

Mr. Steffen: My understanding is, so far as Mr. Dowd is concerned, that that goes to the question of whether or not there was a waiver of the privilege.

Justice Stephens: That is right.

6215 Mr. Steffen: I understand that, prima facie at least, Mr. Redfield's testimony that he did have such a conversation would constitute a waiver. I had understood your Honor's ruling, but I will simply state that I had laid that to one side, and had started with the assumption that inasmuch as we had Mr. Redfield's testimony concerning the waiver, and that, on its face, constituted a waiver, as your Honors I think stated, subject, of course—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) All I ruled was—and I took careful pains to write out the ruling, and I re-read it today, and I put emphasis on it—that it only constituted a prima facie voir dire showing, not a final showing on voir dire.

6216 Mr. Steffen: Well, my thought was, as I say—laying that question of the waiver of privilege to one side—that what we were doing with Mr. Speer was to connect the writing which Mr. Redfield made, Exhibit 233, with the Certain-teed Company, to show that it was an authorized transaction.

I thought I could do that entirely apart from this question of what Mr. Dowd might say, one way or the other, and I thought that that was probably a preliminary matter in order to determine whether it was important to go on with Mr. Dowd. We got into that discussion yesterday, and it has been pro and con. In any event, I asked—and the Court agreed with me yesterday—that we go into this matter before we took up Mr. Dowd, and this matter is a matter of connection.

Now it seems to me that if we can assume for a moment that Mr. Dowd's testimony would not be sufficient, so that the waiver would be effective as to Exhibit 233—let's assume that for the moment—then this connection must be brought in as though there had been a waiver of the attorney-client privilege; and in such event, as your Honors state, the conversations leading directly to the writing of that agreement and connecting it directly with Certain-teed, would be equally within the waiver of privilege.

Now if we allow Mr. Adams at this moment to strike those conversations from the record permanently, then we haven't anything to go forward at all with, when Mr. Dowd comes on.

6217 Justice Jackson: You have Redfield, haven't you?

Mr. Steffen: Why could we not take this position? Why not suspend ruling on this motion to strike until we do hear from Mr. Dowd, if necessary?

Mr. Bromley: There is no connection between the two things that I can see.

Mr. Steffen: That goes to the issue I thought we were arguing.

Justice Jackson: All Dowd is going to testify to is as to whether or not such a telephone conversation took place?

Mr. Steffen: Yes.

Mr. Adams: As I advised the Government yesterday, and the Government had an opportunity yesterday to interview Mr. Dowd, he told them that he would testify that he never had any such conversation with Redfield, or with any representative of the Government. That is why I wanted to put him on yesterday because it would only have taken five minutes to do the whole job. Mr. Dowd told the Government that he knows absolutely nothing else about this whole matter.

Justice Stephens: Of course these rulings on motions to strike do not tear anything physically out of the record; it is still there and if the disposition of this matter turns differently, after we hear Dowd, and you still want to contend that this matter is properly before the Court, you may move to reinstate it. We are not going to 6218 prejudice you that way by any technical ruling.

I am afraid I still haven't been able to make clear to you—perhaps I am clumsy in my way of expressing rulings—that we haven't yet made any ruling that Exhibit 233 is a privileged document as to which the privilege has been waived.

I will go back to the simple illustration of a dying declaration. If the Government, in a criminal case, where the identity of the assailant was the only issue, in a murder case, put on a dying declaration, it must prove two things to get it into evidence: First, that it was uttered by a person in extremis; and second, that that person was consciously in fear of death.

If the Government puts that on, that doesn't let the exhibit in evidence; we still have to hear the evidence of the defendant to the contrary of that if he wants to offer any. We have to hear that before the court rules as to the admissibility of the declaration.

The same thing is true here. You put on Mr. Redfield to establish a waiver with respect to Exhibit 233, and Redfield testified to facts which, we think, if true, would constitute a waiver. But we haven't ruled that the privilege has been waived. All we have ruled is that the Government has made, on its side of that voir dire hearing, a showing prima facie that it was waived. But we have still got to hear Dowd so that we can have all the evidence, on that preliminary question of fact bearing upon the admissibility of this exhibit, before us, before we decide whether or not it is admissible in the sense of being a privileged document in respect of which the privilege has been waived.

We still, then, have a second question as to whether it was the act of Certain-teed, rather than the mere act of Redfield. That is the inquiry into which we have been going now.

Now to prove that it was the act of Certain-teed you have to prove it by competent evidence, not by evidence which is privileged and therefore excludable. If you wanted to examine Dowd first, if you had wanted to examine Dowd first, you might, perhaps, have gotten to the position where you could argue what you are now arguing, and we will give you an opportunity still to argue it if you want to get Dowd back here and go into this matter.

It does seem to all of us that an extraordinary amount of time is being taken over this one little exhibit which, after all, when you read it, is merely the expression of a view on the part of one man as to how the Speer patent might have been used, either for trading purposes or to bolster up an alleged price-fixing system. We have spent—I spent during one recess two or three days, and my clerk a good deal more, in looking up the law on this subject and writing a memorandum, and we have had a week's time in Court about it. Is it really that important?

Mr. Steffen: It has become a sort of issue, your Honor, and it is very difficult to drop it on either side. I think it is important. It is one item in favor of the Government.

Justice Stephens: We don't want to foreclose you from exercising all necessary zeal in the promotion of your case.

Mr. Steffen: I will agree that it has taken a lot of time.

Mr. Adams: I will be glad to agree, if the Government wants to withdraw it.

Justice Stephens: We will let the rulings thus far made, stand, with the understanding that if we go any further with this inquiry, if Dowd is to be produced, and you wish to make a further contention that these conversations with Redfield and Chaffee are to be or ought to be considered by the Court on the connection question, we will hear you. We want to be fair and open on the matter.

Do you need this witness any further?

Mr. Steffen: He hasn't been examined by Mr. Bromley.

Justice Stephens: Do you wish to examine him further?

Mr. Bromley: Yes, your Honor.

Cross Examination

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. May Exhibit 641 be handed to the witness?

(Government Exhibit 641 was handed to the witness.)

Justice Stephens: The Court ought to have made 6221 clear, of course, that it is not striking out of the record the testimony of this witness as to the nature and asserted usefulness of this Speer patented board, on the issue of subterfuge. That is in the record and I assume that is what you are cross-examining about now, isn't it, Mr. Bromley?

Mr. Bromley: Yes, your Honor.

Mr. Steffen: May I make just one point, and that is that I would like to have an opportunity to be heard on the McAfee case at some time, which I think goes to the basis of your Honor's ruling in the first instance on the matter of privilege, on the examination on voir dire.

Justice Stephens: I will be glad to hear you. I wrote it and I ought to know something about it, but if you feel you can tell me something more, I will be glad to hear it. The McAfee case I don't think supports your contention.

That case, of course, involved a peculiar local offshoot of the preliminary question of fact rule. There is a rule with respect to confessions in this jurisdiction, and in some other jurisdictions, that despite the fact that the judge in a criminal trial, with a jury, must pass upon the preliminary question of the voluntariness of the confession, and if he rules adversely, that is the end of it, nevertheless, if he does not rule adversely but rules that there is some evidence which indicates that the confession is voluntary, he must re-submit that to the jury.

6222 But that is a very peculiar rule in relation to confessions, and my original memorandum—which I should be glad to submit to counsel if they wish to see it—which I submitted to my fellow judges on the question of Exhibit 233, goes very thoroughly into the question of this preliminary determination by judges of questions of fact which are incidental or prerequisite to the admissibility of evidence.

I don't think there is any substantial authority to the effect that that preliminary question must not be determined in non-jury cases finally and absolutely by the judges, before the evidence is admitted.

I even went so far, because I am an Appellate Court judge rather than a Trial Court judge, usually, to consult one of the experienced judges in this jurisdiction as to the practice here, and the practice I am following in this situation is exactly the practice which is followed in this jurisdiction in trials, both civil and criminal, with respect to preliminary questions of fact. I don't think the McAfee case varies that at all.

Mr. Steffen: May I refer to your Honor's language at page 24 of the McAfee case?

Justice Stephens: Yes.

Mr. Steffen: It says: "It is asserted by the defendants under the evidence that the written confession was so clearly not voluntary that it was the duty of the Trial 6223 Judge to exclude it. Under the law and practice in this jurisdiction the duty of a trial judge in respect of an offered confession is, first, on voir dire to determine whether or not there is evidence upon which the confession might be held to be voluntary. If he concludes there is no such evidence, then he must exclude the confession from the case. But if, in his view, there is evidence from which it might be held to be voluntary, he must admit it in evidence and submit it to the jury under proper instructions."

Now our contention, as applied to this case, is that that is strong authority. We have put on evidence, we have put on Mr. Redfield's testimony that there was a waiver, and using your Honor's language, if there is evidence from which it might be found that there was a waiver, then the court is dutybound to submit the question to the jury, or in this case to the Court, upon a final hearing, after the defendants, of course, have had their opportunity.

It seems to me, therefore, that even though Mr. Dowd is called, that the real question is—was there any evidence, as you state there, from which a court might find that there was a waiver? And if there was evidence, then that is the end of it so far as the matter of getting the item in evidence is concerned; and it is then for the defendant at the proper time to put in countervailing evidence, if he has it.

Justice Stephens: You are now rearguing a mat-6224 ter on which we spent several days and ruled finally. That case does not mean that, Mr. Steffen.

The practice in this jurisdiction, both before and since the McAfee case, is clearly this: When a confession is offered in evidence the Government puts on witnesses to try to prove that it was voluntary, that it was not made under threats or promises or duress or force of any sort. But before the court rules on the question of whether or not that can go to the jury, it also hears from the defendant on voir dire on that subject, in the absence of the jury. And having heard both sides, it then rules whether or not there is evidence which ought to be submitted to the jury on the subject.

If it finds that it is not voluntary, in the view of the court, it doesn't submit it to the jury at all. If it finds that there is some evidence that the jury ought to consider, that it is voluntary, it submits both sides of that again to the jury, it is repeated in the presence of the jury.

I don't see how I can make it any clearer than I have.

Justice Jackson: I might tell you, Mr. Steffen, that the only reason that I agree with such a ruling is that I understand that it is the practice in this jurisdiction; it is contrary to any practice I have ever had in other jurisdictions.

Justice Stephens: I can show you authority in Wigmore, Mr. Steffen, and authority in the Federal cases.

We will take the afternoon recess.

6225 (Whereupon a five minute recess was taken, after which the trial was resumed as follows:)

6226 Justice Stephens: Proceed, Mr. Bromley.

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. Annexed to the sample, which is Government's Exhibit No. 641, is some advertising material, isn't there, Mr. Speer? A. Yes sir.

Q. Did you put that on there? A. I did, yes, just for a wrapper. It was a wrapper and also signified that this was the Bestwall Edge.

Q. That descriptive matter describes the edge of which Exhibit No. 641 is a sample, does it? A. It doesn't describe it, because this advertisement wasn't made for this particular edge. This is just a wrapper to show the sample.

Mr. Bromley: May I see the exhibit, please?

(Government's Exhibit No. 641 was handed to Mr. Bromley by the Marshal.)

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. Then do you say that all these pictures and all this printing that forms a part of this exhibit has no relationship to the sample at all? A. I would say that it has not.

Q. That it has not? A. It has not.

Q. In other words, you just picked it up as a scrap of paper to wrap this little thing up in, did you?

6227 A. Well, it is simply to show it. That is the way we were showing samples, and it is a similar product, except that it is an improved product, and we just used the wrapper. It was there and we used it for convenience.

Q. When did you put it on, for the purpose of this case, or for the purpose of something else? A. A long time ago, I imagine it was about ten or twelve years ago, maybe more.

Q. I notice that this paper bears a date. Did you know that? A. Well, it must have been around 1930 or 1931, I should say.

Q. Would it surprise you to know that the paper is dated in 1923? A. Well, I don't think it would make any difference.

Q. No. A. No.

Q. Well, then, this descriptive matter of the Bestwall Edge is descriptive matter which described the type of edge the Beaver Company was making at some time prior to 1923, isn't that right? A. That is correct.

Q. And that edge, described in this piece of paper, is similar to the edge in the little sample, isn't it? A. I would say so, except it has some new features.

6228 Q. But so far as the folding of the paper is concerned, the Bestwall Edge described in the paper wrapper is substantially similar to the way you folded the paper in the little sample, isn't it? A. Yes, it is similar, but not the same.

Q. I say, it is similar. A. Yes.

Q. And it is quite similar, isn't it? A. I don't know.

Q. Well, there is a picture of the way the paper is folded in the Bestwall Edge described in this advertising, or descriptive material attached to Exhibit 641, is there not? A. Yes.

Q. And that picture is the one in a circle which appears at the top of the inside of the advertising matter? A. That is correct.

Q. And if one looks at that picture, that will show the way the paper was folded in the Bestwall board, won't it? A. Exactly.

Q. And then, by looking at the sample, one can judge whether the Bestwall type of folded edge was or was not similar or identical to this little sample, isn't that right? A. Yes, that is right.

Q. Now you knew, didn't you, that this type of edge described in this piece of paper, which you called the 6229 Bestwall Edge, was adjudicated by a Federal Court to be an infringement of USG's Utzman Patent? A. Yes, I did know about it.

Q. And the Court handed down that decision in 1925—do you remember that? A. Well, I don't know about the date.

Q. Don't you remember that the Beaver Company was enjoined by USG from making this type of edge? A Yes, I do.

Q. And don't you remember that the Beaver Company then took a license and agreed to pay a large sum of money to USG as damages for its infringement? A. I know all about it.

Q. And then, when you went with the Certain-teed Company, Certain-teed was making open-edge board, wasn't it? A. Well, no, not at that time, a little later, I think, after United States Gypsum won, I think in the first court—I don't know what date it was. But I came there in December, 1919, with Beaver Board, and then they were still making the Bestwall Edge. I don't think you had any decision yet.

Q. No, that is right, we didn't get our decision, as I thought you told me a minute ago, 1925. That is right, isn't it? A. Well, I couldn't remember the date, but I think you are correct about that.

6230 Q. Well, don't you remember, as a matter of fact, that the lower court's decision enjoining this Bestwall Edge, was back in 1921 or 1922? A. I know that Bestwall lost the case. I wasn't in the plasterboard department, but I happened to know it.

Q. You knew that Bestwall lost the case sometime in the 1920's, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, after you went into the employment of the Certain-teed Company, didn't you find out that Certain-teed was making an open-edge board? A. Well, I really don't remember whether it was just at that time, or a little previous.

Q. I am talking now about 1928, Mr. Speer. Do you understand that? A. I think you are correct about it, as I think about it.

Q. Well, at the time you first started to work for Certain-teed, it was making an open-edge board, was it not? A. I don't know what Certain-teed was making then. I was interested in the Beaver Products then. That was a new company, Beaver Products.

Q. Weren't you working for the Certain-teed Company? A. No, I was working for the Beaver Products, not for Certain-teed.

6231 Q. When did you start to work for Certain-teed? A. When they took over the old Beaver Products Company.

Q. That was in 1928, wasn't it? A. That is correct.

Q. Now, I say, as of that time, don't you know that Certain-teed was making an open-edge board? A. Well, I think they were, that is all I can say, that I think they were, just now. I can't remember exactly at what time, but my impression is that they did make an open-edge board, and also I know for sure that they did make an open-edge board at some time, but I couldn't tell you the exact year.

Q. When you told us that you said to Mr. Whittemore, or to some other official or officials of Certain-teed, that this closed-edge board of yours was better than anything that Certain-teed had, you meant, didn't you, that it was better because Certain-teed was making an open-edge board, and that this was a better product? A. No, I meant that I considered—it was my personal opinion—that this new edge was superior even to the Utzman edge. I am not talking about open-edge. Anybody could see that any of the closed edges were superior to the open-edge.

Q. By the way, you knew that at this very time, when you first started to work for Certain-teed, that Certain-teed had a lawsuit against it, brought by USG?

6232 A. Yes sir.

Q. Is this Exhibit 641 representative of a closed-edge type of board? A. Yes sir.

Q. Well, now, it is partially open, isn't it? A. Well, I don't know. This is just one of the samples. There are all varieties, probably 10 different varieties, that you can make with those edges. I just happened to find that one a short time ago.

Q. Just direct your attention to Exhibit 641. That is clearly a semi-open-edge board, isn't it? A. Well, I don't know.

(Government's Exhibit 641 was handed to the witness.)

The Witness: In this sample it is a semi-open-edge board, the way it is made.

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. In other words, in this sample, the plaster core is exposed for a distance near the edge of perhaps a quarter of an inch, wouldn't you say? A. Yes.

Q. And where I have put those two little pencil marks, the material on the face of the board, near the edge, is plaster, and not paper, isn't it? A. Yes sir.

6233 Mr. Bromley: I would like to show that to the Court, if I may. It can be seen this way (indicating). The paper stops there and goes down, and this paper comes up here and stops here, and this is exposed plaster, and all across here is exposed plaster (indicating).

(Exhibit No. 641 was handed up for the examination of the Court and then returned to Mr. Bromley.)

By Mr. Bromley:

Q. When the Bestwall Company was enjoined, it went to the manufacture of an open-edge board, didn't it? A. Well, I couldn't say positively whether the Bestwall Company went to open-edge. Yes, thinking it over, it did go to open-edge, and I recall the shape of it, too.

Mr. Bromley: That is all.

Justice Stephens: Is there any further cross-examination by other defendants' counsel?

(No response.)

Justice Stephens: Is there any redirect examination?

Mr. Steffen: I have one or two questions.

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Steffen:

Q. I want to ask one or two questions, Mr. Speer, in regard to Government's Exhibit No. 641. Could you tell us whether the shape of the edge which you make according to your patent, could vary from the one shown here as 6234 Government's Exhibit 641? A. Yes, it does, because it is an absolutely closed edge.

Q. What other shapes were possible? A. Well, beveled-edge, and a square-edge, and various way of inserting this reinforced edge.

Mr. Steffen: I think that is all, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: May this witness be excused?

Mr. Bromley: I would like to have the record show that I reserve the right, if I may, to have this witness recalled in the event his testimony is reinstated, for further cross-examination with respect to it.

Justice Stephens: The record may show that. You may have that right reserved.

Justice Jackson: Are you through with this witness?

Mr. Steffen: I am through, your Honor.

Mr. Bromley: I am through with him, yes sir.

Justice Stephens: You may be excused now, Mr. Speer. Thank you for coming here and helping us.

(The witness was excused.)

Justice Stephens: Do you have any other witnesses today?

Mr. Steffen: We have none, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: Shall we return to the exhibits that we were discussing last night?

Mr. Knuff: Yes, that is as good a matter as any 6235 to take up.

Justice Stephens: Judge Garrett called my attention to the fact, for your information, gentlemen, that on Tuesday, the 25th of April, it will be necessary to recess this Court on account of the fact that a conference is to be had in the Court of Customs and Tax Appeals, which Judge Jackson and Judge Garrett will have to attend.

Will your case, do you think, be likely to be closed by that time?

Mr. Knuff: I would say yes, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: Do you have any other witnesses?

Mr. Knuff: Mr. Adams, I presume, will want to call Mr. Dowd; and Mr. Bromley, I presume, will want to recall Mr. Speer. For the present I can't think of any other witnesses that we intend to call.

Justice Jackson: There are no more new witnesses, outside of Dowd?

Mr. Knuff: Mr. Redfield, of course—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) Judge Jackson said, "new witnesses".

Mr. Knuff: No new witnesses, that is correct.

Justice Stephens: It may be that it would be desirable for the convenience of some out-of-town counsel, if your case isn't closed at that time, that they not come back until

Wednesday of that week, so that you gentlemen who come from out of town and go home for the weekend, won't 6236 have to come back for just a day. However, we can leave that until later.

Mr. Knuff: That will give us all of next week, anyway.

Justice Stephens: Yes, we will be here all next week, without interruption.

Mr. Knuff: I would say that we ought to be able to finish up in good shape by then.

Justice Stephens: How many of these exhibits have you?

Mr. Knuff: Somewhere in the neighborhood of 150. I am not saying that facetiously.

Justice Stephens: If we have to go into the relevancy and materiality of each one of them, I don't know whether we can do that in a week, or not.

Mr. Adams: Might I make a statement?

Justice Stephens: Yes.

Mr. Adams: There is a point in the record here which I would like to clear up, where I inadvertently made a statement which I, in checking it over last night, found I was wrong about.

Justice Stephens: In yesterday's record?

Mr. Adams: Yes, your Honor, and it appears on page 6395, at the bottom of the page. Judge Jackson asked me about these exhibits, and asked if I had copies of them, and I said "No."

Justice Stephens: That is at line 25 of page 6395, and the first line on page 6396.

Mr. Adams: That is right.

6237 I was confused about that. I don't have copies of the subsequent exhibits, the statements which were said to be attached to subsequent exhibits in the request to produce, but I find that, so far as I can ascertain, we do have copies of some of these documents, and I didn't want to mislead the Court in that respect. I was confused as to the two.

Justice Stephens: Very well, thank you for making that statement.

Mr. Adams: Secondly, I would like to say that the Presiding Judge made the suggestion, to which I agreed, that I ought to go to such limits as I could to avoid the necessity of putting in these exhibits through witnesses. I wanted to tell your Honors that so far as I can see, these are royalty reports—I am referring to Exhibits 624 to 640, inclusive—and as I say, we have admitted that Mr. Krug signed them.

We do not have the data or the records upon which we can verify these reports, and we have no way of knowing whether the reports state the facts, or whether they don't state the facts. That is one reason that I couldn't make any admission about them.

However, since they appear to be royalty reports, although I can't say that they report correctly the figures, I am willing to stipulate with the Government that during the months mentioned in the reports, we did make reports, and that we reported and paid all the royalties due for 6238 the patented board manufactured by us under the licenses.

That would seem to me, perhaps, to avoid the necessity of putting in these documents. I am certainly glad to stipulate that we did pay all the royalties that were due. I am, unfortunately, unable to tell the Court whether these statements are accurate or not.

Justice Stephens: Thank you, Mr. Adams.

Now, perhaps I ought to make an announcement. The discussion last night was, in a sense, academic. I was looking for light and counsel were attempting to shed it. I have given some thought to the matter, and I am not yet going to make a ruling because there is nothing before the Court to clear up the discussion which we were indulging in last night.

I would like to tell you what my tentative views are, gentlemen, with respect to the use of Rule 36 in respect to the problem before us last night.

In the first place, I think Rule 36 does contemplate an extra-judicial proceeding, except where it is sought to compel the assessment of costs, and attorneys' fees because of a failure to make an admission which ought to have been made.

I think that part of the Rule which permits counsel for the plaintiff—to use plaintiff as an example—to ask for an admission of fact, is an attempt to save time in this sense, that if the opposite party, the defendant, can 6239 admit a fact, then that fact is taken out of issue, it needn't be proved or disproved on either side.

It seems to me that where counsel for the defendant, as in this instance, have admitted the correctness of a signature, like Mr. Krug's signature, and have also admitted, as you did, Mr. Adams, with respect to this series of exhibits, that they were the authentic reports of the company—you said that at one place in the record—so that they would be binding upon the company, then we would be past the question of identification and past the question of connection.

It seems to me that if an admission merely admitted the signature on the document as being the signature of the person purporting to sign it, that the Government would still have to show that he had authority to sign the statement.

But where you admit that it is the authentic act of the company, then the Government is saved that difficulty.

Now, with respect to this matter of cross-examination, which is more critical, I was, I think, under a misapprehension last night as to how the Government intends to use these documents, and I may still not be fully informed. But after thinking the matter over and reading the colloquy, last night, it seems to me that the Government must be intending to use these documents as admissions. Is that right?

Mr. Knuff: We are using these documents as evidence from which the Court can infer an admission. We 6240 have asked the defendants to admit that the facts contained therein are true.

Justice Stephens: But suppose the defendant doesn't make the admission?

Mr. Knuff: Then we are going to offer these as evidence —or rather, we are going to offer an accredited document in evidence, so that the Court can infer from that accredited document that the facts therein stated are true.

Justice Stephens: You are getting around the hearsay rule, aren't you, on the theory that the documents constitute an admission of a party?

Mr. Knuff: Evidence of an admission of a party.

Justice Stephens: They are admissions of the party.

Mr. Knuff: That is right.

Justice Stephens: That, I think, raises a point that I ought to have commented upon last night, in which I perhaps may have misled counsel as to the attitude of the Presiding Judge, although I think it is clear on the whole of my statement that I was speaking tentatively only.

We have had dozens of documents in evidence here, gentlemen for the defendants, which have come in without cross-examination. If they come in as an admission, that is to say, if John Doe is called to the witness stand to identify the signature of Richard Roe, on a document, and if it is shown that that signature is the signature of an of-6241 ficer of a party, then the statement in the document thus identified can come in, notwithstanding the hearsay rule, because it is an admission, provided it contains relevant and material matter.

Of course all matter not under oath and subject to cross-examination in the courtroom, is hearsay, and is excluded unless it comes within an exception. But a properly identified admission is an exception, and therefore an admission can come in without cross-examination.

So I don't think the Government is bound to call the witnesses under those circumstances.

That is just by way of preliminary statement of my own views. We will reach these points for actual ruling when you get into offering documents.

Mr. Adams: I think, your Honor, that I should perhaps in justice to my own position, say that I did not intend anything that I ever said to be taken as an admission that, as your Honor indicated—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) I didn't say you said that, Mr. Adams. I said you said that these documents signed by Mr. Krug were authentic, and I will show you where you said it.

Mr. Adams: I am looking at this page 6386. I made a statement about them there, beginning on line 4. May that perhaps be what your Honor is thinking about?

6242 Justice Stephens: No, it occurred at some other place.

Justice Garrett: Did you say page 6386?

Mr. Adams: Yes, line 4, and from there on, Judge Garrett, I talked about it.

Justice Stephens: At the bottom of page 6392 you say:

"As far as I am concerned, I have gone just as far as I can by admitting that these are—there is no question about it—authentic documents on our part."

Mr. Adams: Well, I certainly would like the opportunity to state to the Court that I did not intend that statement to go beyond the admissions which I have made on the record, and filed with this Court, and if I did say that, I did not intend to say so, I did not intend to say that I admitted that these were authentic documents of Certain-teed, because I do not so admit, as I have tried to make clear earlier this afternoon.

In that connection, I draw your Honor's attention to the fact that I was requested to admit, in the requests for admissions:

"1. The following statements, photostatic copies of which are attached hereto, made a part hereof, and marked Exhibits 1 through 34, were signed on behalf of Certain-teed Products Corporation by Geo. P. Krug."

I admit that, and that is all I admit.

The same is true with respect to 2 and 3, and 6243 those are the later documents in this group.

But that position that I take would be subject to any ruling that your Honors might want to make, upon the legal effect of that admission, of course.

But I certainly do not want to be taken as having said, and would like to withdraw any intimation, that I did admit that these were authentic documents.

Justice Stephens: Well, I don't know whether there is much difference between the use of the word "authentic" and the use of the words "signed on behalf of the company", although perhaps you might still wish to get in between those two phrases for the purpose of showing, or contending, that Krug was not the kind of an auditor who had it within the scope of his authority to make this statement, or rather to sign this statement.

For the Government to use these documents as admissions, of course, they must be signed by someone who had authority to speak for the company. But if you say that he signed them on behalf of the company, I should think that you had gone quite a ways in that direction.

Mr. Adams: I certainly have, your Honor. That was why I said yesterday that I had gone just as far as I could. Later on in their requests, however, they want to know whether the statements contained therein are true.

Mr. Bromley: On the subject of your Honor's
6244 remarks, with respect to admissions, I take it that these documents which are being received as admissions, are binding only on the parties who made them, and in that connection their status will not hereafter be changed, even if it be determined that prima facie proof of conspiracy, outside of declarations of co-conspirators, has been adduced by the Government.

I want to advert to that now, because as I understand the law, if the Government offered here in evidence now a signed confession of violation of the Sherman Act by the president of the Certain-teed Company, that document would be admissible as an admission against Certain-teed, and as against Certain-teed only. It would never become transformed into any kind of a declaration which would be binding on anybody else, because it was not made in furtherance of any conspiracy. Therefore, under the procedure which the Government is now adopting, these things are coming in, not as declarations of co-conspirafors, subject to connection later, and subject to being held to be binding on everybody if proof of a conspiracy appears in the record, but they are being offered merely as admissions, and they are binding only against the party who made them, and that status will never be changed by anything that could happen in this case.

Mr. Knuff: I don't want to be bound by what Mr. Bromley says is his understanding. I think that some of 6245 the documents that are going to be introduced will be introduced purely and solely for the purpose of admission. On the other hand, I feel quite sure—I can't place the one, two, three or half dozen out of the hundred and fifty that we are going to use as declarations,—but I feel quite sure that in this list of exhibits there are some that will be used as declarations of a co-conspirator.

In fact, I would think that even those exhibits that are used as an admission, if they are in furtherance of a conspiracy, or descriptive of it, or show the operator of the conspiracy, then, after the conspiracy has been shown aliunde, then those admissions would likewise be considered declarations.

For the most part I think Mr. Bromley is correct, but I just want to enter a caveat—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) I have never been able to see any difference, myself, gentlemen, so far as the hearsay rule is concerned, between what you call an admission and what you call a declaration.

The only reason either such thing can come in against the hearsay rule is that it is a statement by a party, or by someone authorized to speak for a party, on a relevant and material subject. That gets it around the hearsay rule.

If it is a pure admission, like a confession—to use Mr. Bromley's example, which has been discussed here and which we discussed earlier in the case, it doesn't, as 6246 such, bind anybody but the person who makes the admission, even if a conspiracy is proved aliunde.

As I stated the other day, it is hard for me to imagine how it could occur, but I suppose, theoretically, if a confession could be shown to have furthered the conspiracy, that it might be binding upon others under the general doctrine of substantive law.

When we pass the hearsay rule, we get into questions of substantive law. The only reasons that declarations of co-conspirators can be binding upon other co-conspirators, is because under the substantive law once a conspiracy is shown, the acts and words of all the conspirators, of each of the conspirators, are binding upon all the others, if in execution and furtherance of the conspiracy, but not otherwise.

Now, Mr. Bromley, do you contend that a confession, if a conspiracy were shown aliunde the confession, and if it were also shown that the confession furthered or executed or tended to execute the conspiracy, wouldn't be binding just because it is called a confession, upon others? I don't see how that could happen, but if it did happen, I should think it would be binding, Mr. Bromley.

Mr. Bromley: I agree with your Honor, but the point I am trying to make, I think, is somewhat different. Mr. Adams comes in here and makes an admission, let us assume, as to the authenticity of a document, which, if 6247 received on the basis of that admission, is binding on him. But it certainly is not binding on me. I have made no concession about authenticity. There has been no witness on the stand to establish its authenticity.

Justice Stephens: I think you are perfectly right about that.

Mr. Bromley: Therefore, I say that the document can never change its status as to me. It is an admission by Certain-teed, but it can never become an act of mine or an act of any other defendant, whether there be proof of conspiracy or not.

Justice Stephens: I agree with you that far, fully. I don't think that there can be any dispute about it, and I think Mr. Knuff has just stated that he agreed with you that far. All I have added is that—

Mr. Knuff: (Interposing) I don't believe I quite agree with that. I don't believe I want to be bound by that statement, your Honor. I don't believe that I would agree with Mr. Bromley that far.

Justice Stephens: How can the admission of one party be binding upon another party unless it is in furtherance or execution of the conspiracy? The only time the admission of one man can ever bind another man is when they are acting in concert and the admission is shown to further or execute the conspiracy.

6248 Mr. Knuff: That is right. Now if the attorney for one of these parties comes in and says, "My client did what appears on this paper," and if what appears on this paper is in furtherance or descriptive of the conspiracy, then, when the conspiracy is shown, the act of that one defendant, on the basis of partnership, makes his act the act of all partners.

Justice Stephens: No, I can't go that far with you, because you used the word "descriptive".

Mr. Knuff: I think I can show you some authority on that. I would be glad to be prepared as to that on Monday.

Justice Stephens: Well, I think we have established the law by thorough argument, although I will be glad to hear from you and see any authorities that you may want to present. But I think the law is absolutely elementary, is it not, that the declarations of an alleged co-conspirator cannot be binding upon any other co-conspirator unless you have two things: First, that a conspiracy is shown aliunde the declaration; and second, that the declaration is shown to be in furtherance of or execution of the conspiracy.

Now that we have ruled a dozen times in this case, and it has been the guiding principle of substantive law throughout the case.

Now an admission is a form of declaration. How you could make an admission of one co-conspirator binding upon others, and get it in—it can get in past the hearsay rule because it is an admission, and therefore you don't have to have cross-examination—but when it gets in, it gets in only as the act of the particular person making the admission, the statement of that particular person making the admission. Whether you call it an admission or a declaration, I don't see how, as a matter of substantive law, it can bind anybody but the person making it, unless it is shown to be in furtherance of or in execution of a conspiracy.

Mr. Knuff: Maybe we are not far apart at all; maybe it is just our understanding of what is meant by "in furtherance of the conspiracy".

Justice Stephens: I think that is the difficulty, and the thing I am fearful you are going to have trouble with, with respect to these exhibits, is that they simply seem to be descriptions of royalty payments and things of that sort. Maybe they further a conspiracy and maybe not, I don't know. I suppose that is your point, isn't it, Mr. Bromley?

Mr. Bromley: Well, that is a point, but I want to make it plain that, following what your Honor has just said about the binding effect of an admission, the admission which can never bind me is Adams' admission here in the courtroom that this document is an authentic document. Now, that admission cannot be said to be in furtherance of any conspiracy. Nothing that Adams admits in this courtroom can, by any possibility, be said ever to 6250 be in furtherance of any conspiracy, and therefore Mr. Adams is not my agent, and his admissions as to authenticity do not bind me and do not make these documents or their contents binding upon me in any sense whatsoever at any time, no matter what other evidence is or is not in the record.

I think that is the fundamental misconception which Mr. Knuff has in his mind. I think he thinks he can put these things in on Mr. Adams' admission of authenticity, and then somehow they will get to be binding on me. That is not so. They are not binding on me unless there is a witness on the stand whom I have an opportunity to cross-examine, and there is established here some evidence of their authenticity as against me. Mr. Adams' admission in this courtroom is not binding upon me and never can be, because it is not in furtherance of a conspiracy and cannot become a declaration of a co-conspirator of mine.

Justice Stephens: I don't see any escape from that.

Mr. Knuff: I think I understand Mr. Bromley's position. However, I don't agree with it.

Justice Stephens: Very well, we have to meet that when you get a question to be ruled on.

Announce the recess.

(Whereupon a recess was taken at 4:05 o'clock p. m. until 10:00 o'clock a. m., April 17, 1944.)

6251 IN THE

DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Civil Action No. 8017

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

Plaintiff,

v.

UNITED STATES GYPSUM COMPANY; NATIONAL GYPSUM COMPANY; CERTAIN-TEED PRODUCTS CORPORATION; THE CELOTEX CORPORATION; EBSARY GYPSUM COMPANY, INC.; NEWARK PLASTER COMPANY; SAMUEL M. GLOYD, doing business under the name of TEXAS CEMENT PLASTER COMPANY; SEWELL L. AVERY; OLIVER M. KNODE; MELVIN H. BAKER; BROR H. DAHLBERG; HENRY J. HARTLEY; FREDERICK G. EBSARY; and FREDERICK TOMKINS,

Defendants.

Seventh Floor,
Internal Revenue Building,
Washington, D. C.,
Monday, April 17, 1944.

The above-entitled cause came on for further hearing at 10:00 o'clock a. m., pursuant to adjournment, before Honorable Harold M. Stephens, Honorable Finis J. Garrett, and Honorable Joseph R. Jackson, sitting as the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

APPEARANCES:

(Same as heretofore noted.)

6257 You may proceed.

Mr. Knuff: May it please the Court, at this time I would like to offer in evidence Government's Exhibits 624 to 640, inclusive.

Justice Stephens: That is that first series of purported royalty reports, isn't it?

Mr. Knuff: That is right, Your Honor.

Justice Stephens: As to which Mr. Adams has admitted that Mr. Krug signed the documents on behalf of Certain-teed?

Mr. Knuff: That is correct.

Justice Stephens: Is there any objection to those?

Mr. Keber: Yes, Your Honor.

Justice Stephens: Are you here representing Mr. Adams?

Mr. Keber: Yes. Mr. Adams was unavoidably required to go to Chicago on very important business, and I am here to attempt to take up the slack to some extent.

Justice Stephens: What is your name?

Mr. Keber: Peter Keber. My presence was announced in the early part of the case, but I haven't been here much since.

Justice Stephens: You are a member of Mr.
6258 Adams' office, are you?

Mr. Keber: Yes, I am a member of Mr. Adams' office.

Justice Stephens: Very well. I am sorry we haven't become better acquainted with you.

Mr. Keber: I object to so much of these exhibits as have been offered, on the ground that the exhibits, on the face of them, contain pencilled notations. The time and the place and the person who put these pencilled notations upon the exhibits has not been shown and has not been admitted, and therefore the exhibits, it seems to me, on their face are not in the form in which they were signed by Mr. Krug.

As I understand it, the only admission before the Court is Mr. Krug's signature on behalf of Certain-teed.

I also call the Court's attention to the fact that Exhibits 628 through 640 refer to the license agreement dated May 22, 1929. Now I believe that Mr. Knuff, from reading some of the back testimony, has stipulated that he is not relying upon any of the matters contained in the capital letters at the top of these exhibits. If that stipulation is agreed to, then that part of my objection is withdrawn. Otherwise, we take the position that the agreement is misstated, that is, as being as of May 22, 1929, in Exhibits 628 to 640, inclusive.

Mr. Knuff: I don't think Mr. Keber quite has the Government's position there. We are relying on the 6259 matters that are contained at the top of the page in capital letters. I feel that from Exhibit 628 through 640, there has possibly been a mistake in so far as Certain-teed is concerned, because at that time Certain-teed may take the position that they were operating under the license of October, 1929. But we definitely are relying upon the matters that are contained at the top of the page.

Justice Jackson: Did that supersede the May license?

Mr. Knuff: Yes, Your Honor.

Justice Jackson: You are relying upon what is on the top of those pages to show that it is a statement of Certain-teed concerning the royalties paid under their license?

Mr. Knuff: That is right.

Justice Jackson: But so far as the date is concerned, you concede that it was not under the May license, but under the October license which superseded that agreement?

Mr. Knuff: That is right.

Justice Jackson: That is what I understood your position to be.

Justice Stephens: We should think, in any event, that since Mr. Krug signed these on behalf of the company, the objection would probably go to the weight of these exhibits. In other words, isn't there a prima facie identification and correctness established by the admission? If you wanted to dispute the date, wouldn't you be obliged 6260 to do that yourself by evidence?

Mr. Keber: Well, I had assumed, if the Court pleases, from the statement Mr. Knuff made, as I interpreted it in reading the testimony, that he would have no objection at least to that amendment, that is, that this was an obvious mistake, it seemed to be an obvious mistake.

Justice Jackson: Just with respect to the date?

Mr. Keber: Yes.

Justice Stephens: So far as that is concerned, you do concede that, do you not, Mr. Knuff?

Mr. Knuff: I think it was an obvious mistake.

Justice Stephens: That may be shown in the record. I should think that would protect you, Mr. Keber.

Mr. Knuff: Now in so far as the pencilled notations that are on the exhibit, we, of course, are not offering the pencilled notations as a part of the exhibits, because I believe they were put on by USG.

Justice Stephens: And if the exhibits are received, they will be received without reference to the pencilled notations.

Mr. Knuff: Yes.

Justice Stephens: Is there any objection as to relevancy or materiality?

Mr. Bromley: The other defendants, may it please the Court, object to them as incompetent and as not 6261 binding on them; and also as immaterial and irrelevant. I do not understand the purpose for which all of these exhibits are offered in such detail. If it be to prove merely that the licensees paid royalties under the license agreements, I will stipulate that all the licensees paid all the royalties that were due to USG called for by all the agreements. I will even stipulate that up to the time this suit was started, we received about $4,000,000 in royalties from them; and after the suit was started we have received several hundred thousand dollars a year from them in royalties, up to the present time.

I don't see the purpose of burdening the record with all of this detail. I thought that was admitted by the pleadings, anyway, and was not an issue in the case.

Justice Stephens: The Court was going to inquire, Mr. Knuff, in considering these over the weekend, whether that all couldn't be stipulated to. There seems to be no dispute in the case that royalties in large sums were paid.

Mr. Knuff: Well, again, Mr. Bromley assumes to be able to read what is in our mind. That isn't the purpose of the offer at all.

Justice Jackson: Why don't you tell us what it is?

Mr. Knuff: The purpose of the offer, if Your Honor please, appears on the second line, "Gypsum Wall Board—Seconds—62,284 Square Ft." That is offered for the purpose of showing that at the time of this report, Gyp-6262 sum Wall Board—Seconds were sold; that subsequently, seconds were taken off the market. That is under paragraph 45(b) of the complaint.

Justice Stephens: You mean that you wish to indicate by other exhibits that seconds later came off the market?

Mr. Knuff: The exhibits themselves will indicate that, Your Honor.

Justice Stephens: I mean by "other exhibits", exhibits other than 624. You are talking about 624 now?

Mr. Knuff: That is right, from 624 down to 637, inclusive, they show that Certain-teed was selling seconds. Then beginning with 638, the place in there "Gypsum Wallboard Seconds", there are dashes to indicate blanks.

Now that won't appear in exactly that form in the rest of them, but it will appear that later on they didn't even bother reporting seconds.

Now in Government's Exhibit 404, which is the price bulletin issued by USG on the 23rd day of May, 1929, USG fixed the price for seconds. Whether or not seconds were sold, of course, wouldn't be evidenced by the fact that they fixed the price for them. These exhibits show that seconds were sold at that time.

Justice Stephens: Well, the Court was under the impression, from the colloquy between counsel at the last session, that you were offering these to prove payment of royalties. If you have some different purpose, we 6263 will, of course, consider that.

It would seem to me that perhaps even the point you now refer to, to-wit the report on the selling of seconds up to a certain date, and the non-selling or non-reporting of selling of seconds after that date, might also be made the subject of stipulation. There are apparently about 150 of these exhibits, and it would take a very great deal of time to get them all in evidence, if we have to inspect each one of them. Also, if the case ever reaches the state of appeal, the expense of dealing with them, of course, is to be considered, on both sides. However, we don't wish to handicap your case. If you feel you must have them in, we will be glad to hear you about it.

Could the sale of these seconds, and non-sale of seconds, be stipulated to by Certain-teed?

Mr. Keber: Will you pardon me a moment?

Justice Stephens: Yes, certainly.

Mr. Keber: I am afraid, if the Court please, that my knowledge of that situation doesn't encompass that.

Justice Jackson: Couldn't you very well agree that so far as Exhibits 624 to 637, inclusive, are concerned, they show on their faces that gypsum wallboard seconds were sold in certain quantities, at an average price, and the amount; and that from Exhibit 638 to 640, there has been no manufacture or sale of gypsum board seconds?
6264 That is what the thing really says, on its face. I wonder if that couldn't be done?

Justice Stephens: Well, if I may interpolate and add to my colleague's statement, I don't think that would be sufficient as a stipulation, or perhaps I should say that would be over-sufficient. If the stipulation is as to what the exhibits show, we might as well have the exhibits in. We have got to have some stipulation as to what the volumes and dates of seconds sales were, irrespective of the exhibits, if you are going to get along without the exhibits.

Mr. Keber: Does the Court have in mind a stipulation with respect specifically to gypsum wallboard seconds?

Justice Stephens: Yes, that is right.

Mr. Keber: And the volume that was reported as sold, of those seconds?

Justice Jackson: Appearing on these exhibits.

Justice Stephens: We don't wish to over-urge you, Mr. Keber, to make a stipulation. What we are suggesting is that since you have already admitted Mr. Krug signed these documents in behalf of Certain-teed, it would appear that they are presumptively correct. That being true, the Court and counsel on both sides of the case could be saved the difficulty of dealing with such a volume of material if, instead of having the exhibits introduced in evidence, you would look at each one of them and then stipulate as to the amounts of wallboard seconds on which royal-6265 ties were paid up to a given date; and then stipulate that after that date there were no royalties paid on gypsum wallboard seconds.

But you might want to take some time to do that, and we don't want to over-urge you. You must stand on such rights as you feel you must, in your clients' protection.

Mr. Keber: If the Court please, I would like to take advantage of your suggestion that I have an opportunity to consider that more fully, particularly in view of the fact that I think we have taken the position, and are going to take the position, that we will not stipulate; that is, we have taken the position in our response to the request for admissions that we would not admit the facts stated in these exhibits, and that our admission merely went to the fact that Mr. Krug signed them on behalf of Certain-teed.

Justice Stephens: Let me look at your admission just a moment—

Mr. Knuff: (Interposing) In so far as Nos. 1, 2 and 3 of our requests for admissions are concerned, there are no answers by Certain-teed. Therefore, what is contained in requests 1, 2 and 3 are admitted under Rule 36.

Justice Stephens: We don't seem to have in our files the answers of Certain-teed.

Mr. Knuff: I will let Your Honor have my copy.

(Copy of Certain-teed's answers handed to the Court.)

6266 Justice Stephens: Where is the request for admissions against Certain-teed? Have you got that here, Mr. Cantor?

(Request for admissions against Certain-teed handed to the Court.)

Justice Stephens: That raises another issue, Mr. Knuff. We have now read the answer of Certain-teed. It appears that Certain-teed has not ignored your request for admissions of fact, but has taken the position that—for example on page 2, paragraph (e), of its answer—"that said Request for Admissions is improper and not authorized by the Rules of Civil Procedure in that it does not specifically set forth the relevant matters of fact on which admissions of truth are sought, and the Defendant is therefore unable to make any admissions or denials with respect thereto."

Mr. Adams submitted, you will remember, and I called to your attention the Kraus case—I haven't the full citation in mind—which seemed to hold under the new Rules, Rule 36, that a plaintiff or party asking its opponent for admissions can not submit a blanket exhibit with the request that all matters stated therein be admitted, but must itself pick out, rather than burden the opponent with selecting, the items of fact which it is requested be admitted.

What do you say about that?

Mr. Knuff: We are not down to that yet, Your Honor, because it is not before the Court.

6267 Justice Stephens: I thought you just presented it to me, and that is why I was going over all this material, because you said they had not answered concerning admissions of fact.

Mr. Knuff: The only thing that is before the Court, Your Honor, is the matter contained in paragraph 1 of our request, and that is that:

"The following statements, photostatic copies of which are attached hereto, made a part hereof, and marked Exhibits 1 through 34, were signed on behalf of Certain-teed Products Corporation by Geo. P. Krug."

And that is all I am offering these exhibits for at this time.

Justice Stephens: That is very true, Mr. Knuff, but the Court also has some responsibility in the situation, and the Court was trying to arrange to save your time and the Court's time and the defendants' time by getting a stipulation on the items of fact, and Mr. Keber has just answered that he couldn't stipulate because they were unwilling to admit the facts in view of the form of your request for admissions, and you replied to that that they hadn't made any answer at all concerning the matters of fact. Therefore, I thought I was put to the duty of examining into those matters.

But if we can't stipulate, I suppose we can't. So let's go ahead. You may offer these under your Paragraph 1.

6268 Is there any objection as to relevancy or competency, other than what has already been uttered by Mr. Bromley? Do any of the other defendants make any objection?

Mr. Johnston: I assume those inure to the benefit of all defendants other than Certain-teed?

Justice Stephens: Yes.

Mr. Keber: May I ask the Court a question? I assume, from Mr. Johnston's remark, that the objection as to relevancy inures to my benefit as counsel for Certain-teed, Certain-teed's benefit, as well, in spite of the fact that I didn't specifically make that objection?

Justice Stephens: You may make an objection yourself as to relevancy and materiality, if you wish to.

Mr. Keber: I object to the documents on the ground that they are not relevant or material for the reasons stated by Mr. Bromley in that connection.

Justice Stephens: We think if the documents are offered for the purpose stated by Mr. Knuff, to prove payment of royalties on certain amounts of seconds up to a given date, and thereafter the non-payment of royalties on seconds, that since they have been admitted to have been signed by George P. Krug in behalf of Certain-teed, they would be admissible as admissions of Certain-teed on that subject, and that they are relevant and material under the pleadings.

So those objections are overruled, and the exhibits
6269 are received for the limited purpose stated.

(The documents referred to, marked as Government's Exhibits Nos. 624 to 640, inclusive, were received in evidence for the limited purpose stated.)

Mr. Knuff: If Your Honor will indulge me now, I will mark these. I couldn't mark them before I came into Court because I didn't know what other exhibits, if any, were going to be used.

Justice Stephens: Certainly.

Mr. Bromley: That means that these exhibits are received as binding only against Certain-teed, then, if Your Honor please?

Justice Stephens: Are you offering them as against other defendants?

Mr. Knuff: No, these are just an admission as to Certain-teed, Your Honor.

Justice Stephens: That may be understood.

We will take a five-minute recess.

(Thereupon, a short recess was taken, after which the trial was resumed as follows:)

6270 Mr. Knuff: May it please the Court, I would like at this time to have marked for identification Government's Exhibits 646 to 692, inclusive.

(The documents referred to were marked Government's Exhibits Nos. 646 to 692, inclusive, for identification.)

Mr. Knuff: Exhibit No. 646 is a two-page statement, signed by George Krug, George P. Krug, and sworn to on the 16th day of March, 1931.

Exhibit No. 647 for identification, comprising two pages, is a statement signed by George P. Krug and sworn to on the 15th of April, 1931.

Exhibit No. 648 comprises two pages, and is a statement signed by George P. Krug on behalf of Certain-teed, and sworn to on the 13th day of May, 1931.

Exhibit No. 649 comprises two pages, and is a statement signed on behalf of Certain-teed by George P. Krug, and was sworn to on the 2nd day of July, 1931.

Government's Exhibit 650 for identification comprises three pages, and was signed on behalf of Certain-teed by George P. Krug, and was sworn to on the 19th day of August, 1931.

Exhibit 651 comprises two pages, was signed by George P. Krug on behalf of Certain-teed, and was sworn to 6271 the 21st day of September, 1931.

Exhibit 652 for identification comprises two pages, and was signed on behalf of Certain-teed by George P. Krug, and was sworn to on the 19th day of October, 1931.

Exhibit 653 comprises two pages, was signed by George P. Krug on behalf of Certain-teed, and was sworn to on the 19th day of November, 1931.

Exhibit 654 comprises two pages, was signed by George P. Krug on behalf of Certain-teed, and was sworn to on the 17th of February, 1932.

Exhibit 655 comprises two pages, was signed on behalf of Certain-teed by George P. Krug, and was sworn to on the 20th day of April, 1932.

Exhibit 656 comprises two pages, was signed on behalf of Certain-teed by George P. Krug, and was sworn to on the 20th day of May, 1932.

Exhibit 657 comprises two pages, was signed on behalf of Certain-teed by George P. Krug, and was sworn to on the 17th day of June, 1932.

Exhibit 658 comprises two pages, was signed by George P. Krug on behalf of Certain-teed, and was sworn to on the 25th day of July, 1932.

Exhibit 659 comprises two pages, was signed on behalf of Certain-teed by George P. Krug, and was sworn to on the 15th day of August, 1932.

6272 Exhibit 660 comprises two pages, was signed by George P. Krug on behalf of Certain-teed, and was sworn to on the 20th of September, 1932.

Exhibit 661 comprises two pages, was signed by George P. Krug on behalf of Certain-teed, and was sworn to on the 20th of October, 1932.

Exhibit 662 comprises two pages, was signed by George P. Krug on behalf of Certain-teed, and was sworn to on the 17th day of November, 1932.

Exhibit 663 consists of one page, which was signed on behalf of Certain-teed by E. H. Laney, and was sworn to on the 15th day of December, 1930.

Exhibit 664 comprises two pages, and was signed on behalf of Certain-teed by E. H. Laney, being sworn to on the 21st day of January, 1931.

Exhibit 665 comprises two pages, was signed on behalf of Certain-teed by E. H. Laney, and was sworn to on the 20th day of July, 1931.

Exhibit 666 comprises two pages, was signed by E. H. Laney on behalf of Certain-teed, and was sworn to on the 15th day of December, 1931.

Exhibit 667 comprises two pages, was signed by E. H. Laney on behalf of Certain-teed, and was sworn to on the 20th of January, 1932.

Exhibit 668 comprises two pages, was signed by 6273 E. H. Laney on behalf of Certain-teed, and was sworn to on the 20th day of December, 1932.

Exhibit 669 comprises three pages, was signed on behalf of Certain-teed by Benjamin B. Watson, and was sworn to on the 19th of January, 1933.

Justice Stephens: Do those two pages follow Watson's affidavit?

Mr. Knuff: Yes, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: What is the number of his affidavit?

Mr. Knuff: 669. That is a three-page exhibit.

Exhibit 670 for identification is the four-page exhibit, and was signed by Benjamin B. Watson on behalf of Certain-teed, and was sworn to on the 20th of February, 1933.

Exhibit 671 is a four-page exhibit, was signed by Benjamin B. Watson on behalf of Certain-teed Products Corporation, and was sworn to on the 20th day of March, 1933.

Exhibit 672 is a four-page exhibit, was signed on behalf of Certain-teed by Benjamin B. Watson, and was sworn to on the 21st of April, 1933.

Exhibit 673 is a three-page exhibit, signed by Benjamin B. Watson on behalf of Certain-teed, and was sworn to on the 22nd day of May, 1933.

Exhibit 674 is a four-page exhibit, was signed by Benjamin B. Watson on behalf of Certain-teed, and was sworn to on the 20th day of June, 1933.

6274 Exhibit 675 is a four-page exhibit, was signed by Benjamin B. Watson on behalf of Certain-teed, and was sworn to on the 20th day of July, 1933.

Exhibit 676 is a four-page exhibit, was signed on behalf of Certain-teed by Benjamin B. Watson, and was sworn to on the 17th day of August, 1933.

Justice Jackson: There is no signature there under that jurat.

Mr. Knuff: I beg your pardon, it was intended to be sworn to.

Justice Stephens: It is signed, at any rate.

Mr. Knuff: It was intended to be sworn to on the 17th of August, 1933, but the signature to the jurat is missing. I think that will identify the document, however.

Justice Stephens: How many pages are there in that exhibit?

Mr. Knuff: Four pages, your Honor.

Exhibit 676 is a four-page exhibit, signed on behalf of Certain-teed by Benjamin B. Watson, and sworn to the 19th day of September, 1933.

Exhibit 678 is a four-page exhibit, was signed on behalf of Certain-teed by Benjamin B. Watson, and was sworn to on the 19th day of October, 1933.

Exhibit 679 is a four-page exhibit, was signed on behalf of Certain-teed by Benjamin B. Watson, and was 6275 sworn to on the 20th day of November, 1933.

Exhibit 680 is a four-page exhibit, was signed on behalf of Certain-teed by Benjamin B. Watson, and was sworn to on the 18th day of December, 1933.

Exhibit 681 is a four-page exhibit, was signed on behalf of Certain-teed by Benjamin B. Watson, and was sworn to the 17th day of January, 1934.

Exhibit No. 682 is a four-page exhibit, was signed on behalf of Certain-teed by Benjamin B. Watson, and was sworn to on the 19th day of February, 1934.

Exhibit No. 683 is a four-page exhibit, was signed on behalf of Certain-teed by Benjamin B. Watson, and was sworn to on the 19th day of March, 1934.

Exhibit No. 684 is a four-page exhibit, was signed on behalf of Certain-teed by Benjamin B. Watson, and was sworn to the 19th day of April, 1934.

Exhibit No. 685 is a four-page exhibit, was signed on behalf of Certain-teed by Benjamin B. Watson, and was sworn to the 18th day of May, 1934.

Exhibit No. 686 is a four-page exhibit, was signed on behalf of Certain-teed by Benjamin B. Watson, and was sworn to the 19th day of June, 1934.

Exhibit No. 687 is a four-page exhibit, was signed by Benjamin B. Watson on behalf of Certain-teed Products Corporation, and was sworn to the 26th day of July, 1934.

6276 Exhibit No. 688 is a four-page exhibit, was signed on behalf of Certain-teed by Benjamin B. Watson, and was sworn to the 20th day of August, 1934.

Exhibit 689 is a four-page exhibit, was signed on behalf of Certain-teed by Benjamin B. Watson, and was sworn to the 20th day of September, 1934.

Exhibit No. 690 is a four-page exhibit, signed on behalf of Certain-teed by Benjamin B. Watson, and was sworn to the 19th day of October, 1934.

Exhibit No. 691 is a four-page exhibit, was signed on behalf of Certain-teed by Benjamin B. Watson, and was sworn to the 19th day of November, 1934.

Exhibit No. 692 is a four-page exhibit, was signed on behalf of Certain-teed by Benjamin B. Watson, and was sworn to the 19th day of December, 1934.

Exhibits 646 to 692, inclusive, are offered in evidence as statements signed on behalf of Certain-teed by the respective parties named.

Certain-teed was requested to admit that the statements were signed by the parties mentioned therein, and Certain-teed, in their answer, has failed to deny that they were signed by the respective persons whose signatures appear thereon.

We now offer in evidence Government's Exhibits Nos. 646 to 692, inclusive.

Justice Stephens: What is the state of the record,
6277 or the state of the admissions, Mr. Keber? Do you admit or do you not, that these last-named exhibits were signed by the persons who purported to sign them?

Mr. Keber: If the Court pleases, we admit that Exhibits 646 through 662, inclusive, were signed by Krug on behalf of Certain-teed, as requested.

Now so much for that feature of it, we admitted that—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) Well, let's dispose of those first, or do you want to make a further statement before disposing of those?

Mr. Keber: Yes, I do, your Honor.

With respect to those exhibits, counsel for the Government was describing them, and I understood him to say that they consisted of various numbers of pages, most of them two pages, and as I noted from his remarks, that down to Exhibit 662 they were all exhibits of more than one page.

Now, in the requests for admissions, we received but one page of each exhibit. Attached to the request was but one page of each exhibit. The pages that were attached to the request contained a statement thereon, of which this is typical, "Less Sales Purchased per attached."

The statement presumably that is referred to on that page, and by that sentence, is not and was not incorporated in the request for admissions, and therefore whatever response we made to that request obviously did not 6278 cover any such attached paper.

Justice Stephens: That covers all the exhibits, 646 to 662, inclusive?

Mr. Keber: Yes, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: As I understand it, you admitted that Krug signed on behalf of Certain-teed, so far as the page actually submitted to you was concerned, which was the first page of each exhibit, but nothing else?

Mr. Keber: Exactly, sir.

Mr. Knuff: There are no signatures on the other pages.

Mr. Keber: Well, I don't know what the other pages are, I haven't seen them.

Justice Stephens: But the admission would seem not to include, Mr. Knuff, anything except what was actually submitted to the defendants, unless you can take time to look them over and agree that they are the proper attachments, Mr. Keber.

Mr. Knuff: You see, if your Honor pleases, let's take Exhibit No. 646 that you have in front of you there, and look at the heading, "Less Purchased per Statement attached—5,774" square feet.

Now, turn to the second page of the exhibit and you will see, "December Shipments From Gypsum, Ohio", and under "Square Feet", the third figure is 5,774, which is exactly what was on the first sheet, and which is a breakdown 6279 of what was on the first sheet.

Justice Stephens: That is what it purports to be. Why didn't you serve all those papers upon the defendants at once, so that we wouldn't have to go through and identify each one of them?

Mr. Knuff: The reason we didn't serve these other papers on the defendants is because if we had had Mr. Krug on the witness stand, we would have shown Mr. Krug this document, and asked him if that was his signature, and he would have said "Yes", and that would have authenticated the document.

Justice Stephens: It would have, if Mr. Krug had been handed all the pages of it.

Mr. Knuff: We would have asked him if that was his signature, and that would have authenticated the document.

Justice Stephens: It would have authenticated the document as submitted to Mr. Krug, but if all you submitted to Mr. Krug was just the first page, it wouldn't have carried with it an admission of the correctness of the second page or any pages following the first.

Mr. Knuff: We are not asking the defendant to admit the correctness of it at all. They say that they won't. They say that they have no knowledge of whether it is correct or not. Now the correctness of these exhibits is not in issue at this time.

Justice Stephens: But the identification of them
6280 is in issue, Mr. Knuff, and you have got an admission which identifies the first pages, but not the others, unless they are circumstantially connected in some manner.

Mr. Knuff: I think they are circumstantially connected, when you take a look at this, "Less Purchased per Statement attached—5,774," and then take a look at the second page, and you will see the same thing, "5,774".

Justice Stephens: Why aren't you offering them for their correctness? Aren't you relying on them as showing the amount of "seconds" sold up to one period, and not sold thereafter?

Mr. Knuff: We have asked Mr. Adams to admit the correctness of them. Mr. Adams, in his answer, says that he can neither admit nor deny the correctness of them. So therefore, we can't say that this is a binding admission upon Certain-teed.

Justice Stephens: That isn't my question, I am sorry. When we had this last series of exhibits offered, just preceding Exhibit 646, you offered them in evidence not merely as identified, but also as binding for their contents, upon Certain-teed, to the extent that they showed the amount of "seconds" up to a particular date, and no sales of "seconds" thereafter. Aren't you offering these also for a similar purpose?

Mr. Knuff: That is correct, your Honor, we are.

Justice Stephens: But you haven't yet identified, 6281 except as you assert circumstantially, anything but the first pages of these exhibits. I don't see why you didn't submit the other pages to the defendants, and they would undoubtedly have made an admission on them also, if they could have seen them, as to identification.

However, it hasn't been done, and now we have got to meet the situation as it is. Perhaps, Mr. Keber, you can take these, take an hour's time, and go through them and see if they are sufficiently connected, as far as second, third and fourth pages are concerned, where the exhibit has more than one page, so that you can admit that Mr. Krug's signature covered execution of those pages as well as the first page, on behalf of Certain-teed.

Do you think you could do that? Otherwise, the Court has got to go through every one of those second, third and fourth pages, have it demonstrated that they are sufficiently circumstantially connected with the first page so that it may be said that Mr. Krug's signature and the admission of his signature, identifies the second, third or fourth pages, as the case may be.

Mr. Keber: I don't mean to be captious—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) I don't suggest that you are.

Mr. Keber: My difficulty is that apparently these papers have been separated. Now the suggestion with 6282 respect to circumstantial connection is based upon the fact that certain figures happen to coincide. Where the papers came from which are now sought to be connected with each exhibit that was included in the request for admissions, it does not appear. Once they were separated, I have no way of ascertaining whether those papers that may be submitted to me at this time were the papers originally connected with these or not. They may have been connected in such a way at one time that the figures did coincide—or they might not have coincided at the time they were attached.

I have no way of ascertaining those facts, and the mere fact, therefore, that they now coincide, or may coincide, as presented to me, does not indicate that they did or did not at the time they were originally connected together, if they were.

Mr. Knuff: Answering Mr. Keber's statement as to where we obtained these exhibits, we obtained them from the United States Gypsum Company. They are the royalty reports that were furnished United States Gypsum Company by Certain-teed. The papers, as we received them from the United States Gypsum Company, were connected. For the purpose of eliminating the photostating bill, and for getting out rather hurriedly the requests for admissions, the second, and possibly third and fourth pages, were not included.

They came from the United States Gypsum Com-
6283 pany's files, and were separated by us over in our office. They were in the form when we received them that they now appear, with possibly letters attached to them, letters of transmittal, that USG presumably had attached to them.

Justice Stephens: With respect to that type of exhibit—we are talking about Exhibits 646 to 662 now—

Justice Jackson: (Interposing) We are talking about Exhibit No. 646 at the present time, I thought.

Justice Stephens: Yes, but the objections are to Exhibits 646 to 662, inclusive, which appear over the signature of Krug, and they are all exhibits where Krug's signature and the jurat appear on the first page, are they not, unlike the Watson exhibits, where the affidavit precedes the succeeding pages?

Mr. Knuff: That is right.

Justice Stephens: So we haven't reached the Watson exhibits yet?

Mr. Knuff: That is right.

Justice Stephens: Well, it is my view, and I think the view of my colleagues, that you haven't identified yet, through the admissions or otherwise, anything except the first page which Mr. Krug signed and swore to.

Justice Jackson: What difference does it make to you, anyway? That second page is merely a breakdown, if it is, of the 5,774 square feet in the case of Exhibit No.
6284 646, is it not?

Mr. Knuff: That is right, it is a breakdown of it.

Justice Stephens: Well, are there any other objections? I suppose you make the objection also to the handwritten material on these exhibits?

Mr. Keber: Exactly, if the Court please.

Justice Stephens: They are not offered by the Government, as I understand it?

Mr. Knuff: That is right.

Mr. Keber: The objection also carries through, on these exhibits, with respect to the date of the license agreement.

Justice Stephens: Well, the Government will probably concede that it does not rely on that particular date as stated in the title.

Mr. Knuff: That is correct.

Mr. Bromley: The other defendants object to them as incompetent because not binding on any of them, and also as immaterial and irrelevant. I do not understand again the purpose of the offer of this mass of exhibits. What does it show? I again offer to stipulate that royalties were paid by licensees.

Justice Stephens: What is the purpose of this series of exhibits? I am now talking about Exhibits 646 to 692 inclusive.

Mr. Knuff: In addition to showing that there were 6285 no sales of "seconds", this series of exhibits also shows that Certain-teed was purchasing board from outside sources. Now we tried to get Mr. Adams to stipulate that there were considerable quantities of board that were purchased, and he would not so stipulate. Then we made an effort to find out how much board they did purchase, and found these royalty statements, and if your Honors will notice, you can start in with Exhibit 647, and in that month they purchased 5,880 square feet of board; Exhibit 648 indicates that they purchased during that month, 157,625 square feet of board; Exhibit 649 indicates that during that month they purchased 162,656 square feet of board; Exhibit 650 indicates that during that month they purchased 316,573 square feet of board; Exhibit 651 indicates that they purchased 167,520 square feet of board—and so on down through, from 651 to 692 they show, by months, sizeable purchases of board from sources other than Certain-teed.

Mr. Keber: May I be heard on that?

Justice Stephens: Yes.

Mr. Keber: I had understood that Mr. Knuff's offer had to do principally with the fact that it would show, that these reports would show no "seconds" reported as having been sold.

Justice Stephens: That was what he said with respect to the series of exhibits just introduced before this 6286 group. This series which we are now discussing is introduced, as I understand it, to prove by way of admission on the part of Certain-teed, two things: First, that "seconds" were sold up to some date and not sold thereafter; and second, to prove that board was purchased by Certain-teed from outside sources.

Mr. Keber: Well, with respect to the latter offer, it seems to me that since the exhibits are being offered specifically for the purpose of showing that Certain-teed purchased board from the outside, that that, on the face of it, shows that the exhibits that are being offered are incomplete, because on the face of these exhibits it says, for instance, "Less Purchased per Statement attached"—and since the emphasis is now being laid on the figure that is there shown, it seems to me that the reception of the exhibits without the attached statement makes it an incomplete exhibit, and therefore subject to exclusion under the rule of incompleteness.

Mr. Knuff: The statement that is attached makes it complete.

Justice Stephens: Yes, but the statement that is attached isn't identified.

Mr. Knuff: It is circumstantially identified, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: We have ruled that it is not identified.

Mr. Knuff: Well, even on the first page where it
6287 says, "Less Purchased per Statement attached", and when the second or third sheets go in, or what not, the exhibits show on their face that Certain-teed was buying board.

Justice Stephens: Is there any dispute about the fact that Certain-teed was buying board, as distinguished from the amounts which it bought? How about that, Mr. Keber?

Mr. Keber: I take it that Certain-teed was buying board.

Mr. Bromley: That has already been admitted in the record, that Certain-teed bought board.

Justice Stephens: Well, unless you are relying upon them to prove how much board was bought, I should think then, Mr. Knuff, that you wouldn't need these additional sheets to the exhibits, on that aspect. You could offer them to prove when "seconds" were sold and not sold, but so far as the purchased board was concerned, if it can be conceded by counsel for Certain-teed that board was purchased by Certain-teed between certain dates, is the amount material?

Mr. Knuff: Well, this is the first time it was conceded. We asked them to stipulate, and they wouldn't stipulate before, we asked them to stipulate that there were substantial amounts purchased, and they wouldn't so stipulate.

We asked Mr. Whittemore on the witness stand, and he said that they purchased somewhere between a couple of dollars' worth and $500, or something like that. Mr. Adams said that he did not have the invoices, and could not 6288 find out how much board they were buying.

Justice Stephens: Well, we realize that there hasn't been a stipulation on the subject before, and therefore it was proper and necessary, indeed, for the Government to go forward with this proof; but unhappily, we all three feel that the attached statements cannot be said to be circumstantially identified because they have obviously been separated and there are so many opportunities for error, so that if you are relying upon them for exact figures, you would be obliged to identify them more satisfactorily.

But if you can now stipulate, if you think you can fairly do that, Mr. Keber, that board in substantial quantities was purchased between given dates, I should think that would take that problem of identifying those attachments out of the case, so that the exhibits could come in, so far as the first pages are concerned, on the other item of "seconds."

The Government wouldn't need to offer the attached pages because they would relate only to the amounts of purchased board, and you wouldn't be prejudiced by their not being attached, because the first pages do show that board was purchased, in something that appears to be in the nature of grand totals. I suppose the attached statements are a breakdown of types of sizes of board?

Mr. Knuff: Between board and lath.

For instance, on Exhibit 646, the second page
6289 shows that there was 3,640 square feet of 3/8-inch board, purchased, and 2,134 square feet of lath, purchased, making a total of 5,574 square feet, which is the figure appearing on the first page, 5,574 square feet of purchased board.

Justice Jackson: Well, you have it on the first page anyway?

Mr. Knuff: Yes.

Justice Stephens: Well, Mr. Keber's objection was that it is incomplete if the Government relies upon exact figures.

It begins to look, however, Mr. Keber, as if it was a little something of a tempest in a teapot. The first page, which Mr. Krug swore to on behalf of the company, does show the purchase of board, in round numbers, and apparently what the breakdown does is to split it up as between board and lath, and sizes.

However, Mr. Adams is not here, and we don't want to press you to make any stipulation that you feel you ought not make. Will Mr. Adams be back tomorrow?

Mr. Keber: I am afraid not, sir. I expect he will be in Chicago for the balance of the week.

Justice Stephens: Maybe we will have to send out a United States Marshal and get him back here. We have got to try this case, and we have got to have someone here who can act for the defendants.

6290 Mr. Keber: I submit, if the Court pleases, that I will be glad to act for the defendants in this connection.

Justice Stephens: I realize that, and I made that comment only to indicate that if you don't feel authorized to make a stipulation, we don't want to press you to make one. That wouldn't be fair to you or to your client. But if you are not in a position either to speak or not speak for the company, then we must have someone here who can.

Justice Jackson: You are assuming that responsibility, aren't you?

Mr. Keber: So far as I am able to, I am assuming that, yes.

But the Court asked me to stipulate that Certain-teed bought "substantial amounts"—I think that was the expression the Court used.

Justice Stephens: That is right.

Mr. Keber: Now on Exhibit No. 646, taking the amount that appears there, 5,774 square feet, I shouldn't suppose that that would be "substantial".

Justice Jackson: As compared to what?

Mr. Keber: 4,579,000 square feet.

Justice Stephens: Of what?

Mr. Keber: Of board manufactured during that month.

Justice Stephens: When I used the words, "substantial amount", I was thinking in terms of what all the 6291 exhibits showed, and not suggesting that you use the term "substantial" in contradistinction to manufactured board. However, you are not bound to accept the Court's terms. That was just a suggestion in the hope of getting a stipulation.

Mr. Keber: I will be willing to stipulate that Certain-teed bought board; I think that that is as far as I can go.

Justice Stephens: Very well.

Mr. Knuff: You see, your Honor, these are not approximate figures, they are not round figures, they are actual figures, and the second page is a breakdown of what appears on the first page.

Take, for instance, Exhibit—

Justice Jackson: (Interposing) It seems to me that since the first page is admittedly signed by Krug, and the first page, referring to Exhibit No. 646, contains the figure of 5,774 square feet of board that was purchased—that figure is on there, and Krug signed it, and I should think that it ought to come in for what it is worth; whether it is broken down or not, it is purchased board of some kind.

Mr. Knuff: That is the way I feel, and the only reason we put the second and third pages in here was to meet Mr. Bromley's "complete evidence" rule. We felt that the first page carried with it everything that we wanted in there.

6292 Justice Stephens: Well, that is very true, but unhappily you didn't serve the second, third and fourth pages, respectively, for purposes of identification.

Can you admit this? Apparently the Government does not rely upon the second, third and fourth pages of these exhibits, Mr. Keber, for anything except to satisfy the "complete evidence" rule, and it isn't relying upon them as far as the breakdown aspect is concerned. Would it be safe for you to stipulate that the amounts shown on the first pages of these exhibits represent amounts purchased by Certain-teed, amounts of board purchased?

In other words, can you satisfy yourself by examining these second, third and fourth pages, that they do represent, after all, only a breakdown which does not affect the validity of the gross figures stated on the first page?

Justice Jackson: You don't admit the correctness of those figures at all, do you, in your admissions?

Mr. Keber: I don't deny it either, I don't know. The extent of our admission, sir, was that Mr. Krug signed these on behalf of Certain-teed. Now with respect to the facts, we took a definite position. We discussed that here this morning in connection with the other exhibits. We could not admit the facts.

Now it seems to me that what I am being requested to do by Government counsel is to stipulate facts that we 6293 have already indicated we are unable to admit.

Justice Stephens: Of course, while it is true that you don't admit these facts stated on the first page, or any other pages of these exhibits, the Government can, if it identifies the first page, and if the first page may come in evidence within the "complete evidence" rule, offer these as an admission on your part. Then, if you doubt the correctness of it, you have to offer evidence to the contrary at the proper time.

But the problem we are up against here is that unless you are willing to stipulate as to the correctness of the figures, which you apparently cannot do, and unless you are willing to admit that Krug's signature identifies the second, third and fourth pages of the exhibits as well as the first, there just isn't any proper legal identification of the second, third and fourth pages; and if you continue to insist that the first page ought not to come in unless explained by the second, third and fourth pages, then, there being no identification of the second, third and fourth pages, we are presented with a problem of admissibility that I don't see any way around.

The Government, however, Mr. Keber, is not relying upon the second, third and fourth pages. Do you really think that you need to insist upon the second, third and fourth pages being put in evidence as explanatory of the first page?

6294 If you do not, and if we could agree that the second, third and fourth pages need not be admitted, and that the first page can come in merely under your admission that the secretary, Krug, signed on behalf of the company, then we are over our problem.

Mr. Keber: Perhaps I can illustrate my difficulty, sir, by saying that as far as I know, from what we have been served with, and from what we have seen, the statements that are attached to these first pages may or may not coincide; they may or may not have coincided originally. I am faced with the possibility that a figure, shown on the first page, may not coincide with the figure shown on the second page. I just don't know.

Under those circumstances, I am reluctant to undertake the responsibility of conceding something that I don't know about. In other words, if the second page was different from the first page at the time it was submitted, then some question might exist as to the propriety of the figure on the first page, or its correctness.

Justice Jackson: As a matter of fact, Mr. Knuff, is there any such discrepancy as has been suggested?

Mr. Knuff: None.

Justice Jackson: And defendants could take advantage of it if there were such a discrepancy?

Mr. Knuff: Certainly.

6295 Justice Stephens: Could you take time, if we were to take a little extra recess this noon, to go through these second, third and fourth pages, and see if they are sufficiently related to the first page so that you wouldn't need to insist upon your objection?

I, myself, am convinced, and I think Judge Garrett agrees with me--I am not sure whether Judge Jackson does or not—that there isn't any legal identification of the second, third and fourth pages of Exhibits 646 to 662, which we are now talking about, with respect to this particular objection. Therefore, they cannot come in. And since the first page refers to them, and is incomplete without the following pages, I don't see how the first page can come in.

Justice Jackson: Well, my stand is this. If those pages, other than the first page, are identified by figures, common sense would seem to indicate that they ought to go right with the first page. If there is a discrepancy, however, or if they are not intelligible by comparison with the first page, of course they are not admissible. But otherwise I would think they are.

Justice Stephens: Well, the problem of determining whether or not they are apparently related by identification is a problem of going through every one of these exhibits very carefully, and it is something that we can hardly 6296 undertake to do on the bench. It would take hours.

Mr. Keber: I would be glad to undertake that during the lunch hour, without committing myself as to what position I will take after having examined them.

Justice Jackson: I understood from Mr. Knuff's statement that that had been done and that there are no discrepancies. Have you examined all of them, Mr. Knuff?

Mr. Knuff: Every one of them, yes sir.

Justice Stephens: That may be true, but we cannot compel the defendant to accept Mr. Knuff's statement, because no matter how much he might rely on his good faith and good judgment, there might be mistakes.

Suppose we take the noon recess now, and take it until two o'clock.

It seems to us that there isn't much likelihood of harm being done here, Mr. Keber, if the second, third and fourth pages come in. Nevertheless, you are entitled to rely upon the rules, and I think your contentions are correct with respect to them.

So we will take a recess now until two o'clock.

(Whereupon a recess was taken at 12:00 o'clock until 2:00 o'clock p.m.)

6297 AFTERNOON SESSION

(The trial was resumed at 2:00 o'clock p. m., pursuant to recess.)

Justice Stephens: Gentlemen, have we arrived at any possible stipulation?

Mr. Keber: If the Court pleases, I have spent the noon recess, as suggested by the Court, in working on this matter.

With reference to a remark that was made this morning, I might clarify our situation somewhat by saying that with respect to these second sheets, I am advised that the company, Certain-teed Products Corporation, did not have any copies in its possession of the second sheets; and therefore, even had they been sent to us along with a request for admissions, we would probably not have been in a position to ascertain their genuineness and have thus been able to agree to that fact.

Before I turn to the next subject, I also want to make one further remark with respect to a statement made by Mr. Knuff this morning. He said, as I recollect it, that Mr. Adams had been requested, on several occasions, to stipulate with respect to the amount of board that was purchased, and that he had taken the position that it was an insignificant amount—I am just trying substantially to repeat Mr. Knuff's statement—and that Mr. Whittemore had testified that it was a very slight amount, an in-6298 finitesimal amount. I wasn't sure, although I believed at the time—I wanted to check it up—I was quite certain that Mr. Adams had referred, when he said it was an infinitesimal amount, to metallized board; and that Mr. Whittemore's testimony in that connection, which I have looked at through the noon recess, was specific with respect to metallized lath.

Therefore, I wouldn't like to acquiesce in the statement made by Mr. Knuff with respect to what Mr. Adams was or was not prepared to stipulate.

Now with that preamble, I think we are now in a position to make the following stipulation. The stipulation is this:

On condition that Exhibits 646 through 668—that, I think, encompasses all the Krug and Laney first pages—I will begin again: On condition that Exhibits 646 through 668 be withdrawn, Certain-teed is prepared to stipulate that the first page of the monthly reports, bearing the signature of Krug and/or Laney, covering the months of February through May, 1931, inclusive; July through October, 1931, inclusive; January, 1932; March through October, 1932, inclusive; November through December, 1930, inclusive; June, 1931; November through December, 1931, inclusive; and November, 1932, contain figures indicating that the amounts of gypsum board (wallboard and lath) manufactured and sold by Certain-teed, and the amounts purchased and sold by Certain-teed, were as follows:

6299 February, 1931: Amount manufactured and sold—4,573,776 square feet; amount purchased and sold—5,774 square feet—

Justice Jackson: (Interposing) That is for the month of February?

Mr. Keber: Yes, sir, 1931.

Justice Jackson: That is as it appears on Exhibit 646, isn't it?

Mr. Keber: That is correct.

March, 1931: amount manufactured and sold—5,707,167 square feet; amount purchased and sold—5,880 square feet.

Justice Jackson: The total as I read it here is 5,713,047. Of course, it isn't very material. I was just wondering if I had the right sheet.

Mr. Keber: Do you want to pursue it?

Justice Jackson: That is on Exhibit 647?

Mr. Keber: Yes, sir.

Justice Garrett: I understand that the stipulation you are proposing to enter into is based upon the withdrawal of these exhibits?

Mr. Keber: Exactly.

Justice Garrett: So that it is not necessary for us to fool with these figures that are here and compare them, is it?

Mr. Keber: No, except to check the accuracy of 6300 my stipulation with the statements made on these exhibits.

Justice Stephens: You can check that for yourself. You go ahead and read your stipulation into the record.

Mr. Keber: Answering Judge Jackson, the figure we took was the last balance figure.

Justice Jackson: I see. I didn't see that before.

Justice Stephens: Go ahead with your stipulation.

Mr. Keber: April, 1931: amount manufactured and sold—6,156,704 square feet; amount purchased and sold—157,625 square feet.

May, 1931: amount manufactured and sold—5,788,816 square feet; amount purchased and sold—162,656 square feet.

July, 1931: amount manufactured and sold—3,926,140 square feet; amount purchased and sold—316,573 square feet.

August, 1931: amount manufactured and sold—3,315,176 square feet; amount purchased and sold—167,520 square feet.

September, 1931: amount manufactured and sold—3,716,888 square feet; amount purchased and sold—125,956 square feet.

October, 1931: amount manufactured and sold—3,954,984 square feet; amount purchased and sold—247,445 square feet.

January, 1932: amount manufactured and sold—3,424,854 square feet; amount purchased and sold—194,549 square feet.

March, 1932: amount manufactured and sold—3,126,535 square feet; amount purchased and sold—170,627 square feet.

April, 1932: amount manufactured and sold—4,
6301 067,089 square feet; amount purchased and sold—
52,612 square feet.

May, 1932: amount manufactured and sold—3,514,286 square feet; amount purchased and sold—202,539 square feet.

June, 1932: amount manufactured and sold—3,314,493 square feet; amount purchased and sold—189,885 square feet.

July, 1932: amount manufactured and sold—2,635,089 square feet; amount purchased and sold—115,285 square feet.

August, 1932: amount manufactured and sold—2,779,040 sqaure feet; amount purchased and sold—147,918 square feet.

September, 1932: amount manufactured and sold—2,839,108 square feet; amount purchased and sold—162,816 square feet.

October, 1932: amount manufactured and sold—3,663,558 square feet; amount purchased and sold—229,096 square feet.

November, 1930: amount manufactured and sold—4,662,729 square feet; amount purchased and sold—zero.

December, 1930: amount manufactured and sold—3,260,297 square feet; amount purchased and sold—17,724 square feet.

June, 1931: amount manufactured and sold—4,509,827 square feet; amount purchased and sold—403,859 square feet.

November, 1931: amount manufactured and sold—2,863,663 square feet; amount purchased and sold—214,789 square feet.

December, 1931: amount manufactured and sold—
6302 2,433,991 square feet; amount purchased and sold—84,891 square feet.

November, 1932: amount manufactured and sold—2,351,605 square feet; amount purchased and sold—195,259 square feet.

Justice Stephens: Do you, then, accept that stipulation and withdraw those exhibits, Mr. Knuff?

Mr. Knuff: May I just have a moment?

Justice Stephens: Yes.

Mr. Knuff: You see, the original offer contemplated two aspects, (1) to show that seconds were not being sold; (2) to show the amount of board that was purchased from USG and sold.

Now in so far as the stipulation goes as to the amount of board purchased and sold, although it hasn't been stipulated that it was purchased from USG, I presume that

Mr. Keber would have no objection to adding that to the stipulation, because it all came from USG. That is covered by stipulation, but it doesn't go to the first aspect. I have asked Mr. Keber if he will stipulate that during these months, no seconds were reported as being sold by Certain-teed.

Mr. Keber: Well, I think I can stipulate the following in that connection—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) I should think you could do that, because the face of these papers, if 6303 they don't report the sales of seconds, don't report them.

What were you about to say?

Mr. Keber: It is a negative matter.

We will stipulate that these reports, those referred to in the previous stipulation, do not contain any separate reference to royalties on seconds calculated on the basis of a selling price for seconds different from the selling price of regular board.

Justice Stephens: Is that satisfactory, Mr. Knuff?

Mr. Knuff: That second stipulation covers the matter that I had in mind.

Justice Stephens: The matter of seconds?

Mr. Knuff: That is right.

Now then, I just want to be sure that the stipulation refers to purchases from USG.

Mr. Keber: Well, I don't think that I could stipulate that. I do not know that. I take it that it doesn't limit itself to the purchase of board from USG, and I have no way of ascertaining how the board was purchased.

Justice Stephens: What difference does it make to your case, Mr. Knuff, whether it was purchased from the USG or from anybody else?

Mr. Knuff: We wanted to tie this to the North Holston contract, the North Holston, the Laramie, and the other 6304 contracts that were the subject of deferred rulings and have subsequently come in.

Justice Stephens: I see.

Mr. Keber: May I just make this additional statement there? There is nothing that I see on the first pages of these documents that refers to where the material was purchased.

Justice Stephens: If that is true, Mr. Knuff, you wouldn't be any worse off with this omission to stipulate concerning USG than you would with the documents in evidence.

Mr. Knuff: Well, if the documents were in evidence in the way in which I have offered them, of course they would show where the board came from. If just the first page is in evidence, I am in no better position.

Justice Stephens: Well, we are agreed that there has been no identification of the second, third and fourth pages, so you are in that position anyway.

Mr. Knuff: Well, I take it, from what Mr. Keber has said, that there is going to be an objection concerning the exhibits beginning with 669, and Exhibit 669 is simply the affidavit itself—

Justice Jackson: (Interposing) Have we finished everything up to that?

Mr. Knuff: No, but I want to make this point: If there is going to be an objection from Exhibit 669 on, and they are just going to say that the affidavits can come in, 6305 the only thing we can do is to re-serve these papers on Mr. Adams. Now it seems to me that that is a useless waste of effort, because when we re-serve them on Mr. Adams he will come in and admit just as he did in this case—he can't do anything else—that is, that the signature appearing on the first page is the signature of Mr. Watson or Mr. Krug or Mr. Laney, whatever the signature is. He will take the same position then as he has taken now.

But if the Court thinks that he ought to see the second and third and fourth pages, we are going to let him see them. We will get the second, third and fourth pages in that way. If we have got to go ahead and serve these over again, we may as well serve the whole thing over again.

Justice Stephens: The problem is this, Mr. Knuff: We are bound to apply the rules, and we can't speculate as to what Mr. Adams will do. He may, if you serve the second, third and fourth pages on them, be willing to admit that Mr. Krug's signature on page 1 was signed in behalf of the company, and that pages 2, 3 and 4 may be treated as accompanying page 1, and therefore validated by Mr. Krug's signature. But if he doesn't do that, you will be right back where you are now.

Mr. Knuff: Well, what we can do then is to say that we got them from USG, and they are submitted here 6306 for the Court's consideration in the same condition that we got them from USG, and that is with the affidavit and then, following, the other pages. It is a highly technical position. No matter if there are 15 pages on these exhibits, they are still Mr. Watson's signature.

Justice Stephens: Provided they are the exhibits which were attached when he signed his signature. That is the problem.

Mr. Knuff: USG knows whether they are or not, because we understood they took photostats of everything they turned over to us. USG knows whether we are trying to slip something over or not. We are not trying to slip anything over.

Justice Stephens: No one suspects the Government of that, Mr. Knuff. The Court is simply in the position of having to apply the rules of evidence when they are invoked. Even though, as you assert, it seems technical to you, the defendants may feel that they have a right to require proof as to the correctness of these items, since you are going to rely upon them.

Is there anything USG can do to forward this situation, that you know of, Mr. Bromley?

Mr. Bromley: Nothing that I know of, if Your Honor pleases.

Mr. Johnston: If the Court please, may I be heard a minute?

6307 Justice Stephens: Yes.

Mr. Johnston: This class of exhibits was divided into three groups this morning. There is involved between 200 and 300 sheets. Now I presume there are a lot more of the same kind of offers. I just wonder if counsel for the Government realize the terrific additional expense they are putting us to in offering all of these, especially in view of the offer of counsel for Certain-teed to stipulate and save all of this expense in the record.

Indeed, I go further and say that it would seem to me that as to these exhibits starting with 624 up to where this stipulation starts, they should also be subject to consideration and a stipulation, and that they might be withdrawn.

Now do you realize that just this morning, one-third as many exhibits, in pages, are being offered, about, as have been offered in this entire case up to date, and I don't know where it is going to stop. The expense of this case is just mounting so terribly here, and I have a small client, and other clients are involved in this thing, and if there were some way of shortening this record and stopping this outlandish expense, I would like to see it done.

Now the Government has not helped us any at all. The Court tried to help us all that it could, but the Government has consistently refused, all through this case, to furnish us copies of these exhibits, and refuses now, and 6308 they come in with several hundred exhibits to dump into the hopper at the last minute of the trial of this case, and I don't think that is fair, I don't think it is right to expect us to go to this enormous expense, especially as to my client, when I can't see where it means anything at all in this case, or proves anything as against the Texas Company.

I just call that to the attention of the Court in a spirit of fairness, in a matter of dividing the expense of this trial. If there is some way of shortening it, I would like to see it done.

Justice Stephens: How many more exhibits of this type have you in mind offering?

Mr. Knuff: In so far as this particular objection is concerned, it will only be from 669 to 692.

Justice Jackson: You have three more groups, haven't you?

Mr. Knuff: The same objection that has been raised will not occur in the other groups at all.

Mr. Johnston: Why not?

Justice Jackson: It seems to me that we are getting a tremendous record here, and that is what I had in my mind this morning. It seems to be not a matter at issue at all but what this defendant, and probably other defendants, have bought board and sold it, they admit it. And I think Mr. Bromley said royalties had been paid, likewise;
6309 didn't you, Mr. Bromley?

Mr. Bromley: No, sir.

Justice Jackson: Well, they admit purchasing board. Does the quantity that they purchased and sold mean anything?

Mr. Knuff: If they admit that—Justice Jackson: (Interposing) I understood Mr. Bromley to say that this morning.

Mr. Bromley: I didn't fully apprehend your question. I have admitted that board was purchased and sold; and I have further admitted that on all board manufactured and sold, the licensees paid all the royalties due. So both facts are here without issue in the case.

Justice Jackson: That is my question, as to the necessity of putting all this in. It is going to make it a poisonously big record, I think.

Mr. Knuff: If all the defendants will admit that board has been purchased, and that there have been inter-company purchases, and that that board has been sold, we haven't any reason to—

(Mr. Knuff and Mr. Steffen confer.)

Mr. Knuff: Mr. Steffen suggested to me that the stipulation as Mr. Keber had read it here this afternoon would be satisfactory to the Government, with the further understanding that the defendants in this case have purchased board from one another.

6310 Justice Jackson: Is that a fact that they all have, that each one of them has? You said "all". Does that mean Texas?

Mr. Knuff: Texas did purchase metallized board.

Justice Jackson: Metallized board?

Mr. Knuff: Yes.

Justice Jackson: Do these exhibits include metallized board?

Mr. Knuff: They do not.

Justice Jackson: That is a horse of another color, then.

Mr. Johnston: The Court, I am sure, remembers the testimony about Texas. They made their board, took it over to another plant, and had it metallized.

Mr. Knuff: Some of it was done that way.

Mr. Johnston: Perhaps two or three small pieces, little orders, insignificant, not a thousandth of one percent of their product.

You remember that question came up on the witness stand, when they were attacking Mr. Chism's testimony before the Grand Jury, and on cross-examination that was explained very clearly, I think, on Your Honor's question, that it was board they made and took over to the plant and had metallized.

Justice Stephens: Mr. Bromley has made a stipulation for USG, and all you are dealing with now, as I 6311 understand it, under these Exhibits 646 to 668, is what you regard as purchases from USG by Certain-teed.

Mr. Knuff: That is right.

Justice Stephens: Can't you accept Mr. Keber's stipulation that far, so that we can get rid of putting into the record Exhibits 646 to 668, inclusive, and substitute for them the stipulation which he has read into the record, plus Mr. Bromley's statement concerning board purchased from USG? Then we will approach these other exhibits when we get to them. We can at least save this much.

Mr. Knuff: Yes, we can accept that.

Mr. Bromley: Of course, my stipulation did not mean that USG had sold all the licensees. I do not believe that is the fact. All I mean is that some board has been purchased and sold, by some of these defendants from some other defendants—I don't know how much or whom.

Mr. Steffen: I might make a statement in that connection, if I may.

Justice Stephens: Surely.

Mr. Steffen: We asked Mr. Bromley about two or three weeks ago—I am not sure of the date—to supply us with the figures indicating how much board, how much lath, and how much metallized board, USG had sold to any of the licensees. And I think it was left to Mr. Collins to see what could be done about that. We at that time 6312 stated that we didn't want the matter necessarily precisely down to the cent, but that we did want to know substantially how much board USG had sold to each of the different companies.

Justice Jackson: That is all board, when you say "board", including metallized board?

Mr. Steffen: Yes, and perforated lath. And I think we are entitled to ask for that generally, and I would much prefer that than just a general statement that board has been sold.

On the other hand, we do not insist on a precise showing of the exact number of board feet and the exact number of dollars and cents.

Mr. Bromley: You told us that we could find that on our ledgers, and we went to our ledgers and of course we can not find it. There is no way we can get it without going all over the millions of invoices. That we have told you, and that is the fact.

I am willing to make any reasonable guess at it, but it can only be a guess.

Mr. Steffen: That is the first time you have told us that. Will you make a reasonable guess as to the amount of board, ordinary wallboard, perforated lath, and metallized board, that has been sold by USG to its licensees? I think we are entitled to that as a matter of establishing the size of the inter-company purchases that have been made.

6313 Justice Jackson: If they can give it to you.

Mr. Steffen: If it can be obtained. If they want to offer a stipulation as to amounts, we would be very glad to consider it.

Justice Garrett: You are carrying us away from the immediate thing that is before us, Mr. Steffen.

Mr. Steffen: That is correct, Your Honor.

Justice Garrett: The immediate thing that is before us is a proposal to stipulate certain matters by Mr. Keber. Mr. Knuff has indicated his unwillingness to accept that except upon certain conditions. One of the conditions Mr. Keber states he can't agree to, because he doesn't know.

Now it just seems to me—and of course I speak only for myself, and without conference with my colleagues—that that matter ought to be disposed of, that Mr. Knuff should say yes or no.

If he says no, then clearly, as has been indicated, we will rule out every one of these exhibits. If he does accept it, we will have that much disposed of.

Mr. Steffen: I think, Your Honor, that he said yes and did accept it, and I was going on to another matter which I thought had been raised by Mr. Bromley's general statement. I wanted to make sure that it was not to be in substitution—

Justice Garrett: (Interposing) He put a condi-6314 tion in there that Mr. Bromley should agree to something, which Mr. Bromley did agree to.

May I understand, Mr. Bromley—you agreed that royalties had been paid to the USG by Certain-teed on all board manufactured by Certain-teed under the licenses granted by USG?

Mr. Bromley: Yes, Your Honor.

Justice Garrett: Did you agree that it had been paid on all board purchased by Certain-teed and resold?

Mr. Bromley: No.

Justice Garrett: I didn't think you did, but I wanted to clearly understand that.

Justice Jackson: There is no contention that it was.

Justice Stephens: The reason I wasn't pressing counsel further, Judge Garrett, was because my understanding was that Mr. Knuff had not reached the position where he could quite accept Mr. Keber's offered stipulation, because it did not include the agreement which he wanted made that this board had been purchased from USG. Mr. Keber said he didn't know where it had been purchased, and therefore couldn't make any statement concerning that. So I thought the stipulation was not accepted. But if the stipulation as read into the record by Mr. Keber is now accepted by the Government, then we can get rid of 646 to 668. The only alternative, as we see it—as my colleague, Judge Garrett, has stated—is that we think, under the rules of evi-6315 dence, the second, third and fourth pages of Exhibits 646 to 662, which were the ones we were considering this morning in that aspect, have not been identified; and that since page 1 of each exhibit referred to attachments that were not identified, page 1 couldn't come in. Therefore, there would seem to be no alternative to the Government except to accept this stipulation for what value it is to the Government, or else re-serve these exhibits in complete, attached form, and attempt to get an admission, or call Mr. Krug and have the witness identify all of these, if they really amount to anything.

What we are all trying to do, I am sure, is cooperate in the interest of saving time and expense of all persons concerned. I am a little confused at this moment as to just what state the asserted stipulation is in, because I am not quite sure, in view of Mr. Steffen's statement and Mr. Knuff's statement, whether the stipulation is accepted or not.

Mr. Knuff: It is accepted.

Mr. Keber: As it was read into the record?

Mr. Knuff: As it was read into the record.

Justice Stephens: Very well.

Mr. Keber: Now I had assumed that the stipulation that had been prepared met, on all fours, the thing that Mr. Knuff was most interested in, and when I offered to so stipulate I should like to have it understood that I 6316 was taking a chance as to the accuracy of the facts, but with a sincere desire to reduce the size of the record and to meet the suggestion that the Court made this morning; and that is why I have some little difficulty, although I am somewhat new to this atmosphere here, in understanding Mr. Knuff's statement about what Mr. Adams may or may not do with respect to other exhibits. It seems to me that if I had insisted upon the objection that I made this morning,—and as Judge Garrett indicates, and as I believe the Presiding Judge did indicate—I could have kept this whole matter out of evidence. I have some difficulty, therefore, in understanding Mr. Knuff's attitude.

Justice Stephens: Now, Mr. Knuff, we want the Government to be satisfied, as well as the defendants, that its rights are being properly protected. Are you satisfied with the stipulation so far as the "seconds" item is concerned, as well as with respect to the other?

Mr. Knuff: Yes.

Justice Stephens: Very well. Then we thank you both, gentlemen, for your efforts to save time and expense.

Exhibits 646 through 668, inclusive, may be withdrawn.

(Government's Exhibits Nos. 646 through 668, inclusive, were withdrawn.)

Mr. Knuff: That leaves us with 669 to 692 to be 6317 disposed of.

Justice Stephens: That is right. Those are the Watson papers, aren't they?

Mr. Knuff: That is right, Your Honor.

Justice Stephens: They seem to be in a somewhat different category. They consist of an affidavit at the front and other papers following, which purport to have been attached. What do the admissions show with respect to that series of papers?

Mr. Knuff: What we asked Mr. Adams to admit there was that "The following statements, photostatic copies of which are attached hereto, made a part hereof, and marked Exhibits 41 through 64, were signed on behalf of Certain-teed Products Corporation by Benj. B. Watson."

Mr. Adams failed to answer that request.

I might say in connection with this that the only thing we served on Mr. Adams was page 1, that is, the affidavit itself, of each of the exhibits. We didn't serve the statements attached thereto.

If you have your Request for Admissions before you, it will begin at Exhibit 41.

Justice Jackson: That would be No. 3 in the Request?

Mr. Knuff: Yes, Your Honor.

Justice Stephens: Now what is your contention, and what is there before the Court?

Mr. Knuff: The offer of Exhibits 669 to 692, the 6318 offer in evidence.

Justice Stephens: That, in terms of the Admissions, is Exhibits—

Mr. Knuff: (Interposing) It is Item No. 3 on the Request for Admissions, and under No. 3 it includes Exhibits 41 to 64 of that item.

Justice Stephens: What do you have to say, Mr. Keber?

Mr. Keber: I object to the admission of these exhibits in evidence on the ground that no proper foundation has been laid for their receipt.

Reference has been made by Government counsel to the Request for Admissions. I presume he referred to paragraph 3, and he said we did not respond thereto. That is correct, and the effect of that response, I take it, is that we have admitted that Benjamin B. Watson signed Exhibits 41 to 64—those are the exhibit numbers as contained in the Request for Admissions—on behalf of Certain-teed Products Corporation. That is the extent of our admission. And of course, that only goes to the papers that were attached to the notice to admit.

Justice Stephens: And those were the purported affidavits of Watson?

Mr. Keber: That is correct.

Now so far as those affidavits are concerned, they are obviously a certification, I suppose, of some other papers.

6319 Justice Stephens: Now read your answer. If we are going to have to rule on whether or not, under Rule 36, you have or have not made an admission, we will have to have it in the record. You were requested, under Request No. 3—

Mr. Keber: We just didn't do anything about No. 3, so we deemed that admitted.

Justice Stephens: I thought I read an answer here in which you stated you couldn't answer.

Mr. Keber: No, that was directed, if the Court pleases, to another item, to Item 4. Item 4 says "The statements of fact contained in Exhibits 1 through 64 are true."

Justice Stephens: I am sorry, I misunderstood this.

Mr. Keber: And our statements under sub-paragraph (c), refer to Item 4, and if you will look at the first page you will see: "1. As to Item 4, states"—and then we have various sub-paragraphs, and sub-paragraph (c), which deals with these particular exhibits, 41 through 60 it says, and it should be 41 through 64—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) Where is your answer to Item 3?

Mr. Keber: We did not put in an answer to Item 3, intending thereby to concede Item 3.

Justice Stephens: I am sorry, I am badly confused.

Mr. Keber: Perhaps I can make that clear. As we understand the rules—

6320 Justice Stephens: (Interposing) Let's go back to the beginning, because I think the record is now in an unhappily confused condition. Let's start over again and clear both the record and the mind of the Presiding Judge.

You are offering now, as I understand it, Mr. Knuff, the exhibits which have been marked for Identification 669 through 692, inclusive?

Mr. Knuff: That is correct.

Justice Stephens: Which are the same as have been referred to in your Request for Admissions as Exhibits 41 to 64?

Mr. Knuff: Yes.

Justice Stephens: Now your Request for Admissions was as follows:

"Plaintiff, United States of America, requests the defendant, Certain-teed Products Corporation, within ten days after service of this request, to make the following admissions for the purpose of this action only and subject to all pertinent objections to admissibility which may be interposed at the trial:

• • •

"3. The following statements, photostatic copies of which are attached hereto, made a part hereof, and marked Exhibits 41 through 64, were signed on behalf of Certain-teed Products Corporation by Benj. B. Watson,"

6321 Now you say that 41 through 64, which is 24 exhibits, is the same as 669 to 692, inclusive; is that right?

Mr. Knuff: It is the same as the first pages of 669 to 692, inclusive.

Justice Stephens: That is what I mean, the first pages of 669 to 692.

Mr. Knuff: Yes.

Justice Stephens: Now your answer, Mr. Keber—you made no answer at all, you simply stood silent, did you, as to Item No. 3?

Mr. Keber: Exactly.

Justice Stephens: Intending thereby to do what?

Mr. Keber: Intending thereby to concede that Exhibits 41 through 64, or Exhibits 669 through 692—that is, the first pages thereof—were signed on behalf of Certain-teed Products Corporation by Benjamin B. Watson—and that is all.

Justice Stephens: There is no dispute, is there, between you that it was simply the first page, as these exhibits are now presented to us, to-wit, the affidavit of Watson, which was served upon you, and nothing else?

Mr. Keber: That is all that was presented to us.

Justice Stephens: Now you are objecting to the introduction of that page, as well as to the introduction of the attachments which are now presented to the Court—or what?

Mr. Keber: Yes, sir, I am objecting to both. I am 6322 objecting to it as an entire exhibit; and I am objecting to the first page—the first page specifically—on the basis that it violates the complete evidence rule. It purports to be a certification of something for which there has been no foundation laid whatever.

Justice Stephens: And the other pages, you are objecting to on the ground that they have not been identified?

Mr. Keber: That is right.

Justice Stephens: What is the position of the Government?

Mr. Knuff: The position of the Government, of course, is that we feel if we had called Mr. Watson to the witness stand and asked Mr. Watson if this was his signature, and he said that it was his signature, that that would have carried with it all the attachments that were connected to it at that time.

Justice Jackson: He would have to testify that those were the attachments, wouldn't he?

Mr. Knuff: I will say to the Court that we got them from USG, and I don't think that USG is going to say that they weren't attached at the time.

Justice Jackson: I know, but Certain-teed is the objector right now.

Mr. Knuff: They were obtained from USG, gotten from 6323 their files, and we took them apart for the purpose of photostating them; and we only served the first page on the defendant Certain-teed simply because we felt, and still feel, that that was sufficient to carry with it the attachment of it as a whole.

Mr. Keber: I don't understand that last part of it. If it was on the basis of economy—and I advert to that because I understood that to be one of Mr. Knuff's reasons—copies have now been made, and why wouldn't it have been just as easy to have made an additional copy to serve with the Request for Admissions?

Justice Stephens: Apart from that, if you had Watson on the witness stand and asked him to identify the first page of these exhibits and identify his signature thereon, and he did, but the other pages were not then attached, we couldn't rule, even if he was here in the court room, that that identified the pages later attached, and you are in no better position in respect of your service under Rule 36—

Mr. Knuff: (Interposing) These pages were attached, Your Honor.

Justice Stephens: Not when they were submitted to Certain-teed.

Mr. Knuff: No.

Justice Stephens: We understand that nothing was served upon the defendant Certain-teed, in this group of exhibits, except the purported affidavit of Watson, 6324 with nothing attached to it.

Mr. Knuff: That is right.

Justice Stephens: We think the standing silent of Certain-teed under Rule 36 does not carry with it a sufficient identification of the attachments which are now attached to these affidavits, to bring them into evidence.

All you admitted, Mr. Keber, was that Watson had signed those affidavits which were served upon you, in behalf of Certain-teed. That is right, isn't it?

Mr. Keber: That is right.

Justice Stephens: That is your contention?

Mr. Keber: Yes.

Justice Stephens: And you contend that, now that you are confronted in the court room with certain attachments, you have a right to object to the competency of both the affidavit as identified by your silence, and to the attachments, because the affidavit itself is incomplete, on its face, since it refers to attachments which you hadn't seen at the time these first pages were served upon you, and the attachments can't come into evidence now because they are not identified?

Mr. Keber: Exactly.

Justice Stephens: We don't see any escape from that, Mr. Knuff.

Where is Mr. Watson?

6325 Mr. Knuff: I don't know where he is.

What we will do is just serve these over, that is all.

(Discussion off the record.)

Justice Stephens: For the time being, we reject the offer of Exhibits 669 to 692, inclusive, with leave to the Government to re-offer them if it can furnish better identification or foundation for them.

Mr. Johnston: If the Court please, before we get too far away from it, I would like the record to show that that stipulation is not binding in any way upon Texas or Gloyd.

Justice Stephens: The Court doesn't construe it as binding upon anyone but the persons who made it.

We will take a recess of five minutes at this time.

(Thereupon, a short recess was taken, after which the trial was resumed as follows:)

Mr. Knuff: We would like at this time to have marked for Identification Government's Exhibit 693, the same being a letter dated September 11, 1931, addressed to Mr. C. Henning, and signed M. H. Baker, President.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 693 for Identification.)

Mr. Finck: Will you please give me the number of the exhibit that you had marked on the one you sent?

Mr. Knuff: Exhibit No. 5, Mr. Finck.

6326 Mr. Finck: Thank you.

(Discussion off the record.)

Justice Garrett: Now National admitted to a lot of these exhibits. I don't remember now which ones. They are all set out in the answer. Is it necessary to go through all of those that they admitted? Couldn't you give them to us in a bunch? Or is there some question, was there a string tied to their admission in any way, Mr. Finck?

Mr. Finck: Only as to what was marked originally No. 5. There we do not admit the writing on the margin.

Justice Stephens: This is what is described, in terms of the Request for Admissions, as Exhibit 5, isn't it?

Mr. Knuff: That is right.

Justice Stephens: And it is covered by paragraph 4 of the answer, is it?

Mr. Knuff: Yes, Your Honor.

Justice Stephens: Let me see what the request was.

Mr. Knuff: The request was:

"M. H. Baker, president of National Gypsum Company, on or about September 11, 1931, sent a letter to C. Henning, United States Gypsum Company, Chicago, Illinois. A photostatic copy of said letter is attached hereto, made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit 5."

Justice Stephens: That is Item 5 that you are reading from?

6327 Mr. Knuff: That is right, item 5 of our request.

The answer is contained in Paragraph 4 of National's answer, and it reads as follows:

"4. Admit Item 5, except that the notations in writing on the letter did not appear on the original document which was sent."

In other words, the pencil notations did not appear on the original document, and we don't contend that they were on the original document, and we are not offering the writing that is on Exhibit 693.

However, in conjunction with Exhibit 693, I want to call your Honor's attention to Government's Exhibit No. 35, page 502 under the heading of "Buffalo", which appears about an inch and a half from the bottom of the page. There you will notice the words, "Erie, Niagara, Orleans, Genessee, Monroe Counties, New York".

Now the bulletin immediately preceding the bulletin of September 18, 1931, which is page 502 of Government's Exhibit 35, is the bulletin of June 27, 1931, which is Government's Exhibit 35 at page 504, and under the subject or heading "Buffalo", at the bottom of the page, you will find that the counties of Niagara and Erie are mentioned.

I call your Honor's attention to that in view of the writing that is on the bottom of the page.

Justice Stephens: Are you offering Exhibit 693?

6328 Mr. Knuff: Yes.

Justice Stephens: Is there any objection?

Mr. Finck: Yes, your Honor. I object to the exhibit as showing—that is, if anything is to be admitted in evidence, it should be admitted without the writing appearing in the margin. The Government has not asked us anything about the writing in the margin. If they had, we would have answered the question.

The only fact that they have sought admission of was the one as to whether or not this letter, dated so and so, was sent by Baker to Henning, and we have admitted that.

Now, as I understand it, that is received in evidence for that purpose only, as to that fact, not as to anything else that is on the letter.

Mr. Knuff: I am simply calling your Honor's attention to something that is already in evidence—

Justice Jackson: (Interposing) That might properly be done in a brief at the proper time, might it not?

Mr. Knuff: I think you ought to catch it at this time, so as to have the continuity.

Justice Stephens: If you are asking us, in admitting this exhibit, to give consideration to the long-hand notations, one of them at the left, opposite the first paragraph of the letter of September 11th, and one at the bottom, written crosswise, if you are trying to get those in 6329 evidence because of their circumstantial relation to something already in evidence, we will have to pass on that now.

Mr. Knuff: I am not offering that. I am calling your Honors' attention to Government Exhibit 35, first to page 504, where, under "Buffalo", you will find the counties of Niagara and Erie named; then to the next bulletin, the bulletin of September 18, 1931, which is Government's Exhibit 35 at page 502, under the heading, "Buffalo", where you will find the counties of Erie, Niagara, Orleans, Genessee and Monroe, named. And I call your Honors' attention to the fact that Rochester is in Monroe County, New York.

Mr. Finck: If the Court please, I object to the remarks of Government counsel and move that they be stricken from the record, because I am certainly not bound by any statements put on this letter, which letter I have admitted, where these statements were put on by other persons.

Justice Stephens: We don't think we have any right to consider, gentlemen of the Government, anything written on these letters in long-hand, in view of Mr. Finck's limited admission for National, unless you call someone to demonstrate who wrote it, and identify it.

In other words, what you are doing is offering this exhibit only for the typewritten portion, but you are, in addition to that, assuming to call our attention to something in handwriting on it because of its alleged 6330 relationship to previous exhibits, and yet we have no right to consider it because it isn't in evidence.

Mr. Knuff: I would be willing to have something placed over this handwriting, I am not offering this handwriting. I am offering it in connection with Government Exhibit No. 35, at page—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) I think we all misunderstood you, Mr. Knuff. We thought you were trying to connect up the longhand-written material on Exhibit No. 693 with Exhibit 35, and that did not seem to us anything that we could properly consider. But if you are not doing that, that is over with.

Now, is there any other objection—if Exhibit No. 693 is offered, Mr. Finck, only for the typewritten portion to which your admission relates, have you any other objection to its being admitted in evidence?

Mr. Finck: I have none.

Mr. Bromley: And the defendants, other than National, object to it as incompetent because not binding upon them, and also as immaterial and irrelevant to any issue in the case.

Justice Stephens: What is its relevance and materiality, Mr. Knuff?

Mr. Knuff: It is relevant and material because it shows on its face that what National was doing here was 6331 asking the United States Gypsum Company to have certain territory included in the bulletins. Now we say that that shows, on its face, that the bulletins were not just the bulletins of USG alone, but were the bulletins of USG, plus the suggestions from the rest of the industry.

Mr. Finck: If the Court please, just to amend my previous answer to your question, I would also like to note, for National and Baker, that we do object to this letter as irrelevant and immaterial, in addition to the objection I previously raised.

Mr. Bromley: In response to the proffer of Government counsel, I thought it was understood by everyone that under the license agreement between the licensor and the licensee, the licensor could not sell on any terms more favorable than he permitted his licensees to. If we were making a price for truckload deliveries someplace, and were not according that privilege to the licensees, the licensor had the obligation of according that same privilege. Here it was called to our attention under the terms of the license, as the licensee had the perfect right to do, and it was our obligation not to ourselves sell at any other or different or more favorable terms than those at which we permitted our licensees to sell.

The charge with respect to it is just the performance of our obligation under the license, as I see it.

6332 Justice Stephens: Now, as to relevance and materiality, we overrule the objection. We think the objection as just stated requires us at the present time to determine the exhibit's weight, or meaning, whereas we will have to determine that in the light of all the evidence; so that objection is overruled.

Now, the objection by Mr. Bromley, for USG and the other defendants, that it is not binding upon anyone other than National, has not yet been ruled upon.

I suppose that raises the usual point that the declaration of an alleged co-conspirator is not to be binding upon others until a conspiracy is shown aliunde, and it is shown to be in furtherance or execution of that conspiracy.

Mr. Bromley: I meant it to cover the point that we raised on Friday, that National's admission as to the authenticity of this document does not bind any of the defendants, other than National.

Justice Stephens: We ruled that that was correct, and this is not received as binding upon anyone but National, unless it should be, in some manner, shown to be in furtherance or execution of the conspiracy, and the conspiracy is shown aliunde the declaration.

Mr. Bromley: Of course, our position is that this type of admission, made in a courtroom, can never be connected up with the other defendants, even though there be 6333 prima facie evidence of a conspiracy adduced at some time in the future, because this is only National's admission here in the courtroom, that this is an authentic document, and not ours.

Mr. Johnston: If the Court please—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) Just a minute, one at a time, Mr. Johnston. You are drawing a distinction, between the admission of authenticity, and the admission—

Mr. Bromley: (Interposing) —if any, in the document.

Justice Stephens: (Continuing) —if any, in the document.

Mr. Bromley: Yes.

Justice Stephens: Well, so far as the admission of authenticity is concerned, I should think that couldn't bind anyone except National.

Mr. Bromley: That is right, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: Unless my colleagues disagree with me, I would so rule, and do so rule.

As to the asserted admissions of the document, they are received subject to the usual reservation with respect to declarations of co-conspirators.

(Government's Exhibit No. 693 for identification was admitted in evidence for a limited purpose.)

Mr. Johnston: I just wanted to call the Court's 6334 attention to the fact that this group of exhibits, signed by Mr. Baker, in some instances, and by Mr. Burley in others, which latter ones we are coming to, so

I will direct my remarks to both of them that permitting these to go in under these circumstances denies us the right to examine these witnesses, and I understand the gentlemen are both alive, and one or both of them under subpoena, and why weren't they brought here so that they could be examined about these, and so we could cross-examine them?

I just don't understand the technique of the thing. I think it is manifestly unfair to offer to put these in and deny us the right to cross-examine.

Justice Stephens: Well, we are ruling that as far as their authenticity is concerned, the admission of authenticity does not bind you. Therefore the document isn't good as against you. That is the reason that ruling is made, that you have been denied the right of cross-examination by not producing these witnesses, and therefore the admission can only bind the person making it, to-wit, the admission of authenticity. How are you harmed, then?

Mr. Johnston: Not unless they attempt later to use these against us. If the record may show that under no circumstances could any of these exhibits, this one, for instance, and others similar, in any manner, bind Texas, then I am satisfied—whatever the other evidence may be.

6335 Justice Stephens: We have ruled clearly, we have just finished ruling, at Mr. Bromley's insistence, that so far as the admission of authenticity is concerned, this document does not bind anybody but National. So it isn't proved, it isn't identified, as against anybody but National.

Mr. Bromley: I think Mr. Johnston's difficulty may arise from the fact that I perhaps led your Honor to say that insofar as the admissions in this document, if any, are concerned, they might be considered as a declaration of a co-conspirator. I think Mr. Johnston feels, and I know I do, that if the Government adopts this technique of trying to put these papers in, based on the admission of the party who wrote them as to authenticity, that that means that they never thereafter can use the admission, if any in the document, as against anybody except, in this case, National.

That is the penalty that they incur for this type of procedure, and I think your Honor, in drawing the distinction that I attempted to make, between the admission of authenticity and the admission, if any, of fact in the document, did not mean to say that the admission, if any, in the document, could ever become binding upon anybody, any more than the admission of authenticity could.

Justice Stephens: Not unless the authenticity is in some other manner established, so that there would be the 6336 right of cross-examination in respect of it.

Mr. Bromley: That is what I assumed you had in mind.

Justice Stephens: Perhaps the Court has been unduly cautious in continuing to reiterate this usual reservation, but it is my understanding that an admission is binding upon no one but the person admitting it, whether made in the courtroom or out of the courtroom, or where. The only admission we have here is an admission of authenticity of this document. Now that is binding upon National, and it therefore binds National so far as the contents of the document are concerned. It doesn't bind anyone else because it hasn't been admitted to be authentic in any manner which could bind anyone but National.

The hearsay rule is still operating, and an admission is an exception to the hearsay rule, but it is an exception only as against the person who makes the admission.

If the Government wishes to have the advantage of using these documents against defendants other than National, it ought to call Baker, Burley, and such other persons as wrote them, and put them on the witness stand.

Mr. Knuff: I would like at this time to offer in evidence Government's Exhibit No. 344, the same being a memorandum dated December 16, 1932, purporting to be signed by M. H. Baker, and addressed to R. F. Burley.

Justice Jackson: That has been offered before,
6337 hasn't it?

Mr. Knuff: It was offered in conjunction with Mr. Higgins' testimony when he was on the witness stand. We asked Mr. Higgins if he could identify the initials, E.B.B. at the top of the exhibit, and Mr. Higgins said he knew who those initials belonged to, but he couldn't tell whether they were in Mr. Biesinger's handwriting or not.

Justice Stephens: Is this covered by some admission, Mr. Knuff?

Mr. Knuff: Yes, it is Item No. 6 of our requests for admissions. That item reads as follows:

"6. M. H. Baker, president of National Gypsum Company, on or about December 16, 1932, sent an inter-office memorandum to R. F. Burley. A photostatic copy of said memorandum is attached hereto, made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit 6."

The answer of Mr. Finck concerning this, is contained in Paragraph 5, and reads as follows:

"5. Cannot truthfully either admit or deny that M. H. Baker, on or about December 16, 1932, sent an inter-office memorandum to R. F. Burley, referred to as Exhibit 6 in Government's Request for Admissions, for the reason that M. H. Baker does not recall writing the memorandum, nor does R. F. Burley recall receiving the same, and that a reading of the memorandum does not refresh the recollection of M. H. Baker and R. F. Burley that they have 6338 seen such exhibit, nor have either of them any knowledge of the meaning of the contents thereof. Defendant admits that said Exhibit was taken from the files of the National Gypsum Company, and that R. F. Burley, who was in charge of sales of the National Gypsum Company on December 16, 1932, can identify the initials in the upper right-hand corner, 'E.B.B.—Your file', as his writing."

Where you say the "upper right-hand corner" there, you mean the upper left-hand corner, do you not, Mr. Finck?

Mr. Finck: I will speak for myself.

If the Court please, we object to the admission of this, and we have so stated in our answer, that we cannot truthfully either admit or deny that this exhibit was communicated by Baker to Burley. That, in my opinion, is a denial. The rest of the answer is simply a statement of the reasons why we did not admit it. The admissions therein stated, I presume, are not admissible here.

If they want to call Baker or Mr. Burley to tell the story, then that will be evidence.

Justice Stephens: Are you offering Exhibit No. 344?

Mr. Knuff: Yes, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: Do you wish to be heard as to whether or not it is admissible in view of Rule 36, Mr. Knuff?

Mr. Knuff: Yes, I would like to be heard, your Honor, in this connection.

6339 We say now at this time that this exhibit is circumstantially identified by the matters that are contained in the answer to our request for admissions. That is, that this was taken from the file of National Gypsum Company; that the initials in the upper left-hand corner, "E.B.B.—your file" are in the handwriting of Mr. Burley.

Now, the Court has repeatedly said that that circumstantially identifies the document. They have said that in connection with some of the exhibits that Mr. C. O. Brown identified. He had his initials up there.

When you consider that this is on the letterhead of the National Gypsum Company, and when it was taken from their files, when it is admitted that the initials "E.B.B." are in Mr. Burley's handwriting, I think that that is circumstantially sufficient at this time to admit it in evidence. It is not denied at all that it was taken from their files, in fact it is admitted that it was taken from their files. It is not denied that Mr. Baker sent it, it is neither admitted nor denied.

Mr. Finck: If the Court please, this seems to be a roundabout way of getting the circumstantial evidence upon which this document may be admitted. The only admission that I make as, for instance, to the initials in the upper left-hand corner, is in the reason that I give for not being able to admit the authenticity of the document. I do not 6340 admit, under any circumstances, that Baker sent this memorandum to Burley, but I give as my reasons the various facts that I set forth in my answer.

Now, the facts that I set forth for my reasons certainly should not be taken now to circumstantially identify the document. If they want to identify the document any further, it seems to me they should call a witness.

Now these men, both Baker and Burley, have been shown this document; they know nothing about it; they say that the facts therein contained are not true; that these facts certainly did not happen; and they can't remember anything about it; they can't remember writing it; and they can't remember seeing it.

Justice Jackson: But Burley evidently received it.

Mr. Finck: Burley evidently marked it for filing.

Justice Jackson: Well, he received it or he couldn't have marked it.

Mr. Finck: Well, he doesn't remember it anyway, and I have gone just as far as I can in my reasons, and I am perfectly willing that this be admitted, subject to the conditions that I have set forth in my answer. That is all they could say.

Justice Stephens: You say you are willing it should be admitted, subject to the conditions set forth in Paragraph 5 of your answer?

6341 Mr. Finck: I would rather have Baker come here and testify and tell about it.

Mr. Knuff: Mr. Baker couldn't add anything to it, if what is said in the answer is correct, according to Mr. Finck. He says Baker or Burley do not remember anything about it—

Mr. Finck: (Interposing) They remember this about it, they remember that the statements of fact in this document, in the second paragraph particularly, are not so.

Mr. Knuff: That goes to the weight of the document, not to its admissibility.

Mr. Finck: That goes to the document itself.

(The Justices conferred.)

Justice Stephens: I think we have a disagreement here, although I am not sure what Judge Jackson's views are—

Justice Jackson: (Interposing) I will state my own views.

Justice Stephens: Judge Garrett and I are of the view that you haven't laid any foundation for admitting this proposed Exhibit 344.

Rule 36 says that the person upon whom the request for admissions is served must reply within a given time by, "a sworn statement either denying specifically the matters of which an admission is requested or setting forth in detail the reasons why he cannot either truthfully admit or 6342 deny those matters."

By reading the whole of Paragraph 5 of National's answer, it seems to us that it is, in effect, a statement of why National cannot either truthfully admit or deny that M. H. Baker, on or about December 16, 1932, sent an inter-office memorandum to Burley, referred to as Exhibit 6 in the Government's request for admissions—and that is all that you asked to be admitted. You didn't ask for any admission concerning the handwriting which appears in the upper left-hand corner, and even the admission made is simply an admission as to what Mr. Burley can do by way of identifying these.

It isn't an admission that he does identify them.

So I am of the view, and I think Judge Garrett agrees with me, that there isn't any foundation laid under this Rule. Judge Jackson may have a different view.

Justice Jackson: I have, decidedly.

This is an inter-office memorandum between two officers of National, on their regular form. It is directed to R. F. Burley, and purports to have been sent by M. H. Baker.

I think that the ruling of the majority is just shaving the rules of evidence too fine. There is no question in my mind that the admission in its last line here, that Mr. Burley can identify, "E.B.B.—your file", as his handwriting, means that he wrote it. I can't put any other 6343 construction on it. He evidently routed it to Mr. E.B.B., whoever that was. He couldn't have done that without receiving it. Strangers aren't sending in these inter-office memoranda to Mr. Burley.

For the reasons I have just stated I think it should be admitted. As to its weight, I don't know.

I think my view is reasonable.

Mr. Finck: I want to be reasonable in this too. All I was asked to admit was whether Baker sent this inter-office memorandum to Burley. I couldn't do that. So therefore I had to give a reason for it. So really all I am doing here under the Rule is denying the request for the admission.

Justice Jackson: But you have gratuitously admitted, in effect, that Mr. Burley wrote, "E.B.B.—your file".

Mr. Finck: As one of my reasons for not being able to admit or deny it. I stated the full facts. It seems to me that I have gone as far as I can, although I do not admit the request which was made of me by the Government.

Justice Jackson: Well, the ruling is in, anyway.

Justice Garrett: Baker is a defendant in this case. He was not called upon for any admission here, was he, just Certain-teed?

Mr. Knuff: We call upon Mr. Baker's company, and Mr. Baker's company made the admission that Mr. Finck has just stated here. We didn't ask Certain-teed to admit 6344 something National did. Even if we had called Baker, according to the answer here, we wouldn't have gotten any more than we have already gotten. He says he doesn't remember the document. All I can say is that there have been quite a number of documents that have come in simply on that basis.

Take for instance a document with the initials, "A.W.", meaning Audenreid Whittemore, on them. Mr. Whittemore testified that he didn't remember the subject matter of the document, but that those were his initials.

Justice Stephens: Mr. Knuff, with respect to my colleague's statement that the majority is cutting the rules of evidence too fine—

Justice Jackson: (Interposing) In this case.

Justice Stephens: (Continuing) I understand that that is exactly what you meant, and I take it entirely in good part—but in view of the fact that you have made that statement, I should like to state a little more just why this thing strikes me as it does.

You, Mr. Knuff, have either got to call Baker to identify this document, or else you have got to get an admission from the other side as to what it is. Now all you asked the other side to admit was that M. H. Baker, president of National Gypsum Company, on or about December 16, 1932, sent an inter-office memorandum to R. F. Burley, and you referred to a photostatic copy.

6345 Now your opponent did not admit that, and he gave reasons why he couldn't admit it. It seems to me that that is the end of it.

Justice Jackson: But he did make an admission that those initials were written by Burley, and that that is his handwriting. He didn't have to do that, but he did it.

Justice Stephens: I don't agree with my colleague. What the admission says is, that he can identify his initials, implying that if he were called to the witness stand he could identify them. I don't understand it to be an admission that he has identified them for the purpose of this case.

I think the purport of the majority ruling is that Rule 36 provides for an extra-judicial proceeding. We have nothing to do with it, on the Court, except to find out, after the requests for admissions have been made, and the replies brought in, after they are brought to our attention, whether or not such replies constitute admissions of what was sought to be admitted. And I think it clearly does not, in this instance.

Exhibit 344 is not received in evidence.

Mr. Knuff: I would like at this time to have marked for identification, Government's Exhibit 694.

6346 (The document referred to was marked Government's Exhibit No. 694 for identification.)

Mr. Knuff: This is a copy of a letter, dated March 22, 1935, addressed to Mr. Ed. H. Diegel, General Sales Manager, Ebsary Gypsum Company, and signed, "Vice President."

I would like at this time to offer Exhibit No. 694 in evidence.

In connection with this exhibit, we asked National, under Paragraph 8, to admit that:

"8. R. F. Burley, vice-president of National Gypsum Company, on or about March 22, 1935, sent a letter to Ed. H. Diegel, general sales manager, Ebsary Gypsum Company, New York City. A photostatic copy of said letter is attached hereto, made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit 8."

The answer of National is contained in Paragraph 6, which states,

"Admits 7, 8, 9", and so forth.

Justice Stephens: Is there any objection, Mr. Finck?

Mr. Finck: Only that it is irrelevant and immaterial, and not binding in any respect on the defendant Baker, because this request for admissions is not addressed to Baker.

Mr. Bromley: The defendants, other than National, object to it as incompetent because not binding upon them.

6347 Justice Stephens: What is the materiality and relevance of this to the issues in the case?

Mr. Knuff: On page 29 of the Complaint, in Paragraph 114, the last sentence states:

"Notwithstanding said facts, USG required its licensees to execute said agreements in order to be enabled to purchase metallized board for resale to dealers and consumers."

Now, if you will read the third paragraph of the letter, you will see that it says,

"Can't you get ahold of Mr. Ebsary—"

Justice Stephens: Just call our attention to it, because it is not in the record yet. What sentence is it?

Mr. Knuff: The second sentence in the third paragraph, beginning with the word, "Can't".

Justice Stephens: This purports to be signed by Burley of National, doesn't it? I mean it purports to have been sent by Burley of National.

Mr. Knuff: Yes, your Honor, to Mr. Diegel of the Ebsary Gypsum Company.

Justice Stephens: State what it is you intend to prove by the letter? We are in doubt about it. We don't quite see--at least I don't, and I don't think my colleagues do—just what you intend to prove by it.

Mr. Knuff: Well, beginning with paragraph 133—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) We have read
6348 paragraph 114 carefully, and we have read the letter carefully. Tell us what it is you intend to prove by the letter.

Mr. Knuff: What we said in Paragraph 114.

Justice Stephens: How does it tend to prove that? We are having trouble seeing the logical relation of that to the pleading.

Mr. Knuff: "Can't you get ahold of Mr. Ebsary and have him sign this license right away? Mr. Baker wants to work cooperatively with Mr. Ebsary on this so you will not be penalized when one of your customers want foil included in the car, but, as explained to you, we can't extend the 12½% discount until Mr. Ebsary signs the foil license."

Mr. Johnston: If the Court pleases, I think that ought to go out of the record. It is not in evidence and they should not be permitted to read it in, particularly after the Court has stated that it should not be read into the record.

Justice Stephens: It may go out if we do not admit the exhibit in evidence.

What I am trying to get you to do is not to read either the complaint or the exhibit to us, we have read both of those carefully two or three times. Just assume we know the contents of the complaint and the letter, and make an argument, if you care to, as to how the contents of the letter tend to prove the allegations of Paragraph 114. I 6349 don't see it yet. Maybe one of our difficulties is that at this state of the Government's case, perhaps inevitably, it is shifting from one issue to another, and we don't have in mind the background of the particular issue that you are now dealing with.

Mr. Knuff: In Paragraph 114 we said that at the time the foil license agreement was executed, none of the licensees, except National, intended to manufacture foil board, but that all of the licensees intended to purchase metallized board from USG or National, but notwithstanding the fact that none of the licensees intended to manufacture this board, USG nevertheless required the licensees to sign the foil license agreement, in spite of the fact that they did not intend to manufacture the foil board.

Now the letter of Mr. Burley says exactly that, that we can't sell this to you at a discount until you sign the foil board license.

Justice Stephens: But what does that prove; how does that tend to prove that USG was trying to compel Ebsary to take a license? That is what puzzles me: It may show that Baker of National was trying to get Ebsary to take a license, but how does it show that USG was trying to get them to take a license?

Mr. Knuff: Economic pressure—they couldn't get the discount until they signed the license.

Justice Stephens: But the charge in Paragraph 6350 114 is that USG required its licensees to execute these agreements. How do Baker's overtures to Diegel, of Ebsary, prove anything against USG? I just don't understand it, that is all. Maybe I am slow about the point.

Justice Jackson: USG, of course, was the only licensor of this board, that these people were concerned in?

Mr. Knuff: That is right.

Justice Jackson: Of the foil license?

Mr. Knuff: Yes.

Justice Jackson: So if Ebsary was to sign the foil license, it would have to be the foil license of USG?

Mr. Knuff: That is right.

Justice Stephens: Yes, that is right, but the charge in the complaint is that it was under USG's compulsion that these licenses were being taken out.

Mr. Knuff: I think the connection will appear when we come to the letter of October 24, 1935.

Justice Stephens: That is farther down in the list of exhibits?

Mr. Knuff: Yes.

Justice Stephens: Well, we will have to suspend at this time until tomorrow morning.

(Whereupon, a recess was taken at 4:00 o'clock p.m. until 10:00 o'clock a.m., April 18, 1944.)

6351 IN THE

DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Civil Action No. 8017

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

Plaintiff,

v.

UNITED STATES GYPSUM COMPANY; NATIONAL GYPSUM COMPANY; CERTAIN-TEED PRODUCTS CORPORATION; THE CELOTEX CORPORATION; EBSARY GYPSUM COMPANY, INC.; NEWARK PLASTER COMPANY; SAMUEL M. GLOYD, doing business under the name of TEXAS CEMENT PLASTER COMPANY; SEWELL L. AVERY; OLIVER M. KNODE; MELVIN H. BAKER; BROR H. DAHLBERG; HENRY J. HARTLEY; FREDERICK G. EBSARY; and FREDERICK TOMKINS,

Defendants.

Seventh Floor,
Internal Revenue Building,
Washington, D. C.,
Tuesday, April 18, 1944.

The above-entitled cause came on for further hearing at 10:00 o'clock a.m., pursuant to adjournment, before Honorable Harold M. Stephens, Honorable Finis J. Garrett, and Honorable Joseph R. Jackson, sitting as the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

APPEARANCES:

(Same as heretofore noted.)

6356 Justice Stephens: That is right.

At the adjournment, we were discussing the admissibility of proposed Exhibit—

Mr. Knuff: (Interposing) Before we come to that, I have something else I would like to speak about.

Mr. Keber: May I be heard for just a moment? I don't know whether this is too late to do this, but yesterday in connection with the receipt of Exhibits 624 to 640, other defendants noted an objection as to their incompetency, as not binding upon them, not having been properly identified.

Now we represent, in addition to Certain-teed, Henry J. Hartley. The admission with respect to the Krug signature, and that it was signed on behalf of Certain-teed, was made only by Certain-teed in response to a request for admissions addressed only to Certain-teed, and therefore I presume that I should have moved at that time, or objected at that time to its competency against Henry J. Hartley, whom we also represent. If it is not too late, I should like to note that objection for the protection of Mr. Hartley.

Justice Stephens: That is, you are taking the same position that the defendants have taken with respect to these other exhibits, that the admission of the Krug signature is binding only upon the person who made the admission, to-wit, Certain-teed itself, as a company?

6357 Mr. Keber: Precisely.

Justice Stephens: Is there any objection to having that objection made now, Mr. Knuff?

Mr. Knuff: No.

Justice Stephens: That objection may be recorded, and it is sustained. The exhibit is received, as has already been stated, only as binding upon Certain-teed.

Mr. Keber: Thank you, sir.

I think the record reflects the fact that my stipulation yesterday was only on behalf of Certain-teed and not on behalf of Mr. Hartley. I should like to have that understood.

Justice Stephens: That may be understood.

Mr. Finck: If the Court please, the same condition exists with respect to Baker, in connection with the admissions that we are now making for National. If it is agreeable to the Court, I would like to have a continuing objection on behalf of Baker as to the competency of all these admissions.

Justice Stephens: I think you really are protected already, gentlemen, because the Court has ruled that an exhibit served and introduced under Rule 36 is binding, so far as the authenticity of the signature admitted is concerned, only upon the legal person making the admission. But you may record your objection on behalf 6358 of Baker, and it is ruled that the exhibits to which you have reference, Mr. Finck, are binding only upon the company.

Mr. Finck: Thank you.

Mr. Knuff: Yesterday afternoon, I thought that I understood the ruling of the Court on Exhibit 693. However, upon reading the transcript of the testimony last night, I find that I am not sure whether I do understand what Your Honors ruled yesterday.

Justice Stephens: Where is the ruling?

Mr. Knuff: The ruling starts on page 6621 of the transcript, and continues over to 6625.

I would like to say a few words, make a very brief statement, as to the Government's position with respect to—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) Before you do that, let me refresh my recollection on the matter.

Mr. Knuff: It starts at line 14, page 6621. I believe that would be the logical place to start in order to get the background of the objection.

Justice Stephens: Yes, but to get my recollection refreshed, I will have to go back and see where the exhibit was first referred to.

If it wasn't made clear, the Court's correction on page 6621, in line 3, Mr. Grover, changing the word "its" to "the exhibit's", was the singular possessive of "ex-6359 hibit", not the plural possessive. Judge Jackson misunderstood me on that, or else I didn't express myself clearly.

Now where do we start talking about Exhibit 693?

Mr. Oliver: It was marked at page 6614.

Justice Stephens: Very well, Mr. Knuff, proceed.

Mr. Knuff: In the Government's request for admissions directed to National, asking National to admit the authenticity of certain documents, in paragraph 5 of that request we asked National to admit that:

"M. H. Baker, president of National Gypsum Company, on or about September 11, 1931, sent a letter to C. Henning, United States Gypsum Company, Chicago, Illinois. A photostatic copy of said letter is attached hereto, made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit 5."

And we attached to that a copy of the letter, and we marked that as Exhibit No. 5.

In the answer of National to that request, National, in paragraph 4, states:

"Admits Item 5, except that the notations in writing on the letter did not appear on the original document which was sent."

The Government takes the position that there is no favored way of proving the authenticity of any document. We can prove the genuineness of a document in many ways.

First, we can call the writer of the document to 6360 the witness stand to admit that he wrote the document—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) Are you talking about the longhand note on the letter?

Mr. Knuff: No, I am not. I am talking about the proving of the document.

Justice Jackson: All right, go ahead.

Mr. Knuff: We can prove by someone who knew Mr. Baker's handwriting that that is Mr. Baker's signature.

Or, we could call a handwriting expert and have the handwriting expert testify, from an examination of admitted original documents, that the signature appearing on Government's Exhibit 693 is the signature of Mr. Baker.

Or, we could prove it by calling someone to the witness stand who saw Mr. Baker sign this particular document. Perhaps in this case it would be Mildred Parker, who was Mr. Baker's secretary at that time.

Or, we can prove the genuineness of the document by an admission. That admission can take many forms. If the document was included in the pleadings, and the answer of the defendant admitted the genuineness of the document, that would prove the document.

On the other hand, if this document came up in another proceeding, and Mr. Baker had said in those other proceedings that "This is my signature", we could prove it in that way.

6361 Or, we can do what we did here and utilize Rule 36, which says that the opposing party can call upon the other party to admit the genuineness of the signature.

In other words, there isn't any standard way of proving the genuineness of a document. What we are interested in is the genuineness of the document, its authenticity. We are not interested in, I take it, the manner in which we prove it. If we prove that this is a genuine document, irrespective of how we prove it, then that is an accredited document and that document should be considered as a proven document, just like any other document.

In other words, there are no degrees of credibility to a document. If we prove a document one way, by calling the writer of the document, the document could be certainly admitted. If we prove the document in another way, not by calling the writer, not by calling any witness, it is still an accredited document. If it is an accredited document, it is entitled to all the attributes of a genuine document.

Now when we prove, as we have here, by the admission of the defendant National, that this is a genuine document, the document proves either an admission or a declaration, whatever is contained in the document. In this case we say that there is contained in this document an admission of a co-conspirator, and that admission, then, can be 6362 used against all the other co-conspirators. By adopting this rule, and by utilizing Rule 36, we do not—Mr. Bromley to the contrary notwithstanding—incur any penalty.

Mr. Bromley says, on page 6624, that we incur a penalty, that the contents of the document can not be considered as an admission of a co-conspirator. I say there is nothing in the rules that penalizes us because we use the rules. There is nothing in any of the cases that I have examined—and I think I have examined all the annotations that cover Rule 36—there is not anything in the annotated cases which says that because we have seen fit to prove the document in the way that we have done, we incur a penalty and thereafter we can not use what is in the letter as an admission or a declaration of a co-conspirator.

In other words, there are not degrees of utilization for this letter. This letter doesn't take a 1-A classification simply because we put a witness on the witness stand to prove it. It doesn't take a 4-F classification, and can't be used, simply because we prove it by an admission.

We think that we are entitled to have this letter, the contents of this letter, considered by the Court as an admission or a declaration of a co-conspirator. Now I think the ruling of the Court doesn't quite go that far. I think on page 6621, the ruling of the—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) The Court will 6363 aid you by saying that it was the intention of the Presiding Judge to rule just to the contrary of what you assert.

Mr. Knuff: On page 6621, Judge Stephens says:

"We ruled that that was correct, and this is not received as binding upon anyone but National, unless it should be, in some manner, shown to be in furtherance or execution of the conspiracy, and the conspiracy is shown aliunde the declaration."

We think that that is a correct statement of the law. But when we come over to 6625, we find there that it can't be used as an admission against anyone except National.

Now we take the position that the admission by National authenticates the document. The document being authenticated, what is in the document then can be used as an admission or a declaration, whichever the document contains. If it is simply an admission like that they weren't selling seconds, then of course it is only an admission. If, on the other hand, it contains a declaration in futherance of the conspiracy—and we say that Exhibit 693 does contain that—then we contend that the admission contained in the exhibit becomes the declaration.

We would like, if Your Honor pleases, to have that ruling clarified.

Justice Stephens: Well, the ruling doesn't need clarifying, Mr. Knuff. Subject to the separately ex-6364 pressed views of my colleagues, if they are moved by your argument, I will say this, for myself, and to protect your record, that the correction of the ruling made on page 6625, or the narrowing of the ruling, or the making more clear of the ruling on page 6625 as compared with page 6621, was because I thought that I ought, for myself and my colleagues, to express definitely a view which is just the contrary of the view that you are taking, and to rule that where you ask for the identification of a signature under Rule 36 and simply get an admission,—that is in this instance Baker signed the document in behalf of the company concerned, National—that admission of authenticity of the signature could bind no one but National.

Now I think, in the interest of time, I do not need to hear a reply. If my colleagues wish to hear a reply from the defendants on this, I, of course, want them to do so. But I think the difficulty with your position, Mr. Knuff, lies not in what the cases hold, but in the statute, the Act of June 19, 1934, Chapter 651, which passed the act enabling the Supreme Court to enunciate these rules. That says, in the first paragraph: "Said rules shall neither abridge, enlarge nor modify the substantive rights of any litigant."

Now Rule 36 makes binding upon a party who makes an admission, that admission; but if the admission 6365 of a party is to be binding upon anyone other than the party, it is binding not because of rules of evidence, but because of rules of substantive law which make one man's act or admission or declaration, under some circumstances, binding upon another.

The admission made under Rule 36, so far as the party making it is concerned, gets away from the hearsay rule, but it doesn't get away from the hearsay rule so far as the right of cross-examination by other parties is concerned, as to the authenticity of that document; and it can't be made binding upon them as an admission because they didn't admit it. It can't be made binding upon them as direct proof, without cross-examination.

So I think the ruling was correct. But you are entitled to urge your views upon my colleagues. If they wish to hear from Mr. Bromley or the other defendants, I would be glad to have them do so.

Justice Jackson: I had thought that National admitted the authenticity of that document.

Mr. Knuff: It does.

Justice Jackson: I take that from what Mr. Bromley said on page 6621.

Now I was under a misapprehension, because my thought was that the ruling as announced by Justice Stephens, on page 6621, was in effect the final ruling of the 6366 Court on this exhibit. The ruling on page 6621 corresponds with my idea as to what the rule of evidence should be in this case.

If, for instance, anyone who is alleged to be a conspirator makes an admission, why, of course, that doesn't of itself bind any other co-conspirator unless there is some evidence to show that it is in furtherance of the conspiracy, and the conspiracy is proved by evidence aliunde.

Now I can't see any difference between that and the present situation, and therefore I must disagree with the ruling of my colleagues. I think it should be admitted for what it is worth.

Justice Stephens: I think, in fairness to my colleague, I ought to say—and it goes without saying that this is entirely in good part—that I think he loses sight of the fact, in this ruling, as he expresses himself, that we are dealing here not with the usual situation of an admission or declaration of a co-conspirator, but we are dealing here with an admission of authenticity of a document; and there has been no proof, according to the rules of evidence or substantive law, either one, against any defendant except National, as to the authenticity of that document, because the admission of authenticity is an admission and under Rule 36 it binds only the party making it. The terms of the rule itself say that. It says "a party".

Do you wish to be heard, Mr. Bromley?

6367 Mr. Bromley: No, Your Honor.

Mr. Knuff: Answering Judge Stephens as to the binding effect on the parties, I think that there are degrees of conclusiveness of the binding effect of that admission. In so far as National is concerned, that almost amounts to an estoppel. They could not now come into Court and say that the document is not a genuine document. In so far as the other defendants are concerned, it is open to them to challenge the genuineness of that document. If they choose not to undertake to challenge the correctness of that document, then I think they are bound by it. It is not contended in this case, I do not believe—if so, I haven't so understood it—that Exhibit 693 is not a genuine document. The document was taken from the files of USG. Not a single defendant here questions the genuineness or the authenticity of this document.

Now if they want to question it, it is still open for every person, except National. As to National, we now contend that they are estopped. But the matter of binding the defendants is one of degree, not of kind. It is still open to the other defendants to challenge the authenticity of this document. We have shown prima facie that it is a genuine document.

Justice Stephens: Read me again, will you, the admission which you made, Mr. Finck, and the question 6368 which was put to you.

Mr. Finck: The question was—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) I have the answer before me. Just read the question.

Mr. Finck: The request is No. 5:

"M. H. Baker, president of National Gypsum Company, on or about September 11, 1931, sent a letter to C. Henning, United States Gypsum Company, Chicago, Illinois. A photostatic copy of said letter is attached hereto, made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit 5."

Justice Stephens: Then the answer was:

"Admits Item 5, except that the notations in writing on the letter did not appear on the original document which was sent."

I think I have never been more clear, Mr. Knuff, about the correctness of a ruling, in the course of this case, than I am about this one. It is a fine point, but to me it is a perfectly clear point.

To illustrate my position—not to prolong the discussion further, because I think it is useless to do so—if Baker were called to the witness stand, and you asked him to identify this document and admit his signature and admit that he wrote it, and the other defendants therefore had an opportunity to cross-examine him and test his veracity and his accuracy under oath, on cross-examination, then 6369 the exhibit could be admitted in evidence for all that was in it. Both its authenticity and its contents would be binding on all proper persons, provided it was shown to be a declaration of a co-conspirator and the conspiracy was shown aliunde the declaration, and it was shown to be in furtherance or execution of the conspiracy.

But you are proceeding under Rule 36, and what you are really asking the Court to do is to permit you to get an admission from A, who is not on the witness stand, and therefore not subject to cross-examination, and make it binding upon B. I don't think the rules of substantive law or evidence, either one, permit that.

But the record may show your position on it, as it does. I know of nothing, I may add, in the law which recognizes categories of bindingness of admissions.

Mr. Knuff: I don't want to seem captious, but I am still at a loss to know what the ruling of the Court is. I understand what Judge Stephens' ruling is, and I understand what Judge Jackson's position is, but I don't understand yet what Judge Garrett's position is.

Justice Garrett: I concur with Justice Stephens.

Mr. Knuff: Now in connection with Exhibit 344, I want to call Your Honors' attention to a previous ruling, to which the ruling yesterday seems to be contrary.

I want to call Your Honors' attention to Govern-6370 ment's Exhibit 226. The ruling on Government's Exhibit 226 appears at page 2016.

Justice Stephens: Where is the ruling on Exhibit 344, first? Let's get that in mind.

Mr. Knuff: The ruling on Exhibit 344 was in yesterday's transcript, and it was rejected. The ruling is on page 6630, beginning at line 18, I believe:

"Justice Stephens: Judge Garrett and I are of the view that you haven't laid any foundation for admitting this proposed Exhibit 344."

Justice Stephens: I will have to go back, to refresh my recollection on that.

You gentlemen will have to bear with me if I seem a little slow on the uptake this morning. When I got home last night, prepared to read the record in this case, I found an emergency matter from the Court of Appeals which occupied me, together with these other items, until a quarter of two this morning.

Where do we start ruling on Exhibit 344, Mr. Knuff? Apparently it is at page 6625. Now let me refresh my recollection.

Mr. Knuff: Line 21, on page 6625.

Justice Stephens: Yes. Just let me read it, now.

(Transcript examined by the Court.)

Justice Stephens: I think we have this in mind now.

6371 Mr. Knuff: Now I direct your Honors' attention to Government's Exhibit 226. It is a memorandum, dated June 4, 1929; it was written by George M. Brown, and it has to do with matters that are connected with this case.

That memorandum was identified by Claude O. Brown, not by George M. Brown. Claude Brown was placed on the witness stand, and, on page 2016, the following appears:

"By Mr. Steffen:

"Q. I would ask you, Mr. Brown, whether you are familiar with the writing at the top of the memorandum, the word 'Whittemore'? A. I would say that was his writing.

"Q. Is that Mr. Whittemore's writing, 'Looks OK to me'? A. 'Looks OK to me' is Whittemore's writing.

"Q. And the initials 'AW' are also his? A. Yes.

"Q. Do you know who wrote 'Whittemore', which is scratched out, at the top? A. I think Mr. Brown wrote it.

"Q. That would be Mr. George M. Brown? A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Do you recall having seen the memorandum? A. No, sir.

"Mr. Steffen: We offer Government's Exhibit 226 in evidence.

6372 "I will point out to your Honors that the Item No. X279 indicates that it was taken from the files of the Certain-teed Company. The initials 'AW' are the initials of a Vice President of the company, who says that it looks OK to him. The writing 'Whittemore' is identified as being George M. Brown's writing. That is, he addressed it, apparently, to Mr. Whittemore, and Mr. Whittemore acknowledged it.

"Mr. Adams: May I ask a question?

"Justice Stephens: Yes.

"Mr. Adams: Do you know who prepared this memorandum?

"The Witness: No, sir.

"Mr. Adams: I object on the ground that there is no proper foundation.

"Justice Stephens: The objection is overruled"—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) How many pages of this do you propose to read, Mr. Knuff?

Mr. Knuff: I am practically through.

Justice Stephens: I was going to say that we could read it and save time.

Mr. Knuff: I will be through when I read your Honor's ruling.

"Justice Stephens: The objection is overruled. We think it has been sufficiently identified. It may be admitted in evidence, subject to the usual reservation as to declarations of alleged co-conspirators."

6373 Now, in that case, we had Mr. Claude Brown identify, not his own handwriting, but the handwriting of someone else. He had never seen the document as far as the record goes, at least he did not recall seeing it. Now in connection with Government's Exhibit 344, we have a much stronger case. We have here a document that admittedly has, in the upper left-hand corner of that document, the initials, "E.B.B." in the handwriting of Mr. Burley, the person to whom the document was sent. That is admitted. It is admitted that those initials, "E.B.B.", are in Burley's handwriting.

Now the defendant National has said that they cannot say that this was sent by Mr. Baker. They also say that this is Mr. Burley's handwriting at the top. It seems to me that they have taken an inconsistent position. If the document was received by the person to whom it was addressed, it must, of necessity, have been sent, and it was received by the person to whom it was sent, because the person to whom it was sent says, "Those initials, E.B.B., are in my handwriting."

Now we say that this document is identified and is entitled to come in as an exhibit in this case the same as Government's Exhibit 226, and we ask your Honors to reconsider, in the light of your ruling on 226, your action of yesterday afternoon on Exhibit 344.

Mr. Finck: If the Court please, I can only restate
6374 what I said yesterday, that we were asked by the Government to admit that M. H. Baker, on or about December 16, 1932, sent an inter-office communication or memorandum to R. F. Burley.

Now I cannot admit that, and under the Rule I have a right to either admit it or deny it, or state that I cannot truthfully either admit or deny it. That is what I have done. If I say that I cannot either truthfully admit or deny, then I must give a reason, and I follow with these reasons in which I state certain facts.

I did not want to make any admissions. If necessary, even now I think I could withdraw my answer and deny it, not admit it at all. I have done that, practically, in the way I have answered the request. Now I think, under the Rule, we have not made the admission sought, and therefore that this document should not be admitted in evidence.

Justice Stephens: Well, it is my view, Mr. Knuff, that nothing new has been presented. I had in mind, at the time I made my ruling yesterday, in which Judge Garrett concurred, some previous rulings. In fact, I think you referred to some of them, at least impliedly. I don't think the two rulings are inconsistent in view of the nature of Mr. Finck's answer to your request for admissions.

So far as I am concerned, the ruling will stand with respect to Exhibit 344.

Justice Garrett: I concur.

6375 Justice Stephens: Judge Jackson may wish to express himself differently.

Justice Jackson: I have already done that.

Justice Stephens: He disagreed with us yesterday, and I assume his position is the same.

Justice Jackson: Yes, I am disagreeing with you now also but I expressed myself as to that yesterday.

Justice Stephens: I feel constrained to say—and I think I speak for my colleagues, although I will be glad to have them express themselves separately if they disagree with me—that I really think the Government ought not to expect to reargue rulings when they have been carefully made.

So far as I can see the argument made this morning, made with respect to Exhibit 693, presented absolutely nothing new over what was heard yesterday, and it seems to me that the argument as to 344, did not.

I fear, perhaps, that the Presiding Judge has been at fault in this case and has left the Government—because of the anxiety of the Presiding Judge to be very careful and consistent in his rulings, and give counsel for the Government full opportunity to present a case which the Court recognizes is difficult to prove because of the circumstantial character of it, every opportunity that it properly should have to present its case—gain the impression 6376 that the Court is willing to permit invasion and invasion and invasion of its rulings, and reargument and reargument and reargument of matters which it has very carefully and thoughtfully and conscientiously considered.

The theory of a trial is that both sides shall be given full opportunity to express themselves and say everything they need to say, to convince the Court that a ruling ought to be one way or the other—but that that should be the end of it.

It does seem to me, gentlemen for the Government, that you go beyond what ought to be the proper limit of the Court's patience and the Court's discretion. You argue these matters very carefully, to the best of your ability; we hear argument on both sides; the Judges confer and then make a considered and careful ruling—and if it is adverse to the Government, the Government seems to feel that it has a right to reargue the whole thing all over again.

I confess that I am getting to the end of my patience, and I think close to the end of a proper exercise of discretion in permitting the Government to take so much time in these matters.

We were going to take, as I understood from the Government's promise, another few days to finish the Government's case. But it looks to me, if we have got to go through this sort of thing every day, that we will be 6377 here another month or six weeks, and I really think it ought to be stopped.

Mr. Steffen: May I say just a word, your Honor?

Justice Stephens: Yes.

Mr. Steffen: I want to say, for the Government, that we are very appreciative of the patience with which the Court has listened to the arguments of the Government, and we felt that we were not pressing an argument unless we were presenting something that had some substance to it.

I think your Honor's remarks could be equally directed to the defendants, as I feel you have been equally patient with them.

This matter of Exhibit 693 was first argued on Friday afternoon when I was not here. It was then argued again yesterday, and the decision on Exhibit 693 was not, to my mind, entirely clear.

Moreover, it covered a matter that will run through all of these exhibits, and as respects that argument, I felt that we should have a fairly clear hearing, and while it did take the better part of a half an hour, I think that it was important, from the Government's viewpoint, to get that carefully presented.

As to Exhibit 344, I think that we don't have as strong a case at all on that; but on Exhibit 693 I thought we did have a very important addition to present; and I say that so far as finishing the Government's case is concern-6378 ed, we hope, as soon as we can get these requests for admissions presented, to be then perfectly free to close the case, and I don't see any reason why that shouldn't be done in the next day or so.

Justice Stephens: Well, the Court is not speaking in censure, gentlemen. The Court realizes that you are properly zealous in the presentation of your case, and the Court realizes that there have been some rearguments by some of the defendants' counsel, one of whom is absent today, so I will not comment on him in his absence. He has also been very insistent upon rearguments and reargu-ments.

What I say is in good nature and in good part, and in the interest of saving time.

When we get a decision made, let's abide it, and if we don't like it, the proper recourse of the party against whom the decision is made is to appeal.

We will take our morning recess.

(Whereupon a five-minute recess was taken, after which the trial was resumed as follows:)

Mr. Knuff: May it please the Court, when the Court adjourned yesterday afternoon, I believe I had offered in evidence Government's Exhibit No. 694, which would be Exhibit No. 8 in your group of exhibits. It had been marked for identification as Exhibit No. 694.

It is a copy of a letter, dated March 22, 1935, ad-6379 dressed to Mr. Ed. H. Diegel, and was signed "Vice President".

This is a carbon copy of the original, and under the admissions of National, in Paragraph 6, it is admitted to be a photostat of an unsigned carbon copy of the document which was sent or received as stated therein.

Apropos of Exhibit 694, I want to call your Honor's attention to Government Exhibit 548, which was offered and received in evidence—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) Are you citing Stephens against Stephens again? (Laughter)

Mr. Knuff: No, your Honor.

The attachment to Exhibit 548 was dated March 18th. This exhibit is dated March 22, 1935. Exhibits 548 and 694 deal with the same subject matter. We are not arguing relevancy at all.

Justice Stephens: I think you are entitled to argue relevancy.

Mr. Knuff: I mean at this particular time we are not.

Justice Stephens: We hadn't finished the argument on relevancy last night, as I recall.

Justice Jackson: What is the extent of the admission here, that this is a photostat of an unsigned carbon copy which was sent or received as stated in your request?

Mr. Knuff: That is right. The original, of course, I take it from this admission, was sent to Mr. Diegel of the 6380 Ebsary Gypsum Company. We don't have the original, but we do have the carbon.

But as I say, I understand from the admission here that there is no question raised by National that the original was sent to Ebsary.

Justice Stephens: The only question I had, Mr. Knuff, about the admissibility of Exhibit 694, was whether it tended to prove Paragraph 114 of the complaint, and I wasn't clear on that when we were finishing the argument last night.

Mr. Knuff: This is just one step in proving the allegations of Paragraph 114 of the complaint, and should be considered along with all the other evidence in the case.

Justice Stephens: Do the defendants wish to be heard with respect to it, any further?

Mr. Bromley: I don't believe there is anything to be added to the obvious comment to be made on the document which the Presiding Justice made at page 6638, yesterday: ". . . how does that tend to prove that USG was trying to compel Ebsary to take a license?"

Now, it seems to me that it doesn't tend to prove that at all, and therefore it can have no relevancy or materiality.

Justice Stephens: The only theory that occurred to me, Mr. Bromley, that it might come in on is this. I still am of the view that I expressed yesterday, that when you look at this exhibit alone it is difficult to see how it tends 6381 to prove what you offer it for, Mr. Knuff. But it may be that, connected with other evidence that you have as to the asserted action of USG in connection with National and other licensees, it may have some tendency to prove your theory.

On that theory that it may, in connection with other evidence, have some tendency to prove the allegations of Paragraph 114 of the complaint, we will admit it in evidence, subject to the right to move to strike it if there is no connecting evidence, and subject to the usual reservation with respect to declarations of alleged co-conspirators.

Mr. Bromley: Well, I think it should be admitted subject to a motion to strike, on the same terms as Exhibit 693 was admitted, and subject to the same limitations as applied to Exhibit 693, because again—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) With respect to authenticity as well as the usual reservation?

Mr. Bromley: Yes, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: Both of those reservations or limitations upon the ruling are made, that it is admitted as binding, even if connected, only upon National.

Justice Jackson: Of course my opinion with respect to this is the same as it was with respect to Exhibit 693.

Justice Stephens: For the protection of the Government, and for the protection of the views of my col-6382 league, Judge Jackson, there may be a showing in the record that there is a continuing ruling on the part of the majority of the Court that exhibits which are identified under Rule 36, only bind the person who identifies them. That will give the Government a record on any other exhibits of that class.

(The document referred to, marked as Government's Exhibit No. 694, was received in evidence.)

Mr. Knuff: We would like to have marked at this time, if the Court pleases, Government's Exhibit No. 695 for identification, the same being a letter, or rather a carbon copy of a letter, dated August 27, 1935, addressed to Mr. George N. Lenci, and signed by the National Gypsum Company, "Vice President."

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 695 for identification.)

Mr. Knuff: We would also like to have marked for identification as Government's Exhibit No. 696, an inter-office memorandum, dated October 7, 1935, directed to E. B. Biesinger, and having typed thereon the name "R. F. Burley".

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 696 for identification.)

6383 Justice Jackson: How about the pencilled memorandum at the top of that exhibit, are you offering that too?

Mr. Knuff: No, your Honor, we are not.

Justice Jackson: That will save Mr. Finck an objection there.

Mr. Knuff: Yes.

I would also like to have marked as Government's Exhibit No. 697 for identification, a carbon copy of what is apparently an inter-office communication, or memorandum, dated October 24, 1935, addressed to F. G. Krumholz, and signed in typewriting R. F. Burley.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 697 for identification.),

Mr. Knuff: At this time we offer in evidence Government's Exhibits No. 695, 696 and 697.

In connection with that offer, we direct your Honors' attention to the requests for admissions, first to Request No. 10, that:

"National Gypsum Company, on or about August 27, 1935, sent a letter to George N. Lenci, Ebsary Gypsum Company, New York City. A photostatic copy of this letter is attached hereto, made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit 10."

We also call attention to Request No. 11, reading:

"R. F. Burley, Vice-President of National Gypsum 6384 Company, on or about October 7, 1935, sent an inter-office memorandum to E. B. Biesinger. A photostatic copy of said memorandum is attached hereto, made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit 11."

Also, we call attention to Request No. 12, reading as follows:

"R. F. Burley, Vice-President of National Gypsum Company, on or about October 24, 1935, sent an inter-office memorandum to F. G. Krumholz, National Gypsum Company, Chicago, Illinois. A photostatic copy of said memorandum is attached hereto, made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit 12."

The answer, submitted on behalf of National, in Paragraph 6, admits 10, 11 and 12, which are the three requests that I have just read, and I understand from this answer that although Exhibits 695 and 697 are photostats of carbons, the answer admits that the originals of 695 and 697—

Justice Jackson: How about 696?

Mr. Knuff: That apparently is an original.

(Continuing):—that the originals of 695 and 697 were sent to the persons to whom they were addressed.

Exhibit No. 696 apparently is an original document.

They are offered on the same theory that we offered Exhibit 694, and for the same purpose.

Mr. Finck: You are not offering the writing on Exhibit 696, are you?

6385 Mr. Knuff: No, we are not, Mr. Finck.

I might say that Mr. Finck in his answer—

Justice Jackson: (Interposing) Did you say that Exhibit No. 696 was an original?

Mr. Knuff: That is my understanding—Exhibit 696 apparently is an original.

Justice Jackson: That is what I understood you to say, and the copy of course that we have is a photostat of the original?

Mr. Knuff: Yes, you have the photostat of the original.
Justice Stephens: Let us read these now.

(After reading Exhibits 695, 696, and 697.)

Do the defendants wish to be heard?

Mr. Finck: If the Court please, as to Exhibit 695 and 697, I object to those as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial as to Baker, that is, the request not having been made of Baker. I would just like to have the record show that objection for him.

As to National, the exhibits are objected to as irrelevant and immaterial.

I don't know what the purpose of the Government is in trying to have these exhibits admitted. They refer only to foil board and lath. Now there is no charge in the complaint that National ever tried to induce anyone to sign the metallized license agreement, and on the charges in 6386 the complaint, of course we take the same position as we have all through the trial, that National is expected from any charges in the complaint with respect to metallized board or lath.

Therefore, I cannot see how these letters can be material to the issues in the complaint as against National, and if they are only to be received as against National, I see no relevancy to them whatsoever.

Justice Stephens: As I remember it, the majority of the Court ruled, at the time of the reserved rulings, despite the phrasing of Paragraph 114 of the complaint with respect to National, that evidence concerning foil and National was admissible, did it not?

Mr. Finck: That is true, yes sir.

Justice Stephens: Well, consistently with that ruling of the majority of the Court, and with our previous rulings, these three exhibits will be received in evidence subject to the following limitation: That they are not binding except upon the persons actually making the admissions, under Rule 36.

Mr. Finck: As to Exhibit 696—

Justice Jackson: (Interposing) Of course, in all of these rulings, my stand will appear as dissenting from the ruling of the majority. My feeling is that they should be admitted for all purposes, for all defendants, if there is evidence, aliunde, to show that a conspiracy exists 6387 and that these documents were made in furtherance or execution of the conspiracy. I don't think that I have to say that every time such a ruling is made by the majority of the Court.

Justice Stephens: Certainly not. The Presiding Judge does not continue to reiterate his dissents from the majority rulings on some of the reserved rulings. After a ruling has been made definitely, and established, by a majority of the Court, I assume that it becomes the law of the case, which we all follow, even though one of us might disagree with it, individually.

Now what do you say as to Exhibit 696, Mr. Finck?

Mr. Finck: I object to that as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, as to both National and Baker.

(The Judges conferred.)

Justice Stephens: Pardon me, what do you say as to Exhibit No. 696, Mr. Finck?

Mr. Finck: I presume all these are offered without the pencilled notations.

Justice Stephens: But do you make a different objection with respect to Exhibit 696 than you do with respect to Exhibits 695 and 697?

Mr. Finck: Yes, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: In other words, you raise no question as to their binding effect upon Baker?

6388 Mr. Finck: Oh, yes, I raise the same objection with respect to Baker.

Justice Jackson: I thought you said you objected as to Hartley, didn't you, because he hadn't been served?

Mr. Finck: No, your Honor, you must have misunderstood me.

Mr. Keber: We represent Hartley, Judge Jackson, and I mentioned him this morning in connection with another exhibit. We represent him as an officer of Certain-teed Products.

Mr. Finck: Of course no requests for admissions were made of Baker.

Justice Jackson: Well, the ruling seems to be sufficiently clear so that he is not bound. I agree with that.

Mr. Finck: I think so.

Justice Stephens: I don't see how Judge Jackson can agree with it, in fairness to him.

Justice Jackson: He wasn't served, and this can't bind him at the present time. It doesn't bind anybody but National. But if, on the whole record, a conspiracy is shown, and these documents here have been written, in the opinion of the Court, in furtherance of the conspiracy, then of course they will bind everybody. That is what I meant.

Justice Stephens: Very well, I was just trying to save you from an inconsistency with yourself.

6389 Justice Jackson: Thank you, sir.

Justice Stephens: Exhibits 695, 696 and 697 are received in evidence. The objections as to relevancy and materiality are overruled. So far as the ruling of the majority of the Court is concerned, Judge Garrett and myself rule that they can bind only those persons—and I use the word "persons" in the legal sense—who were served under Rule 36, and made an actual admission with respect to the documents. That would exclude them as binding upon Baker or upon any other defendant.

(The documents referred to, marked Government's Exhibits Nos. 695, 696 and 697, respectively, were received in evidence.)

Mr. Knuff: I would like at this time to have marked for identification Government's Exhibit No. 698, the same being a carbon copy of a letter, dated October 24, 1935, addressed to Mr. H. E. Chism, and signed National Gypsum Company, "Vice President".

(The document referred to, was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 698 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: In connection with this exhibit, I direct your Honors' attention to Paragraph 13 of the Request for Admissions.

6390 Justice Stephens: This is a request directed to whom, to Texas?

Mr. Knuff: No, your Honor, to National.

Under Paragraph 13 of the request, National was requested to admit that:

"National Gypsum Company, on or about October 24, 1935, sent a letter to H. E. Chism, Texas Cement Plaster Company, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. A photostatic copy of said letter is attached hereto, made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit 13."

The answer of National appears in Paragraph 7, and that answer is:

"Cannot truthfully either admit or deny that the defendant, on or about October 24, 1935, sent a letter to H. E.

Chism, referred to as Exhibit 13 in Government's request for admissions, although the copy of which said Exhibit 13 is a photostat, came from the files of the defendant and was returned to the Government under subpoena. No persons now associated with the defendant, National Gypsum Company, can identify the document."

I do not place any force on my request for admissions, nor the answer of the defendant under Paragraph 7.

I offer this now as being circumstantially identified because of what appears on Government's Exhibit 697. Government's Exhibit No. 697 is dated October 24, 1935.

6391 Government's Exhibit 698 is dated October 24, 1935.

Government's Exhibit No. 697 has to do with the sale of foil board to the Texas Cement Plaster Company. Government's Exhibit 698, in the first sentence, says:

"Note attached correspondence with Texas Cement Plaster Company."

On Government's Exhibit 697 there appears the notation thereon, at the top, "3091", which was placed on the carbon copy of that letter by National at the time they turned Exhibit No. 697 over to the Government.

At the top of Exhibit 698 the Court will notice that there appears the number, "3092", which indicates that 3092 follows 3091.

So I say that in view of the circumstances connected with other previously admitted documents, this document is circumstantially identified as being a document that was sent to the Texas Cement Plaster Company by National, and on that basis we offer the document as being circumstantially identified.

Justice Stephens: Let us read it, please.

(After reading Exhibit No. 698): I misunderstood you, I guess, at one point. I thought you were offering Exhibit 698 as something received from Texas, rather than as something sent to Texas.

Mr. Knuff: What we have here was received from 6392 the National Gypsum Company. The original of that letter apparently was sent to Texas. We received Exhibit No. 698 from the files of the National Gypsum Company.

Justice Stephens: I understood that, but I thought that you said that it was something that had been received by National from Texas; but on its face, it appears to have been something sent by National to Texas.

Is there any objection to this, Mr. Finck, with respect to its circumstantial identification? What the Government is asserting here, as I understand it, is that Exhibit No. 698 ought to come in as a part of Exhibit No. 697.

Mr. Finck: With respect to the attachment, your Honor, of course we couldn't tell anything about that, and the circumstance of the number "3091" and the number "3092", would not necessarily mean that this correspondence was attached together.

Nobody in the office knew anything about it, so I did not admit such a fact.

Justice Stephens: Mr. Knuff is not relying upon the answer to the request for admissions served upon you under Rule 36. He is relying simply upon circumstantial identification.

Mr. Finck: I object to it on the ground that no proper foundation has been laid for its admission, of course, and in addition to that, I also object to it on all the 6393 grounds stated with respect to Exhibit 695.

Justice Garrett: The only question immediately before the Court is the question of the identification of Exhibit 698, is it not? I mean, that is the thing we are asked to rule on now? We have to determine whether or not this is circumstantially identified.

Mr. Knuff: That is right.

Justice Stephens: Well, we will have to take that under advisement.

I am sorry, but we have to adjourn at this time. I have an emergency matter in the Court of Appeals. Unhappily, there are only two judges sitting on the Court of Appeals other than myself, and this is an emergency matter presented there which has to do with a trial in the District Court.

Therefore, we will have to adjourn until 2:30.

(Thereupon, at 11:55 o'clock a.m., a recess was taken until 2:30 o'clock p.m., of the same day.)

6394 AFTERNOON SESSION

(The trial was resumed at 2:30 o'clock p.m., pursuant to recess.)

Justice Stephens: Mr. Finck, I think we were hearing from you about the admissibility of proposed Exhibit 698, as allegedly circumstantially connected with Exhibit 697.

Mr. Finck: If the Court please, I desire to say no more, except this, that I see nothing in Exhibit 697 which in and of itself would circumstantially identify 698, which is now before us.

Justice Stephens: Has 697 been admitted?

Mr. Finck: Yes, it has.

Justice Stephens: Read your answer to the request for the admission, Mr. Finck. Read both the request for admission and the answer, if you will.

Mr. Finck: National is requested to admit that: "National Gypsum Company, on or about October 24, 1935, sent a letter to H. E. Chism, Texas Cement Plaster Company, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma."

Justice Stephens: That is directed to Exhibit 698, is it?

Mr. Finck: Yes.

Justice Stephens: Now what do you say?

Mr. Finck: We say we: "Cannot truthfully either admit or deny that the defendant on or about October 24, 6395 1935, sent a letter to H. E. Chism, referred to as Exhibit 13 in Government's Request for Admissions, although the copy of which said Exhibit 13 is a photostat, came from the files of the defendant and was returned to the Government under subpoena. No persons now associated with the defendant, National Gypsum Company, can identify the documents."

Justice Garrett: I suppose that should be "document".

Mr. Finck: It should be.

Justice Stephens: Do you deny that it is circumstantially connected? I call your attention to the fact that, laying aside the question of your admission now, and giving your attention, Mr. Finck, purely to the matter of circumstantial connection, 697 says, in the first paragraph:

"Note attached correspondence with Texas Cement Plaster Company. They want to buy Foil Lath and Foil Wallboard from us and possibly Tile Board and Grain Board."

Then at the bottom:

"In the attached letter, you will note I have added the freight from Sweetwater to Texas Cement Plaster Company's mill."

And in Exhibit 698, it says, about two-thirds of the way down:

"Freight from Sweetwater to your mill".

Mr. Finck: That is the only connection that I can see in the two documents. Exhibit 697 refers to:

6396 "Note attached correspondence wtih Texas Cement Plaster Company. They want to buy Foil Lath and Foil Wallboard from us and possibly Tile Board and Grain Board."

Then in the letter written to Mr. Chism, it refers to "your recent note to our Dallas Office".

You will note that Exhibit 697 was addressed to Krumholz at the Chicago Office. I see no connection there.

Justice Stephens: I don't quite see your point there. Exhibit 697 is directed to Krumholz at the Chicago Office, but that is an inter-office communication, isn't it?

Mr. Finck: Yes, that is an inter-office communication attaching certain correspondence with the Texas Cement Plaster Company. And, of course, 698 is a letter addressed to the Texas Cement Plaster Company. But I can't connect them both at this time by reading them. It is very true that the "Freight from Sweetwater to your mill" is indicated in the letter to Chism. But otherwise, I see no connection.

Justice Stephens: Well, it is a very close point. Judge Garrett and I are inclined to think it ought not to come in. In a way, Mr. Knuff, it is an evasion—I am sure it is not an international evasion, I don't use the term in that sense at all—of the ruling we made yesterday. If you want to serve exhibits that have attachments, and get them in within Rule 36, you should serve them together and get an admission which concerns all of them. True, 698 was 6397 served as well as 697, but the defendants say they know nothing about 698. It is a sort of a situation where the evidence is equivocal as to whether it is circumstantially connected or not, and where it is equivocal it isn't preponderating; and since the burden is upon the person offering it to show that it is admissible, Judge Garrett and I are inclined to think that it ought not to come in. Judge Jackson has a different view. It is a close question, but I think we had better rule that it is not admissible. You may have leave to try and prove it some other way, if you can.

Justice Jackson: In my opinion it is admissible,—without taking up too much wording in the record,—for the reasons that were advanced by Mr. Knuff in his tender.

Mr. Knuff: May it please the Court, I would like to have marked for Identification Government's Exhibit 699, the same being a letter dated June 25, 1932, addressed to the Board Survey Company, and signed National Gypsum Company, R. F. Burley.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 699 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: I would also like to have marked for Identification as Government's Exhibit 700, a carbon copy of a letter addressed to Mr. R. F. Burley, and signed Board Survey Company, dated July 2, 1932.

6398 (The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 700 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: I would also like to have marked for Identification as Government's Exhibit 701, a letter dated July 12, 1932, addressed to the Board Survey Company, and signed National Gypsum Company, R. F. Burley, Vice President.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 701 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: I would also like to have marked for Identification as Government's Exhibit 702, a carbon copy of a letter dated August 9, 1932, addressed to R. F. Burley, and signed Board Survey Company.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 702 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: In connection with Government's Exhibits 699, 700, 701 and 702, I call Your Honors' attention to Paragraph 14 of the Government's Request for Admissions. Paragraph 14, in connection with Exhibit 699, reads as follows:

"National Gypsum Company, on or about June 25, 1932, sent a letter to Board Survey Company, Chicago, Illinois.

A photostatic copy of said letter is attached hereto, 6399 made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit 14."

The answer of National Gypsum Company to that request is contained in Paragraph 6, in which National states that it admits 14.

In connection with Government's Exhibit 700, I call Your Honors' attention to Paragraph 15 of the Government's Request directed to National, in which appears the following:

"National Gypsum Company, on or about July 5, 1932, received a letter from Board Survey Company, dated July

2, 1932. A photostatic copy of said letter is attached hereto, made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit 15."

The answer of National Gypsum Company to that Request likewise appears in Paragraph 6, wherein National admits Paragraph 15, but with respect to Request No. 15 says that No. 15 is a photostat of an unsigned carbon copy of the document, the original of which was sent or received—in this case it would be received—by Mr. Burley.

With respect to Exhibit 701, I call Your Honors' attention to Paragraph 16 of the Request, which reads as follows:

"National Gypsum Company, on or about July 12, 1932, sent a letter to Board Survey Company, Chicago, Illinois. A photostatic copy of said letter is attached hereto, made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit 16."

The answer of National is contained in Paragraph 6, in which National admits Item No. 16 of the Govern-6400 ment's Request.

In connection with Exhibit 702, I direct Your Honors' attention to Paragraph 17 of the Government's Request, which paragraph reads as follows:

"National Gypsum Company, on or about August 11, 1932, received a letter from Board Survey Company, dated August 9, 1932. A photostatic copy of said letter is attached hereto, made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit 17."

The answer of National is contained in Paragraph 6, and in Paragraph 6 National admits the letter marked for Identification as Government's Exhibit 702, although they say here that this is a photostat of a carbon copy of the letter, the original of which, in this case, was received by National.

We now offer in evidence Government's Exhibits 699, 700, 701 and 702.

Mr. Bromley: If the Court pleases, it does seem to me that counsel could have saved us much time and many dollars of expense if he had stated merely that National admitted the authenticity of these four documents, without reading into the record, and making us pay for it, all of these requests and answers, when the net effect of them is an admission by National. I do wish and I make the request that counsel summarize these things and not read them into the record, because we have got to pay for 6401 them, unfortunately, and it is getting to be a tremendous burden.

Justice Stephens: I was about to make that same suggestion, with a little modification,—that if there is any qualification upon the admission, Mr. Finck could stand up and state what he had admitted, in very brief terms. We have had here two or three pages of transcript, at a dollar a page—(Laughter).

Mr. Knuff: (Interposing) In view of the fact that this is an extra-judicial proceeding, I thought you would want the record to show exactly what it was.

Justice Stephens: If there was any dispute as to its meaning, all right. Then I think both the Government and the other side have a right to have indicated in the record the data which is the foundation of the Court's ruling. But where it is all admitted, as this seems to be, there is hardly any reason for taking any such space.

Which are the two as to which there is a qualification on the admission?

Mr. Knuff: As to 700 and 702, these happen to be carbons, although there is no qualification on their admission. They admit that they did receive the originals.

We are not offering the writing on either Exhibit 699 or 702.

Justice Stephens: Is there any objection to these? There is no objection, I take it, on the ground of com-6402 petency, Mr. Finck, since you have made these admissions?

Mr. Finck: Only as to Baker.

Justice Stephens: I understand that, but as to National?

Mr. Finck: That is right.

Justice Stephens: Is there any objection as to relevancy or materiality on the part of any defendants?

Mr. Finck: I would like to make an objection on such grounds, relevancy and materiality.

Mr. Johnston: I assume that the running objection and ruling will stand as to these. Certainly as to Texas, I want to object to these as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and call the Court's attention to the fact that as to all of these, they just cover the same class of offer that these former letters did, and I assumed the ruling of the Court in the former would also apply to these.

Justice Stephens: We are talking about relevancy and materiality now, not about who they bind. It seems to me they probably are relevant and material, consistently with previous rulings, because they go to this question of alleged illegal use of the Board Survey Company. So objections as to relevancy and materiality are overruled. The exhibits are received in evidence, under the ruling of the majority of this Court, only as binding upon the actual legal person who made the admission, to-wit, National.

6403 (The document referred to, marked as Government's Exhibits 699, 700, 701 and 702, were received in evidence.)

Mr. Knuff: I would like to have marked for Identification as Government's Exhibit 703, a letter dated September 17, 1932, addressed to Frank M. Miller, of the Board Survey Company, and signed National Gypsum Company, R. F. Burley, Vice President.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 703 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: In Paragraph 18 of Government's Request for Admissions, we asked National to admit that this letter was sent to Mr. Miller; and in Paragraph 6 of National's answer, National admits that the letter was sent.

We now offer in evidence Government's Exhibit 703.

Mr. Finck: The same objections.

Justice Stephens: The same ruling with respect to Exhibit 703. Objections as to relevancy and materiality are overruled; and the exhibit is received in evidence, under the ruling of the majority of the Court, as binding only upon National, the person who made the admission.

(The document referred to, marked as Govern-6404 ment's Exhibit No. 703, was received in evidence.)

Mr. Knuff: I would like to have marked for Identification Government's Exhibits 704 and 705. Exhibit 704 is a letter dated September 26, 1932, addressed, to Board Survey Company, signed National Gypsum Company, "R. F. Burley—B", Vice President.

Exhibit 705 is a carbon copy of a letter dated September 27, 1932, addressed to Mr. R. F. Burley, National Gypsum Company, Buffalo, New York, and signed Board Survey Company.

(The documents referred to were marked as Government's Nos. 704 and 705, respectively, for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: In Paragraph No. 19 of the Government's Request for Admissions, we ask National to admit that Government's Exhibit 704 was sent to Board Survey Company; and in Paragraph 20 of the Request for Admissions, we ask National to admit that they received Government's Exhibit 705.

Paragraph 6 of National's answer admits that they sent Exhibit 704; and that they received the original of 705.

Justice Stephens: Those two exhibits are received under the same terms as the previous rulings. Any objections as to materiality and relevancy are overruled; and the exhibits are received as binding only upon National, the person making the admission.

6405 (The documents referred to, marked as Government's Exhibits Nos. 704 and 705, respectively, were received in evidence.)

Mr. Knuff: I would like to have marked for Identification Government's Exhibits 706 and 707.

(The documents referred to were marked as Government's Exhibits Nos. 706 and 707, respectively, for Identification.).

Mr. Knuff: Government's Exhibit 706 is a letter dated October 4, 1932, addressed to the Board Survey Company and signed National Gypsum Company, R. F. Burley, Vice President.

Exhibit 707 for Identification is a carbon copy of a letter dated October 8, 1932, addressed to Mr. R. F. Burley, and signed Board Survey Company.

In Paragraph No. 21 of the Government's Request for Admissions, we requested National to admit that they sent the letter which is marked for Identification as Government's Exhibit 706; and in Paragraph 22, we asked National to admit that they received the original of the letter which is marked Government's Exhibit 707.

Paragraph 6 of the defendant National's answer admits the sending and/or receiving of these two exhibits.

We offer in evidence Government's Exhibits 706 and 707.

6406 Justice Stephens: The same ruling as with respect to the two previous exhibits. The objections as to relevancy and materiality, if any, are overruled; and the exhibits are received in evidence as binding only upon the person making the admission, to-wit, National.

(The documents referred to, marked as Government's Exhibits Nos. 706 and 707, respectively, were received in evidence.)

Mr. Bromley: Wouldn't it do just as well if counsel said, in these instances, "counsel admits authenticity"?

Justice Stephens: I was going to suggest, myself, that possibly we could still further shorten this if Mr. Finck and Mr. Knuff could stand together, so there is no question. Or if Mr. Finck is sufficiently familiar with what is going on, I should think all you need to say, Mr. Knuff, is that "We have asked for an admission as to authenticity, of National, as to both of these exhibits, and the admission has been made."

Then we would save a great deal more time and space of the Court Reporter's record.

Where there is a debate or dispute whether or not the answer of a party, under Rule 36, constitutes an admission, then, of course, the record should show the data which the Court is ruling on; but otherwise, if it is without dis-6407 pute, let's put it in in about five words, if we can.

Now what is the next?

Mr. Knuff: I would like to have marked for Identification Government's Exhibits 708 and 709.

(The documents referred to were marked as Government's Exhibits Nos. 708 and 709, respectively, for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: Exhibit 708 is a letter dated June 2, 1933, addressed to the Board Survey Company and signed National Gypsum Company, R. F. Burley, Vice President.

Government's Exhibit 709 for Identification is a copy of a letter dated June 3, 1933, addressed to National Gypsum Company and signed Board Survey Company.

We offer in evidence 708 and 709.

Mr. Finck: They are both admitted.

Justice Stephens: There is no dispute as to authenticity, Mr. Finck, is that right?

Mr. Finck: They are admitted by National.

Justice Stephens: They may be received in evidence. Objections as to relevancy and materiality, if any, are overruled; they are received as binding only upon National, the person making the admission.

(The documents referred to, marked as Govern-6408 ment's Exhibits Nos. 708 and 709, respectively, were received in evidence.)

Mr. Knuff: I would like to have marked for Identification Government's Exhibits 710 and 711.

(The documents referred to were marked as Government's Exhibits Nos. 710 and 711, respectively, for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: Government's Exhibit 710 is a letter dated July 11, 1933, addressed to the Board Survey Company and signed R. F. Burley, Vice President. Exhibit 710 for Identification is a two-page exhibit.

Government's Exhibit 711 for Identification is a copy of a letter dated July 29, 1933, addressed to National Gypsum Company and signed Board Survey Company.

I offer in evidence Government's Exhibits 710 and 711.

Mr. Finck: The authenticity of both exhibits is admitted by National.

Justice Stephens: These are received in evidence. Any objections as to relevancy and materiality are overruled; they are received in evidence as binding only upon the person making the admission, to-wit, National.

(The documents referred to, marked as Government's Exhibits Nos. 710 and 711 for Identification, were 6409 received in evidence.)

Mr. Knuff: I would like to have marked for Identification Government's Exhibit 712, the same being a photostatic copy of a letter dated January 5, 1935, addressed to the Board Survey Company and signed National Gypsum Company.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 712 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: We now offer in evidence Government's Exhibit 712.

Mr. Finck: The authenticity of Exhibit 712 is admitted by National.

Justice Stephens: The authenticity being admitted by National, the exhibit is received as binding upon National only. Objections as to relevancy and materiality, if any, are overruled.

(The document referred to, marked as Government's Exhibit No. 712, was received in evidence.)

Mr. Knuff: I would like to have marked for Identification Government's Exhibit 713, the same being a letter dated February 19, 1936, addressed to the Board Survey

Company and signed National Gypsum Company, E. B. Biesinger.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 713 for Identification.)

6410 Mr. Knuff: I now offer in evidence Government's Exhibit 713.

Justice Stephens: Does National admit the authenticity of this exhibit?

Mr. Finck: We do.

Justice Stephens: It may be received in evidence as binding upon National only. Any objections as to relevancy and materiality are overruled.

(The document referred to, marked as Government's Exhibit No. 713, was received in evidence.)

Mr. Knuff: I would like to have marked for Identification Government's Exhibit 714.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 714 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: This is a two-page letter, dated December 17, 1930, addressed to the National Gypsum Company and signed Audenreid Whittemore, Vice President.

I would also like to have marked for Identification as Government's Exhibit 714-A, a one-page letter attached to Exhibit 714, and being dated December 17, 1930, addressed to National Gypsum Company and signed Audenreid Whittemore, Vice President.

(The document referred to was marked as Gov-6411 ernment's Exhibit No. 714-A for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: I would also like to have marked for Identification as Government's Exhibit 714 B, a four-page agreement dated the 17th of December, 1930, between Certain-teed Products Corporation and National Gypsum Company.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 714-B for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: We now offer in evidence Government's Exhibits 714, 714-A and 714-B.

Justice Stephens: Is the authenticity of these items admitted by National?

Mr. Finck: It is, Your Honor.

Justice Stephens: Let us read them.

(Exhibits examined by the Court.)

Justice Stephens: Is there any objection as to relevancy or materiality?

Mr. Finck: The same objection, Your Honor.

Justice Stephens: What is the purpose of these exhibits?

Mr. Knuff: There are several purposes, Your Honor.

On the first page of Exhibit 714, you will notice that the Certain-teed Products Corporation is conveying to National Gypsum Company, Certain-teed Products Corporation's price on plaster and miscellaneous gypsum products. That appears under the designation "C. P. C.
6412 Established Sell. Price, f.o.b. Ft. Dodge". C. P. C., I take it, stands for Certain-teed Products Corporation.

Justice Stephens: What else are you offering them for?

Mr. Knuff: In the next place, it is somewhat on the same basis as the North Holston exhibits.

Under Exhibit 714-B, the contract provides for the purchase by National, of board, from Certain-teed.

Justice Stephens: The exhibits are received in evidence. Objections as to relevancy and materiality are overruled. They are received as binding upon the person only who admits them, to-wit, National.

(The documents referred to, marked as Government's Exhibits Nos. 714, 714-A and 714-B, respectively, were received in evidence.)

Mr. Knuff: Now apart from any request for admissions, I would like at this time to substitute the original document for the carbon copy, of Government's Exhibit 343. Exhibit 343 was introduced in this case in connection with Mr. Higgins' testimony. At that time Mr. Bromley furnished us with a carbon copy of 343. Since then we have found the original letter, and we would like permission to substitute the original of that letter for the carbon that has been received in evidence. The original of the letter has 6413 attached thereto the attachments that are mentioned in the carbon copy, which were not a part of the original exhibit. We are making the attachments a part of Exhibit 343 now.

6414 Justice Stephens: Is there any objection to this substitution by anyone?

Mr. Bromley: I don't understand the purpose of it.

Justice Stephens: The purpose of it, apparently, is to get in evidence certain attachments which are referred to in the carbon copy of Exhibit 343, and which are apparently attached to the original which is now being offered.

Mr. Bromley: Defendants object to the substitution, which obviously enlarges the scope and character of the original exhibit. I don't know anything about these things that he now annexes to Exhibit 343.

Mr. Knuff: Exhibit 343 came from the files of United States Gypsum Company—

Justice Jackson: (Interposing) Through what witness was that introduced?

Mr. Knuff: Mr. Higgins, when he was on the witness stand.

Justice Jackson: Was it objected to as not being complete?

Mr. Knuff: We didn't have Exhibit No. 343 at all, and Mr. Bromley handed it over to us, handed the carbon over to us, and said in effect—I am not quoting him directly—"Why don't you use this?"

We looked at it and had it marked, and offered it in evidence. We now find the original of it, which was 6415 taken from United States Gypsum Company's files, and we are substituting this for the carbon copy that Mr. Bromley furnished us.

Mr. Bromley: And adding five or six additional pages.

Mr. Johnston: I certainly object to substitution by adding these additional pages here, which seem to be five or six invoices, and putting them in now when we have no opportunity to cross-examine anybody about them. They couldn't be relevant, material or competent as to Texas.

Justice Stephens: Do you wish to be heard, Mr. Knuff?

Mr. Knuff: Well, as I said a moment ago, they came from the files of United States Gypsum Company. Mr. Bromley undoubtedly has photostats of them. I understand that before USG turned over anything to us, under subpoena, that they made photostats. They unquestionably have a photostat of this exhibit with these attachments.

Justice Stephens: Well, that doesn't go to the problem raised by the objections. The problem is that this Exhibit 343 came in through the testimony of Higgins, and the defendants had a chance at that time to cross-examine him as to its meaning; and if the attachments had been attached to the exhibit at that time, defendants would have had an opportunity to cross-examine Higgins on the attachments; but they weren't attached, and thus they didn't have that opportunity. I should think, unless you want to recall Higgins, that the objections are well taken to the sub-6416 stitution of this exhibit.

The objections are sustained and the substitution is denied, with leave to the Government to recall Higgins if it wishes to accredit the attachments.

Mr. Bromley: May it please the Court, I find I totally misapprehended the statement of counsel with respect to Exhibit No. 714. Isn't it perfectly plain that there isn't any mention of patented board or lath or any other kind of board or lath in Exhibit No. 714, and if that be so, what possible materiality or relevancy can that have to any charge in this case?

Justice Stephens: Well, there is a reference to Keene's Cement.

Mr. Knuff: The second item is, "Concrete Bond Plaster", and the next one, "Sand Float Finish"—both of which are plaster.

Mr. Bromley: But there is no charge in the complaint that anybody agreed or conspired to fix the resale prices of plaster or Keene's Cement.

Mr. Knuff: This isn't a case of fixing the resale price, it is a case of the Certain-teed Products Corporation sending to National Gypsum Company, Certain-teed's prices.

Justice Stephens: Well, what do you want to prove by it, under the issue? What wrong does it aid you to prove; what charged wrong does it aid in the proof of?

6417 I ask that question, not to express doubt, but to get information. I don't understand it myself.

Mr. Knuff: Paragraph 45(c) of the complaint states:

"(c) concertedly raising, maintaining, and stabilizing the general level of prices for plaster and miscellaneous gypsum products manufactured and sold by said companies in the Eastern area."

Justice Stephens: That term "miscellaneous gypsum products" was defined how in the bill of particulars?

Mr. Bromley: As Keene's Cement, block and tile.

Under this contract, National is buying these products listed on the first page of Exhibit 714 from Certain-teed, and Certain-teed, in the second paragraph, states, among other things, in effect, "We will sell you Land Plaster at $3.75. Our price at which we sell generally is $6.00."

That is to show them what a good deal they are getting.

Then the contract provides that if the C. P. C. established selling price changes, then the price to National changes.

So of course Certain-teed has got to inform National of what the established selling price charged by C. P. C. is, because if that changes, then the cost to National changes.

At any rate, it is a purchase by National, and if counsel contends that giving National this information is in support of any charge in the complaint, it must be a charge that National, in its resale of such plaster or 6418 Keene's Cement, as it bought from Certain-teed, would observe the established selling price of C. P. C.

But there is no charge in the complaint about resale price-fixing of plaster or Keene's Cement.

Justice Stephens: Mr. Knuff disclaims that it is introduced under the resale price-fixing charge. He asserts that it is introduced under Paragraph 45(c) of the complaint, which states, "(c) concertedly raising, maintaining, and stabilizing the general level of prices for plaster and miscellaneous gypsum products", and so forth.

How does it tend to prove that, Mr. Knuff?

Mr. Knuff: An interchange of price information—that is one of the commonest ways of getting into an agreement to stabilize prices, the interchange of price information.

Justice Stephens: This doesn't purport to be an interchange of price information; it purports to be prices at which Certain-teed will sell to National.

Mr. Knuff: That is in the first column, where it says $3.75. Then in the second column, under "C. P. C. Established Sell. Price, f.o.b. Ft. Dodge", it states the price as $6.00. That is the price that Certain-teed is selling at. Certain-teed is giving its price to National.

Mr. Bromley: Look at the next paragraph, Mr. Knuff, where it states:

"All prices quoted in this letter are subject to 6419 change if the general market price in the territory supplied by the Fort Dodge Plant changes", and so forth.

Mr. Knuff: I have read it—so what?

Mr. Bromley: That would explain to me why C. P. C. gave the established market price.

Justice Stephens: Well, we think the objections probably go to weight, Mr. Bromley, and we will receive Exhibit 714 in evidence, as previously stated. That is to say, the ruling may stand.

Mr. Knuff: I would like at this time to have marked for identification Government's Exhibit 715, the same being an inter-office memorandum, dated October 19, 1928, addressed to J. F. Haggerty, and signed in typewriting, M. H. Baker, and superimposed on the typing appear the initials "M.H.B."

In Paragraph 1 of our request we asked the National Gypsum Company to admit that this memorandum was sent by Baker to Mr. Haggerty. In Paragraph 1 of their answer they say that they cannot either admit or deny that Baker sent this memorandum. Now I suppose here we have a situation where the matter will have to be spread on the record.

Justice Stephens: Yes, I suppose so, if you want to make a record on the matter.

Mr. Knuff: In connection with Government's Exhibit No. 715 for identification, under its request for admissions, the Government requested the National Gypsum Company to admit that:

6420 "M. H. Baker, on or about October 19, 1928, sent an inter-office memorandum to F. J. Haggerty, president of National Gypsum Company. A photostat of said inter-office memorandum is attached hereto, made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit 1."

The answer of National Gypsum Company appears in Paragraph 1 of National's answer to the Government's request for admissions. It reads as follows:

"1. Cannot truthfully either admit or deny that M. H. Baker on or about October 19, 1928, sent an inter-office memorandum to J. F. Haggerty, President of National Gypsum Company, as set forth in the Government's Exhibit 1, for the following reasons: J. F. Haggerty died on or about April 29, 1929. M. H. Baker does not have any present recollection of writing the memorandum. Defendant admits that said Exhibit was taken from the files of National Gypsum Company and that the initials 'M.H.B.' written at the end of the memorandum, are in the handwriting of M. H. Baker, President of National Gypsum Company."

Justice Stephens: Now what is your contention, Mr. Knuff?

Mr. Knuff: We would like at this time to offer in evidence Government's Exhibit No. 715, and in connection with that offer, and apart from the request for admissions, we say that the document is entitled to be admitted

6421 in evidence because it is admitted by National that the initials, "M.H.B." are in the handwriting of

M. H. Baker, President of the National Gypsum Company. Whether or not it was received by Mr. Haggerty, the fact remains that it is still an admission of M.H.B.—Mr. Baker.

Justice Stephens: Mr. Finck, what do you say?

Mr. Finck: May it please the Court, the document was submitted to the officers of National, and we cannot admit the request of the Government, that this memorandum was communicated to Mr. Haggerty. Furthermore, the document is entirely irrelevant, as I see it. There is no charge in the complaint that we exploited the Gypsum Institute. The memorandum on the face of it seems to have been filed in the Gypsum Institute files. The document did come from the files of the National Gypsum Company, but not from the files of J. F. Haggerty. There is no one in the company, no officer or employee or anyone else, to whom this has been presented, who knows anything about it, and we cannot make the admission which the Government requests.

Justice Stephens: You admit, however, that it was taken from the files of National?

Mr. Finck: That is right, and we admit that the initials, "M.H.B." are Mr. Baker's initials.

Justice Jackson: Made by him?

Mr. Finck: Presumably so. We admit that they 6422 are in his handwriting.

Justice Jackson: Then they would have to have been made by him.

Mr. Finck: Yes.

Justice Stephens: The question is one of relevancy.

Mr. Finck: The question is whether it was sent to Mr. Haggerty.

Justice Stephens: What difference does that make, if it is a statement by Mr. Baker as an officer of National, providing it is relevant and material—what difference does it make whether it reached Haggerty or not, if it is offered as an admission?

Mr. Finck: I suppose it doesn't, but my main contention is that it is irrelevant, that it only deals with the subject of the Gypsum Institute.

Justice Stephens: We will hear you, Mr. Knuff, before we rule on the question of its materiality and relevancy. There isn't any charge here, is there, that the defendants were exploiting the Gypsum Institute in 1928?

Mr. Finck: The memorandum itself is directed only to Baker's ideas as to how the Institute should be operated, as far as I can see. He talks about the Institute being exploited with the trade—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) We understand your position—

6423 Mr. Finck: (Continuing)—and setting up a code of trade ethics. What that has to do with any charge in the complaint I cannot see. I am just bewildered on that point.

Justice Stephens: What do you say, Mr. Knuff, briefly?

Mr. Knuff: If your Honor pleases, it shows a conspiratorial state of mind.

Under Paragraph 1 it says; "One and the same price to all dealers in each market."

Then under Paragraph 2 it says, "100% distribution through dealers."

Now insofar as Paragraph No. 2 is concerned, we allege that there was a conspiracy here to eliminate jobbers, and whether or not this conclusively shows that, or whether or not this exhibit, taken in and of itself conclusively shows a conspiratorial state of mind, we say that it has some weight, that it is relevant; and that this exhibit, in connection with all other evidence in the case, should be considered by the Court.

The Court will notice that this exhibit is dated October 19, 1928, during the period in which we say that the conspiracy was in operation. For that reason, we think that it is both relevant and material, as showing the state of mind of National at that time, as to Paragraph 1, and certainly as showing the state of mind of National insofar as jobbers were concerned.

Mr. Finck: If the Court please—

6424 Justice Stephens: (Interposing) Is there anything in the record about a Gypsum Institute?

Mr. Finck: Nothing.

Mr. Bramley: Nothing.

Justice Stephens: Yes, Mr. Finck?

Mr. Finck: It seems to me that the Government is going 'way beyond the purpose of the rules, when they are asking us to admit and asking the Court to admit in evidence documents which seem to contain real issues. Now if Mr. Knuff desires to have Mr. Baker explain what is meant by this memorandum, to the Court, he can get him very easily. I can explain everything in the memorandum, but I don't suppose that is my office at the moment.

But I hardly think that the Court should take a document of this kind, which relates to an entirely foreign matter, something foreign to the issues, and draw inferences from it, when there is a real issue involved. This letter most certainly is not relevant to the issues in this case.

Justice Stephens: I am inclined to think that your objection to the use of the Rule to get the document in evidence, is not well taken, Mr. Finck. Of course, under the ruling of Judge Garrett and myself, it would be binding only upon National as respects the admission that these initials were Baker's initials, and in his hand-6425 writing, and that it was found in National's files;
but I suppose the purpose of Rule 36 is to get admissions in evidence of a binding character, for what they are worth.

It does seem to go far, in view of the controversial nature, of the claimed controversial nature of the alleged admission. However, I don't think we need to rule on it on the basis of Rule 36, and we will not make a ruling on that basis.

It is my view, and I think Judge Garrett agrees with me, that the offered document is entirely irrelevant and immaterial under the issues. It doesn't seem to me that the fact the defendants may be shown, or one of the defendants may be shown by the exhibit, to have an alleged conspiratorial feeling with respect to the Gypsum Institute, is sufficiently connected here. It is too remote. Do you agree with me?

Justice Garrett: Yes.

Justice Stephens: What is your view, Judge Jackson?

Justice Jackson: I dissent from that ruling. I think it is relevant and material and should be admitted.

Justice Stephens: The majority ruling is that it is irrelevant and immaterial, and the exhibit is excluded.

Mr. Knuff: I would like to have marked at this time, as Government's Exhibit No. 716 for identification, a telegram, dated May 17, 1929, addressed to S. L. Avery, 6426 and signed M. H. Baker.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 716 for identification.)

Mr. Knuff: We asked, in our request for admissions, for National to admit that Mr. Baker sent this telegram. National's answer to that was that they could not truthfully admit or deny that the telegram was sent by Mr.

Baker to Mr. Avery, because there was nothing in the contents of the telegram to refresh the recollection of any officer, employee or agent of the defendant that such a telegram was sent.

Apart from the request and the answer of National, we offer Government's Exhibit No. 716, and we contend that this exhibit is circumstantially identified, and for the following reasons:

First, the telegram is dated May 17, 1929, which was just four days prior to the May 21st agreement that has been testified to in this case, before.

Second, it is addressed to Mr. S. L. Avery, a person who was intimately associated with the May 21st agreement.

Third, in the first line of the telegram it states, "Our contract signed and in mail". In connection with that, Government's Exhibit No. 3 shows that the National Gypsum Company's contract was signed on the 6427 16th day of May, just one day previous to the 17th, the date of this telegram. So that the person who was sending the telegram certainly must have known something about when Government's Exhibit No. 3 was signed.

Fourth, the telegram says, "We are working with Ebsary with hope of everybody being set by Saturday to justify your calling meeting all board makers Monday." Since the telegram was dated May 17, 1929, I have consulted the World Almanac, and I find that Monday would be May the 20th, which was one day previous to the meeting of Tuesday, May 21st.

Fifth, the telegram was signed by a Mr. Baker—at that time there was a Mr. Baker connected with the National Gypsum Company at Buffalo, the very place where this telegram originated.

Sixth, this telegram was taken from the files of the addressee, S. L. Avery, or from the files of the United States Gypsum Company, and bears on its face the receipt stamp of the United States Gypsum Company, showing it to have been received in Chicago on May 17, 1929. I don't know that the hour hand indicates the exact hour that it was received, but there is a receiving stamp of the United States Gypsum Company affixed right to the telegram. We received this from United Sates Gypsum Company under subpoena.

We say that in view of all these circumstances,
6428 although Mr. Baker hasn't any recollection of this telegram, that the telegram is circumstantially identified and is entitled to be admitted as an exhibit in this case.

Justice Stephens: Is there any objection?

Mr. Finck: If the Court please, we of course have told all we know about this telegram, but even though all the circumstances suggested by Mr. Knuff are true, after having submitted this to Mr. Baker I hesitate very much to admit it myself. He remembers nothing about it. It seems to me that—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) We are not asking you to admit it. We are just asking what you state in reply, if anything, to Mr. Knuff's argument as to its alleged circumstantial identification, outside of your failure to admit.

Mr. Finck: I have nothing more to say on that.

Mr. Bromley: I don't understand that what counsel has said has anything to do with circumstantial identification. He hasn't said anything about the telegram. There is nothing on the telegram that identifies it at all. I don't believe what he has been arguing about is properly addressed to circumstantial identification at all. There is nothing on the document that identifies it.

Justice Stephens: Is it denied that it came out of your files?

6429 Mr. Bromley: It is not.

Justice Garrett: There is testimony as to that meeting on the 20th in the record, is there not?

Mr. Knuff: On the 21st.

Justice Garrett: Yes—that was my recollection.

Mr. Knuff: Mr. Lenci testified concerning that, and I am not sure whether Mr. Whittemore did or not. There is also in evidence, as Government's Exhibit 3, National's contract which shows that it was signed on the 16th of May.

Justice Stephens: Yes, I understand that.

(The Justices conferred.)

Justice Stephens: We are of the view that it is circumstantially identified, and it is received in evidence subject to the usual reservation with respect to declarations of alleged co-conspirators.

(The document referred to, marked as Government's Exhibit No. 716, was received in evidence.)

Justice Stephens: We will take the afternoon recess at this time.

(Thereupon, at 4:07 o'clock p.m., an adjournment was taken until 10:00 o'clock a.m., Wednesday, April 19, 1944.)

6430 IN THE

DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Civil Action No. 8017

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

Plaintiff,

v.

UNITED STATES GYPSUM COMPANY; NATIONAL GYPSUM COMPANY; CERTAIN-TEED PRODUCTS CORPORATION; THE CELOTEX CORPORATION; EBSARY GYPSUM COMPANY, INC.; NEWARK PLASTER COMPANY; SAMUEL M. GLOYD, doing business under the name of TEXAS CEMENT PLASTER COMPANY; SEWELL L. AVERY; OLIVER M. KNODE; MELVIN H. BAKER; BROR H. DAHLBERG; HENRY J. HARTLEY; FREDERICK G. EBSARY; and FREDERICK TOMKINS,

Defendants.

Seventh Floor,
Internal Revenue Building,
Washington, D. C.,
Wednesday, April 19, 1944.

The above-entitled cause came on for further hearing at 10:00 o'clock a.m., pursuant to adjournment, before Honorable Harold M. Stephens, Honorable Finis J. Garrett, and Honorable Joseph R. Jackson, sitting as the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

APPEARANCES:

(Same as heretofore noted.)

6435 Mr. Knuff: May it please the Court, at this time we would like to have marked for identification Government's Exhibit 343-A, the same being a letter dated May 24, 1932, addressed to Mr. F. M. Miller, and having attached thereto National Gypsum Company's Invoices numbered 58,467, 57,851, 56,568, 56,499, 56,376, and 55,253. Those were handed up to Your Honors yesterday morning as a separate exhibit marked 343.

Justice Jackson: That is the one you wanted to substitute?

Mr. Knuff: Yes.

Justice Jackson: I don't believe I ever saw that.

Mr. Knuff: I gave them to the Clerk yesterday morning to place on the bench.

Justice Stephens: I have them, but Judge Garrett and Judge Jackson don't appear to have them.

Justice Jackson: What is the date of that, Mr. Knuff?

Mr. Knuff: May 24, 1932.

Justice Jackson: From Baker to Miller?

6436 Mr. Knuff: Yes.

Justice Jackson: I have it.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 343-A for identification.)

Justice Stephens: That is the original of the exhibit which, as Exhibit 343, has been put in in copy form, is it?

Mr. Knuff: Yes.

Justice Stephens: That is the one you attempted to substitute yesterday in order to get the attachments in, and we ruled adversely against you?

Mr. Knuff: That is right.

We asked Mr. Finck to admit the genuineness of the document, and in Paragraph 6 of Mr. Finck's answer the genuineness was admitted.

We now offer in evidence Government's Exhibit 343-A.

Justice Jackson: How many pages are there in that?

Mr. Knuff: There are two pages to the letter, and 6 pages of invoices, making a total of 8 pages.

Justice Stephens: And they are all marked Exhibit 343-A?

Mr. Knuff: Yes.

Justice Stephens: What paragraph of your request was that contained in?

Mr. Knuff: No. 30.

6437 Justice Jackson: That was the substituted sheet?

Mr. Knuff: Yes.

Justice Stephens: What paragraph of Mr. Finck's answer covers that?

Mr. Knuff: Paragraph 6.

Justice Stephens: Is there any objection?

Mr. Bromley: We object on the ground that it is incompetent because not binding on any defendant other than National.

Justice Stephens: Exhibit 343-A is received in evidence as binding upon National only, to-wit, the person who made the admission.

(The document referred to, marked as Government's Exhibit No. 343-A, was received in evidence.)

Mr. Knuff: I would like to have marked for identification at this time, Government's Exhibit 717, the same being a letter dated June 20, 1939, addressed to Mr. S. L. Avery and signed M. H. Baker, with the initials "MP" following Mr. Baker's name.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 717 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: In connection with this exhibit, we asked Mr. Finck to admit the genuineness of the document
6438 in Paragraph 3 of our request, or rather, we asked Mr. Finck to admit that the letter was sent to Mr. Avery. In answer to that, Mr. Finck—

Mr. Finck: (Interposing) If the Court please, I think I can save time. We will admit the authenticity of these next two exhibits.

Mr. Knuff: We offer Exhibit No. 717 in evidence.

Justice Stephens: That is received in evidence as binding only upon National, the person who made the admission.

(The document referred to, marked as Goverment's Exhibit No. 717, was received in evidence.)

Mr. Knuff: We would like to have marked at this time for Identification, Government's Exhibit 718, the same being a letter dated November 2, 1931, addressed to Mr. S. L. Avery, and signed M. H. Baker, President.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 718 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: I understand from Mr. Finck that the genuineness of that document is also admitted.

Mr. Finck: That is right.

Mr. Knuff: We offer in evidence Government's Exhibit 718.

Justice Stephens: It is received in evidence as 6439 binding on National only, the person who made the admission.

(The document referred to, marked as Government's Exhibit No. 718, was received in evidence.)

Justice Stephens: Does that finish those concerning National?

Mr. Knuff: That finishes the National exhibits, Your Honor.

Justice Stephens: What is the next set?

Mr. Knuff: The USG exhibits.

Justice Stephens: Are there available, by any chance, copies of USG's answers?

Mr. Bromley: Yes, Your Honor.

Justice Stephens: They weren't presented to the Judges heretofore, and it might be convenient if we had them now.

Mr. Bromley: We have one copy.

(Copy of USG answers handed to Justice Stephens.)

Justice Stephens: I will look at that, and then I will show it to my colleagues as necessary. It is quite brief. Proceed.

Mr. Knuff: I offer in evidence Government's Exhibit 550, the same having been previously marked for Identification. In the Government's Request for Admissions, we asked USG to admit that the letter was sent to Mr. Black. That is contained in Paragraph 1 of our Request.

6440 In Paragraph 1 of USG's answer, USG admitted that.

Justice Jackson: That is Exhibit 550?

Mr. Knuff: Yes.

Justice Jackson: How do we jump back like that?

Mr. Knuff: When Mr. Lenci was on the witness stand, I thought he could identify Mr. Carey's signature.

Justice Jackson: I see.

Mr. Keber: Judge Jackson, I thought I heard you make an observation that you had an extra copy of that series of exhibits, and if you do have, I wonder if we might use it back here?

Justice Jackson: Yes, I will write my name on here so it might be routed back to us.

Mr. Keber: Thank you.

(Set of USG exhibits handed to Mr. Keber.)

Justice Stephens: The admission seems not to comprehend the handwritten additions to the letter.

Mr. Knuff: Those are not offered.

Justice Stephens: Is there any objection to this document?

Does this contain more than one page, Mr. Knuff?

Mr. Knuff: This contains three pages, Your Honor.

Justice Stephens: Unless there is other objection, it will be received in evidence as binding only on USG, the person making the admission.

6441 (The document referred to, marked as Government's Exhibit No. 550, was received in evidence.)

Justice Stephens: Proceed.

Mr. Knuff: In connection with Government's Exhibit 550, in paragraph 2 of the Government's request, we asked USG to admit that on or about December 28, 1934, they sent a similar letter, and enclosed therewith similar enclosures, to each of the following companies: Atlantic Gypsum Products Corporation, Certain-teed Products Corporation, Kelley Plasterboard Company, Inc., National Gypsum Company, and Universal Gypsum & Lime Company. The USG has made that admission.

Justice Stephens: In Paragraph 1 of USG's answer?

Mr. Knuff: Yes.

We offer in evidence at this time Government's Exhibit 554, the same having been previously marked for Identification.

Justice Jackson: Identify that by date, please.

Mr. Knuff: December 31, 1934.

Mr. Johnston: If the Court please, before we go to that next exhibit, hadn't the record better show as to this admission on 550?

Justice Stephens: I don't think there is anything for the Court to do under those circumstances.

Mr. Johnston: He is offering it.

6442 Justice Stephens: Exhibit 550 is in evidence.

Mr. Johnston: I am talking about this other statement, this other admission. The fact that USG admits that a similar letter was sent to these other companies wouldn't in any manner bind Texas.

Mr. Knuff: Texas wasn't mentioned.

Mr. Johnston: That is what I wanted the record to show. It is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial as to Texas.

Mr. Oliver: And also as to Celotex and Dahlberg.

Mr. Keber: I take the same position with respect to Certain-teed and Hartley.

Mr. Knuff: Certain-teed was mentioned.

Mr. Keber: But the admission wasn't made by Certain-teed.

Justice Stephens: Well, the admission which has just been referred to by Government counsel, based upon the Request for Admissions in Request No. 2, as to USG, and answered in Paragraph 1 of USG's answer to the Request for Admissions, is treated by the Court as binding only upon USG.

Now what is this next one?

Mr. Knuff: I offered in evidence, if Your Honor pleases, Government's Exhibit 554. That was previously marked for Identification while Mr. Lenci was on the witness stand. We asked USG, in Request No. 3, to admit that the letter was sent to Arthur Black; and in Paragraph 1 of USG's 6443 answer, they so admit.

Mr. Bromley: Except the handwritten notations.

Mr. Knuff: Except the handwritten notations, yes.

Justice Stephens: This is received in evidence as binding only on USG.

(The document referred to, marked as Government's Exhibit No. 554, was received in evidence.)

Mr. Knuff: With reference to Government's Exhibit 554, in paragraph 4 of the Government's Request for Admissions, we asked USG to admit that a similar letter was sent by the Board Survey Company, on December 31, 1934, to each of the following companies: Atlantic Gypsum Products Corporation, Certain-teed Products Corporation, Kelley Plasterboard Company, Inc., National Gypsum Company, and Universal Gypsum & Lime Company.

In Paragraph 1 of USG's answer, they so admit.

Justice Stephens: Except for the handwritten notations which may appear on the letter.

Mr. Knuff: That is right. Of course, there couldn't be any handwritten notations on the letters—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) I see that USG's response has to do with handwritten notations which appear on Exhibits 1, 2 and 3—that is, Exhibits 1, 2 and 3 referred to in the Request for Admissions. What do they cor-6444 respond to in the exhibits as listed in the Court numbers?

Mr. Knuff: No. 2 corresponds to Exhibit 554.

Justice Garrett: Well, it is marked "3" on mine. Is that December 31, 1934?

Mr. Knuff: No. 3 is also dated December 31, 1934. Exhibit 554, which is Exhibit No. 2 of the Government's Request for Admissions, is a one-page exhibit.

Justice Garrett: I see.

Justice Stephens: I am sorry, but I am a little confused. This Exhibit 554 that I have before me doesn't bear any exhibit number as it does in this other file.

Mr. Johnston: If the Court please, Exhibit 554 was a letter from Board Survey to Black, dated December 31, 1934, and was admitted on February 22.

Justice Stephens: It was identified, but it wasn't admitted, according to my records.

Mr. Johnston: Yes, identified.

Justice Stephens: I should think, as a matter of proper precaution, the record ought to show that the admission is recorded in the terms made by USG, which does not include an admission of any handwritten notations, and that the admission is treated by the Court as binding only on USG.

Mr. Knuff: I don't think any handwriting is involved in this one at all.

Justice Jackson: It doesn't make any difference 6445 whether there is or is not, does it, Mr. Knuff?

Mr. Knuff: No, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: If there isn't, you are not harmed; and if there is, USG is protected within the terms of its own admission.

Mr. Knuff: We offer in evidence Government's Exhibit 556, the same having been marked for Identification when the Witness George N. Lenci was on the stand.

We asked USG in Request No. 5 to admit that the letter was sent to Arthur Black; and in Paragraph 1 of USG's answer, they so admit, except that they don't admit the handwriting that is contained on this exhibit.

Justice Jackson: That is the letter starting "Re: Dunnage"?

Mr. Knuff: That is correct, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: The exhibit is admitted as binding only upon USG.

(The document referred to, marked as Government's Exhibit No. 556, was received in evidence.)

Mr. Knuff: With reference to Exhibit 556, we asked USG to admit that on or about December 31, 1934, they sent a similar letter to each of the following companies: Atlantic Gypsum Products Corporation, Certain-teed Products Corporation, Kelley Plasterboard Company, 6446 Inc., National Gypsum Company, and Universal Gypsum & Lime Company.

In Paragraph 1 of USG's answer, they so admit.

Justice Stephens: That admission may be recorded as binding upon USG only, and as not containing an admission of any handwritten notations which may possibly appear upon the letters referred to.

Mr. Knuff: I would like at this time to have marked for Identification Government's Exhibit 719, the same being a letter dated May 10, 1935, addressed to Mr. Arthur R. Black, and signed Board Survey Company, E. W. Casey, Executive Secretary.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 719 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: In Government's Request No. 7, we asked USG to admit that this letter was sent to Mr. Black; and in Paragraph 2 of USG's answer, they so admit, except for the handwriting notation in the upper left-hand corner of the exhibit.

Justice Stephens: There is no notation as to admission of the handwriting, but you don't mean to offer the handwriting, of course.

Mr. Knuff: We don't offer that anyway.

We now offer Government's Exhibit 719 in evidence.

Justice Stephens: That is in your Request No. 7?
6447 Mr. Knuff: That is right.

Justice Stephens: Exhibit 719 is received in evidence as binding on USG only.

(The document referred to, marked as Government's Exhibit No. 719, was received in evidence.)

Mr. Knuff: With reference to Government's Exhibit 719, we asked USG to admit that a similar letter was sent on May 10, 1935, to each of the following companies: Atlantic Gypsum Products Corporation, Certain-teed Products Corporation, Kelley Plasterboard Company, Inc., National Gypsum Company, and Universal Gypsum & Lime Company. In Paragraph 2 of USG's answer, they so admit.

Justice Stephens: That is covered by the Government's Request No. 81

Mr. Knuff: That is right, Your Honor.

Justice Stephens: Well, that admission may be shown, but is it treated by the Court as binding upon USG only.

Mr. Knuff: I would like at this time to have marked for Identification Government's Exhibit 720, the same being a telegram dated May 17, 1929, addressed to S. M. Gloyd, Texas Cement Plaster Company, and signed S. L. Avery.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 720 for Identification.)

6448 Mr. Knuff: We would also like to have marked for Identification Government's Exhibit 721, the same being a telegram dated 5-18-29, addressed to S. M. Gloyd and signed S. L. Avery.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 721 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: We would also like to have marked for Identification Government's Exhibit 722, the same being a telegram dated May 20, 1929, addressed to S. L. Avery, and signed S. M. Gloyd.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 722 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: With reference to Exhibit 720, in Paragraph 9 of the Government's Request, we requested USG to admit that such a telegram was sent; and in Paragraph 2 of USG's answer, it is so admitted.

With reference to Government's Exhibit 721, in Paragraph 10 of the Government's Request, we asked USG to admit that such a telegram was sent; and in Paragraph 2 of USG's answer, they so admit.

With reference to Government's Exhibit 722, in Paragraph 11 of the Government's Request, we asked USG to admit that such a telegram was received; and in Paragraph 2 of USG's answer, USG so admits.

6449 We offer in evidence Government's Exhibits 720, 721 and 722.

Justice Stephens: They are received as binding upon USG only, the person making the admission.

(The documents referred to, marked as Government's Exhibits Nos. 720, 721, and 722, respectively, were received in evidence.)

Mr. Bromley: May it please the Court, I don't believe it is necessary for Mr. Knuff to burden us with a recital of the number of his request and the number of our admission. Most of these exhibits we admit. Why can't he say, "Authenticity admitted", and stop, instead of taking a half a page of the record as to each one of these?

Justice Stephens: I should think that could be done.

Mr. Knuff: I will do so.

Justice Stephens: The only place where it is necessary to put in either the substance or the form or the detail of an admission and request, is where there is something for the Court to act on, some dispute between counsel as to what the admission means; but if you have received an admission of authenticity of a document, all you need to do is refer to the document and say that an admission of authenticity has been made; and if counsel for the opposite party 6450 doesn't object to that, that is the end of it.

Mr. Knuff: I should have had marked for Identification at the same time, Government's Exhibit 723, the same being a carbon copy of a letter dated May 20, 1929, addressed to Mr. S. M. Gloyd, and signed "President".

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 723 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: Authenticity admitted.

Justice Stephens: By USG?

Mr. Knuff: By USG.

We offer Government's Exhibit 723 in evidence.

Justice Stephens: Received in evidence as binding on USG only.

(The document referred to, marked as Government's Exhibit No. 723, was received in evidence.)

Mr. Johnston: If the Court please, I just want to make an observation or inquiry. I suppose the purpose of the Government in offering that exhibit is to clear up any question as to whether or not Mr. Gloyd was at that meeting on May 21, 1929, in Chicago. I think that letter clarifies the situation. I suppose that is why it was offered.

Mr. Knuff: We are not bound by any of Mr. Johnston's suppositions.

6451 Justice Stephens: Is there a dispute between the parties as to whether Mr. Gloyd was or was not present at that meeting?

Mr. Knuff: I don't know whether he was or not.

Mr. Johnston: There is no evidence that he was there, and they have been talking all the time about his attending that meeting in Chicago, and this ought to satisfy them.

Justice Stephens: You may proceed, gentlemen.

Mr. Knuff: I wonder if we can take the morning recess at this time?

Justice Stephens: Yes.

(Thereupon, a short recess was taken, after which the trial was resumed as follows:)

6452 Justice Stephens: Proceed.

Mr. Knuff: With regard to Exhibits 720, 721, and 723, authenticity wasn't the only thing involved in the Government's request. Admission was also requested that these telegrams, Exhibits 720 and 721, were sent. So I want the record to show that they are authentic telegrams, and that the telegrams, Exhibits 720 and 721, and the letter, Exhibit 723, were sent.

I would like at this time to have marked for identification Government's Exhibit No. 724, the same being a telegram, or rather a copy of a telegram, dated May 18, 1929, addressed to F. Fred G. Ebsary, and signed S. L. Avery.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 724 for identification.)

Mr. Knuff: We offer in evidence Government's Exhibit No. 724. It is admitted that the telegram is authentic, and that it was sent.

Justice Stephens: The admission may be shown, and the exhibits will be received as binding only upon USG.

(The document referred to, marked as Government's Exhibit No. 724, was received in evidence.)

Mr. Knuff: We would like at this time to have marked for identification Government's Exhibit 725, the same 6453 being a copy of a telegram, dated May 18, 1929, addressed to M. H. Baker, of the National Gypsum Company, and signed S. L. Avery.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 725 for identification.)

Mr. Knuff: We would also like to have marked for identification at this time Government's Exhibit No. 726, the same being a copy of a telegram dated June 24, 1929, addressed to M. H. Baker, and signed John E. MacLeish.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 726 for identification.)

Mr. Knuff: We offer in evidence Government's Exhibits 725 and 726.

It is admitted by USG that the telegrams are authentic, and that they were sent.

Mr. Bromley: The admission referred to by counsel was qualified to the extent that the typed notations to the left of the signature on Exhibit 726, were not on the telegram as sent.

Mr. Knuff: That is correct.

Justice Stephens: That limitation may be shown upon the admission.

The exhibits are received in evidence as binding
6454 upon USG only.

(The documents referred to, marked as Government's Exhibits Nos. 725 and 726, were received in evidence.)

Mr. Knuff: We would like to have marked for identification at this time Government's Exhibit No. 727, the same being a letter, dated June 13, 1933—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) That is not the next one in the file which we have, is it?

Mr. Knuff: No, your Honor, skip one.

It is dated June 13, 1933, and is addressed to Mr. F. M. Miller, and signed in typewriting, H. F. Sadler.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 727 for identification.)

Mr. Knuff: The authenticity of this memorandum, and the fact that it was sent, is admitted by USG.

Justice Stephens: Exhibit No. 727 is received in evidence as binding upon USG only.

(The document referred to, marked as Government's Exhibit No. 727, was received in evidence.)

Mr. Knuff: We would like to have marked for identification at this time Government's Exhibit No. 728, the same being a memorandum, dated April 21, 1933, address-
6455 ed to Mr. F. M. Miller—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) You are going back now, in our sets of exhibits?

Mr. Knuff: Yes, I am going back one letter.

Justice Stephens: Oh, yes.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 728 for identification.)

Mr. Knuff: At this time we offer Government's Exhibit No. 728 as being circumstantially identified.

Justice Stephens: Is there any objection to the circumstantial identification of Exhibit No. 728?

Mr. Bromley: I don't see that there is any circumstantial identification of any kind.

Mr. Knuff: The circumstances on which the Government relies are: First, that it was admitted that Exhibit 728 was taken from the files of USG; second, you will notice on Exhibit 728 that the subject matter is Watertown Builders Supply Company, Cambridge, Massachusetts. You will notice also that the report is a report from Mr. Gallagher. You will also notice that it has to do with a cut in the plaster prices by Certain-teed.

Exhibit 727 likewise is a report from Mr. Gallagher and also has to do with the cutting of plaster prices. I think, in view of the fact that Exhibit 728 at the top of it 6456 deals with the Watertown Builders Supply Company, and the fact that it is within two months' time of Exhibit 727, and the fact that both reports were made by Mr. Gallagher, that they are circumstances from which the identification can be determined.

Justice Stephens: If we admit Exhibit 728 as circumstantially identified, we are in effect, ruling that it is the report or the basis of the report referred to in 727, and the dates are very different. What does it add, anyway, Mr. Knuff? Does it prove anything more than 727 proves?

Mr. Knuff: Well, it gives the specific plaster prices.

Justice Garrett: Was there any admission by USG as to Exhibit 728?

Mr. Knuff: USG refused to admit or deny that the letter was sent to Mr. F. M. Miller, but they do admit that it was taken from their files.

Justice Stephens: We are agreed here that it is not circumstantially identified, and Exhibit No. 728 is rejected.

Mr. Bromley: I should like to say at this time, may it please the Court, that in order to save the size of the record, and obviate what I feel to be useless repetition, that I am prepared to stipulate now, on condition that what I believe to be the next 20 or so exhibits contemplated to be offered by the Government are not offered, that a total of 20 complaints was handled by the Board Survey Company on the basis of rebates on the price of patented board, ef-6457 fected through rebates on prices of plaster, roofing, insulation board, and the like.

Justice Stephens: Would that be sufficient to satisfy the Government and avoid the necessity of putting in these documents?

Mr. Knuff: It will not satisfy the Government, your Honor. We do not feel that we should take Mr. Bromley's conclusion as to what these exhibits show.

Mr. Bromley: You don't contend that they show anything different from what I just said, do you?

Mr. Knuff: We do contend that they show something entirely different than that it is a rebate.

Mr. Bromley: Would you mind telling me what you do contend?

Mr. Knuff: We contend that they show that there is a fixing of plaster prices, by some of these exhibits. They can call them rebates, or they can call them anything they want to, but we contend that it is a fixing of plaster prices.

(Discussion off the record.)

Justice Stephens: Proceed, Mr. Knuff.

Mr. Knuff: I would like to have marked for identification Government's Exhibits 729 and 730.

6458 (The documents referred to were marked as Government's Exhibits Nos. 729 and 730 for identification.)

Mr. Knuff: Government's Exhibit 729 is a carbon copy of a letter, dated November 14, 1932, to C. O. Brown, and signed by the Board Survey Company.

Government's Exhibit No. 730 for identification is a letter, dated November 28, 1932, to Frank M. Miller, and signed Warren Henley.

The authenticity of both of these letters was admitted by USG, and they also admit that Exhibit 729, or the original thereof, was sent, and that Exhibit 730 was received.

We offer in evidence Government's Exhibits Nos. 729 and 730.

Justice Stephens: Received, as binding on USG only.

(The documents referred to, marked as Government's Exhibits Nos. 729 and 730, were received in evidence.)

Mr. Knuff: I would like to have marked for identification Government's Exhibits 731 and 732.

(The documents referred to were marked as Government's Exhibits Nos. 731 and 732 for identification.)

Mr. Knuff: Government's Exhibit 731 is a carbon 6459 copy of a letter, dated May 13, 1933, to C. O. Brown, and signed by the Board Survey Company.

Government's Exhibit 732 for identification is a letter, dated May 25, 1933, to Miller, and signed by Warren Henley.

Exhibit 731 is a carbon copy of a letter, the genuineness of which is admitted, and it is further admitted that the original thereof was sent.

As to Exhibit 732, the genuineness of that letter is admitted, and it is further admitted that it was received by the United States Gypsum Company.

We offer in evidence Government's Exhibits 731 and 732.

Justice Stephens: These are received as binding on USG only.

(The documents referred to, marked as Government's Exhibits Nos. 731 and 732 for identification, were received in evidence.)

Mr. Knuff: I would like to have marked for identification Government's Exhibits 733 and 734.

(The documents referred to were marked as Government's Exhibits Nos. 733 and 734 for identification.)

Mr. Knuff: Government's Exhibits No. 733 is a carbon copy of a letter, dated August 2, 1933, addressed to C. O. Brown, and signed by the Board Survey Company.
6460 Exhibit No. 734 is a letter, dated August 18, 1933, addressed to Frank Miller of the Board Survey Company, and signed by Warren Henley.

The genuineness of Exhibit 733 is admitted, and also the fact that this exhibit was sent, or rather the original thereof; the genuineness of Exhibit 734 is likewise admitted, and also that it was received.

We offer in evidence Government's Exhibits 733 and 734.

Justice Stephens: These two exhibits are received as binding upon USG only.

(The documents referred to, marked as Government's Exhibits Nos. 733 and 734, were received in evidence.)

Mr. Knuff: I would like to have marked for identification Government's Exhibits 735 and 736.

(The documents referred to were marked as Government's Exhibits Nos. 735 and 736 for identification.)

Mr. Knuff: Government's Exhibit No. 735 is a carbon copy of a letter, dated August 3, 1933, addressed to C. O. Brown, and signed by the Board Survey Company.

Government's Exhibit 736 is a letter, dated August 18, 1933, addressed to Mr. Miller, and signed Warren Henley.

The genuineness, and the fact that the original of 6461 735 was sent, are admitted; and the genuineness and the fact that Exhibit 736 was received are admitted.

We offer in evidence Government's Exhibits 735 and 736.

Justice Stephens: These are received as binding on USG only.

(The documents referred to, marked as Government's Exhibits Nos. 735 and 736, were received in evidence.)

Mr. Knuff: I would like to have marked for identification Government's Exhibits 737 and 738.

(The documents referred to were marked as Government's Exhibits Nos. 737 and 738 for identification.)

Mr. Knuff: Government's Exhibit No. 737 is a carbon copy of a letter, dated August 3, 1933, addressed to C. O. Brown, and signed Board Survey Company.

Government's Exhibit 738 is a letter, dated August 18, 1933, addressed to Frank Miller, and signed by Warren Henley.

The genuineness of Exhibit 737, and the fact that the original of that exhibit was sent, are admitted; the genuineness of Exhibit 738 and the fact that it was received, are admitted.

We offer in evidence Government's Exhibits 737 and 738.

Justice Stephens: These exhibits are received as binding on USG only.

6462 (The documents referred to, marked as Government's Exhibits Nos. 737 and 738, were received in evidence.)

Mr. Knuff: Now, your Honors, skip one letter, that is the letter of August 15, 1932, in the sets of exhibits which you have.

I would like to have marked for identification Government's Exhibit 739, the same being a carbon copy of a letter, dated August 19, 1932, addressed to Warren Henley and signed by the Board Survey Company.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 739 for identification.)

Mr. Knuff: We offer in evidence Government's Exhibit 739.

Justice Stephens: Received as binding on USG only.

(The document referred to, marked as Government's Exhibit No. 739, was received in evidence.)

Mr. Knuff: We would like to have marked for identification Government's Exhibit 740, the same being a copy of a letter, dated August 15, 1933, addressed to F. M. Miller, and signed, in typewriting, H. F. Sadler.

6463 (The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 740 for identification.)

Mr. Knuff: We would also like to have marked for identification Government's Exhibit 741, the same being a letter, dated August 29, 1932, addressed to Frank M. Miller, and signed Warren Henley.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 741 for identification.)

Mr. Knuff: We offer Government's Exhibits 740 and 741 in evidence, as circumstantially identified.

Justice Stephens: By what?

Mr. Knuff: By Exhibit 739. Exhibit No. 739 is a letter, addressed to Mr. Henley, and concerns W. Skobliski. Exhibit 740 gives the address of Mr. Skobliski as Long Island, and Exhibit 739 also gives his address as Long Island.

Justice Stephens: Well, we understand now that you claim that Exhibits 740 and 741 are circumstantially identified by 739, or in relation thereto?

Mr. Knuff: Yes, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: Let us read the three of them and perhaps we can see and ask questions, and thereby save time.

(The Justices read the exhibits referred to.)

6464 Justice Stephens: Let's talk about these one at a time. Is there any objection to the introduction of Exhibit 741 as being circumstantially identified with Exhibit 739, in view of the admission which I take it, USG has made, that Exhibit 741 came out of the files of USG—is that admitted?

Mr. Knuff: That is admitted, your Honor. It is admitted that 741 came from the files of USG.

Justice Stephens: What about that, Mr. Bromley, do your contest that Exhibit 741 is identified circumstantially with Exhibit 739, which is already in evidence?

Mr. Bromley: Our position is that no one in our organization could identify Exhibit 741. It is not Henley's signature, and we know nothing about it except the fact that it came from our files.

Justice Stephens: Is the signature of Warren Henley admitted as correct?

Mr. Bromley: No, it is not.

Mr. Knuff: It is not denied, either.

Mr. Bromley: We weren't asked about it. We now deny it.

Mr. Knuff: The circumstance that identifies the letter apparent from the first paragraph of Exhibit 741, "Acknowledging your inquiry of August 19th", and so forth. Now Exhibit 739, which admittedly was sent by USG, is a letter dated August 19, 1932. So it seems the two are intimately connected.

6465 Justice Stephens: We think that Exhibit No. 741 is circumstantially identified, and it is received in evidence as binding only on USG.

(The document referred to, marked as Government's Exhibit No. 741, was received in evidence.)

Justice Stephens: We don't think that Exhibit 740 is circumstantially identified, at least we don't see that it is presently, Mr. Knuff. We haven't heard you on that, but so far, we don't see any relationship, on the face of it, between Exhibits 740 and 739.

Mr. Knuff: If Exhibit 740 is admitted in evidence as circumstantially identified, it is—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) We haven't admitted Exhibit No. 740 yet.

Mr. Knuff: I beg your pardon. If Exhibit 741 is admitted in evidence as circumstantially identified, I don't believe that it is subject to the limitation that it is only binding on USG.

Mr. Bromley: That is a novel theory. The only way that it comes in is because of its connection with a document, the only status of which is that we are the only defendants who admit its authenticity.

Justice Stephens: That is the same matter that 6466 we had yesterday under consideration, and we ruled against you on that, Mr. Knuff, at least Judge Garrett and I did.

Mr. Knuff: With reference to Exhibit 740, the circumstances that identify Exhibit 740 are these.

First, it is on the stationery of United States Gypsum Company. Right at the top it says, "United States Gypsum Co." It was taken from the United States Gypsum Company's files. The subject matter with which it deals is a dealer by the name of W. Skobliski, West Hempstead, Long Island. It has to do with a complaint concerning Certain-teed. Exhibit 739 deals with the same subject matter, W. Skobliski—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) Let us read it again with that in mind. We didn't see, at the top of Exhibit 740, the reference to Skobliski when we first read it. It was obscured by the binding. Let us read it again.

(The Justices reread Exhibit No. 740.)

Justice Stephens: Who was Sadler?

Mr. Knuff: Mr. Sadler was at that time, I believe, assistant to the vice president.

Justice Stephens: Of what?

Mr. Knuff: Of USG. I take it that is what, "A. V. P." stands for.

Justice Stephens: The only thing we can see that would seem to identify it is the fact that Skobliski is referred to in each one of the exhibits, 739 and 740. So far as 6467 the subject matter of Exhibit 740 is concerned, it doesn't seem to us to mean anything in relation to Exhibit 739. We are of the view that it is not circumstantially identified.

Mr. Knuff: I didn't have an opportunity to finish pointing out my reasons for feeling that it is circumstantially identified.

Justice Stephens: I am sorry. Proceed.

Mr. Knuff: The subject matter of the complaint was Certain-teed in Exhibit 740. Exhibit 739 was a letter addressed to Certain-teed—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) How do you get, out of Exhibit 740, that it relates to Certain-teed?

Mr. Knuff: It states:

"'Says he is wholesale and retail and that he sells more material to dea' rs than to jobs. Claims he handled 30 cars of Gypsum-Board last year and seven cars so far this year. Claims to be handling Certain-teed.'"

Exhibit 740 relates to Certain-teed. Exhibit 739, which is a letter just four days later than Exhibit 740, and which would ordinarily come out some time later than Exhibit 740, was addressed to Mr. Warren Henley of the Certain-teed Products Corporation.

As I previously said, Exhibit 740 is on the stationery of the United States Gypsum Company, on their printed letterhead. Mr. Sadler, at that time, was assistant to 6468 the vice president of USG; and it came from the files of United States Gypsum Company.

Justice Stephens: Exhibit No. 739 is a letter which Board Survey sent to Certain-teed.

Mr. Knuff: That is right.

Justice Stephens: How can that be said to refer to previous correspondence between USG and Board Survey?

Mr. Knuff: Exhibit 740 is a letter to Board Survey.

Justice Stephens: That is right.

Mr. Knuff: And the Board Survey then follows that up on the 19th of August, by writing a letter to the concern which was mentioned in Exhibit 740, which is Certain-teed. It seems to me to be a perfect chain.

Mr. Sadler made the complaint to Board Survey on the 15th of August. The Board Survey, on the 19th of August, writes to Certain-teed and Certain-teed was the subject matter of the complaint in the letter of August 15, 1932, Exhibit 740.

Justice Stephens: When you get Exhibit 740 in, if it should come in, what do you prove by it? What does it mean?

Mr. Knuff: Well, it means just this, your Honor, that in Paragraph 92 of the complaint we set forth that USG is policing the industry, and—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) We understand all that, that that is your charge, but what I am trying to see is the relevancy of Exhibit 740 to that charge.

6469 Mr. Knuff: The extent of policing activities under the licensing agreement is relevant and material under the allegation of subterfuge in Paragraph 46. We don't want to argue that at this time, but that is our theory.

Justice Stephens: You don't understand me, that isn't what I am asking you about. I know what you contend your complaint charges. Now I am trying to find out what the relevancy of Exhibit 740 is to that complaint. Let me read it again. I may be dense about it, but I just don't see it.

Is it the second paragraph of Exhibit 739 which you think is a reference to Exhibit 740?

Mr. Knuff: Well, I think all of Exhibit 739 is with reference to 740, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: The first paragraph of Exhibit 739 says, "Please refer to our previous correspondence and your June 21 letter", and so forth. Now Exhibit 740 is not a letter of June 21, and it isn't previous correspondence between Certain-teed and Board Survey, but is previous correspondence, if any, between USG and Board Survey. It seems to me that unless you get it in under some other paragraph of Exhibit 739, that it obviously is circumstantially disconnected, rather than connected.

Mr. Knuff: "Please refer to our previous correspondence" would mean correspondence between Board
6470 Survey and Warren Henley—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) Warren Henley was from Certain-teed Company, wasn't he?

Mr. Knuff: Yes, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: That is what I said. I said that the reference was to previous correspondence between Board Survey and Certain-teed, and Exhibit 740 is not such correspondence.

Mr. Knuff: That is right, and we don't contend that it is.

Justice Stephens: Then what circumstance does connect it with Exhibit 739?

Is it the mere fact that in the second paragraph of Exhibit 739 it is asserted that special allowances have been made by Certain-teed to Skobliski, and that Exhibit 740 relates to Skobliski?

Mr. Knuff: That is one of the items that connect it. The fact that the subject matter at the top of Exhibit 739 is "Re: W. Skobliski, Long Island, N. Y.", which is also the subject matter of 740, is another circumstance.

The fact that Exhibit 739 is dated August 19, 1932, and Exhibit 740 is dated August 15, 1932, is another circumstance.

A further circumstance is that the letter, Exhibit 739, was addressed to Warren Henley, and the complaint con-6471 tained in Exhibit 740 had to do with Certain-teed. Warren Henley is with Certain-teed. Furthermore, the fact that both 739 and 740 were taken from the files of USG, and that Exhibit 740 is on the letterhead of USG, are all circumstances identifying the correspondence.

Justice Garrett: I take it that the last paragraph of Exhibit 740 is an excerpt from some report that was sent to Gallagher by a salesman who made some investigation into Skobliski's business?

Mr. Knuff: That would be my understanding.

Justice Garrett: It is in quotation marks, and it says that it is a report submitted to Sales Manager Gallagher, by salesman Roche. Now Gallagher was the Sales Manager of USG, was he?

Mr. Knuff: Yes.

Justice Garrett: And salesman Roche was a salesman for whom?

Mr. Knuff: I would assume that Roche was a salesman for USG.

Justice Garrett: His name has been in the testimony before, I believe, but I have forgotten which company he was a salesman for.

Mr. Knuff: If the name Roche has ever been mentioned in the testimony, your Honor, I don't recall it.

Mr. Bromley: Maybe your Honor is thinking of Roos.

6472 Justice Garrett: No, I am thinking of a salesman. I thought that someone testified about a saleman by the name of Roche.

Justice Jackson: There were two men by the name of Roos, weren't there, one an inventor, and the other a salesman?

Mr. Knuff: Yes, Carlisle K. Roos was the inventor, and E. G. Roos was the sales manager, at one time, for Certain-teed.

Justice Stephens: Judge Garrett and I are, for some reason or other, unable to see the circumstantial identification of Exhibit 740. Judge Jackson has a different view. In addition to that, I will say that I can't see that Exhibit 740, on its face, means anything at all in respect of alleged undercutting of prices, or price-fixing on plaster. If it said in the last sentence that these figures, $29 to $31, were less than bulletin prices, that might mean something, but it doesn't say that.

Mr. Knuff: Here is what Exhibit No. 740 means to me. Throughout the case Mr. Bromley, at one time or another, has said that Board Survey never did anything concerning dealers. Well, maybe Board Survey didn't do anything, but here you have a situation where you have a salesman of USG going into warehouses and snooping around and finding out things.

Justice Jackson: That is all based on a complaint
6473 against Certain-teed?

Mr. Knuff: That is right.

Justice Jackson: Well, what is wrong with what Mr. Bromley said or what you say he said?

Mr. Knuff: I think that maybe, in so far as the corporate idea is concerned, Board Survey did it, but you have Board Survey being a wholly-owned subsidiary of USG, and you have USG's men doing the same thing.

Justice Jackson: To get something on Certain-teed?

Mr. Knuff: Yes.

Justice Jackson: Surely, if Certain-teed violated the license agreement, why not?

Mr. Knuff: That is right.

Justice Jackson: I don't know what this document means. I do think, however, that it has been sufficiently circumstantially identified. As far as its weight is concerned, to my mind it is a blank, it is a nothing. That is the way I feel about it, but it has been sufficiently identified, I think, in that all three of these exhibits, 739, 740 and 741, evidently deal with a complaint against Certain-teed as to sales made in alleged violation of their license agreement, through the sales being made to Skobliski. That is the only reason I feel that it is circumstantially identified. As to what it means, I don't know, so it won't mean anything to my mind, even if it were to be considered.

6474 Mr. Knuff: I suppose the Court is going to take the noon recess at this time.

Justice Stephens: Yes.

Mr. Knuff: Before announcing the recess, your Honor, Mr. Steffen and I have just been advised of something that has come up in our office that will undoubtedly keep us beyond the usual time for reconvening, 1:45, so I wonder if we can have an adjournment today until two o'clock?

Justice Stephens: Yes, surely.

(Thereupon, at 12:20 o'clock p. m., a recess was taken until 2:00 o'clock p. m., of the same day.)

6475 AFTERNOON SESSION

(The trial was resumed at 2:00 o'clock p. m., pursuant to recess.)

Justice Stephens: With respect to Exhibit 740, is it admitted that 740 came out of the files of USG?

Mr. Knuff: Yes, Your Honor.

Justice Stephens: It seems too bad to take any more time on Exhibit 740, because I can't think that it adds to or subtracts very much from the case. But it has been suggested to me, during the course of the noon hour, in considering this and conferring among the Judges about it, that possibly, Mr. Bromley, that may be circumstantially connected to Exhibit 739 in this way, that 740 appears to be a report by Sadler of USG to Board Survey concerning Skobliski, and a complaint by Salesman Roche concerning him, and it may, therefore, have been the foundation for writing the letter of August 19, Exhibit 739, from Board Survey to Henley of Certain-teed, to which Henley responded in Exhibit 741. That may possibly connect 740 with 739.

Mr. Bromley: May it please the Court, when we received these requests for admissions, we proceeded on the basis of trying to determine whether we could honestly and fairly admit or whether we couldn't, and of course we made no investigation on any theory of circumstantial identification.

Now in order to save time, and because the docu-6476 ment seems to me to be entirely meaningless, and because the Government insists on it so strenuously, I am prepared now to make no objection to the circumstantial identification of Exhibit 740 for Identification, and to withdraw that objection if the record shows it already to have been made.

Justice Stephens: Very well; thank you, Mr. Bromley. Exhibit 740 may then come in evidence as binding on USG only.

(The document referred to, marked as Government's Exhibit No. 740, was received in evidence.)

Mr. Knuff: I would like to have marked for Identification Government's Exhibit 742, the same being a carbon copy of a letter of August 23, 1932, addressed to C. O. Brown, and signed by Board Survey Company.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 742 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: The fact of sending the letter and the fact that it is an authentic letter is admitted by USG.

We now offer Exhibit 742 in evidence.

Justice Stephens: That may be received as binding on USG only.

(The document referred to, marked as Government's Exhibit No. 742, was received in evidence.)

6477 Justice Stephens: I am beginning to wonder a little, Mr. Knuff—that is the reason I pause—there have been now a half a dozen exhibits, I imagine, in the nature of complaints by Board Survey to Certain-teed, that Certain-teed is not abiding the license agreements, that is, that it is indulging in rebating or is cutting below the minimum price in some way or other. Isn't it beginning to be cumulative so that it is no longer necessary to prove those complaints?

Mr. Knuff: I suppose it might be said to be cumulative, but we wanted to give the Court just a very small picture of the number of these complaints. I dare say that we have, over in our office, and we could offer in evidence, a matter of 2,000 of these complaints. That is just a rough guess, I may be wrong one way or the other on that, but I believe that my guess is substantially correct.

Justice Stephens: The thought I had is that I assume there isn't any dispute in the case but that there were a very large number of the complaints by each of the licensees against the others, which were called to the attention of the Board Survey Company. Perhaps we could save some time and space that way, but possibly we will save more if we just go ahead.

Mr. Bromley: May it please the Court, so far as counsel's statement is concerned, my information is that the exhibits which he has offered or intends to offer, or 6478 which they submitted to us, are all the complaints of this nature made at any time by anybody; and so far as his statement of 2,000 complaints is concerned, I don't believe, if you took all the complaints made on any subject by any licensee over the entire period, it would approach that figure. Our information is that the total would not exceed more than between 300 and 400, of every nature, and that these rebating complaints which he has submitted to us with his Request for Admissions, are all of that nature ever made at any time.

Justice Stephens: For how long a period of time, Mr. Bromley?

Mr. Bromley: From 1932 to 1937, which was the period during which Board Survey was in existence. It was not in existence before that or after that.

Justice Stephens: Well, you may proceed, Mr. Knuff.

Mr. Knuff: I would like to have marked for Identification Government's Exhibit 743, the same being a letter dated September 8, 1932, addressed to Mr. Frank M. Miller, and signed Warren Henley.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 743 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: We offer this letter in evidence as being circumstantially identified by 742. USG, in their answer, refused to admit or deny the authenticity of this 6479 letter, although they do admit that the letter came from their files. The circumstantial identification is contained in the first paragraph of 743—

Mr. Bromley: (Interposing) Just a moment. I make no objection on the ground that it is not circumstantially identified.

Justice Stephens: Very well. Then it is received in evidence as binding upon USG only.

(The document referred to, marked as Government's Exhibit No. 743, was received in evidence.)

Justice Stephens: Let me read this.

(Government's Exhibit No. 743 examined by the Court.)

Justice Stephens: Very well.

Mr. Knuff: Skip one letter now, Your Honors, please. I would now like to have marked for Identification Government's Exhibit 744, the same being a letter dated March 24, 1934, addressed to Mr. Sadler and signed by Warren Henley. It is admitted by USG that this letter was received by them.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 744 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: We offer in evidence Government's Ex-
6480 hibit No. 744.

Justice Stephens: Received as binding on USG only.

(The document referred to, marked as Government's Exhibit No. 744, was received in evidence.)

Mr. Knuff: We would like to have marked at this time for Identification, Government's Exhibit 745, the same being a carbon copy of a letter dated March 16, 1934, addressed to Mr. C. O. Brown and signed by the Board Survey Company.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 745 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: This letter, Government's Exhibit 745, is circumstantially identified by Government's Exhibit 744. Mr. Bromley has refused to admit or deny that 745 was sent, or its authenticity.

Justice Stephens: Does he admit that it came from the files of USG?

Mr. Knuff: Yes.

Justice Stephens: Is there any objection now as to circumstantial identification?

Mr. Bromley: No, Your Honor.

Justice Stephens: It is received in evidence as binding on USG only.

6481 (The document referred to, marked as Government's Exhibit No. 745, was received in evidence.)

Mr. Knuff: I would like to have marked for Identification Government's Exhibits 746 and 747.

(The documents referred to were marked as Government's Exhibits Nos. 746 and 747, respectively, for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: Exhibit 746 is a letter, or carbon copy of a letter, dated April 24, 1934, addressed to Warren Henley and signed Board Survey Company.

Government's Exhibit 747 is a letter addressed to H. F. Sadler, signed Warren Henley, and dated May 11, 19?

Government's Exhibit 746 is admitted to be an authentic copy of a letter that was sent by USG, and 747 is admitted to have been received by USG.

Justice Stephens: You don't quite mean that, do you? You mean that USG admits 746 is an authentic copy of a letter sent by Board Survey to Certain-teed?

Mr. Knuff: That is right.

Justice Stephens: And it also admitted that 747 is the reply?

Mr. Knuff: The word "reply" hasn't been used, but it obviously is the reply, and what they have admitted 6482 is that they received it.

Justice Stephens: If there is no objection on the ground of identification, they will be received in evidence, Exhibits 746 and 747, as binding on USG only.

(The documents referred to, marked as Government's Exhibits Nos. 746 and 747, respectively, were received in evidence.)

Mr. Knuff: I would like to have marked for Identification Government's Exhibit 748, the same being a carbon copy of a letter dated July 19, 1934, addressed to Mr. C. O. Brown, and signed Board Survey Company.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 748 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: It is admitted by USG that this letter is an authentic letter, and the original of it was sent.

We offer Exhibit 748 in evidence.

Justice Stephens: Received in evidence as binding on USG only.

(The document referred to, marked as Government's Exhibit No. 748, was received in evidence.)

Mr. Knuff: I would like to have marked for Identification Government's Exhibit 749, the same being a letter dated July 31, 1934, addressed to Mr. H. F. Sadler, and signed Warren Henley.

6483

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 749 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: USG refuses to admit or deny the authenticity of this document, but they do admit that it came from their files.

We offer it as being circumstantially identified.

Justice Stephens: If there is no objection as to circumstantial identification, it is received as binding on USG only.

(The document referred to, marked as Government's Exhibit No. 749, was received in evidence.)

Mr. Knuff: Omit the next two exhibits, please, and come to the one dated 9/13/35.

We would like to have marked for Identification Government's Exhibit 750, the same being a complaint addressed to the Board Survey Company, signed by Certain-teed Products Corporation, dated September 13, 1935.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 750 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: In connection with this exhibit, USG admits that this is a reply received from the Certain-teed Products Corporation by Board Survey Company.

6484

Justice Stephens: This is received as binding on USG only.

Mr. Bromley: It is not a complaint, it is the explanation.

Justice Stephens: We noticed that.

(The document referred to, marked as Government's Exhibit No. 750, was received in evidence.)

Mr. Knuff: I would like to now have marked for Identification the two exhibits that I skipped, as Exhibits 751 and 752. Exhibit 751 is a document dated September 3, 1935, addressed to the Board Survey Company and signed USG. Exhibit 752 is a document addressed to Certain-teed Products Corporation, and has typed thereon "Board Survey Company—Executive Secretary.", dated September 3, 1935.

(The documents referred to were marked as Government's Exhibits Nos. 751 and 752, respectively, for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: We offer Government's Exhibits 751 and 752 as being circumstantially identified by Exhibit 750.

Justice Stephens: Unless there is objection to the circumstantial identification claimed, the two exhibits 6485 are received as binding on USG only.

(The documents referred to, marked as Government's Exhibits Nos. 751 and 752, respectively, were received in evidence.)

Mr. Knuff: Omit the next one and come to the letter of April 13, 1932.

I would like to have that letter marked for Identification as Government's Exhibit No. 753.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 753 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: That is a carbon copy of a letter dated April 13, 1932, addressed to M. H. Baker, and signed Board Survey Company.

USG admits the genuineness of this letter and the sending of the original thereof.

We offer it in evidence.

Justice Stephens: This is received as binding on USG only.

(The document referred to, marked as Government's Exhibit No. 753, was received in evidence.)

Mr. Knuff: We would like to have marked for Identification Government's Exhibit 754, the same being a 6486 letter dated April 5, 1932, addressed to Frank M. Miller, and signed Warren Henley.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 754 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: USG neither admits nor denies the genuineness of this document, but they do admit that it came from their files. It is offered as being circumstantially identified by Government's Exhibit 753.

Justice Stephens: If there is no objection to the circumstantial identification alleged, it is received in evidence as binding on USG only.

(The document referred to, marked as Government's Exhibit No. 754, was received in evidence.)

Mr. Knuff: Omit the next letter, and come to the letter dated August 10, 1932. That letter of August 10 has on the top of it a rather large "F 8/30".

Justice Stephens: It is marked Exhibit No. 43, isn't it, in your Request for Admissions?

Mr. Knuff: That is right, Your Honor. I would like to have that letter marked Government's Exhibit 755 for Identification, the same being a carbon copy of a letter dated August 10, 1932, addressed to M. H. Baker, and signed Board Survey Company.

6487 (The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 755 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: USG admits the genuineness of this document, and admits that the original thereof was sent.

We offer it in evidence.

Justice Stephens: Received as binding on USG only.

(The document referred to, marked as Government's Exhibit No. 755, was received in evidence.)

Mr. Knuff: I would like to have marked for Identification Government's Exhibit 756, the same being a letter dated August 10, 1932, addressed to F. M. Miller, and signed H. F. Sadler.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 756 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: I would also like to have marked for Identification Government's Exhibit 757, the same being a letter dated August 23, 1932, addressed to Mr. F. M. Miller and signed M. H. Baker—MP.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 757 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: USG refuses to admit or deny the 6488 genuineness of 756 and 757, although they do admit that both 756 and 757 came from their files.

We offer 756 and 757 as being circumstantially identified by 755.

Justice Stephens: If there is no objection to their circumstantial identification, Exhibits 756 and 757 are received as binding on USG only.

(The documents referred to, marked as Government's Exhibits Nos. 756 and 757, respectively, were received in evidence.)

Mr. Knuff: I would like to have marked for Identification Government's Exhibits 758 and 759.

(The documents referred to were marked as Government's Exhibits Nos. 758 and 759, respectively, for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: Government's Exhibit 758 is a letter dated October 13, 1932, addressed to Frank M. Miller and signed Warren Henley.

Government's Exhibit 759 is a copy of a letter dated October 31, 1932, addressed to R. F. Burley and signed Board Survey Company.

USG admits receiving 758, and admits sending the original of 759. We offer in evidence Government's 6489 Exhibits 758 and 759.

Justice Stephens: These are received as binding on USG only.

(The documents referred to, marked as Government's Exhibits Nos. 758 and 759, respectively, were received in evidence.)

Mr. Knuff: I would like to have marked for Identification Government's Exhibit 760, the same being a carbon copy of a letter dated December 20, 1932, addressed to Mr. M. H. Baker, President, and signed Board Survey Company.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 760 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: I would also like to have marked Government's Exhibit 761, the same being a letter dated January 9, 1933, addressed to Board Survey Company and signed by National Gypsum Company—Vice President.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 761 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: We offer in evidence Government's Exhibits 760 and 761. USG admits the authenticity of 760, and admits sending the original of 760. As to 761, they neither admit nor deny the authenticity or the receipt of 6490 this letter. They do admit that it came from their files.

We offer Government's Exhibit 761 as being circumstantially identified by Exhibit 760.

Justice Stephens: Let the Court read them.

(Government's Exhibits 760 and 761 for Identification examined by the Court.)

Justice Stephens: Unless there is some objection to the circumstantial identification of Exhibit 761, both exhibits 760 and 761 are received in evidence as binding on USG only.

(The documents referred to, marked as Government's Exhibits Nos. 760 and 761, respectively, were received in evidence.)

Mr. Knuff: I would like to have marked for Identification Government's Exhibit 762, the same being a letter dated April 15, 1933, addressed to Mr. F. M. Miller and signed in typewriting H. F. Sadler.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 762 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: I would also like to have marked for Identification Government's Exhibit 763, the same being a copy of a letter dated April 17, 1933, addressed to National Gypsum Company and signed Board Survey Company.

6491 (The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 763 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: I would also like to have marked for Identification Government's Exhibit No. 764, the same being a letter dated May 1, 1933, addressed to Frank M. Miller, and signed National Gypsum Company, R. F. Burley, Vice President.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 764 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: We offer in evidence Government's Exhibits 762, 763 and 764.

With reference to Exhibits 763 and 764, USG admits the genuineness of the letters; and in regard to 763, the fact that it was sent; and as to 764, they admit that that letter was received.

In so far as 762 is concerned, USG neither admits nor denies as to it. They do admit that it came from their files. We offer 762 as being circumstantially identified by 763 and 764.

Justice Stephens: Unless there is some objection to the circumstantial identification of Exhibit 762, Exhibits 762, 763 and 764 are received in evidence as binding on USG only.

(The documents referred to, marked as Government's Exhibits Nos. 762, 763 and 764, respectively, were received in evidence.)

6492

Mr. Knuff: I would like to have marked for Identification Government's Exhibit 765, the same being a letter dated April 21, 1933, addressed to Mr. F. M. Miller and signed H. F. Sadler.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 765 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: I would also like to have marked for Identification Government's Exhibit 766, the same being a carbon copy of a letter dated July 31, 1933, addressed to National Gypsum Company and signed Board Survey Company.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 766 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: I would also like to have marked for Identification Government's Exhibit 767, the same being a letter dated August 9, 1933, addressed to Board Survey Company and signed National Gypsum Company, R. F. Burley—B.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 767 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: We offer Government's Exhibits 765, 766 and 767 in evidence.

In so far as Exhibit 766 is concerned, USG admits the genuineness of the letter and the fact that the original of it was sent. In so far as 765 and 767 are concerned, USG neither admits nor denies the genuineness of the documents. They do admit that they came from the files of USG. Exhibits 765 and 767, we say, are circumstantially identified by 766.

Justice Stephens: Unless there is some objection to the circumstantial identification of Exhibits 765 and 767, all three exhibits are received in evidence as binding upon USG only.

(The documents referred to, marked as Government's Exhibits 765, 766 and 767, were received in evidence.)

Mr. Knuff: We would like to have marked for Identification Government's Exhibit 768, the same being a complaint dated June 23, 1936, addressed to Board Survey Company, and signed United States Gypsum Company, H. F. Sadler.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 768 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: I would also like to have marked for Identification Government's Exhibit 769, the same being a letter dated November 11, 1936, addressed to Scott, MacLeish & Falk, and signed National Gypsum Company, R. F. Burley—B.

6494 (The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 769 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: USG admits the genuineness of and the fact that Exhibit 768 was sent; and they admit that 769 was received by them.

We offer 768 and 769 in evidence.

Justice Garrett: Exhibit 769 seems to be addressed to Scott, MacLeish & Falk. Where do they come into this case?

Mr. Knuff: I presume they were Board Survey Company's attorneys at this time, I don't know.

Mr. Bromley: That is right.

Justice Stephens: Both exhibits are admitted in evidence as binding on USG only.

(The documents referred to, marked Government's Exhibits 768 and 769, were received in evidence.)

Mr. Knuff: We would like to have marked for Identification Government's Exhibit 770, the same being a carbon copy of a letter dated May 21, 1935, addressed to Warren Henley, and signed Board Survey Company.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 770 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: We would also like to have marked for Identification Government's Exhibit 771, the same 6495 being a letter dated June 11, 1935, addressed to Mr. E. W. Carey and signed Warren Henley.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 771 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: We offer in evidence Government's Exhibits 770 and 771. USG admits the fact that the original of 770 was sent, and the genuineness thereof; and they admit receiving 771.

Justice Stephens: Received in evidence as binding against USG only.

(The documents referred to, marked as Government's Exhibits 770 and 771, were received in evidence.)

Mr. Knuff: I would like to have marked for Identification Government's Exhibit 772, the same being a carbon copy of a letter dated June 14, 1935, addressed to Mr. Warren Henley, and signed Board Survey Company.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 772 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: I would also like to have marked for Identification Government's Exhibit 773, the same being a letter dated June 19, 1935, addressed to E. W. Carey and signed Warren Henley.

6496 (The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 773 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: We offer in evidence Government's Exhibits 772 and 773. USG admits that they received Governments' Exhibit 773. USG neither admits nor denies that Government's Exhibit 772 was written by them, but they do admit that it was taken from their files.

We contend that Government's Exhibit 772 is circumstantially identified by Government's Exhibit 773 for Identification.

Justice Stephens: Unless there is objection to the circumstantial identification of 772, both exhibits are received in evidence as binding against USG only.

(The documents referred to, marked Government's Exhibits Nos. 772 and 773, were received in evidence.)

Mr. Knuff: I would like to have marked for Identification Government's Exhibit 774, the same being a complaint dated June 22, 1936, addressed to the Board Survey Company and signed United States Gypsum Company, H. F. Sadler.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 774 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: I would also like to have marked for 6497 Identification Government's Exhibit 775, the same being a carbon copy of a letter dated July 16, 1936, addressed to Certain-teed Products Corporation, and unsigned.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 776 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: I would also like to have marked for Identification Government's Exhibit 776, the same being a copy of a reply addressed to the Board Survey Company, dated July 29, 1936, and signed by Certain-teed Products Corporation.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 776 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: We now offer in evidence Government's Exhibits 774, 775 and 776. USG admits that Government's Exhibit 774 for Identification is a genuine document, and that it was sent by USG. They admit that Exhibit 776 was received by the Board Survey Company. In so far as Exhibit 775 is concerned, they neither admit nor deny the genuineness of the document, but they do admit that it was taken from their files.

We say that Government's Exhibit 775 is circumstantially identified by Government's Exhibits 774 and 776.

Justice Stephens: The first of these, in date, is 775, isn't it?

6498 Mr. Knuff: The first in date is 774, June 22, 1936.

Justice Stephens: That is right.

Let us read these.

(Government's Exhibits 774, 775 and 776 for Identification examined by the Court.)

Justice Stephens: Who does 775 purport to be from?

Mr. Knuff: I think that is from an attorney by the name of Mahan. I am not quite sure of the name.

Mr. Bromley: C. B. Mahin, connected with the firm of Scott, MacLeish & Falk; and Scott, MacLeish & Falk were then acting as attorneys for Board Survey.

Justice Stephens: Unless there is some objection to the circumstantial identification referred to, the three exhibits are received in evidence as binding against USG only.

(The documents referred to, marked Government's Exhibits Nos. 774, 775 and 776, respectively, were received in evidence.)

Mr. Knuff: I would like to have marked for Identification Government's Exhibit 777, the same being a carbon copy of a letter dated May 17, 1933, addressed to M. H. Baker, and signed Board Survey Company.

(The document referred to was marked as Govern-
6499 ment's Exhibit No. 777 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: We would also like to have marked for Identification Government's Exhibit 778, the same being a letter dated May 22, 1933, addressed to Board Survey Company and signed National Gypsum Company, R. F. Burley, Vice President.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 778 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: USG admits the genuineness and the sending of the original of Government's Exhibit 777; and admits receiving Government's Exhibit 778.

We offer Government's Exhibits 777 and 778 in evidence.

Justice Stephens: Received in evidence as binding against USG only.

(The documents referred to, marked Government's Exhibits 777 and 778, were received in evidence.)

Mr. Knuff: We would like to have marked for Identification Government's Exhibit 779, the same being a letter dated October 31, 1932, addressed to Board Survey Company and signed National Gypsum Company, R. F. Burley, Vice President.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 779 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: We would also like to have marked
6500 for Identification Government's Exhibit 780, the same being a carbon copy of a letter dated November 21, 1932, addressed to F. G. Krumholz, and signed Board Survey Company.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 780 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: USG admits receiving 779, and admits the genuineness and the sending of the original of Government's Exhibit 780.

We offer Exhibits 779 and 780 in evidence.

Justice Stephens: Received in evidence as binding on USG only.

(The documents referred to, marked as Government's Exhibits 779 and 780, were received in evidence.)

Justice Garrett: Let me inquire. In 779, reference is made to the Universal Gypsum Company.

Mr. Knuff: The Universal Gypsum Company, at that time, was a licensee of USG. Universal afterwards was taken over by National.

Justice Garrett: Oh, yes. I had forgotten just what that connection was. Thank you.

Mr. Knuff: I would like to have marked for Identification Government's Exhibit 781, the same being a memo-6501 randum dated July 20, 1933, addressed to Mr. F. M. Miller and signed in typewriting H. F. Sadler.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 781 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: I would also like to have marked for Identification Government's Exhibit 782, the same being a carbon copy of a letter dated July 29, 1933, addressed to National Gypsum Company, and signed Board Survey Company.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 782 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: I would also like to have marked for Identification Government's Exhibit 783, the same being a letter dated August 9, 1933, addressed to the Board Survey Company, and signed National Gypsum Company, R. F. Burley—B.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 783 for Identification.)

Mr. Knuff: I would also like to have marked for Identification Government's Exhibit No. 784, the same being a carbon copy of a letter dated September 12, 1933, addressed to R. F. Burley and signed Board Survey Company.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 784 for Identification.)

6502 Mr. Knuff: We offer in evidence Government's Exhibits 781, 782, 783 and 784.

In so far as Government's Exhibit 782 is concerned, USG admits the genuineness of the document and the fact that the original of it was sent.

USG likewise admits the genuineness of 784, and the fact that the original of that document was sent.

In so far as Exhibits 781 and 783 are concerned, USG neither admits nor denies the genuineness of the document, but they do admit that 781 and 783 were taken from their files.

We contend that 781 and 783 are circumstantially identified by 782 and 784.

Justice Stephens: Unless there is some objection to the circumstantial identification relied upon, all of the exhibits just mentioned are received in evidence as binding against USG only.

(The documents referred to, marked as Government's Exhibits Nos. 781, 782, 783 and 784, respectively, were received in evidence.)

Mr. Bromley: May it please the Court, I should like to ask counsel for the Government—and I think defendants are entitled to know—whether or not, with respect to Exhibits 727 to 784, inclusive, all of which I believe are of the 6503 type of Exhibit 784 and the preceding ones, he is offering these exhibits to prove that the defendants fixed prices on paints, or roofing products, or insulating board, or Maftex board, or building paper, or insulating board seconds, or Color Texture, or fiber board? I have looked over these exhibits and find that most of them have to do with the products which I have mentioned.

For instance, Exhibit 742 and Exhibit 743 have to do with a reduction below the going market price of roofing products. Exhibits 750, 751 and 752 have to do with a rebate on patented board effected through a reduction in the market price of building paper. Exhibits 755, 756, 757 and 767 have to do with an alleged rebate on patented board effected through a reduction of the price charged for paints.

Exhibits 753, 754, 760, 761, 762, 763, 764, 765, 766, 767, 768 and 769 have to do with rebates effected through price reductions on insulation board, which is a wood product, the record shows, having nothing to do with gypsum whatsoever.

It seems to me that we are entitled to know whether the Government is now trying to prove price fixing beyond what is alleged in the complaint, which, on its broadest interpretation, I think, is limited to plaster and Keene's Cement and block and tile.

Mr. Knuff: Since we have not alleged in the complaint that they did fix the price of roofing materials or 6504 paint, or Maftex, or what-not, of course we are not offering these exhibits to prove that. We are offering these exhibits for the purpose of showing subterfuge under Paragraph 46 of the complaint.

Justice Garrett: Let me ask you, then, why did you introduce the answers? As I read the answers that you have introduced in here, to these various complaints, they are practically all of them denials.

Mr. Bromley: That is right.

Justice Garrett: You have your own reasons for it, I suppose.

Mr. Knuff: I wanted to bring to the attention of the Court the fact that USG was sending it out, and also to bring to the attention of the Court the fact that the person to whom they were sending it got it.

Justice Jackson: It just seems that you did, you didn't—you did, you didn't.

Mr. Knuff: That is right, but I think it does show subterfuge, and we will be prepared to argue that when the time comes.

Justice Stephens: What is the theory of the Government, briefly, that it proves subterfuge?

Mr. Knuff: That what the defendants actually did, by policing the alleged sale of patented board, indicates quite clearly what the defendants had in mind, what they 6505 intended to accomplish by the policing of the licensing agreements. We contend that the agreements were simply a cloak or a smoke screen or a subterfuge to cover up and conceal the real purpose of the defendants. The real purpose is set forth in Paragraphs 44 and 45 of the complaint, that is, to regiment the gypsum industry and thereby to restrain, dominate and control the manufacture and distribution of gypsum products.

Justice Stephens: I think I see your purpose.

The exhibits are not received as evidence of price fixing on the items just referred to by Mr. Bromley, the Government conceding that they are not offered for that purpose.

Mr. Knuff: Shall we take the afternoon recess at this time?

Justice Stephens: Yes.

(Thereupon, a short recess was taken, after which the trial was resumed as follows:)

6506 Mr. Knuff: Your Honors, omit the next two items in your list, the letter of July 14, 1933, and the letter of July 25, 1933, and that brings us down to what I would like to have marked as Government's Exhibit 785 for identification, the same being a carbon copy of an inter-office memorandum, dated July 24, 1933, addressed to Mr. E. A. Gallagher, and signed H. F. Sadler.

(The document referred to was marked as Government's Exhibit No. 785 for identification.)

Mr. Knuff: USG admits the authenticity of this exhibit, and the sending of the original thereof.

We offer in evidence Government's Exhibit 785.

Justice Stephens: Unless there is objection, it is received in evidence as binding on USG only.

(The document referred to, marked as Government's Exhibit No. 785, was received in evidence.)

Mr. Knuff: At this time we would like to reoffer, if your Honors please, Government's Exhibit 271, and in connection with this matter, I just want to make a very short statement.

Justice Stephens: Let us get the exhibit before us, first, so we can have it in mind.

All right, proceed, Mr. Knuff.

6507 Mr. Knuff: Government's Exhibit 271 for identification was offered at about the time the North Holston and Laramie and the other contracts were offered, and there were reserved rulings on all of those.

We subsequently made an offer on those, and I think that in general our offer was sustained. At the time we made the offer, we did not include in that offer Exhibit 271, thinking that the offer was to be more or less of a—for want of a better word, sort of a "guinea pig" offer—and that everything else that related to it would come in after the offer was made. We thought that the ruling of the Court on the offer would cover the exhibits on which the ruling was deferred.

This was reoffered again at page 3272 of the record, and was withdrawn. We would now like to reoffer Exhibit 271 for the purpose of showing intercompany sales.

Justice Jackson: It wasn't rejected by the Court, was it?

Mr. Knuff: No sir, it was not.

Justice Jackson: Did it comprise any part of the reserve rulings?

Mr. Knuff: It was a part of the reserve rulings at that time.

Justice Stephens: We ruled, in the reserve rulings, in favor of your contentions with respect to certain 6508 contracts involving the North Holston and Laramie plants, but I don't think we have any rulings suspended now except the ruling on Exhibit 233.

Mr. Knuff: When your Honors made the ruling, your Honors called our attention to the fact that Government's Exhibits 239, 240, 271, 272, and 273 were considered as not offered, and the Court called our attention to that fact.

Now in so far as Exhibits 239, 240, 272 and 273 are concerned, while we think they are material, we are not going to press the offer of them. But we do feel that Exhibit 271 should now be reoffered.

Justice Stephens: Is there any objection to Exhibit 271, in view of the reserved rulings on the North Holston and Laramie matters? I assume you have the same objections, Mr. Bromley, but is there anything new in the way of an objection?

Mr. Bromley: No—we object to it as immaterial and irrelevant. This hasn't anything to do, of course, with North Holston or Laramie.

Justice Stephens: Let me see those reserve rulings and reference to these exhibits, Mr. Cantor.

(The matters requested were handed to Justice Stephens by Mr. Cantor.)

(The Justices conferred.)

Justice Stephens: It would seem to me, Mr. Brom-6509 ley, that 271 should be admitted if there is no dispute as to its authenticity, in view of the ruling of the majority of the Court that these intercompany purchases of board were admissible under the charges in the complaint.

Mr. Bromley: Yes, I think that is right.

Justice Stephens: So, unless there is some objection as to authenticity of the letter, Exhibit 271 is received in evidence according to the ruling of the majority on the subject of gypsum products asserted to have been purchased by one defendant from another, and thereafter sold at bulletin prices, as alleged.

(The document referred to, marked as Government's Exhibit No. 271, was received in evidence.)

Mr. Bromley: That would be subject to the usual reservation, I take it?

Justice Stephens: Yes, received subject to the usual reservation with respect to declarations of alleged co-conspirators.

Mr. Steffen: We have reached practically the end of the Government's case, your Honor. I want to make reference to one or two matters, however.

We have taken up Exhibit No. 693 to determine whether the signature of M. H. Baker is a genuine signature or not, and we are prepared to prove, by putting on a wit-
6510 ness, a handwriting expert, from the FBI, that the signature of M. H. Baker on Exhibit 693 is genuine. I want to make only a brief statement in that connection. I don't think anybody in the room doubts that it is genuine. It has been admitted by National, and the item comes from the files of USG. Moreover, National, in their answer to our requests to admit, stated that Mr. Baker couldn't add anything if he were on the stand. So we think it is perfectly fair, if the defendants want to put us to that bother, to—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) My records indicate that Exhibit No. 693 has been received for a limited purpose.

Mr. Steffen: That is right, your Honor. The only thing that prevented it from being received generally was that the signature of Mr. Baker was not deemed proven as respects others than National.

Justice Stephens: In other words, this is one of the exhibits that we took in because the admission of authenticity was limited to the person making the admission?

Mr. Steffen: That is right.

Justice Stephens: Now you want to put a witness on to prove the signature of Baker?

Mr. Steffen: Yes, although I don't have the witness here at the moment. However, I can have him here in the morning. We have taken it up with the FBI, and they have given us a memorandum indicating that they have 6511 examined that signature in the light of five or six other signatures that have already been admitted, signatures of Baker, two of them being on license agreements, and the others on letters that have been admitted and identified; and they will establish without question that this is Mr. Baker's signature.

With that point established, then the item is admissible in all respects.

As I said, I think it is perfectly fair to the defendants, because there isn't any real issue on Mr. Baker's signature, and there isn't any question, according to National's answer, that Mr. Baker would not be prepared to say anything about the letter, anyhow, if he were on the stand.

Mr. Johnston: As I understand it, all this expert witness would do would be to identify the signature of Baker, and it has already been admitted, so far as National is concerned?

Mr. Steffen: Yes, but we want it now identified so that Mr. Johnston, for example, can cross-examine the person identifying it.

Mr. Johnston: I don't want to cross-examine him, I want to cross-examine Baker.

Justice Stephens: I think Mr. Steffen's contention is this. The Court ruled that when you identify a signature by an admission of a defendant, that identification can only bind persons making the admission, and no one else;
6512 but if the signature is identified in the courtroom in some other manner, there might be a different result.

Mr. Keber: If the Court pleases—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) We have had a great many signatures identified on the witness stand by "A", who identifies "B's" signature, and there has been no objection to the introduction of those under those circumstances.

Now, Mr. Keber.

Mr. Keber: I was about to say that I thought that the scope of the request for the admission was not only as to the identification of the signature, but also the fact that the letter was sent. Now I don't know whether that is being unreasonably narrow, perhaps it is, but I don't think that the handwriting expert can prove that fact.

Mr. Steffen: It is immaterial, your Honor, whether that is proven or not, because this would be admitted as a declaration of Mr. Baker, and as I understand it, moreover, it was taken from the files of USG. Therefore, the matter of whether it was sent or not is pretty well established by other evidence than the admission of National.

Mr. Bromley: So far as the defendants represented by me are concerned, I am willing to stipulate that if the Government called a handwriting expert he would identify the signature as Baker's.

Justice Jackson: How many defendants does that 6513 not include?

Mr. Keber: I will make the same stipulation.

Justice Stephens: Will the other defendants stipulate as to that?

Mr. Johnston: I don't want to be unreasonable with the Government. They are getting pretty low now, and I will just withdraw my objection and let Mr. Bromley's stipulation cover me also. (Laughter.)

Justice Stephens: The Court will take it then, unless some defendant's counsel rises and objects, that each defendant has stipulated that if a handwriting expert were called by the Government, he would testify that the signature on Exhibit 693 is that of Baker.

Mr. Steffen: We now offer Government's Exhibit 693 generally as a declaration of an alleged co-conspirator.

Mr. Bromley: We make the usual objection.

Justice Stephens: Received, subject to the usual reservation with respect to declaration of alleged co-conspirators.

(The document referred to, marked as Government's Exhibit No. 693, was received in evidence.)

Mr. Steffen: The next matter that is at loose ends is the Dowd matter. I don't know what attitude the defendants wish to take about that. I may say that from 6514 the standpoint of the Government I think we would be willing to rest without introducing Exhibit 233, providing we have the privilege at a later date, if and when Mr. Dowd is called, to offer Exhibit 233, to reopen our proof and introduce that one exhibit.

Justice Jackson: And you would withdraw it now with that understanding, would you, or would you just let the record stand the way it is?

Mr. Steffen: Let it stand as it is now.

But what I am saying is that we could rest our case without having it really admitted as part of our case for purposes of a motion to dismiss, if there is to be such a motion, with the understanding that we can reopen our case and introduce that one exhibit if and when Mr. Dowd is called, and if and when the Court decides that there was a waiver of the attorney-client privilege.

Mr. Johnston: I don't understand all the strings to that. You are just not going to go any further about Mr. Dowd?

Mr. Steffen: I am being very generous at the moment, I am saying that we are prepared to rest so far as Exhibit 233 is concerned, but I would like to have the privilege of introducing it later if and when Mr. Dowd could be brought here, and when the Court decides—

Mr. Johnston: (Interposing) That is the point I am interested in—there might not be any "later".

6515 Justice Stephens: The Court must know whether Mr. Dowd's testimony is going to be introduced before the close of the Government's case or not. We have ruled that if the defendants want to call him before the close of the Government's case, they may do so. They may also urge, if they wish to do so, that the Government has not connected that matter, hasn't connected Exhibit 233 with Certain-teed. That matter, I don't think, has been put before the Court for formal ruling.

The testimony of Mr. Speer was introduced for the purpose of connecting Exhibit 233 with Certain-teed, showing that Redfield's act in writing it was the act of Certain-teed; so if there were an adverse decision on that, it wouldn't be necessary to call Dowd; whereas, if there were an affirmative decision on that, the defendants would still have a right to call Dowd, and complete the voir dire hearing on the preliminary question of fact bearing upon the admissibility of the evidence.

We ought to finish the Government's case before the Government rests, I should think.

Mr. Steffen: I think, your Honor, as I visualize it, it is up to the defendants to complete the examination on voir dire. We introduced Mr. Redfield, and he made his statement to the effect that he had a telephone conversation.

That telephone conversation, left by itself, would 6516 indicate that there was a waiver of the attorney-client privilege. That, however, as your Honor pointed out, was on voir dire, and it is therefore up to the defendants, on their part of the voir dire, to bring on Mr. Dowd and have him state whether or not he had the conversation.

Justice Stephens: That is right.

Mr. Steffen: There is nothing we can do about it.

Justice Stephens: That is right, Mr. Steffen, and that was the Court's ruling, but the Court ruled also, under an objection made by Mr. Bromley, that there wasn't in the record, at the time of the announcement of our ruling on Exhibit 233, any evidence that Certain-teed adopted or acted upon Redfield's letter, Exhibit 233, in any such manner as would make Redfield's act its act, and I thought that what you were going forward with under the Speer testimony, was to try to prove that.

I thought we had excluded, under the ruling of Judge Jackson and Judge Garrett and myself—all three of us, as I remember—all of the testimony of Speer except the items of testimony which went to subterfuge, which was another topic. If that is true, and if the Court should rule that the Government has not yet connected Exhibit 233 with Certain-teed, then the defendants might not have to call Dowd unless the Government wants to make some other effort to connect it, or unless the Government can be 6517 successful in its contention that it has connected it.

Mr. Steffen: May I make a statement upon that?

Justice Stephens: Yes, surely.

Mr. Steffen: The connection that we felt we had made was the various conversations between Mr. Speer on the one hand and Mr. Redfield and Mr. Chaffee on the other. Now it is true that those were the conversations that your Honors struck out as being privileged, the reason being that there had not been shown to be a waiver.

Of course we are in a position where we can't show a waiver until your Honors will act upon or decide that Mr. Redfield's telephone conversation with Mr. Dowd constituted a waiver. In other words, that matter is doubly-loaded, as it stands right now. Our connection is also dependent now upon what Mr. Dowd will say. If Mr. Dowd says, "I don't remember that conversation," and nothing more, and your Honor says, "Well, in that position of the evidence we have one man saying positively that he did have the conversation and another man saying that he didn't, and that that constitutes a waiver"—then it constitutes a waiver also of the conversation which was had with Mr. Redfield and which constituted the connection.

The two things are now both, as I see it, dependent on what is to be decided by Mr. Dowd on the stand, or rather what is to be testified to by Mr. Dowd on the stand.

6518 Justice Stephens: I thought we ruled adversely to you on that. I thought the Court, through the Presiding Judge—and I thought my colleagues agreed with me—held quite clearly the other day that although the waiver of privilege with respect to a document, like Exhibit 233, might include a waiver of the conversation out of which that particular document grew, so that that conversation might be said to be merged in that document, that it didn't, however, include a waiver of other or different conversations not so closely connected with the document as to be said to be merged in it, in the event of a waiver.

I have had perfectly clearly in my mind that even if the Court should decide, after hearing Mr. Dowd, that the Redfield-Dowd conversation did take place, and did contain the words which Redfield testified it contained, that still the Government would have to prove that Exhibit 233 was more than the act of Redfield, and that it would have to do it by evidence. I thought that that was what the Government was trying to do through Speer, and that it had failed to do so because the conversations on which it relied to prove that, were stricken out.

Mr. Steffen: Of course you have us in that situation—I don't mean to say that the Court has us in that situation, but we are in that situation, and what I want to say is that it looks very unfair from my standpoint, for the 6519 reason that if we start with the proposition that the Court will hold that there was a waiver of the attorney-client privilege, if Mr. Dowd is put on the stand and testifies as I hope he will, then the connection that we would have would be Mr. Speer's conversations with Mr. Redfield. Now they have been ruled out at the moment as being privileged, as I understand it.

But your Honor's statement just now, to the effect that if the document was not privileged, and Mr. Redfield could testify, then the testimony of Mr. Speer of his conversations with Mr. Redfield, which closely connected Certain-teed and Redfield, would be admissible as conversations, although ordinarily privileged, not privileged in this case because Mr. Redfield had generally been relieved of the privilege by the Dowd-Redfield conversation.

Justice Jackson: You mean then that that conversation would be actually merged in the writing, Exhibit 233?

Mr. Steffen: That is right, and we argued, as I remember, when the thing came up, that we would like to have had your Honors withhold ruling on that piece of evidence, that is the conversation between Mr. Speer and Mr Redfield which tied the transaction up with Certain-teed, and if we could have had that withheld, until we got a ruling on the voir dire, then it could have fallen either way, depending on which way you decided, whether or not this 6520 was a waiver of the conversation.

Justice Stephens: I am afraid there is a very deep misunderstanding between Government counsel and the Presiding Judge as to what we did the other day and why we did it.

I didn't have in mind at all, Mr. Steffen, that there was any conversation testified to by Mr. Speer which was so closely connected with the execution of Exhibit 233 that it could be said to be merged in it if Exhibit 233 was waived, so far as privilege was concerned. I thought all the conversations that Speer testified to before the Court were general conversations with counsel with respect to the advisability of using the Speer contrivance, or the Speer product, and it wasn't my understanding that those conversations approached anything that could be merged in Exhibit 233.

Do the defendants wish to be heard on this matter?

Mr. Bromley: Simply to point out that Speer testified that he had been in Europe two months prior to the time of Exhibit 233, and as your Honor has suggested, he didn't suggest, even by indirection, that he ever had any talks about Exhibit 233; he never heard of it or saw it; he knew nothing about it at all; and there is nothing in what he said as to his conversations with Redfield which could have any possible bearing on something that didn't come into existence for several months afterward.

So that it was my impression too that there was an 6521 utter and complete lack of connection in the Speer testimony, and that is the only asserted ground of connection in the record, there isn't any other.

Justice Jackson: I am sure that I would have to refresh my recollection with respect to Speer's testimony with regard to his conversations with Redfield, but I did think he said—I may be wrong—that he told Redfield that his closed-edge board could be used as a bargaining point with USG, the very thing that is in Exhibit 233. That is in my mind, I don't know whether that is correct or not.

Mr. Steffen: It is also in the transcript, your Honor.

Mr. Bromley: Didn't we set out here to have established that this company adopted or acted on this memorandum?

Justice Stephens: That is right.

Mr. Bromley: Now, assuming the accuracy of what Justice Jackson says, how does that conversation, occurring at least two months before the memorandum, show that the company adopted or acted on any suggestion contained in the memorandum? There is no evidence that they ever did use it.

Justice Jackson: I thought he said, I thought Redfield said that he represented the company when he went there.

Mr. Bromley: Yes, he did, but how does that show that the company ever used that as a bargaining weapon with USG?

Justice Jackson: I don't think there is any evidence at all showing that it was acted upon.

6522 Mr. Bromley: Oh, no, there is not. That is where the lack of connection comes, it seems to me. If there is no evidence that the company adopted Redfield's suggestion, or acted upon it, then the memorandum has no significance whatsoever.

Mr. Steffen: The cases, as I read them, on what constitutes a declaration or an act in furtherance of a conspiracy, and therefore a declaration which is binding upon alleged co-conspirators, are not limited to a very close construction of what is in furtherance of a conspiracy, and there are a number of decisions which are simply declarative of the purposes and ideals that the parties have in mind, whether they actually carry out those identical purposes in the way suggested, or others that are similar.

The declaration here is in effect, "We should find a patent upon which we can fix prices." This was in the summer of 1929, and it was not two or more months after the Speer conversation, as Mr. Bromley said, but fairly closely after the Speer conversation.

Justice Stephens: Let me interject, if I may, in the possible hope of saving time, although I will let you finish if you wish to, after you have heard what I have said.

It seems to me now that you are going off on an entirely new subject as to whether or not if Exhibit 233 is shown to have been adopted by Certain-teed, it is a declara-6523 tion in furtherance of a conspiracy.

I thought what we were talking about now is whether or not Exhibit 233 was adopted, whether there is evidence showing that Exhibit 233 was adopted by Certain-teed.

Exhibit 233, looked at alone, is merely the statement of Mr. Redfield. Now it can't bind Certain-teed unless Certain-teed has adopted or acted upon it, or made it its own in some manner. I thought that that was what we were dealing with, and not the effect of it after it came into evidence, as the declaration of a co-conspirator.

Mr. Steffen: I intended to address myself to that very point, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: Very well.

Mr. Steffen: The decisions on when a declaration is in furtherance of a conspiracy are not limited solely to cases where the company acted upon the particular declaration. They may be descriptive of the broad purposes that the company has, and I can cite you 28 Fed. (2nd) 1 (1928), a decision by Judge Evans, where he is very explicit on the thing, and he reviews a number of cases, such as the Hillmon case, and others, and also cites from Jones on Evidence, and states that a declaration, whether acted upon or not, if it is descriptive of the purposes which the parties had at that time, may constitute a declaration which is deemed to be in furtherance of the conspiracy, within the Rule.

6524 Now, Mr. Redfield's memorandum, in which he said, "Let's get a patent (in effect) upon which we can fix prices, because the Utzman Patent expires on August 6"—this memorandum being written on August the second—is clearly descriptive, in my view, of the purposes which the Certain-teed people actually did have in mind, and we established that by Mr. Speer's statement.

Mr. Speer, under Mr. Adams' cross-examination, was shown to have been a promoter, a responsible man in the company; that when he went to see Redfield he acted on behalf of the company; and he testified cold, as Judge Jackson said, that he had recommended to Mr. Redfield the possibility of using his, Speer's, patents as a means for fixing prices—

Mr. Bromley: (Interposing) No, he testified to nothing of the kind.

Mr. Steffen: Excuse me—as a means of obtaining licenses from other members of the industry, and obtaining royalties for the company under them—and that, in effect, therefore, he did talk over the subject matter of Exhibit 233.

6525 Then Mr. Redfield, after Mr. Speer had left for Europe, true, Mr. Redfield on August 2nd wrote his memorandum.

Now Mr. Speer also testified that Mr. Redfield was patent counsel or patent attorney for Certain-teed, that he was in Certain-teed's office and used the Certain-teed memorandum forms for his reports.

We have other evidence in the record indicating that—in one of the George M. Brown exhibits—Mr. Redfield gave George M. Brown a memorandum in June on the whole question of the foam license agreements.

So that it was very definitely in Mr. Redfield's mind; he was more than just an outside attorney who was being called in to give an opinion; and it was more than just an exhibit that blew in to Certain-teed—but it is descriptive of what Certain-teed really did during the summer of 1929.

Certain-teed, looking at the George M. Brown memorandum, was persuaded to take out a license under the foam, and later under the starch patents. They at that time got price-fixing based on those two patents. So that the idea of having some patent under which they could operate and under which they subsequently did operate, was definitely in their minds, although they didn't operate under this particular patent, that is perfectly true.

But the basic idea which Mr. Redfield announces, was acted upon, if you wish to take it in the very narrow 6526 sense of what constitutes a declaration in furtherance of a conspiracy.

Now if that constitutes connection, assuming that it is admissible, it of course has been stricken out by the Court's ruling for the reason that the Court held—and I think that that, as I understood it, is exactly what the ruling was—that the conversation between Mr. Speer and Mr. Redfield, whether it constituted a connection or didn't constitute a connection, would have to be stricken out for the reason that it was privileged, even though, had we a waiver established, it would be the type of conversation which gave rise to or gave meaning to Exhibit 233—and would ordinarily not, therefore, be a privileged communication.

Justice Stephens: Well, it is exactly at that point that I was unable to follow you the other day when we had a very extensive argument on exactly this same subject.

As I said then, and as I have reiterated this afternoon, it seemed to me that while the waiver of privilege with respect to a memorandum or document might waive the privilege as to the conversation out of which it arose, or as a result of which it was executed, it wouldn't waive all privilege with respect to all conversations between attorney and client on the general subject of the memorandum.

Mr. Steffen: I think the transcript will show, your Honor, that the Court's ruling struck out that conversation not for the reason that it didn't constitute a connec-6527 tion, but for the reason that it was privileged.

Justice Stephens: That is right.

Mr. Steffen: Therefore I had felt that the matter of whether it constituted a connection or not, was still an open question.

Justice Stephens: Well, I am sorry—I have tried to be open-minded—I am sorry that you regard the Court's ruling on the subject as unfair—

Mr. Steffen: (Interposing) Your Honor—

Justice Stephens: (continuing) —I realize you don't intend to criticize, but you do obviously feel that it is unfair. I have tried hard to understand your point of view and I don't think it is a question of what I think is fair or what you think is fair. It is a question of what the Court ultimately, which must have the final authority and responsibility, thinks the law is.

I thought we had made it thoroughly clear, but perhaps we haven't. Judge Jackson may have a doubt on the matter, I don't know. Do you wish to be heard, Mr. Bromley?

Mr. Bromley: No sir, I think not.

Justice Stephens: Do you wish to call Mr. Dowd, gentlemen of the defendants?

Mr. Bromley: I don't see any necessity for it. I was about to raise that point myself. I don't see why we should waste the time involved in calling Dowd when 6528 it is perfectly plain to me that no connection has been established. I think I ought to say that I don't know of any other Redfield memorandum that is in the record, to which Mr. Steffen has referred. There isn't any.

Mr. Steffen: I refer you to Government's Exhibit 226—there is, in other words.

Justice Stephens: Is that on this same subject?

Mr. Steffen: No, your Honor. Mr. Bromley was just saying that he knew of no other memorandum mentioning Mr. Redfield, in the record.

Mr. Bromley: No, I didn't say "mentioning Mr. Redfield", I said "by Mr. Redfield". Is that an exhibit by Mr. Redfield?

Mr. Steffen: I said it was an exhibit mentioning Redfield, and that is all I said.

Mr. Bromley: You didn't put it that way, you said it was a Redfield memorandum.

Mr. Steffen: I don't believe that I stated that.

Justice Stephens: I think my colleagues agree with me that the Court would prefer that the Government not rest if this matter is left in any doubt and there might be possibly the necessity of reopening the Government's case. If Dowd is to be called he ought to be called within the Government's case.

If there is anything doubtful about the Court's ruling on the item of connection, then that ought to be clarified by some motion, possibly the defendants could move—6529 well, 233 isn't in evidence yet, is it?

Mr. Bromley: No, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: There is nothing to move about, I guess.

As far as I am concerned, I thought the matter was closed by the thorough manner we went into it the other day; but I will be glad to consult with my colleagues during the recess.

Mr. Steffen: I will refer your Honor to page 6509 of the record, at which your Honor's ruling was made, and that, I think, simply strikes out the conversation between Mr. Speer and Mr. Chaffee on the one hand, and Mr. Redfield, which we were relying upon as connecting evidence; and I didn't think that it constituted a holding at all that that, if admitted, would constitute connection. That is, I thought the connection matter was to one side.

Justice Stephens: We ruled, when we made our original ruling on Exhibit 233, from which I read into the record, we ruled that Exhibit 233, even if the Dowd-Redfield conversation took place and contained the words that Redfield said it contained, still hadn't been connected, and that the Government would have to connect it with Redfield. In other words, we ruled that the act or utterance of "A" wouldn't be binding upon "B" unless "B" was shown to have solicited or in some manner acted upon it and made it its own.

Now you were in the process, I thought, of attempting to establish a connection through Speer, and I thought 6530 we had ruled that the Speer conversations, except those having to do with the alleged subterfuge issue, were out of the record, on motions to strike. That being true, under the present state of the record as I understand it, Exhibit 233 is not shown to have been connected, and therefore isn't in evidence.

Mr. Steffen: I think that is perfectly true, so far, and my only question is that if we could establish a waiver, then the conversations between Mr. Speer and Mr. Redfield, I had thought, would constitute the necessary connection and would not be excluded, as your Honor did on page 6509.

Justice Stephens: Well, the division between our points of view with respect to that is, to state it for, I think, the third time, that it has been my view that the immediate conversation out of which an exhibit or document was prepared might be within the waiver of the document, but that preliminary and other conversations would not be. I thought that there was nothing in the Speer conversations, as testified to, which indicated that they were so closely connected with the execution of the document that they would be within a waiver.

We will consider the matter during the recess.

Do you have anything in addition to the Dowd difficulty?

Mr. Steffen: I have only a short statement that I would like to make and I presume I can make that in the morning?

Justice Stephens: Yes. You might furnish my 6531 law clerk, if you will, a reference to the transcript pages of Mr. Speer's testimony.

Mr. Steffen: I will do that.

Justice Stephens: Will you also take the reference, Mr. Cantor, to that case which Mr. Steffen just cited?

Mr. Cantor: Yes sir.

Justice Stephens: Announce the recess.

(Whereupon, at 4:05 o'clock, p.m., the trial was recessed until Thursday morning, April 20, 1944, at 10 o'clock a.m.)

6532 IN THE

DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Civil Action No. 8017

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

Plaintiff,

v.

UNITED STATES GYPSUM COMPANY; NATIONAL GYPSUM COMPANY; CERTAIN-TEED PRODUCTS CORPORATION; THE CELOTEX CORPORATION; EBSARY GYPSUM COMPANY, INC.; NEWARK PLASTER COMPANY; SAMUEL M. GLOYD, doing business under the name of TEXAS CEMENT PLASTER COMPANY; SEWELL L. AVERY; OLIVER M. KNODE; MELVIN H. BAKER; BROR H. DAHLBERG; HENRY J. HARTLEY; FREDERICK G. EBSARY; and FREDERICK TOMKINS,

Defendants.

Seventh Floor,
Internal Revenue Building,
Washington, D. C.,
Thursday, April 20, 1944.

The above-entitled cause came on for further hearing at 10:00 o'clock a.m., pursuant to adjournment, before Honorable Harold M. Stephens, Honorable Finis J. Garrett, and Honorable Joseph R. Jackson, sitting as the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

APPEARANCES:

(Same as heretofore noted.)

6534 The Court read last night the case which counsel cited,—or read it this morning—28 Fed. (2d) 1, 6535 International Indemnity v. Lehman. It seems only to announce the orthodox proposition that declarations which are explanatory of an act which is in furtherance of a conspiracy are admissible in evidence.

The Court has carefully read—that is, the Presiding Judge has carefully read the colloquy which took place last night between counsel and the Court with respect to Exhibit 233, and is moved to make the following very brief additional comment:

The Court doesn't want Government counsel to have been misled in any manner by the Court's ruling, and it may be that Government counsel gained the impression, in some manner, that the Court hadn't ruled on the question whether there was connection or no connection with respect to Exhibit 233. I had thought, and it seems to me now, that there can't be any real basis for misunderstanding on that subject, because at the time we announced our written ruling on 233, we held that even if the Redfield-Dowd conversation took place and contained the words of waiver which Mr. Redfield testified to, still it was necessary to show two things to make the exhibit admissible: (1) that it was an act or declaration in furtherance of the conspiracy, and (2) that it was connected in some manner so that Redfield's act in writing 233 was shown to be the act of Certain-teed. In other words, we ruled that those 6536 two elements had not yet been shown.

Now nothing has happened since then except the Speer testimony, which was relied upon to connect, and the Speer testimony was in large part stricken out. So it seems to me the Government must fairly have been advised that the Court had not ruled that there was any connection. On the contrary, it ruled that there yet was no connection.

It seems to me also that it should be very clearly borne in mind, in thinking about 233, that what the Government is claiming waiver of is waiver of privilege with respect to an exhibit, a document, and that all you attempted to show in the Redfield-Dowd conversation was that there had been a waiver of the privilege with respect to that document.

I said, in the course of our colloquy, that possibly that would include waiver of the conversation in which the document was itself prepared or as a result of which it was prepared, if you were claiming waiver of more than the mere exhibit; but that it did not seem to me that even if that were true it would involve waiver of separate conversations—that they would have to stand on their own bottom so far as the rules of evidence were concerned.

I had thought, Mr. Steffen, that when Speer was offered, he was offered not on the subject of waiver, but on the subject of connection, that you were trying to prove by Speer that Exhibit 233 was in some manner the act 6537 of Certain-teed; and that when you were trying to prove that, which is an item of connection, not an item of waiver, you were bound by the rules of evidence, and if conversations which you relied upon to prove connection were themselves privileged conversations, and not such conversations as would be within the waiver of Exhibit 233 itself—assuming that waiver to exist—that you were faced with the rules of evidence with respect to privilege.

However, I may say, on the other side, it has occurred to me, in thinking this matter over during the evening, that this might be true, Mr. Bromley—while this seems like, perhaps, again taking more time than is advisable concerning this exhibit, because it doesn't seem very important, still I am anxious to be fair and right in my rulings—I suppose the normal or ordinary way to prove that a memorandum like 233 was the act of a company would be to call someone connected with the company, an officer of the company, to testify that he solicited it, such as in this case Mr. Whittemore or Mr. Brown, or to call somebody from the company or the Board of Directors to show that after it was received it was acted upon in some manner which touched this alleged conspiracy.

But I suppose it might possibly be shown in another way, that this memorandum was the act of Certain-teed in the sense that it was solicited by Certain-teed. It would 6538 seem to me that the mere fact that a client solicits advice from a lawyer, his mere going to the lawyer and asking him to give advice or to write a memorandum, that the mere fact or such solicitation of advice wouldn't, itself, be privileged—the mere fact that a client asks a lawyer to advise him, as distinguished from the statements he makes to the lawyer in order to get the advice.

If the Speer testimony should show, by reasonable inference or directly, that he, as company engineer, was authorized by Certain-teed to present devices and products which he had devised, to their lawyers, and to obtain memoranda for the company with respect to them, then it might be urged that Certain-teed was, through Speer, soliciting the memorandum which resulted.

Now I was unable to do more, last night, than to read all these 100 or 150 exhibits that came in yesterday and the record, I haven't reread the Speer testimony. But there may be something in that point, if that is what Mr. Steffen has been urging. I hadn't understood that was what he was urging, but it occurred to me last night, after thinking over the colloquy, in a desire to be conscientiously attentive to it, that maybe that was what he was contending.

Is that what you are contending, Mr. Steffen?

Mr. Steffen: I was prepared this morning to 6539 close out the Speer matter as rapidly as possible.

I would call your attention simply to the fact that we reoffered Exhibit 233 when Mr. Speer was on the stand, and we checked last night and I don't believe there was any ruling on it.

Therefore, I will ask simply for a ruling on the reoffer of Exhibit 233, and of course that will raise the question of whether there has been sufficient connection shown. I do that simply to make our record clear.

I want to make a statement in that connection. We think Mr. Speer's testimony shows that Redfield was employed as a patent man for Certain-teed, although he may have been on the payroll of the Chaffee firm. Redfield himself stated that he was on the payroll of the Chaffee firm, and acting for Certain-teed in patent matters.

We also called Your Honors' attention, last night, to Government's Exhibit 226, which is George M. Brown's memorandum, in which he said, "I have given such consideration to Mr. Redfield's report as I have time for." His report was a report on the bubble or foam license agreement. This was in June.

Then a third item of connection, of course, would be Mr. Speer's testimony on transcript page 6452, in which he said—if you will recall, we showed him Exhibit 233, and he read it, and we asked him if he had any conversation
6540 concerning Exhibit 233, and he turned it upside down, as you will remember, and said, in effect, "Well, I remember I told Mr. Redfield that I thought my patent would make a good trading position in our dealings with USG, and that I thought the device or the edge that we made was better than the Utzman because of the distinctive feature that it has reinforced edge."

We don't think that is a privileged communication because he may or may not have been there for legal advice. That looks like straight business. But I am simply offering this, and would like a ruling and would like to have it finished.

Justice Stephens: I may add this to what I said, with particular reference to Mr. Keber, acting for Mr. Adams. It occurred to me last night in thinking of this thing, and this morning in discussing the Speer testimony with my assistant, Mr. Cantor, that possibly Mr. Adams builded better than he knew, or worse than he knew, when he so carefully brought out the fact that Mr. Speer was company engineer and was going to Redfield to present matters, as engineer, to the company lawyer. Maybe it is a fair inference from that that 233 was requested by Speer as company engineer, and if so, that that would connect it and make it a company document.

Mr. Steffen: Our re-offer of 233 was on page 6456.

Justice Jackson: Was that subsequent to the 6541 Speer testimony, that the offer was made?

Mr. Steffen: Yes, that re-offer was made on the theory that we had connected the matter up by Mr. Speer's testimony and these other matters that I now mention.

Mr. Keber: May I just make a remark? My knowledge of this matter doesn't encompass the situation too definitely, but it seems to me that the point in showing that Mr. Speer was a company representative, of course, was in connection with the question of showing that the conversation was privileged, and that Certain-teed could raise the privilege because it was a conversation between Certain-teed, by its representative, and its counsel. As I had understood it, even assuming that there had been some reference—and I don't take it there was—in the testimony of Mr. Speer to Exhibit 233, and a request made by Mr. Speer for such a memorandum, the objection went precisely to that conversation, because the request was for legal advice.

Justice Stephens: Do you contend, Mr. Keber, that the fact that a client goes to his lawyer and tells him he would like to have some advice on a particular subject, that that much is privileged?

Mr. Keber: I take it that it is, because if the client couldn't go to his lawyer without having that fact disclosed, that he had sought legal advice and was asking for legal advice about a specific matter, that might deprive the 6542 privilege of one of its best characteristics.

Justice Stephens: In other words, the privilege goes so far as to make secret the fact that a client consults his lawyer?

Mr. Keber: With respect to a particular matter. I take it it wouldn't be secret that he went into the lawyer's office, perhaps, but thereafter, when the question directs itself as to whether he consulted his lawyer about this or that matter, then you are getting into the question of what the legal advice concerned, and I take it from that point on the privilege starts to operate.

Justice Jackson: This is all explanatory of Mr. Adams' actions with respect to his cross-examination?

Mr. Keber: Possibly not as clearly as he would have put it, but as well as I could do.

Justice Stephens: You don't need to apologize for the way you present matters, Mr. Keber.

Well, so far as I personally am concerned, I don't want to belabor a small point or waste the time of the Court by being superconscientious, but I don't feel now, after having thought the matter over last night, that I ought to rule on the question of connection until I read the Speer testimony, and that will take me an hour, at any rate, to do it. I don't know how my colleagues feel about it.

What else did you have in mind this morning, Mr. Steffen?

6543 Mr. Steffen: I am ready to rest, practically.

Justice Stephens: You have no other statement to make?

Mr. Steffen: A very short statement.

Justice Stephens: Are the defendants ready to make a motion at this time, or do they wish to take a recess?

Mr. Steffen: I would like to make my statement before they make their motions.

Justice Stephens: You want to make your statement before a ruling on Exhibit 233?

Mr. Steffen: I would be very glad to.

May it please the Court, I wish to make a short statement in regard to the patent phases of the case. First, we are not going to make an offer concerning patent invalidity at this time. We have no reason to suppose that the Court has changed its views since the ruling upon that question last fall in connection with Paragraph 46(a). We, of course, do not concede, on the record, that any of the defendants' patents are valid.

Second, we do not consider that it is for the Government at this time to introduce any of the patents upon which the defendants may rely to justify their actions, if they can be justified; and of course until some showing of the patents upon which the defendants rely is made, it would be premature on our part, as we see it, to offer any prior art to define the true scope of their patents. Our position 6544 in this respect has been stated over the past year, and appears particularly in our trial brief on pages 21 and 22.

Third, we, of course, do not concede that the patents, or any of them, which are mentioned in the complaint or referred to in the various license agreements, are of the type described in the General Electric case as "completely covering" the products made by the defendants.

Fourth, we do not concede that any gypsum board or lath manufactured by the defendants during the period of the alleged conspiracy embodies or comes within the claims of any patents the defendants may have.

Finally, I want to say that I make this with entire respect. I wish simply to make the record very clear that we make no concessions on those points, so that the defendants may not be misled in any way, and the failure on my part to mention something is not to be deemed a concession.

Subject to the ruling on Exhibit 233, we are prepared to rest.

Mr. Bromley: May it please the Court, I don't understand how counsel thinks he can comment on the scope of the patents if he hasn't introduced them in evidence, or how he can say that he has proved that they don't completely cover our product. If he hasn't put them in evidence, I should think the presumption that arises from the license agreements, which he did put in evidence, would be 6545 that the patents completely covered the product, and that they were used.

Of course, I think the Utzman patent and the Roos foam patents are in evidence, because they are exhibits to the complaint, and they are admitted—and the Haggerty starch patents, too—the five most important, fundamental product patents are in evidence, as I read the pleadings. Out of the 50 or 60 patents concerned, those annexed to the complaint are the fundamental product patents. They are admitted by the answers, as I understanding the pleadings. So they are before the Court. But I don't understand the position of Government counsel that he can argue about the scope of the patents if he doesn't think they are in the record.

Now assuming that the Government has rested, I should like to say this: As I recall the outset of this trial, the Government gave us an assurance that they were going to produce evidence which would establish a conspiracy, prima facie, outside of the declarations of the co-conspirators. I think the Court felt—I know I did—that the mere fact that they put in license agreements did not establish any combination or conspiracy of any sort. That question was raised early in the trial, and after those license agreements were received in evidence, this assurance was given us that the Government would produce other evidence of understanding, arrangement or conspiracy among the defendants.

6546 I don't believe that promise has been performed. I haven't seen or heard any such evidence. Almost every document that has been offered has been received subject to the reservation that at some time it must be connected with some conspiracy by some proof outside of it.

So, therefore, I desire at this time, on behalf of the defendants United States Gypsum Company, Sewell L. Avery, and Oliver M. Knode, to move, and I do move, that all of the exhibits and testimony which have been received as to said defendants subject to the usual reservation be stricken from the record upon the grounds that no prima facie showing of any alleged conspiracy has been made, and that such exhibits and testimony have not been shown to have been in furtherance or in execution of any alleged conspiracy.

Said defendants further move to strike all of the exhibits and testimony which have been received as to said defendants subject to connection other than the usual reservation.

Justice Stephens: Are you making this motion to strike separate from your motion to dismiss?

Mr. Bromley: Yes, sir. It was my purpose to make two motions,—first, the motion to strike, and then the motion to dismiss.

Justice Stephens: Do you have something to say, Mr. Finck?

Mr. Finck: If the Court please, I would like to 6547 make a motion to strike on behalf of National Gypsum Company and Melvin H. Baker.

Justice Stephens: You may.

Mr. Finck: On the assumption that Mr. Bromley's motion only runs to his clients, I would like to make a similar motion.

The defendants National Gypsum Company and Melvin H. Baker move to strike from the record all of the exhibits and testimony which, in the course of the trial, were received as to such defendants subject to the usual reservation with respect to the declarations or admissions of alleged co-conspirators, on the ground that no prima facie showing that such defendants were parties to any alleged conspiracy has been made, and that such evidence has not been shown to have been in furtherance or in execution of any alleged conspiracy.

In addition to the foregoing, the said defendants further move to strike from the record all of the exhibits and testimony which have been received as to said defendants subject to connection, on the ground that no prima facie showing of the required connection has been made.

Now on behalf of the Ebsary Gypsum Company, Inc., and Frederick G. Ebsary, I would like to have the record show that a similar motion to strike all of the exhibits and testimony received as to such defendants subject to the usual reservation, has been made on the same 6548 grounds as stated in the motion made on behalf of National Gypsum Company and Melvin H. Baker; and in addition, said defendants further move to strike from the record all of the exhibits and testimony which have been received as to said defendants subject to connection, on the same ground as stated in the motion made on behalf of National Gypsum Company and Melvin H. Baker.

Mr. Keber: I have a similar motion to make on behalf of Certain-teed and Hartley.

The defendants Certain-teed Products Corporation and Henry J. Hartley move to strike from the record all exhibits and testimony which, in the course of the trial, were received as to such defendants subject to the usual reservation with respect to the declarations or admissions of alleged co-conspirators, on the ground that no prima facie showing that such defendants were parties to any such alleged conspiracy has been made, and that such evidence has not been shown to have been in furtherance of or in execution of any alleged conspiracy.

In addition to the foregoing, said defendants further move to strike from the record all of the exhibits and testimony which have been received as to said defendants subject to connection, on the ground that no prima facie showing of the required connection has been made.

6549 Mr. Johnston: If the Court please, on behalf of Samuel M. Gloyd, one of the defendants, I make a motion to strike, similar to the motion of National, as dictated into the record by Mr. Finck. I do this for the sake of brevity because I see no reason for repeating it all; and if the local rules require it, I will file a formal motion with the Clerk. I am not sure as to what the Rules require in that respect.

Justice Jackson: That motion is made with respect to Texas too?

Mr. Johnston: Texas is Gloyd. We have used the word "Texas" all the way through here for convenience.

Justice Jackson: I see.

Mr. Johnston: The record is clear that Mr. Gloyd was doing business under that trade name.

Mr. Oliver: May it please the Court, on behalf of The Celotex Corporation and Bror G. Dahlberg, I now move to strike the following exhibits and testimony upon the ground that no connection has been established whereby said exhibits, or said testimony, became or are binding upon these defendants or either of them:

1. All exhibits except Government Exhibits 13, 14, 22 and 23.

2. All testimony of all witnesses, other than Arthur R. Black (in so far as he testified regarding his present employment with The Celotex Corporation, transcript 6550 pages 2523 to 2525, inclusive), and C. F. Miller (in so far as his testimony relates to The Celotex Corporation, transcript pages 2614, 2615, and 2633 to 2638, inclusive).

In addition to the foregoing, said defendants further move to strike all evidence, verbal or written, which, in the course of the trial was received as to such defendants subject to the usual reservation with respect to the declarations or admissions of alleged co-conspirators, on the ground that no prima facie showing of any alleged conspiracy has been established, and that such evidence has not been shown to have been in furtherance or in execution of any alleged conspiracy.

Mr. O'Donnell: May the Court please, on behalf of the Defendant Newark Plaster Company and the individual Defendant Frederick Tomkins, we respectfully move this Court to strike all exhibits and testimony which, in the course of the trial, were received as to such defendants subject to the usual reservation with respect to the declarations or admissions of alleged co-conspirators, on the ground that there has been no prima facie showing that such defendants were parties to any alleged conspiracy, or that any alleged conspiracy existed, and that such evidence has not been shown to have been in furtherance or in execution of any alleged conspiracy.

In addition to the foregoing, said defendants further move to strike from the record all of the evidence 6551 which has been received as to said defendants subject to connection, on the ground that there has been no prima facie showing of the required connection.

Justice Garrett: Of course I have only gotten these motions as they were stated, but your motion, Mr. Bromley, didn't go beyond striking the exhibits, did it?

Mr. Bromley: Yes sir, it did; it included the testimony.

Justice Garrett: It included a motion to strike the oral testimony as well?

Mr. Bromley: Yes, your Honor.

Justice Garrett: I didn't understand that at the time. Then, in substance, all motions are directed both to the exhibits and to the oral testimony?

Mr. Bromley: Yes, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: Do you wish to make an argument on your motion?

Mr. Bromley: No, your Honor. It was my plan, rather, to ask the Court, after I had made a motion to dismiss, what its pleasure was with respect to the program following these motions. It was my thought that if we could go away and prepare briefs on both sides, and come back here on or about the 15th of May, and argue these motions, having submitted briefs in advance and given them to the Court in advance, that probably that would be the plan that would enable us to make the best progress.

6552 Justice Jackson: Or both motions on one?

Mr. Bromley: On both motions.

Justice Jackson: But you haven't made your second motion yet.

Mr. Bromley: Not yet, your Honor.

Justice Garrett: Well, if your first motion is sustained—

Mr. Bromley (interposing): I don't need the second one. (Laughter)

Mr. Steffen: We won't hold Mr. Bromley to making any concession if he makes a second motion in conjunction with the first. (Laughter)

Mr. Bromley: I had thought that what counsel should do, if they could, would be to exchange briefs on Monday, say, the 8th of May, a week before the 15th, and then if they wanted to put in reply briefs, let them do that by the 15th or before the 15th of May, and then come in here on the 15th and proceed to argue both motions, because I take it that fundamentally the question is the same as to both motions.

Justice Jackson: That is the very thing I had in mind, and there is no necessity of briefing twice, as I see it.

Mr. Steffen: I think the fairest way of exchanging briefs is the way Mr. Bromley suggested, that they give us theirs and we give them ours on May 8th, and that will give us each an opportunity to see what the other's case is before we come to the argument on May 15th.

6553 Justice Stephens: It is very important to the Court, if you are going to exchange initial briefs, that there be reply briefs also, because sometimes, when briefs are presented at the same time by way of exchange, you don't get a real "crossing of swords" by counsel, so that the Court finds some assertions made by one side that aren't touched upon by the other. So I think it is quite important that if the briefs are to be exchanged in advance of the argument, there should also be reply briefs submitted so that the Court can be sure that it has the views of each of the parties on all of the contentions of the opposite party.

Mr. Bromley: Of course the fair thing to do in this situation would be for the Government first to state just what it is it thinks it has shown by way of a prima facie case.

I say that because I am frank to admit that I just don't see what they have done in that respect, and when I write my brief I have got to set up all possible straw men and knock them down.

Now there ought not to be any secret about it. If they think they have introduced any evidence of any combination, outside of the declarations, it seems to me that they ought to say so.

Mr. Steffen: We do.

Mr. Bromley: And tell us what it is, and not keep it a secret, because there is no reason why it should be in advance just what it is they think they have proved by way of combination.

6554 a secret from us. I should find great difficulty in setting up a hypothesis as to what they might contend, and I would like to know—speaking about fairness—

I can understand the Hitchman case, where you have a union in meeting assembled, and they pass resolutions and reach agreements that they will go out and unionize the men. There there was proof of a definite understanding or agreement, and after it was made in the convention, and their agents and organizers went out into the field, the declarations which they made, which are relevant to that understanding which has been proved, are binding on everybody.

Now in that case the Government took a perfectly open position as to what understanding they had proved, before they attempted to bind the defendants with the declarations.

I would like to have the Government tell me just what it is that these defendants agreed among themselves to do, because I don't believe that there is any proof that they ever agreed among themselves to do anything, and I don't believe they ever had any common purpose, except, maybe, after they got to be licensees I guess they had the common but not joint purpose of observing their contracts. And I think that is the only common purpose that there is any proof about at all, and I don't think that common purpose constitutes an arrangement or agreement or understanding or conspiracy—and I am mindful of the 6555 fact that the Government need only prove a lawful arrangement, I know that, sure.

Justice Stephens: Prove what?

Mr. Bromley: That they need only establish, for their prima facie case, a lawful arrangement. Then they can come along with declarations and give the illegal color or character if they want to.

What I would like to know is, sometime before I write my brief, if I can, just what lawful arrangements the Government thinks it has proved, and what that evidence is. So I would like to have their brief first on the motion to strike.

Justice Stephens: It would be very helpful to the Court if it knew just what the Government's contentions were, in respect of that.

Mr. Steffen: Your Honor, I would—

Justice Jackson (interposing): I suppose the Government feels that it has proved the allegations of its complaint?

Mr. Steffen: That is what we thought, your Honor. We also supplied you with a very thoroughgoing trial brief, we thought.

Justice Stephens: Yes, which I have read very carefully, and also all the cases cited therein.

Mr. Steffen: That laid out, I think, the general thesis of our case. Of course it is preposterous, shall I say, for a person making a motion to strike, to ask the other 6556 party to give him his evidence or his arguments in advance. The usual way is for the moving party to give the other party a brief; and then he may reply. In this case I went along, very generously I thought, with Mr. Bromley and said that we would exchange briefs on May 8th—which is a less fair way from the Government's standpoint.

I want to leave one thought with you, if I may, on this matter, in answer to Mr. Bromley's point. I think if he will read the Masonite case very carefully again he will get a pretty good idea of what has been established in the present case.

I also want to refer now to what Mr. Dallstream said, at the time Mr. Dahlberg was on the stand. You will remember that he made a statement in connection with the Masonite case. In the Masonite case you had a series of agreements and they were all, on their face, legal, as he said—they were agency agreements. The question then was, where was the conspiracy. And Mr. Dallstream, in very few words, told us where the conspiracy was. He said, on page 6350 of the transcript: ". . . and the case in the Supreme Court proceeded on the ground that it was a true agency, and that the violation occurred only because it blanketed and enveloped the whole industry with the contract".

That is what we have here.

Justice Stephens: Do you rely upon the Inter-6557 state Circuit case also?

Mr. Steffen: Oh yes, I don't want to be limited as to what we rely upon—

Justice Stephens (interposing): I am not attempting to limit you. I only want to find out, as far as you are willing to state, what cases you rely on. I had assumed that you would be contending under the Interstate Circuit case as well as the Masonite case.

Mr. Steffen: I think Mr. Dallstream's statement shows the relationship between the conspiracy and these agreements. The agreements, like the agency agreements, may, when looked at singly, be innocent. The vice lay when the industry got together to blanket the industry under those agreements. Mr. Dallstream put it in very few, very terse and very nice words.

Mr. Bromley: I don't see why there should be any confusion about either one of those cases. I have got the Masonite case before me and I think the second headnote states the heart of the decision and explains why it is not applicable to our case. It says:

"Acceptance by competitors without previous agreement of an invitation to participate in a plan, the necessary consequence of which, if carried out, will be restraint of interstate commerce, renders them liable as conspirators under the Sherman Act."

6558 Now here the defendants accepted an invitation to a plan, the necessary consequence of which was a lawful consequence. We had a patent and we had the right to grant licenses.

In the Masonite case "the necessary consequence of which" was an illegal restraint of trade because it was not protected by any patent.

In the Interstate Circuit case all you had was a group of distributors of motion pictures, whom it was proved circumstantially agreed with one another that they would only license their motion pictures to exhibitors under one form of contract which contained provisions about the admission price and so forth. The defendants restrained themselves unlawfully because they limited their freedom of action, and each agreed with the other that they would only use this one form of contract, that they would only do business on these terms. That was not protected by any patent, it was a restraint of each of them, and an unlawful restraint.

How you can draw any analogy between those two cases and this situation, where we have a presumptively valid patent and we extend an invitation to all those who want to operate under our patent to sign a license, and the licenses are lawful, and they are carried out lawfully, how you can draw any analogy between that and these other two cases, I fail to see.

The Government recognizes that because for 6559 months they have been talking about subterfuge.

They try to get away from the conclusion that I make, that this plan is not like the plan in the Masonite case because this plan is lawful. They try to make it unlawful by saying, "Oh, well, but it isn't what it appears to be, it is a fake, it is a fraud, and it was not entered into for the purpose of using the patents or lawfully fixing the prices."

Well, that is an admission that they haven't proved anything by just proving the patent agreements. They have got to go farther and show that it was a smoke-screen, and that is what they have talked for weeks and weeks and weeks, and all they have succeeded in proving is that it was a bona fide plan, carried out to the last detail, royalties were actually paid, the patents were used, and the thing was observed meticulously, as a lawful contract scheme, under legal guidance, and there wasn't any fake or fraud about it in the slightest.

Justice Stephens: I would like, just by way of preliminary discussion, to hear you a little further as to this, Mr. Bromley, and then I will make a comment as to what I think the order of business ought to be, subject to the views of my colleagues, of course.

I read the trial briefs, of course, of both the defendants and the Government, as well as the cases cited in them. In fact, I spent all the last recess doing that, with more thoroughness than I had had the opportunity to do before.

6560 I had supposed that the Government might contend that under the Interstate Circuit case—since there were copyrights there can be price-fixing under copyrights—that there was some sort of an analogy between that case and this case.

As I remember the facts in the Interstate Circuit case, the exhibitors entered into an arrangement with each other and with the distributors, whereby the distributors, under a rigid contract, were forbidden to sell to exhibitors unless the "second-string" theaters would show their pictures at a minimum price, and would eliminate double features.

Apparently the Court held that that was illegal despite the fact that there was a copyright which entitled the owner to fix prices and terms and conditions of use of the films, because there was concert of action among the exhibitors in bringing about these rigid contracts.

I had supposed that the Government would be contending that there was some evidence that the communications between the various licensees and Mr. Avery, antecedent to the meetings on or about the 22nd or the 23rd of May, 1929, were to be considered as analogical to these arrangements between the exhibitors in arranging the contract with the distributors. What do you think about that?

Mr. Bromley: Well, I think this about that. If you had a situation where there was one distributor who owned 6561 copyrighted pictures, I take it all would agree that he could say to all exhibitors, "Now you can have my copyrighted pictures and show them, but you must do it on condition that you will get the following amount of protection, and the 'subsequent-run' fellows can't have them for six months, and then can only have them if they charge fifty cents."

That is perfectly lawful if there is one distributor who owns his copyrighted product and he enters into those arrangements with all distributors.

The vice of the Interstate Circuit case was that you had not only one licensor, but you had all licensors, all distributors, agreeing with one another that they would each do business with their customers on precisely the same terms.

All we have in this case is USG, one licensor, who makes substantially similar arrangements with its licensees. If you had USG, the owner of some patents, and somebody else, the owner of some patents, and they both said, "Now we will license the industry on the same terms", then you would have the Interstate Circuit case. But you haven't got that.

Therefore, I see no analogy between the two cases and I think the copyright in the Interstate Circuit case would protect the individual distributor in his license arrangements with all of his exhibitor customers. But of course you can't get the owners of a lot of copyrights on different products together and say, "We will all follow the 6562 scheme in our dealings with our customers."

That is the distinction which, to my mind, takes the Interstate Circuit case right out of any analogy to this situation because here we have only one licensor who tells his customers, and nobody else, his licensees, that is, the basis on which he will do business.

Justice Stephens: Well, of course the object of these arguments is to help the Court get to a considered and sound conclusion on the facts and the law of the case.

It would be helpful to the Court, I think, if the Government's contentions were a little more concretely in the mind of the Court and of adverse counsel, than they are at the present time and than they are as presented by the Government's trial brief. At the same time Mr. Steffen is technically within his rights in insisting that you present your brief first, and we can't require the Government, I suppose, to present anything in advance if it doesn't wish to aid the situation by doing it, or thinks that it wouldn't aid the situation any by doing it.

I think we had better take a recess until two o'clock and let the Judges consider what their views are with respect to the time when we should hear argument on this, and the time when briefs should be presented, and to rule on Exhibit 233 so that we will get the record absolutely clear.

Mr. Bromley: Shouldn't I make my motion to dis-6563 miss before you do that?

Justice Stephens: Yes, you may do that.

Mr. Steffen: I would simply like to state that we regard it as very odd that we should have to go forward at all at this time, and I will say, from the standpoint of the Government that we are just as much at sea as to what the defendants contend is their defense—

Justice Jackson (interposing): Well, you will all be enlightened, I suppose, when you get each other's briefs.

Mr. Steffen: That is right, your Honor, this is all premature. However, I am glad to give the Court any assistance that it wishes.

Justice Stephens: I am sure you are, Mr. Steffen.

All right, Mr. Bromley.

Mr. Bromley: May it please the Court, the defendants United States Gypsum Company, Sewall L. Avery and Oliver M. Knode, move, under Rule 41(b) to dismiss the complaint herein with prejudice on the ground that upon the facts and the law the plaintiff has shown no right to relief. Specifically the grounds of the motions are:

1. That the Government has failed to introduce evidence sufficient to establish that said defendants ever became parties to contracts in restraint of trade and commerce in gypsum board, plaster and miscellaneous gypsum products among the several States in violation of Section
6564 1 of the Sherman Act, as charged in and by the complaint, as amended.

2. That the Government has failed to introduce evidence sufficient to establish that said defendants ever became parties to or engaged in a combination and conspiracy in restraint of trade and commerce in said gypsum products among the several States in violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Act, as charged in and by the complaint, as amended.

3. That the Government has failed to introduce evidence sufficient to establish that said defendants ever monopolized trade and commerce in said gypsum products among the several States in violation of Section 2 of the Sherman Act, as charged in and by the complaint, as amended.

4. That the Government has failed to introduce evidence sufficient to establish that said defendants ever have attempted to monopolize trade and commerce in said gypsum products among the several States in violation of Section 2 of the Sherman Act, as charged in and by the complaint, as amended.

5. That the Government has failed to introduce evidence sufficient to establish that said defendants ever became parties to or engaged in a combination and conspiracy to monopolize trade and commerce in said gypsum products among the several States in violation of Section 2 of the Sherman Act, as charged in and by the complaint, as amended.

6. That the Government has failed to introduce evidence sufficient to establish that said defendants ever became parties to contracts in restraint of trade and commerce in said gypsum products between the States and the District of Columbia, in violation of Section 3 of the Sherman Act, as charged in and by the complaint, as amended.

7. That the Government has failed to introduce evidence sufficient to establish that said defendants ever became parties to or engaged in a combination and conspiracy in restraint of trade and commerce in said gypsum products between the States and the District of Columbia, in violation of Section 3 of the Sherman Act, as charged in and by the complaint, as amended.

Justice Stephens: Are there motions by other defendants?

Mr. Finck: If the Court please—

Justice Stephens (interposing): I might state—I am not sure that the Rules require it but I think it would be helpful if, after these motions have been written up in the transcript, defendants' counsel could take time to have them written up formally and filed in the case with the Clerk.

I say that out of my experience in respect of the motions for summary judgment which I had considerable difficulty with, you will remember, in getting at the real terms of the motions for a directed verdict. It is a great convenience to the Court if, in addition to what is dictated into the transcript, motions both to strike and to dismiss can be formally filed with the Clerk.

6566 Proceed, Mr. Finck.

Mr. Finck: The Defendants National Gypsum Company and M. H. Baker; and Ebsary Gypsum Company, Inc. and Frederick G. Ebsary, move under Rule 41(b) to dismiss the complaint upon the merits on the ground that upon the facts and the law the Plaintiff has shown no right to relief; and further move to dismiss the complanit on the specific grounds as stated in the motion to dismiss the complaint herein, made by the United States Gypsum Company.

Mr. Steffen: I understand, when you suggest that written copies of these motions be filed with the Clerk, that Government counsel will also get the usual number?

Justice Stephens: That would be conventional, of course.

Mr. Steffen: We would like to have three copies of each motion, if possible.

Justice Stephens: I am sure defendants' counsel will accommodate you.

Mr. Johnston: If the Court please, on behalf of Samuel M. Gloyd, that defendant will adopt the motion of the United States Gypsum Company—and we will file a formal motion. I thought that should be done, and that is the reason I raised the question.

Mr. Keber: The Defendants Certain-teed Products Corporation and Henry J. Hartley move, under Rule 41(b)

6567 to dismiss the complaint herein upon the merits, on the ground that upon the facts and the law, Plaintiff has shown no right to relief.

Specifically, the grounds of the motion are those stated by Mr. Bromley on behalf of the United States Gypsum Company and the other individual defendants whom he represents, which grounds we adopt in toto.

I don't know whether I am out of step in saying this, but I don't know whether it is perfectly clear, as to the defendants other than USG, concerning the procedure to be adopted with respect to the exchange of briefs here. For instance, our position may be somewhat different from that of USG. I don't know whether the Government anticipates writing one brief which will discuss not only USG's problems, but ours as well.

Justice Stephens: I should think that when defendants present their briefs, each defendant would have a right to present a separate brief if it wishes to do so. Then the Government would have to reply to each of the contentions made in the brief of each defendant. If the defendants wish, of course, to combine with Mr. Bromley in the submission of a brief, or to do both, to adopt in the large the brief submitted by Mr. Bromley and file supplemental briefs on each item that each defendant separately thinks it ought to urge, that can be done. But they ought all to be presented at the same time to the Government so the Government can have the benefit of knowing what the contentions of all 6568 defendants are, and so that the Court can see the exchange of views.

However, we can settle all that before we adjourn finally today.

Another desirable thing that I might mention, just while we are speaking about it informally, is that I think it is very desirable that the reply briefs should be presented in time for the judges to be able to read them before the argument. Perhaps it would be better to postpone the argument a little bit longer, if necessary, in order to give the Court the advantage of doing that. I find it, myself, very helpful in understanding a lawyer's argument if I have his brief and have read it in advance of the argument.

Mr. Johnston: If the Court please, in that connection May 15th will come around very soon, and if these briefs are exchanged by May 8th that wouldn't give much time for preparation of reply briefs if the argument is to be on the 15th of May.

Now I have a selfish motive in making this suggestion also, that a little longer time would suit my purpose very well, because I have another case starting on the 1st of May and I might be able to dispose of one phase of it if I had a few more days' time. I wonder if it would make any difference to the parties or to the Court if the date of argument on these motions might be set off a little farther than May 15th.

Justice Stephens: We will consider that before 6569 we adjourn today, and have a definite understanding. Are there other motions by other defendants?

Mr. Bromley: What is Mr. Johnston's suggestion, May 16th?

Mr. Johnston: No, I thought around the first of June, possibly. A week or two additional time would mean a lot to me, if the Court please. Of course I am in this case and I will adjust my other appointments to this, but I just have one of those emergency matters that come up now and then that I must get into on the first of May.

Mr. Oliver: May it please the Court, the Defend... The Celotex Corporation and Bror G. Dahlberg now move, under Rule 41(b) for a dismissal of the complaint as to these defendants on the ground that upon the facts and the law the Plaintiff has shown no right to relief; and on the further specific grounds stated by Mr. Bromley in his motion, which grounds are adopted by these defendants.

Mr. O'Donnell: May the Court please, on behalf of the Defendant Newark Plaster Company, and the individual Defendant Frederick Tomkins, I now move, under Rule 41(b), for a dismissal of the complaint as to these defendants on the ground that upon the law and the facts, the Plaintiff has shown no right to relief; and I further move for judgment for these defendants. For the purposes of specification, I adopt the grounds stated by Mr. Bromley on behalf of the United States Gypsum Company.

6570 Justice Stephens: Are there any other motions by any defendants?

Justice Garrett: I suppose, of course, that whatever action the Court may finally take on Exhibit 233 would not affect any of the motions that have been made.

Mr. Bromley: No sir.

Justice Stephens: It may be shown, when we make a ruling on Exhibit 233 one way or the other, that that ruling may be considered as antecedent to these motions. Nobody would object to that, I assume.

We will take a recess at this time, gentlemen, until 2:30 this afternoon.

(Whereupon, at 11:15 o'clock, a. m., a recess was taken until 2:30 o'clock, p. m., of the same day.)

6571 AFTERNOON SESSION

(The trial was resumed at 2:30 o'clock, p. m., pursuant to recess.)

Justice Stephens: We have considered during the recess this Exhibit 233, and all of us have reconsidered and reread, since last night and during the recess, Mr. Speer's testimony, and we have reached the conclusion that, even treating Mr. Speer's testimony as none of it privileged, and considering all of his testimony, it does not constitute a connection as far as Exhibit 233 is concerned, and make Exhibit 233 the act of Certain-teed.

Therefore, to protect your record, Mr. Steffen, we reject Exhibit 233.

Now with respect to the time for the filing of briefs and argument. So far as the convenience of the Judges is concerned it is of little importance whether the argument be held on the 15th of May, which is a Monday, or the following Monday, May 22nd, or as Mr. Johnston suggests, along about the first of June.

Of course we think the main consideration should be—when can the briefs be presented and the argument held in such manner and form as will be most helpful to the Court. We don't want you pressed to the point, on either side, where you can't get out adequate briefs and adequate replies and make adequate oral arguments, because we 6572 want the briefs carefully annotated to the record, so far as the facts are concerned, and we want counsel on each side to cross swords with each other on the meaning of the evidence and the meaning of the authorities, and we would like to have counsel go into the authorities, wherever it seems necessary to do so, to fully understand what the rulings—of the Supreme Court particularly—mean beyond the face of the opinions.

That is to say, we would like to know what the record is in some of these cases. I should think it would be very valuable to know what the facts in the record are in the General Electric case, for example, to compare the licensing system there with the system here. It might be desirable to know what the record facts are in the Interstate Circuit case, beyond what appears on the face of the opinion.

Now we would like to hear from counsel on both sides as to when they think it would be best to have the briefs presented, and best to have the argument. We should think that the main briefs should be exchanged so that each side will know what the other is arguing, and then file reply briefs. It might be that it would be sufficient to have the reply briefs presented before the argument, then have the oral argument, and then have additional, or reply briefs, presented, if necessary, to be sure that there is a complete meeting of issues on both sides. Possibly it would be sufficient to have the main briefs presented before the 6573 argument and then one set of reply briefs presented after the oral argument and after consideration of the main briefs.

We will be glad to have suggestions and we will accommodate ourselves largely to the needs of counsel so far as time to do the job adequately is concerned.

Mr. Steffen: May it please the Court, on behalf of the Government we might say that the arrangement suggested by Mr. Bromley, of the exchanging of main briefs on May 8th and final briefs and argument delivered on May 15th, is satisfactory. I think we can get together an adequate argument by that time.

However, we would be willing to concede a few days, particularly after the 15th, because there wouldn't be very much time between May 8th and May 15th to get any typing done.

Justice Stephens: To get in a reply brief?

Mr. Steffen: That is right, and get the document over to the Court.

I want to say on the other side what I have said for a year or more, that we are anxious to get this case concluded, but of course we don't wish to have it poorly considered. If possible, I would rather not have it postponed any longer than May 22nd.

Justice Stephens: We don't want to postpone it, either. At the same time, the case is so important, and has taken so much time already, that we ought not to hasten it 6574 in this most critical aspect of the case, and if an opinion has to be prepared, the problem of preparing an opinion on such a complicated matter is a very serious problem.

It would seem to us, if the motions should be denied, that it would be pretty difficult to get the case finished this term because there must be some surcease for all of us during the summer months.

If the motions are granted, how long it would take to prepare an opinion I wouldn't undertake to say. What have you to suggest, Mr. Bromley?

Mr. Bromley: May it please the Court, no one on my side agrees with my tentative schedule as I suggested this morning, and they all make the point that I didn't allow sufficient time between the receipt of the main briefs and the filing of replies. I think they are right.

Therefore, I suggest this alternative arrangement: To exchange main briefs on Monday, May 8th; to exchange reply briefs on Thursday, May 18th; and to argue the motions on Monday, May 22nd.

Justice Stephens: That is agreeable to the Court, and if, after the oral argument, we feel or you feel that we need any supplemental replies, they may be filed then.

Mr. Bromley: Yes sir. Under this arrangement it would give the Court two weeks to read the main briefs and a week to read the reply briefs.

6575 Justice Stephens: That is fine. Do you have in mind having these briefs printed or typewritten? The problem of printing is a problem of time, of course.

Mr. Steffen: We nearly always have ours typed, your Honor, for lack of money?

Justice Stephens: Is the Government poor, Mr. Steffen?

Mr. Steffen: So we are told. (Laughter.)

Justice Stephens: Well, I realize, sometimes, that appropriations are limited.

Mr. Bromley: We expect to print ours, if there is enough money left.

Justice Stephens: Of course if it is possible to have them printed, from the standpoint of the Court they are much easier to deal with, but we don't want to make any flat requirement on that. I don't think the rules require it.

Mr. Johnston: If the Government is poor, we might print their briefs for them. (Laughter.)

Justice Jackson: Mark well the word "might". (Laughter.)

Mr. Johnston: I will do that if they will let me write it. (Laughter.)

Justice Stephens: Well, the last suggestion made by Mr. Bromley as to time is approved by the Judges, and that will be the order. Is there anything else to come up at this time?

Mr. Bromley: Nothing, I think.

6576 Justice Stephens: We thank you on both sides, gentlemen, Government counsel and defendants' counsel, for your pains and help to the Court thus far in the case, and we shall welcome you back here again on the 22nd of May.

Announce the recess.

(Whereupon, at 2:45 o'clock, p. m., the trial was recessed until Monday, May 22, 1944, at 10:00 o'clock, a. m.)

6577 Justice Stephens: I might say I have written down two questions to ask you at the close of the agreement. I do not want to interrupt you during the argument unless necessary.

I want to ask you what you mean by the word "stabilization". It has been used a great deal and it seemed to me to be used not merely in terms of prices but of something beyond prices; and I wonder what you mean by the 6578 term "blanketing"; when those two terms are used in the contex of the Sherman Act?

Passing back to the question we have just been discussing, I fully understand that there is an issue between the parties under the General Electric case which I am hoping you will discuss—as to whether or not, under the General Electric case, a group of licensees can be lawfully formed, as distinguished from one licensee as in that case. Does that help clarify the question that I asked you?

Mr. Steffen: I think that clearly presents the question and if I can rephrase the question, it is, in Mr. Bromley's words, whether it is perfectly lawful, as he would say, for competitors to sit down together to take out a license from one of their number holding a patent, that the licenses should be common in form, that there should be price fixing and that they should even discuss the matter of price fixing, although he does not go so far as to say there should be any discussion as to what the prices should be but they should know at the time they enter into it that there would be a common agreement, that there would be price fixing and that presumably they would operate under it, but no agreement as to what the prices should be.

As I understand it, Mr. Bromley—and I want to be perfectly fair in it—as I understand it Mr. Bromley takes that position, that it is lawful and I think most of his arguments are predicated on the assumption that it 6579 is perfectly lawful under the General Electric case for a group of erstwhile competitors to get together under a common license and to fix their prices. That is a clear-cut issue and it raises two general questions. One is as to the charge in the complaint, whether we charge that that is illegal, and I think perhaps I had better refer to that somewhat in view of your Honor's question concerning "blanketing."

Our notion of "blanketing" is that it is a loose word to describe the bringing together of the whole industry under a common license agreement or, in other words, it is very similar to conspiracy. It is an association, concert of people under common agreements. That is, blanketing them together. As applied to the Masonite case, there was a series of competing companies who were making one type or another of hard board. They had competing patents, just as in this case the Beaver Company had some thirty-odd patents to begin with and they were in competition and those patents were turned over to USG, became part of the first Beaver agreement. Then, when they decided among them, Masonite, Celotex and Certain-teed and the other parties to the Masonite case, that they would take out common del credere agency agreements which provided for price fixing, I think it can be shown in the opinion that the court thought that was a very dangerous device, that it would have the effect of knitting together an entire industry, thereby eliminating competition, and that 6580 was the vice, as I see it, that the court struck down in the Masonite case.

We contend that the exact vice exists in this case although the device which they used in this case to put it over is different. That is, in the Masonite case, they used the del credere agency agreement and accomplished elimination of competition. Here they took out patent license agreements and accomplished, by virtue of the price fixing clause, exactly the same result and the Sherman Act is directed at eliminating that result. The fact that it was handled by one device or another seems to be a matter of no importance. That is, if you look through the many cases from the time the Sherman Act was passed up to the present time, you will find that the parties have been extremely ingenious in finding devices whereby they could accomplish an elimination of competition and a fixing of prices or stabilizing of conditions.

We contend and our position here is that that is exactly what the defendants here have done, using a patent license agreement with price fixing they have been able to completely eliminate price competition throughout the gypsum industry, particularly with regard to board.

Of course we contend also that it has operated to stabilize or, in other words, to influence the price of plaster and that they did that as part of the intention of the combination.

6581 Justice Garrett: Pardon me just a moment, Mr. Steffen. I want to understand you clearly. Did I understand you to say that the Beaver Company owned a lot of patents which were transferred to USG?

Mr. Steffen: That is right.

Justice Garrett: Transferred in connection with the settlement of the litigation?

Mr. Steffen: That is right. The Beaver Company was the largest company other than USG at the time. They were the biggest companies in the field and when Mr. Blagden and Mr. Avery made their arrangement in 1926, one of the provisions of the arrangement was that Beaver would turn over around thirty or thirty-two patents to the United States Gypsum Company and then they were incorporated in the appendix to the agreement and they became the patents which were in the appendix to the May agreements and likewise the November agreements which were executed throughout the industry.

I will have some further comment on that but your Honor will appreciate that what was accomplished there was, in a measure, a pooling of patents and a licensing back to Beaver with price fixing of the very patents which they had originally owned. We will go into that when I take up the Blagden testimony.

Justice Jackson: Was not the Beaver Company over a barrel there in an infringement suit?

6582 Mr. Steffen: Well, I do not think I have to answer that, your Honor, whether it was or not. That is the contention.

Justice Jackson: They paid a lot of money.

Mr. Steffen: They paid a lot of money and it makes it look as though they were over a barrel. Let's make one other point. They can be over a barrel and they may have all sorts of business reasons and Mr. Avery may be just as adamant as he wants to be saying, "You have got to take price fixing", but when the result is over, they have agreed to a contract whereby they pool their patents and there is price fixing thereafter between them. That is concert of action to accomplish an illegal purpose. That, as we say, is a violation of the Sherman Act.

I am going to notice very carefully Mr. Bromley's defense, which is two-fold; one, that the General Electric case is a protection and, two, I take it, that the Rubber Tire Wheel Company case is a protection to what they have done.

Mr. Bromley: Wouldn't it be fair to point out that there is a statement in the record about this matter that completely contradicts his present argument?

On page 1572, your Honor specifically asked Mr. Knuff this question:

"The Court understood Mr. Bromley to object to your inquiry into the ownership of these patents upon the ground that there is no charge in the complaint that the 6583 transfer of them by Beaver to USG was illegal.

"Mr. Knuff: We do not so contend."

I thought that took that out of the case a long time ago.

Mr. Steffen: What was the transcript page?

Mr. Bromley: 1572, beginning in line 2 and ending in line 7.

Mr. Steffen: The answer to that is complete, your Honor. When Mr. Knuff said that he said that quite properly.

What I am saying to you now is that the fact that Beaver did transfer patents to USG is one of the facts of this case. We do not charge that as being illegal, just as Mr. Knuff said, but in determining whether there is illegality in the price fixing matter you are to consider all the facts and that is definitely one set of facts which is to be considered and which is very operative in determining the type of combination and conspiracy that we have here. I, therefore, was quite well aware of the statement, transcript 1572, and quite willing to say we do not charge that as one ground of illegality in and of itself. It is simply one of the facts in the case and is to be weighed in determining whether the charges we do make, that is, of price fixing, are charges which can be sustained as illegal price fixing.

6584 Justice Stephens: Are you passing on to a new subject beyond the General Electric case now?

Mr. Steffen: I am going to spend quite a little time on that General Electric case, your Honor.

Justice Stephens: I had some questions to ask you about the General Electric case but I do not want to interrupt the course of your argument. I thought you were passing from it.

Mr. Steffen: I would rather that you would defer those questions but I would be delighted to have the Court ask me any questions they want at any time.

I want to clear the record, if there is any doubt in anybody's mind, as to whether we, under the complaint, charged that a combination to blanket the industry under common price fixing agreements in the form of license agreements is illegal. If there is any doubt, I say I think there is doubt because Mr. Bromley has once said, I believe, that the only possible illegality in such a combination would be if they extended the monopoly to control the sales or if they extended the monopoly to cover or control plaster sales. What he suggests thereby is that there is nothing illegal in the heart of the thing, which is a combination to fix prices on the patented goods. That is the matter which we charge in the complaint is illegal and which I expect to establish on the law is illegal and which I will then show is established in the evidence.

6585 Justice Stephens: Before you leave this particular point, I would like to ask you a little further about your position with respect to these Beaver license transfers. Those transfers of patents from Beaver to USG took place at the time of the settlement, did they not?

Mr. Steffen: That is right.

Justice Stephens: And at the same time that Beaver took a license back from USG?

Mr. Steffen: That is right.

Justice Stephens: I say this, in entire good part, but it seems to me duplicitous to argue that you can, on the one hand, say, as Mr. Knuff said, you charge nothing illegal about those transfers of patents to Beaver when they were a part of the very kind of a transaction which you say is now illegal, to-wit, transferring patents to USG and taking licenses back constituting, in its nature, a blanket or pool. How can you divide the mind of the Court or divide the facts in that way?

Mr. Steffen: I do not govern the Court's mind, your Honor. We could not have presented the facts in this case without presenting those facts. We do not charge that as being illegal, as a charge. I pointed out the charges are price fixing and eliminating jobbers. Those are the things we have been discussing.

6586 Justice Stephens: But if it is illegal for one company, like Beaver, to transfer its own patents to USG and take a license back, then it was illegal, wasn't it, to transfer those patents from Beaver to USG?

Mr. Steffen: Whether illegal or not, it is not charged as illegality. It is simply one of the facts to be weighed with all the other facts in determining whether this was an illegal conspiracy to fix prices, which we do charge. The same thing happened in connection with the Haggerty patent, your Honor, and that is all in evidence. The Haggerty patent was kicking around the industry, so to speak, from 1924 to 1929. The only people using it were Universal and National. National used it for a period and was sued for infringement. National and Universal struck a bargain after a bit whereby National was permitted to continue to use the patent. This was following the action in Buffalo at which the court issued a restraining order, as we think, not because the patent was infringed necessarily but because Haggerty and the National people, being assignors to Universal of the patent, were estopped from setting up any question of validity and the court said on that showing that Haggerty and Universal would be enjoined or a preliminary restraining order would issue.

Following that, according to Mr. Finck in his opening statement, National made an arrangement to use that patent under an indemnity arrangement. In the summer of 1929, that had ripened, according to Mr. Finck, I believe, 6587 substantially into a prospective license from Universal. Then it was decided, and the evidence is clear on this, that Universal should sell the patent to USG. Mr. Bromley told you in his argument that that was something arranged entirely independently by USG; that USG and Universal arranged the transfer as a separate and independent transaction. Of course, it is obvious that it was not arranged as an independent transaction. It was arranged as part of this whole scheme. The C. O. Brown memorandum, which is in evidence, discloses that the matter was talked over by the different members of the industry and it was decided or it was discussed whether they should take licenses from Universal or whether USG should buy the patent. It may be when they came to take a license under the patent they sat down independently and did it but it cannot be treated as an isolated, unrelated transaction.

What I am getting at is this: That thereafter, Universal sold the patent to USG and took a license back, in effect, from USG so that again you have a situation of patents which are being transferred within the industry and which, in that case, were transferred to the dominant power in the industry and made the basis for their price fixing. I mean, we do not charge that the transfer was illegal but we do charge that the price fixing based on that transfer was illegal and I do not think there is any element of duplicity in our position.

6588 Justice Stephens: I repeat I used the word "duplicity" in good part. I have difficulty in seeing the same fact in two different lights at the same time—in view of Mr. Knuff's statement. To put it in broader terms and in what are perhaps more important terms, I had got the impression, as a result of Mr. Knuff's statement concerning Beaver and as a result of the presentation of the case as a whole, this was not charged as a patent pooling case—

Mr. Steffen: That is right.

Justice Stephens: (Continuing) —or as a cross-licensing case but only as a case which was illegal because, regardless of where USG got the patents or from whom it got them, it could not use them in the way that it has, and I thought, therefore, that when Mr. Knuff stated you did not charge illegality in the transfer of Beaver's patents to USG at the same time Beaver got a license back from USG he was, in effect, conceding this was not a cross-licensing or pooling of patents case.

Mr. Steffen: We will say that the charge here is the charge of price fixing but, in order to determine it, you have to look at all the facts and one of the facts was that these patents were transferred back and forth.

I want to spell out very clearly our charges in order that it can be seen just where we charge that a conspiracy to blanket the industry under common license agree-6589 ments in order to organize the industry and stabilize prices is illegal. I will secondly then want to take up the question of whether or not it is illegal.

In paragraph 44, as I have said to the Court many times, we charge a conspiracy to restrain trade and that is the charge under which we are proceeding here in this argument. In paragraph 45, we make the further statement that:

"Said companies have entered into, have carried out and are carrying out said combination for the purpose and with the effect of restraining, dominating and controlling the manufacture and distribution of said gypsum products in the Eastern area by concertedly raising and fixing at arbitrary and non-competitive levels the prices of gypsum board manufactured and sold by said companies in the Eastern area."

I will stop there. That, therefore, constitutes the charge that the defendants have conspired to restrain trade; that they have done so with the purpose and effect of establishing arbitrary and non-competitive levels for so-called patented gypsum board.

In paragraph 46, we say:

"Said combination was entered into and has been and is being carried out by the defendant companies, in part, under the guise of numerous license agreements purporting to relate to the use of certain patents owned by the defendant, USG, in the manufacture of gypsum board."

6590 In other words, as I understand that and the rest of the paragraph bears it out, we charge that they have conspired to restrain trade. We charge that it is a price fixing type of restraint rather than, as your Honor has pointed out, a patent-pooling type.

It is a price-fixing type of restraint which is the principal charge here and we charge it has been done under the guise of using patent license agreements.

Those patent license agreements are the ones we introduced on the first day. They are patent license agreements which contain a price fixing clause and that, therefore, we, I think, charge clearly and the heart of this case has to do with the price fixing on so-called patented board pursuant to USG bulletins. That is right at the heart of the case.

If your Honor has any question on that I would be glad to talk about it further but it seems to me so clear that that is one of the charges in this case that it can hardly be argued further.

Of course, in addition, we say and they are stated there in paragraph 45, b, c, d and e, that they did a lot of other things besides fixing prices on their so-called patented board. They, as we contend, in their conspiracy sought to control plaster prices. We contend further that the conspiracy resulted in a combined elimination of jobbers.

We contend further that they have controlled or 6591 influenced or coerced the resale prices by manufacturing distributors and that those things are all over and above the basic charge of a conspiracy to fix, at arbitrary and on non-competitive levels, the price of patented board regulated by USG bulletins. That is the basic charge.

6592 IN THE

DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Holding a Three Judge Court

Civil Action No. 8017

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

Plaintiff,

v.

UNITED STATES GYPSUM COMPANY; NATIONAL GYPSUM COMPANY; CERTAIN-TEED PRODUCTS CORPORATION; THE CELOTEX CORPORATION; EBSARY GYPSUM COMPANY, INC.; NEWARK PLASTER COMPANY; SAMUEL M. GLOYD, doing business under the name of TEXAS CEMENT PLASTER COMPANY; SEWELL L. AVERY; OLIVER M. KNODE; MELVIN H. BAKER; BROR H. DAHLBERG; HENRY J. HARTLEY; FREDERICK G. EBSARY; and FREDERICK TOMKINS,

Defendants.

Court Room,
U. S. Court of Appeals Building,
Washington, D. C.,
June 15, 1946.

The above-entitled cause came on for decision at 10:00 o'clock, a.m., pursuant to notice, before Honorable Harold M. Stephens, Honorable Finis J. Garrett, and Honorable Joseph R. Jackson, sitting as the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

APPEARANCES:

6593 On behalf of the Plaintiff:

ROSCOE T. STEFFEN, ESQ., and EDWARD KNUFF, ESQ., Special Assistants to the Attorney General of the United States; and KENNETH R. L. LINDSAY, Special Attorney.

On behalf of the Defendants:

BRUCE BROMLEY, ESQ. and GEORGE S. COLLINS, ESQ., New York, N. Y.; CRANSTON SPRAY, ESQ., Chicago, Illinois; and HUGH LYNCH, JR., ESQ., Washington, D. C., for defendants United States Gypsum Company, Avery and Knode.

ELMER E. FINCK, ESQ., Buffalo, New York, for defendants National Gypsum Company and Baker.

CHARLTON OGBURN, ESQ., ROBERT W. BURTON, ESQ., and and ENOCH D. CHASE, ESQ., Washington, D. C., for defendant Certain-teed Products Corporation.

PETER KEBER, ESQ., New York, N. Y., for defendant Hartley.

ERNEST H. OLIVER, ESQ., and RALPH P. WANLASS, ESQ., Washington, D. C., for defendants The Celotex Corporation and Dahlberg.

JOSEPH P. TUMULTY, JR., ESQ., Washington, D. C., and ELMER E. FINCK, ESQ., Buffalo New York, for defendants Ebsary Gypsum Company, Inc., and Ebsary.

JAMES O'DONNELL, JR., ESQ., Washington, D. C., for defendants Newark Plaster Company, and Tomkins.

DAVID I. JOHNSTON, ESQ., Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, and SCOTT P. CRAMPTON, ESQ., Washington, D. C., for defendant Gloyd.

6594 PROCEEDINGS

Justice Stephens: The court reporter asks me to request all counsel who are present this morning to register their names with him before they leave the room, so that their appearance at this hearing may be shown.

The Court has reached a decision on the pending motions and has prepared an opinion expressing its reasons for the decision. The opinion will be filed with the clerk and copies will be furnished counsel. This morning there are a limited number of copies available, but there are sufficient for all counsel on the Government's and defendants' side, both; and afterwards, if you will make application for such additional copies of the opinion as you want, we will be able to furnish them early next week. The opinion includes: a statement of the facts, charges and answers, a history of the case, and a description of the motions. Then, in Topic

I, a discussion of the duty of the Court under Rule 41 (b). In Topic II, a consideration of the General Electric and Bement cases relied upon by the defendants, and of the question whether there is a parallel between the instant case and those cases. Topic III, a discussion of the burden of proof, the principles of proof and the limitations on the declarations rule. Topic IV, a discussion of the question whether there is evidence, outside the declarations received subject to connection, of the conspiracy charged. Topics V, VI and VII, a discussion of the issues of 6595 fact, and of a special contention made by the Government. Topic VIII, a consideration of the authorities principally relied upon by the Government. In the enumerated topics we have discussed with particularity the evidence and the contentions of the parties in respect of the issues of fact and law, and have set forth in some detail the reasons for the decision we reach. This has required an extended opinion. In Topic IX the case is summarized as follows:

The complaint of the Government charges violations of Sections 1, 2 and 3 of the Sherman Act and seeks, under Section 4, an injunction. It alleges that the defendants are parties to contracts in restraint of trade and commerce, and that they have combined and conspired to restrain, and have attempted to monopolize and have monopolized, trade and commerce in gypsum products, by means of the execution of sham patent licenses granted by the defendant United States Gypsum Company and accepted by the other defendants and designed only to give color of legality to the combination and conspiracy charged. It alleges that the defendants have combined and conspired to fix prices upon gypsum board and upon miscellaneous gypsum products made and sold by them, to standardize such board and its method of production, to eliminate jobbers from the distribution of gypsum products, and to induce manufacturing distributors to resell at prices fixed by the defendants gypsum board purchased from them; and it is alleged that these unlawful purposes were effectuated.
6596 Judge Garrett, Jackson and myself all concur in this opinion.

The Clerk will be handed an official signed copy of the opinion and the Clerk will now kindly hand to each of the counsel in the case a copy of the opinion. As I said, other copies will be available the first of the week.

How much time do you wish to prepare proposed findings of fact, conclusions of law, and judgment, to be served upon the Government and then presented to the Court, Mr. Bromley? Do you wish to consult with other counsel on that?

Mr. Bromley: May I, if Your Honor pleases? (Off the record consultation between Mr. Bromley and associate counsel.)

We would like thirty days, may it please the Court.

Justice Stephens: How much time would the Government like to consider the proposed findings of fact and conclusions of law, and to take into consideration whether it has any objections as to form?

Mr. Steffen: I might say, Your Honor, that I think thirty days is quite a long time. We had only fifteen days in January to prepare an itemization; but if the defense counsel think they have to have thirty days, that will 6597 be all right. We will take about five days additional to look over that.

Justice Stephens: I think your suggestion that the difference is discriminatory is not well taken. All I asked you to present in January was a brief statement of those items of evidence which you contended connected the declarations. This order on the part of the Court is the preparing of findings of fact, conclusions of law and decree.

I will say this, Mr. Bromley, that I think you gentlemen on the defendants' side will find that this opinion so very thoroughly discusses every item of fact and law, both the principal issues and the subordinate issues, that you will not find great difficulty in preparing the findings. I assume there will be an appeal in this case and we want to expedite the appellate proceedings as much as we can, so if you can serve them earlier than thirty days, please do so.

Mr. Bromley: We will, sir.

Mr. Steffen: I would like to make one point at this time on the record, and that is that we, of course, on the Government's side, do not recognize that findings are in order at this time under the rules, the new rules, and therefore we do not feel that it is necessary to have findings at all.

Justice Stephens: Do you not wish them served upon you for that reason?

Mr. Steffen: Oh yes, we ask to have them served in the usual way, but we do not think that the time taken 6598 is proper under the circumstances.

We have one or two other matters we would like to call to the Court's attention.

Justice Stephens: You will find the question of the duty of the Court to make findings discussed quite thoroughly in the topic which discusses that; I think you will find that the majority of the authorities sustain that position, and in those cases they have made findings. You will also find that the new rules proposed to the Supreme Court require them.

One other point, Mr. Steffen. The exhibits which have been in the possession of the court reporter for the convenience, during the trial, of counsel and the Court, will be transferred to the possession of the Clerk of the United States District Court and kept in his vaults with due access to counsel on both sides, in the event of an appeal.

Mr. Steffen: I may say that there will be an appeal, from the standpoint of the Government.

Justice Stephens: I assumed so, yes.

Mr. Steffen: Mr. Knuff has a point he would like to make.

Justice Stephens: Yes, Mr. Knuff.

Mr. Knuff: Shall I come to the lecturn or make it from here?

Justice Stephens: Suit your own convenience. We could probably hear you better if you came to the lecturn.

Mr. Knuff: May it please the Court, I have here
6599 an order to be signed nunc pro tunc as of November 23, 1943. You will recall that on the 15th day of November the Court sustained certain motions with reference to Paragraph 46 (a) of the complaint. Paragraph 46 (a) of the complaint was that paragraph that set up the invalidity of certain patents owned by the defendants. And I believe the Court will also recall that on the 23rd day of November of that year we filed a motion asking the Court to do two things, first, to make the opinion of the Court a part of the record; and second, to correct the opinion in accordance with the motion. The Court at that time—

Justice Stephens: (Interposing) Are you referring to the motion which was supported by Mr. Steffen's affidavit?

Mr. Knuff: That is right, Your Honor.

Justice Stephens: In which he charged the Court with having misstated the opinion?

Mr. Knuff: With misconstruing it.

Justice Stephens: Misstated was the word, Mr. Knuff.

Mr. Knuff: I haven't looked at the record recently; my impression was that it was "misconstruing". It is my firm belief that the Court intended to grant one portion of that motion, that is, that it intended to grant that portion of the motion to make the opinion a part of the record, but at page 1430 it says this, and I am quoting from line 2: "The motion therefore to correct the record is denied." And it left up in the air, as I see it, the portion of the motion 6600 asking to make the opinion a part of the record. You denied the motion to correct, but there was left up in the air that other portion. Now I think the Court intended to make the opinion a part of the record, and I have here, and I will ask Mr. Watts to distribute it to the Court, the order that I would like to have signed carrying into effect that portion of what I conceive to be the Court's intention. This order states in part:

"It is ordered that so much of the motion which is directed to the question that the Court modify its opinion or to take such other appropriate action as the Court may deem proper to conform its opinion to the fact that the Government did not concede" and so forth "is hereby denied."

"It is further ordered that in all other respects the said motion be and the same is hereby granted."

It is simply a formal motion to get the record into what I think the Court intended.

Justice Stephens: We have never been able to understand at all why all this proceeding with respect to that opinion was necessary. Of course if you want that opinion a part of the record it will be made a part of the record, and it is so ordered now. You don't need any signed order on it, but if you want one we will give it to you. But the necessity of attempting to convict the Court of a misstatement of your argument is utterly unnecessary, Mr. Knuff. Of course the Court didn't intentionally misstate anything. If the Court misunderstood, all you would 6601 have to do would be to show that to an appellate court on the appeal. You don't need any record to do that except the record of what the Court said in its opinion as compared with your brief. However, if you want this opinion made a part of the record, it is so ordered now.

6602 Justice Stephens: Now Mr. Knuff, this order that you have handed up here for signature doesn't seem to me, nor to Judges Jackson or Garrett, to be what you claimed it was. I thought you wanted an order 6603 making the opinion on the motion to strike Paragraph 46 (a), a part of the record, and that that was all you wanted; but you have in here a previous paragraph and an order which has to do with the refusal of the Court to correct the opinion. You got up, as I understood you, and stated that the Court had made the order declining to correct the opinion or correct the record, but had not made it clear that its opinion was a part of the record.

Mr. Knuff: That is right.

Justice Stephens: But you are asking us here to reiterate our refusal to correct the opinion. You don't need any signed order in this anyway.

Mr. Knuff: I have followed rather closely the motion that was made—

Justice Jackson: (Interposing) Why do you want this signed if all you want is that opinion in the record?

Mr. Knuff: I felt that it was the better practice to have it. Since the motion was made in writing I felt it was the better practice to have the order likewise.

Justice Jackson: What difference does that make if it is made here in open court, and it has been made?

Mr. Knuff: Well, I just don't want to have it argued at an appellate court at any other time that our record isn't in the proper shape. Now if the Court doesn't care to sign this order, that is perfectly all right; my record is then protected.

Justice Stephens: Well, the Court—

6604 Mr. Bromley: (Interposing) May it please the Court—

Justice Stephens: Just a minute, Mr. Bromley, let me read this.

Mr. Bromley: Excuse me.

Justice Stephens: This order which you have asked us to sign not only asks us to direct that the opinion be made a part of the record, as I understand it, but also asks us to reiterate our declining to amend or correct the record or the opinion. It is not necessary to sign it. The record was made, Mr. Knuff, at the time; the record that we had on that subject was made then, and for what it is worth to you on appeal, or the defendants, it is in the record. The Court is anxious to preserve a correct record, anxious to give counsel who have not prevailed in the case the fullest opportunity to urge to the Supreme Court any error that you think we have committed, and to make everything clear, but there is no need of reiterating our refusal, as you now describe it, to correct the record or correct the opinion. That is done. In so far as making this opinion a part of the record is concerned, the opinion on the motion to strike Paragraph 46 (a), that you are entitled to and it is so ordered now, and it is now a part of the record. We don't need to sign anything.

Mr. Bromley, did you have some statement to make?

Mr. Bromley: I merely wanted to call Your Honor's attention to something I assume you know, and that 6605 is that it is in the record now as a part of the record, having been copied into the record at that time.

Justice Stephens: That is true. The Court is mystified by this whole matter. It is difficult to construe it as this, and I don't construe it as this, because I can't believe that counsel for the Government would attempt to affront the Court, but it is difficult to put any other construction upon it because if the Court erred in its construction of your argument you can prove that to the Supreme Court by what the Court said, comparing it with your argument. There is no need of filing any affidavits and putting the Court in the position of having done something wrong.

Mr. Knuff: There was no effort made on our part at all to in any way entrap the Court. We simply felt that as representatives of the Government we had a right to determine for our own selves, either rightly or wrongly, what we conceive to be the correct procedure. If the Court doesn't agree with us, that is perfectly all right. We are not going to enter into any discussions with the Court.

Justice Stephens: You may announce an adjournment, Mr. Marshal.

Court Room, U. S. Court of Appeals Building,
Washington, D. C., Friday, August 2, 1946.

The above-entitled cause came on for discussion of the Proposed Findings of Fact, Conclusions of Law, and Decree, at 10:00 o'clock a.m., pursuant to notice, before Honorable Harold M. Stephens, Honorable Finis J. Garrett, and Honorable Joseph R. Jackson, sitting as the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

6607 Appearances: On behalf of the Plaintiff: George B. Haddock, Esq., Special Assistant to the Attorney General of the United States, and Kenneth R. Lindsay, Special Attorney. On behalf of the Defendants: Bruce Bromley, Esq. and George S. Collins, Esq., New York, N. Y.; Cranston Spray, Esq., Chicago, Illinois; and Hugh Lynch, Jr., Esq., Washington, D. C., for defendants

United States Gypsum Company, Avery and Knode. Charlton Ogburn, Esq., Washington, D. C., for defendant Certain-teed Products Corporation. Ernest H. Oliver, Esq., and Ralph P. Wanlass, Esq., Washington, D. C., for defendants The Celotex Corporation and Dahlberg. Joseph P. Tumulty, Jr., Esq., Washington, D. C., for defendants Ebsary Gypsum Company, Inc., and Ebsary. Scott P. Crampton, Esq., Washington, D. C., for defendant Gloyd.

6608 Justice Stephens: That is true. I think that suggested change is not necessary.

Now we have one or two other matters which won't take very long. There are some erroneous statements at one or two places in the record which we want to make comment upon and correct. At tr. 7624, on June 15, 1946, Mr. Steffen said in respect of the time requested by the defendants' counsel in which to prepare proposed findings, conclusions and decree, "I think thirty days is quite a long time. We had only fifteen days in January to prepare an itemization * * *". This statement is in error. On January 17, 1945, at the conference in Judge Stephens' chambers the following occurred (tr. 7606):

"The Judges would like to have the Government, within fifteen days—or, if you wish more time you may ask for it—file a brief statement of the items of evidence which the Government contends establish, apart from the declarations, the existence of an illegal conspiracy, and serve this, in the usual course, upon the defendants. The defendants are allowed fifteen days—or such further time if they need it, upon application—in which to comment in answer upon such items, with the usual service, of course, upon the Government."

Actually the Government took from January 17 to March 12, 1945, to wit, 54 days, to prepare and present the 6609 requested itemization. The Government's first response to the request was presented on February 6, to wit, in 20 days, but did not contain the requested itemization.

At page 2, lines 6-9 of the Government's memorandum in opposition to the motion to strike paragraph 46 (a) of the complaint (see Tr. 1437, lines 15-19) it is said:

"On August 10, 1943, at the suggestion of the Court, counsel for the defendants undertook to file a motion to strike paragraph 46 (a) of the complaint upon the ground that the Government is estopped to offer any evidence at the trial showing the invalidity of the defendants' patents." (Italics supplied)

This statement, apparently intended to indicate that the court invited an attack upon paragraph 46 (a), is not correct. The facts are that when the Government filed its motion to amend the complaint by adding paragraph 46 (a), on February 24, 1943, the motion was resisted by the defendants as untimely, and it was urged that if the amendment was to be permitted it should be allowed only on condition that full particulars of the amendment should be required, time should be granted the defendants to answer or otherwise plead following the filing of the particulars, and the commencement of trial should be postponed until the defendants had had adequate opportunity to prepare and defend the new allegations; and the defendants also reserved the right to deny that the Government might legally attack the validity of a patent in the manner 6610 proposed and to argue that point at an appropriate time. The order of the court allowing the amendment reserved a right to the defendants to attack the legal sufficiency of the amendment. Thereafter, on several occasions, counsel for both the Government and the defendants raised the point, and the court recognized, that it would be desirable to have a test of the legal sufficiency of paragraph 46 (a) at some time prior to the commencement of the actual trial of the case—this in order that counsel for both sides might be advised as to whether they would or would not need to make preparation, the Government to prove, and the defendants to defend against, the allegations of paragraph 46 (a). On August 10, 1943, informal colloquy between counsel and the court was held on this subject, and it was agreed that there should be an argument on October 12 under a motion to strike. This ultimately became, at the choice of defendants' counsel, a motion in the alternative, that is, to strike or for partial judgment. The court did not invite an attack on paragraph 46 (a).

The foregoing is confirmed by the transcript at pages 357-371, under the date of March 12, 1943; at page 453, beginning with line 15, through page 468, line 21, under date of August 10, 1943; page 471, lines 17-22, under date of August 10, 1943; and pages 748-9 of the transcript, under date of November 16, 1943.

On June 15, 1946, the Government request-
6611 ed the court to sign an order granting nunc pro tunc the Government's motion of November 23, 1943, to make the opinion of the court on the defendant's motion to strike paragraph 46 (a) of the complaint a part of the record, and denying nunc pro tunc the Government's motion of November 23, 1943, to correct the record by modifying the opinion referred to, in such manner as not to indicate that the Government had conceded in its argument in opposition to the defendants' motions to strike paragraph 46 (a) that under that paragraph it sought a judicial determination that the Patent Commissioner had erred in granting the patents mentioned in that paragraph, to wit, the Roos patents. The court declined to sign the order. Thereafter Government counsel requested the clerk to file the unsigned order. The somewhat extraordinary character of these requests by Government counsel has caused the court to give further consideration to the same and to review the oral argument and memorandum of the Government in opposition to the motions to strike paragraph 46 (a) and the court's opinion on the motions to strike, and the Government's request for modification of the same. Upon such further consideration the court again declines to sign the proposed order for the reason that that which it would acomplish if signed has already been done. The opinion was copied into the transcript of record at pages 685-724; the dissenting opinion by Judge Bland, at pages
725-731. On November 29, 1943 (tr. 1434) the 6612 court ordered the opinion made a part of the record.

The motion to correct the record by modifying the opinion was denied at tr. 1430 on November 23, 1943. There is no warrant for the court's duplicating these actions. If the Government desires to make the court's denial of the motion to correct the record by modifying the opinion, a part of the record on appeal, it can do so by means of a bill of exceptions. The proposed order which Government counsel requested the court to sign on June 15, 1946, may be copied into the transcript of record. Counsel for the Government may also offer it to the clerk for filing, and if it is the practice of the clerk in this jurisdiction to accept and file unsigned orders, that practice may be carried out—if not, the clerk need not file it.

(The proposed order is as follows:)

ORDER DENYING MOTION FOR CORRECTION OF RECORD

On consideration of the motion of Roscoe T. Steffen, 6613 Special Assistant to the Attorney General, filed herein on November 23, 1943, to make its opinion upon the defendants' motion to strike, etc., paragraph 46a of the complaint, a part of the record in this proceeding, and, further, to modify its said opinion, or to take such other appropriate action as the Court may deem proper, to conform its opinion to the fact that the Government did not concede either in its brief or upon oral argument as recited in the opinion that the question before the Court was whether the Commissioner of Patents had erred in issuing the five Roos patents mentioned in paragraph 46a of the complaint, accompanied by the affidavit of the said Roscoe T. Steffen, it is by the Court this day of , 1946, nunc pro tunc as of November 23, 1943,

ORDERED that so much of the motion which is directed to the same question that the court modify its opinion, or to take such other appropriate action as the Court may deem proper, to conform its opinion to the fact that the Government did not concede either in its brief or oral argument that the Commissioner of Patents had erred in issuing the five Roos patents, be and the same is hereby denied; and it is FURTHER ORDERED, that in all other respects the said motion be and the same is hereby granted.

By the Court

HAROLD M. STEPHENS
Justice Presiding

6614 It is appropriate, in view of the Government's renewed reference to this matter, to make the following comment:

What the Government conceded or asserted in its argument in opposition to the motions to strike paragraph 46a must be determined from the argument itself, as made orally and in the memorandum of the Government. The Government's and the defendants' oral argument, including the defendant's rebuttal argument, are in the transcript of the record at pages 541 to 648, of October 18, 1943, and the Government's memorandum in opposition to the motions to strike paragraph 46 (a) is in the transcript of record at pages 1436-1496. Whether the court, as contended by the Government, misstated the Government's position, must be determined by examination of the Government's oral argument and memorandum, and examination of the court's characterization of the same in its opinion. But upon a review of the matter the court thinks there was no misstatement in its opinion. Counsel for the Government stated in the course of his oral argument (tr. 607), in answer to questions by Judges Garrett and Stephens as to whether the Government under paragraph 46 (a) was not asking of the court a judicial determination that the patents are invalid:

"I would say that you are quite right, that you would have to make a judicial determination. The difference is one in remedy. We don't ask to have it cancelled. Our only authority, as I see it here, is to enforce the 6615 Sherman Act, and that is all that we ask, that such remedies be granted as are necessary to make sure that the central policy of the Sherman Act is fully carried out. And if, in the course of that, it is necessary to say that patent number so and so is invalid, and therefore their price-fixing scheme is invalid based on that, that would be a judicial determination, but we do not ask to have the patent cancelled."

This statement was more than a concession that the question under paragraph 46 (a) of the complaint was whether the Commissioner of Patents had erred in granting the patents. It was, in necessary legal meaning, an assertion to that effect. Paragraph 46 (a) of the complaint charged no fraud in the obtaining of the patents, or arbitrary action in granting them, and no action beyond jurisdiction of the Patent Commissioner in granting the patents. It charged that there is no real invention or novelty in the claims of the patents, that the claims disclose no patentable invention in view of the prior art, that the alleged inventions were described in printed publications in the United States more than two years prior to filing of the applications, that the alleged inventions are inoperative, that they were abandoned by the inventor and that he was guilty of laches before the applications were filed, that the alleged inventions described in the claims were not reduced to practice until after other inventors had invented and reduced the same to prac-6616 tice and applied for patents thereon, and that the alleged inventions are described in ambiguous terms. (It was also charged in paragraph 46 (a) that the defendants had been informed of the invalidity of the claims of the patents and had unreasonably failed to file with the Commissioner any disclaimer of the claims; but this was abandoned by the Government. (See Tr. 657).) The questions raised by such allegations are precisely the questions which are committed by the statutes to the quasi-judicial determination of the Commissioner as an expert official or tribunal. See Revised Statutes Sections 4886, 4888, 4893 (1875); 35 U.S.C., Sections 31, 33, 36 (1940). Attention is particularly called to the wording of Revised Statute Section 4893, reading:

"On the filing of any such application and the payment of the fees required by law, the Commissioner of Patents shall cause an examination to be made of the alleged new invention or discovery; and, if on such examination it shall appear that the claimant is justly entitled to a patent under the law, and that the same is sufficiently useful and important, the Commissioner shall issue a patent therefor." (Italics supplied). Rules of Practice in the United States Patent Office (1945), 37 Code Fed. Reg. §1.133 (1939); Abbott v. Coe, 71 App. D. C. 195, 109 F. (2d) 449 (1940); and Sloane v. Coe, 74 App. D. C. 200, 122 F. (2d) 37 (1941). Both cases recognize the expert quasi-judicial functions of the Commissioner.

Therefore if the court determined that the patents 6617 referred to in paragraph 46 (a) were invalid for the reasons charged in paragraph 46 (a), it would

of necessity have determined that the Commisioner erred in issuing them—that he issued them in violation of the conditions laid down in Rev. Stat. Sec. 4886 for the granting of patents. The court did not fail to note the contention of the Governemnt that the Commissioner is overburdened and not in a position to make a searching examination and final determination of all considerations bearing upon the right of an applicant to obtain a patent, i.e., the considerations of invention, utility, commercial success, novelty, anticipation, and the like, and that the Commissioner accordingly relies heavily upon the oath and affidavits of the applicant in issuing a patent. The failure of the Patent Commissioner because of overburden of work or lack of facilities or opportunity to make a searching examination of such considerations might explain an error in the issuance of patents where the conditions laid down in Rev. Stat. Sec. 4886 were not fulfilled, but it would not free his action from error. The court did not fail to notice the contention of the Government that patents granted by the Commissioner are but prima facie valid, since they may be held invalid in infringement proceedings. But assuming this, it is of no moment in the present context. The Commissioner may err in a prima facie determination as well as in a final determination.

6618 The Government cannot by any contention or form of words or affidavit avoid the plain fact that in asking for a judicial determination of invalidity of the patents for the reasons charged in paragraph 46 (a), it was in legal effect asking for a determination that the Commissioner erred in issuing them, because if the court determined that they were invalid it would of necessity have determined that the Commisioner erred in issuing them.

Before STEPHENS, Associate Justice, United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia (Presiding), and GARRETT, Presiding Judge, JACKSON, Judge, United States Court of Customs and Patent Appeals, designated as Justices of the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.*

8718 STEPHENS, J.: This is an action in equity instituted by the United States, hereinafter referred to as the Government, to restrain the defendants from alleged violations of Sections 1, 2 and 3 of the Sherman Act. Injunctive relief is sought under Section 4.[1] The corporate defendants are: United States Gypsum Company (hereinafter referred to as USG), National Gypsum Company (National), Certain-teed Products Corporation (Certain-teed), The Celotex Corporation (Celotex), Ebsary Gypsum Company, Inc. (Ebsary), and Newark Plaster Company (Newark). The individual defendants are Samuel M. Gloyd, doing business under the name of Texas Cement Plaster Company (Texas), Sewell L. Avery, Oliver M. Knode, Melvin H. Baker, Bror G. Dahlberg, Henry J. Hartley, Frederick G. Ebsary, and Frederick Tomkins. Avery was president of USG from 1905 to 1936, and since then has been chairman of the Board of Directors. Knode is president of USG. Baker is president of National. Dahlberg is president of Celotex and chairman of the Board of Directors of Certain-teed. Hartley is president of Certain-teed. Ebsary is president of Ebsary. Tomkins is president of Newark.

The defendants are engaged in the mining of gypsum rock and in the manufacture and in the sale in interstate commerce, in the "Eastern area" of the United States, of gypsum board, gypsum plaster, and miscellaneous gypsum products defined in a bill of particulars as gypsum block, gypsum tile, and Keene's cement. Gypsum board consists of two outer sheets of heavy tough paper, front and back, called "liners," between which there is a lightened gypsum core which is firmly bonded to the paper. Gypsum wallboard is a product used as a finished interior wall. Gypsum lath or plasterboard is a product used as a base to which a coat of plaster may be applied. In the manufacture of gypsum products the raw gypsum rock is first subjected to calcination—the process of driving off the water of crystallization by heating. Calcined gypsum, or stucco, when mixed with water, resumes the original content thereof so that the manufactured product is chemically substantially the same as the raw rock and has the same properties. In the reforming process the manufacture of the products above described is made possible. The products are extensively used in the building industry.

In the early periods of its manufacture gypsum board was crudely made by pouring buckets of calcined gypsum mixed with water in thin layers between multiple pieces of rough felt paper, smoothing the product with rollers, hardening it on racks and trimming the pieces to size. This was a hand operation. In 1912 the defendant USG commenced the development of more efficient methods of manufacture of gypsum products. An important advance was in the making, by virtue of patent No. 1,034,746, issued in 1912 to USG on application of an inventor-employee named Clarence W. Utzman, of "closed-edge board."[3] Prior to 1912 gypsum board had been made with exposed edges. This required trimming, and there was also breakage in shipping and use,

---

2 As more particularly described in the complaint, the "Eastern area" includes the District of Columbia and the States of Alabama, Arkansas, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Vermont, Virginia, West Virginia, Wisconsin, Wyoming, and that portion of the State of Montana east of the counties of Phillips, Petroleum, Musselshell, Yellowstone, and Carbon.

3 Claim 1 of the patent reads as follows: "A plasterboard comprising a body, a covering of fibrous material adhering to one face of the body folded to inclose an edge of the body and overlie a portion of the opposite face thereof, and a covering of fibrous material for said opposite face of the body overlying said folded-over portion of the first mentioned covering but having its edge spaced from the edge of the board."

with consequent wastage. The making of closed-edge board solved this problem. Various other improvements were developed, including a board making machine, the use of foam as a substitute for sawdust as an "aggregate" in the gypsum core to lighten the board, and the use of starch to improve the bond between paper and core. Metallized board, gypsum board covered with metallic foil, was devised for purposes of insulation; and a gypsum lath perforated in such manner as to increase the fire resisting qualities of wall structure was devised. These improvements were covered by patents—product, process, and machine—many of which were issued to USG; others were acquired by that company. A demand arose in the trade for these improved products, and companies other than USG commenced to copy them. There ensued many years of litigation in which USG strove to enforce, and eventually succeeded in enforcing, its patent rights.

Prior to 1917 the Bestwall Manufacturing Company (Bestwall) commenced the manufacture of closed-edge board. USG sued for infringement and won. Bestwall Mfg. Co. v. United States Gypsum Co., 270 Fed. 542 (C. C. A. 7th, 1921). Bestwall had, however, in the course of the litigation, been acquired by The Beaver Products Company, Inc. (Beaver), and USG by a supplemental bill sued both of these companies for infringement and again prevailed. United States Gypsum Co. v. Bestwall Mfg. Co., 15 F. (2d) 704 (N. D. Ill. 1925). These decisions made the manufacture of closed-edge board by a competitor of USG impossible without infringement of USG's patent rights.
8720 This is admitted by the Government. Prior to the last mentioned decision, Augustus S. Blagden, president of Beaver, made overtures of settlement to Sewell L. Avery, president of USG; he continued these efforts after the decree under the supplemental bill. Avery, at a meeting in December, 1925, specified as terms of settlement the payment of damages by Beaver for infringement of USG's patents, acknowledgment by Beaver of the validity of USG's patents, payment of royalties, and the right in USG to fix prices of gypsum board made and sold by Beaver under the Utzman closed-edge patent. A settlement agreement was executed on July 29, 1926, Beaver paying $250,000 cash damages and USG granting Beaver a license to make, use and sell the patented products, to use the patented processes and to make and use the patented machines. The terms of the license contract are stated in greater detail below.

In September, 1925, after the decision against Beaver, USG sued The American Gypsum Company (American) and the Universal Gypsum and Lime Company (Universal) for infringement, and served a notice of infringement upon the Niagara Gypsum Company (Niagara). On September 17, 1926, a settlement and license agreement was entered into with Universal similar to that with Beaver, except that the lump sum payment was approximately $35,000. A license agreement was entered into between USG and the Atlantic Gypsum Products Company (Atlantic) on March 5, 1927. In this instance no damages were paid. Texas signed a license agreement on April 11, 1927. This contract was not by way of settlement of an existing claim of infringement, although it recited that Texas had equipped its plant to make closed-edge board and that USG was threatening to sue if such board were produced.

These four license contracts are for convenience referred to in the record as the "1926-1927 contracts." The licenses granted were under two Utzman patents No. 1,034,746 (the product patent) and No. 1,029,328 (a process patent), and under a third Utzman patent No. 1,330,413 (a machine patent), expiring February 10, 1937, under a Birdsey patent No. 1,358,508 (a product patent for partially closed-edge board), and under some sixty or more other patents and applications for patents. The material provisions of the contracts were these: USG granted an indivisible and non-exclusive license until the expiration of the Utzman machine patent on February 10, 1937. It reserved the right to fix during the life of the Utzman product patent, expiring August 6, 1929, the minimum prices at which the licensees might sell board embodying the disclosure of that patent, but at not more than the prevailing market price. The licensees agreed to pay specified royalties on all gypsum board manufactured by them, whether patented or unpatented, until February 10, 1937, the date of the expira-8721 tion of the machine patent; they acknowledged and agreed not to contest the validity of the patents under which the licenses were granted; they agreed that all of the patented products sold by them and known in the trade as "seconds" should be invoiced and marked as "seconds." USG agreed that the licensees might sell patented gypsum board to manufacturers of plaster and gypsum products who did not themselves make board (referred to in the record as "manufacturing distributors"), the royalties payable to remain based upon the regular selling price of the licensees to the regular dealer trade. The licensees agreed to keep separate records showing the quantity of all board sold by them, and periodically to render reports to USG showing the quantities and prices of their sales. USG reserved the right to inspect and to make copies of the licensees' memoranda from such records.

In May, 1929, following further litigation, four more license contracts were entered into between USG on the one part and Certain-teed, National, Ebsary, and Niagara, on the other part. In 1923 Certain-teed, originally a manufacturer of roofing products, entered the gypsum industry with the acquisition of the Acme Cement Plaster Company (Acme). In 1926 it commenced the manufacture of open-edge gypsum board at the former Acme plant in Texas. On January 20, 1928, it purchased the assets of Beaver. Beaver was then making a closed-edge board. Certain-teed refused to assume the Beaver-USG settlement agreement and license. USG thereupon, on or about February 21, 1928, instituted suit in the District Court of the United States in Illinois against Certain-teed and Beaver, seeking an injunction against the distribution of the proceeds of sale to the Beaver stockholders and asserting that Certain-teed should be required to assume all liabilities of Beaver under its settlement agreement and license. Certain-teed was required to put up a million dollar bond, or otherwise to suffer a temporary injunction, as security for damages which might be found due to USG. On May 22, 1929, Certain-teed settled this suit with USG, agreeing to pay damages of approximately $64,000 and to fulfill the obligations of Beaver under its original settlement agreement and license; USG executed in Certain-teed's favor a patent license agreement and the suit was dismissed and the bond released. A supplemental license agreement between USG and Certain-teed covering a bundling process patent, more particularly referred to below, was executed on July 3, 1929. On May 16, 1929, National settled two patent infringement suits which USG had brought against it, one on November 5, 1926, the other on May 7, 1928, paying on account of damages approximately $178,000 and entering into a patent license agreement with USG. National had commenced the manufacture of a modified closed-edged gypsum board in 1926.

Ebsary, which had commenced making open-edge
8722 gypsum board in 1928, was granted a patent license by USG on May 22, 1929. This license was not a part of settlement of an infringement claim, since Ebsary had not manufactured closed-edge board and there was no infringement suit or basis therefor against it.

Niagara commenced making an open-edge gypsum board, but later made board with a semi-protected edge covered by a Clark application for a patent owned by American. This board had been developed by American in an attempt to compete with USG's closed-edge board. USG claimed that this board infringed its Birdsey patent No. 1,358,508 covering the manufacture of board with a partially closed edge. Priority over the Clark application had been awarded Birdsey by the Commissioner of Patents; this was affirmed by the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia in 1926. Clark v. Birdsey, 56 App. D. C. 136, 10 F. (2d) 1001. A contract of settlement was entered into between Niagara and USG. This contract is not in evidence but is referred to in a later license agreement between Niagara and USG dated October 8, 1929, in which it appears that the earlier contract provided for money damages to USG in the sum of approximately $28,000 and a patent license to Niagara. These four license contracts between USG on the one part and Certain-teed, National, Ebsary and Niagara on the other part, are called the "May 1929 contracts" in the record. The provisions of these four contracts were in substance the same as those of the 1926-1927 license agreements except that in the May 1929 contracts USG's right to fix minimum prices was not limited as in the previous agreements, and sales to manufacturing distributors and jobbers were permitted only on USG's written consent. These contracts involved the same patents as the 1926-1927 agreements, with a Birdsey "bundle" patent No. 1,696,877 added covering a method of bundling gypsum board for shipment by binding several boards together into a stack through the application of a gummed tape lengthwise along the edges of the boards. Use of this bundling process was required by the contracts.

There remain to be described the litigation and negotiations leading up to the execution of certain "November 1929 contracts" and the terms thereof.[4] In 1929 USG owned three applications for patents of Carlisle K. Roos covering cellular core gypsum board produced by the employment of foam or a foaming agent in the core of the board to produce a multitude of cells or voids thereby lightening the board,

4 As will be noted, most of these license agreements were executed on various dates during October, 1929, but they became effective on November 5, 1929, and have been referred to throughout the record as the "November 1929 contracts."

eliminating the use of sawdust, which had been an 8723 unsatisfactory material, as an "aggregate," and resulting in quicker drying. These applications were in interference with an application for a patent by Erick Christian Bayer, a foreign patentee, the American rights to whose patent had been acquired by USG. The Roos applications prevailed in the interference proceeding and Roos patents Nos. 2,017,022,[5] 2,079,338, and 2,080,009[6] were ultimately issued to USG (October 8, 1935, May 4, 1937, and May 11, 1937, respectively). On May 23, 1929, after the last of the May 1929 license agreements had been executed, Avery of USG described the scope and nature of the Roos bubble board invention and outlined its advantages, including weight reduction, lower freight cost, elimination of the sawdust problem, easier handling and quicker drying, and offered the various licensees above referred to a license on this invention.

Shortly after this, Universal through its president and co-receiver, Eugene Holland, claimed that USG, by using starch in its board to obtain adhesion between the core and paper liners, was infringing two patents owned by Universal known as the Hite and Haggerty patents Nos. 1,230,297 and 1,500,452, respectively. The Hite patent covered a heat insulating material and method of making the same. The Haggerty patent covered a gypsum plaster wallboard employing starch or a cooked carbohydrate in the core of the board to insure a good bond between the core and the paper covering sheets.[7] This had solved the "peeler" trouble in the gypsum board industry and made possible modern high speed production of gypsum board. Without it, high temperatures used to expedite drying of the board would result in defective board in the form of "peelers." In 1927

5 Claim 9 of the patent reads as follows: "A light weight building material composed of a hard mass of cellular structure which comprises set cementitious material having permanently fixed therein foam cells that possess their original form and which are arranged throughout the structure in foam-like formation."

6 Claim 17 of the patent reads as follows: "A wallboard comprising a porous body of hardened cellular cementitious material enclosing a plurality of voids encased in tough pliable films, and cover sheets therefor which are applied by means of pressure when said cementitious material is in a plastic state whereupon said cover sheets remain bonded to said cementitious material after the same has set and hardened."

7 Claim 2 of the patent reads as follows: "A wallboard consisting mainly of gypsum and having a paper liner, cooked starch being incorporated with the gypsum in about the proportion of 2 lbs. of starch to 40 lbs. of gypsum, to insure adhesion of said paper liner."

Universal had brought suit in the United States District Court in Buffalo, New York, against National for infringing of the Haggerty patent, demanding an injunction and an accounting, and the court had ruled that the Haggerty patent was valid and infringed (Universal Gypsum & Lime Co., v. Haggerty, 21 F. (2d) 544 (W. D. N. Y. 1927)), and National had posted a substantial bond rather than suffer enforcement of a temporary injunction. Avery told Holland that it was not USG's policy to infringe patent rights
8724 and that he would investigate the claim. In June and July of 1929 negotiations were going on between USG and its various licensees in respect of a possible license covering the bubble board invention, and the various companies were investigating to ascertain whether the invention had merit. During this same period Holland continued to discuss with Avery separately the matter of the alleged infringement of the Haggerty and Hite starch patents. As a result of these discussions USG agreed to purchase and did purchase these patents. Universal was in receivership and the sale was a favorable one from its standpoint because it provided Universal with substantial funds permitting it to reorganize and emerge from receivership with its accounts paid. The original and ancillary proceedings were in seven different Federal district courts and the sale was approved by all of these courts on or about November 5, 1929. The sale was consummated in a license contract of November 5, 1929, which settled a claim of USG against Universal for infringement of USG's partially closed-edge patent and the claim of Universal against USG for infringement of the Hite and Haggerty patents.[8] The Hite and Haggerty patents were assigned to USG with reservation of royalty to Universal. Universal was itself granted a license under these patents and under the Birdsey patent No. 1,358,508 and under patents which might be issued under the Roos and Bayer applications and under numerous other patents. This license contract superseded the 1926 license agreement between USG and Universal. In August, 1929, USG had announced its arrangement to purchase the Haggerty and Hite patents and offered its licensees new licenses which would replace the prior license contracts and include in one document the outstanding patents of the earlier licenses, the Haggerty and Hite patents, and the applications for patents on the Roos bubble board invention. This offer was made subject to the approval of the district courts above referred to.

8 Although Birdsey patent No. 1,358,508 for partially closed edge gypsum board was included within the patents which were the basis of the USG Universal license contract of September 17, 1926, there was apparently still outstanding at the time of the execution of the license contract of November 5, 1929, an infringement claim by USG against Universal under this Birdsey patent. See page 2 of the license contract of November 5, 1929, Government Exhibit 6.

Niagara on October 8, 1929, Certain-teed on the 15th, National on the 17th, Ebsary on the 18th, and Atlantic on the 21st, entered into new patent license contracts with USG which superseded the previous agreements between these companies and USG, and these new contracts covered the Hite and Haggerty patents and also the anticipated patents under the Roos and Bayer applications.

As stated above, USG had in September, 1925, instituted a suit against American for infringement of USG's closed-edge patent. It had also in the same month commenced a suit against American for infringement of the Birdsey patent on partially closed-edge board. American attempted to obtain a more favorable settlement than had been granted to other infringers. USG's infringement suit with respect to the Birdsey patent had been postponed pending settlement negotiations, reinstated, and ultimately tried and decided in favor of USG. Settlement discussions by 8725 American were resumed, with renewed efforts to obtain concessions, with USG. On November 25, 1929, American finally settled its outstanding litigation with USG on the terms originally offered, i.e., on terms similar to those of the earlier settlements with other companies, and accepted a license from USG similar to the license contracts of the other licensees. American paid in settlement of past infringement approximately $152,000. On April 23, 1930, Kelley Plasterboard Company, Inc. (Kelley) took a similar license.[9] Texas did not enter into a license contract in 1929, but continued as a licensee under its license of April 11, 1927, although it was not subject to price control after August 6, 1929, the date of the expiration of the Utzman closed-edge patent. Upon the expiration on February 10, 1937, of its license of April 11, 1927, Texas accepted a further license contract similar in form to the November 1929 contract with the other licensees. This completed the execution of the nine contracts generally referred to in the record as the "November 1929 contracts" (although the Texas contract was not executed until 1937 and the Kelley contract not until April 23, 1930) with Niagara, Certain-teed, National, Ebsary, Atlantic, Universal, American, Kelley, and Texas. Each of these contracts extended licenses under the Haggerty and Hite patents, under patents which might be issued under the Roos and Bayer applications, and under a large number of patents still vital which had been the subject of the previous contracts, including the Utzman machine patent No. 1,330,413, Birdsey patent No. 1,358,508 on the partially closed-edge board, the bundle patent No. 1,696,877, and under patents which might be issued under several additional applications for patents. These November 1929 contracts were in general in the same terms as the earlier contracts. Each contained a "most favored nation" clause providing that if subsequent to the effective date of a particular agreement USG should grant to any other person, except to Universal, a license more favorable in terms, then USG would grant to the particular licensee a license on the same terms. The Texas contract alone in its "most favored nation" clause did not contain the exception to Universal. The price fixing clause contained a provision that the minimum prices fixed by USG should not be more than those at which USG determined to sell gypsum board or other products embodying the inventions claimed in the patents to its own like trade in the same market. Use of the Birdsey bundling process by the licensees was made optional.

9 On January 3, 1939, USG consented to the assignment of this license to Newark.

It will be noted that the nine license contracts last above described involve only five of the named defendants—USG, Certain-teed, National, Ebsary, and Texas, leaving Celotex and Newark unmentioned. It will be noted also that the five companies—Niagara, Atlantic, Universal, American, and Kelley—parties to the November 1929 license contracts are not defendants. This is to be explained as fol-8726 lows: Niagara was acquired by USG in 1929. National acquired Universal in 1935 and Atlantic in 1936. Newark acquired the stock of Kelley in 1937 and merged with Kelley in 1939. Celotex acquired American in 1939. Upon acquiring these companies respectively National, Newark and Celotex took over the licenses which had been entered into by Universal, Atlantic, Kelley and American with USG.

In addition to the 1926-1927, May 1929, and November 1929, contracts which related to gypsum board as such, certain additional contracts, sometimes referred to in the record as "subordinate contracts," relating to metallized board and perforated lath, were executed as follows: At various times in 1934-1935 USG as owner of Roos patent No. 1,914,345 covering the use of metallic foil as a thermal insulating element in wallboard granted licenses to various other companies. The license contracts in evidence are those of National of October 5, 1934, Kelley of October 12, 1934,[10] Certain-teed of November 2, 1934, Atlantic of November 30, 1934, American of December 4, 1934,[11] Universal of April 4, 1935, and Ebsary of August 14, 1935. In these contracts USG granted licenses to make, use and sell plasterboard having a metallized surface embodying the inventions disclosed and claimed in the patents or patent applications covered by the contracts, and reserved the right to fix the minimum prices on board embodying the inventions in question, but at not more than USG's own price in the same market. The licensees agreed to pay a royalty for all plasterboard having a metallized surface manufactured and sold by them and covered by the claims of the patents issued or to be issued under applications for patents. The licensees agreed not to sell metallized board to other board manufacturers except upon USG's written consent, and not to sell to anyone on consignment. They agreed to acknowledge and not to contest the vadidity of the patents issued or to be issued and to record the quantities of metallized board manufactured "and/or sold," USG reserving the right to inspect and copy such records. Each licensee was accorded the position of a "most favored nation" with respect to licenses under these patents.

Similarly USG was the owner of Roos patent No. 1,938,354 covering a fire resistant plasterboard. This board had holes of given size punched through it at designated intervals. Upon application of a coat of plaster the same pushed its way through the holes and hardened into a mechanical key with consequent improvement of the fire resistant qualities of the wall in which such plasterboard was used. USG granted patent licenses to Certain-teed on June 8, 1936, American on July 10, 1936, Ebsary on February 2, 1937, and Kelley on June 23, 1937, for the manufacture, use and sale of this board. In substance the terms of these 8727 licenses were the same as those of the metallized board license contracts. Later USG offered a revised perforated lath license to its licensees royalty free, i.e., extended an offer to include the perforated board patent in the basic board license agreement at no additional royalty. Such revised licenses were accepted by Certain-teed, Ebsary and Kelly.[12]

Minimum price bulletins were sent out by USG to its licensees under the various license contracts, except during the period from August 6, 1929 (the date of expiration of the Utzman product patent No. 1,034,746), until the date of the execution of the November 1929 contracts. The price bulletins are limited in their application to patented board manufactured and sold by the licensees under their respective licenses. The price on board was calculated on the basis of a mill price plus freight from the nearest mill (freight-wise) to the point of destination. The bulletins provided for prices on various quantities of board such as carloads, less-than-carloads, and truckloads. In particular markets, such as metropolitan areas, where it was economic to deliver gypsum board in truckload quantities, prices were established for such quantities and the areas in which such prices were to apply were defined. Outside of such areas a higher price was fixed. Provision was made in various instances for a variation in price to cover pool car shipments, railroad switching charges, and "pick-ups" at a mill. The bulletins contained provisions purposed to prevent the violation of the minimum price requirements through such devices, in connection with a sale of board, as the giving away of board as "dunnage," making advertising allowances to the customer, granting of fictitious damage claims, splitting of commissions with the customer by commission salesmen, paying of unearned warehousing charges, fictitious hiring of customers' trucks, giving away of plaster or other products, or the sale of such products at a price unusually below the licensee's prevailing market price. There is set out in the margin a more detailed description of the price bulletins.[13]

---

12 On January 3, 1939, USG granted Newark, which had merged with Kelley, a royalty free perforated lath license, at the same time canceling the Kelley revised license.

13 There were two general classes of provisions. The first related to prices as such and the second related to protecting the prices set. The first class of provisions made an affirmative statement of the minimum price which might be charged by a licensee for board embodying the licensed inventions. For this purpose the overall market was variously divided. The basic list of prices was for carload shipment to dealers so set up as to divide the market territorially

8728 During the periods when price bulletins were sent out by USG to its licensees each licensee, in the main, sold gypsum board manufactured by it at the prices and upon the terms and conditions stipulated in the bulletins. No bulletins have been sent out since July 8, 1941.

8729 In 1932 USG set up as a department a wholly owned corporation called the Board Survey Company. Its function was to receive complaints of license violations, to investigate the facts, call them to the attention of the licensee involved, and upon occasion to the attention of the licensor USG. Board Survey Company was organized by USG for the purpose of bringing about compliance with the licenses. The licensees had no part in its formation, management or operation. From time to time a representative of USG, as licensor, met by the use of mill basing points, the delivered price to dealers being determined by taking the lowest combination of mill base price plus freight from that point to destination. A standard billing weight was given per thousand square feet of different thicknesses of board. These were for standard dimensions, a differential being added to the base price for odd sized products. Special prices were stated for cut stock of stated thicknesses f.o.b. certain mills in named markets. Superimposed on this basic price system were variations stating flat delivered prices for delimited areas, defining as single delivery points described metropolitan areas, stating special base prices for some thicknesses of board shipped from named base points for delivery in limited territories, providing for variations in price and/or allocation of charges (i.e., to dealer or shipper) for special shipments such as mixed cars, pool cars, and stopover cars, with territorial variations; and there were provisions for special prices for particular jobs, types of jobs, or types of purchasers other than dealers, e.g., contractors, prefabricated house makers, Century of Progress, and the like. Special discounts were provided for sales "to other manufacturers" where permitted. In fine, prices were varied according to the following factors in various combinations: style of product, amount of product, territory, form of shipment, nature of use, and type of purchaser.

The bulletins covering perforated lath were less detailed and less numerous (apparently because of the subsequent inclusion of the perforated board patent in the basic board license agreement), but they involved the same factors as above named.

The provisions described above were substantially duplicated with respect to a separate set of prices applicable to delivery f. o. b. dealers' trucks at given mills or warehouses. This type of transaction was called a "pick-up," and it appears that the bulletins did not contemplate such deliveries at any other places than at those listed or delivery of less than a stated minimum number of square feet. There was no provision in the bulletins for sales to purchasers other than dealers, except for the provisions above referred to in respect of contractors and prefabricated house manufacturers and the like, and "other manufacturers."

The second class of provisions, referred to above as related to price protection, were first in the following form:

"Allowances, Etc.: The minimum price fixed by licensor for patented board and/or lath shall not be reduced below such minimum price or prices by or through allowances, payment or rebate to customers for use of railroad siding, for switching performed after car has been originally set for un-with representatives of the licensee companies for the purpose of explaining to them the provisions of the minimum price bulletins and for the purpose of securing adherence to such minimum prices by the licensees.

The defendants and their predecessors in interest were, at the time the license agreements were entered into, competitors in the manufacture and sale of substantially all of the gypsum board and a substantial part of the gypsum plaster made and sold in the "Eastern area," and the defendants now make and sell substantially all of the gypsum board and a substantial portion of the plaster in the "Eastern area." Sales of gypsum products are largely to retail dealers in building materials and mason supplies, rather than to building contractors and ultimate consumers.

loading; for warehousing, trucking or unloading, or other service by them in connection with shipments or deliveries of patented board and/or lath. Nor shall such net cost to customer be reduced below such minimum price or prices by the establishment or continuance of warehouses with dealers or other buyers; or through allowance or adjustment on board which customer claims is of poor grade and not up to standard, except when such an allowance or adjustment on substandard board is first authorized by the licensor; or by allowance for any other reason whatsoever by a license direct or by a salesman of patented board out of his own compensatio ; or through the extension of other than regular terms to any such dealer or buyer. Quotations deducting the regular cash discount so that the quoted price is less than the minimum price to the licensee, are considered as quotations to sell at less than the minimum price and therefore in violation of the license agreement. On quotations to U. S. Government regulation minimum delivered price less 2% of delivered price (cash discount) shall be the minimum price.

"Also, where a salesman selling patented board to a customer is authorized by licensee or its agent to sell the same wholly or partly on a commission basis, or where a salesman not employed by licensee makes a sale of patented board to a customer on a commission basis and licensee or his agent accepts such sale, in either of such events the commission paid by the licensee is a deduction from the price at which the board is sold by licensee, and where, after deducting such commission, the amount is less than the minimum price, licensor shall regard the sale as made at a price less than the minimum price fixed by licensor and a violation of the terms of the license agreement. Licensor also regards sales of patented board by commission salesmen, without the written consent of licensor, as a violation of the terms of the license agreement." See pages 3-4 of Government Exhibit 37, a bulletin of February 24, 1937.

Later another form was used, to wit:

"Rebates, Allowances, Etc.

"Any sale of patented products, though ostensibly made at or above the minimum price established by licensor, will nevertheless be considered a violation of the provisions of the license if licensee directly or indirectly reduces the actual price charged by licensee below such minimum price by granting the customer rebates, unearned or unwarranted refunds, credits or discounts, by reducing the price of other products, by hiring customers' trucks, by granting allowances for advertising or other purposes, by splitting of salesmen's compensation or commissions with customers, by overshipment of patented products, by including board under the guise of dunnage, or by making any other payment or allowance in the form of money or otherwise which has for its purpose and effect reducing the price charged by licensee below such minimum price." See page 2 of Government Exhibit 37, a bulletin of February 6, 1939.

The Government's complaint covers 33 closely printed pages, including 123 numbered paragraphs, and there is an appendix of an additional 94 pages. The charges are generalized in paragraphs 44 to 46 (a), inclusive, of the complaint as follows:

44. Defendants are, and have been for many years last past, parties to contracts in restraint of trade and commerce in gypsum board, plaster, and miscellaneous gypsum products among the several States, in violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Antitrust Act. Defendants are, and have been for many years last past, actively engaged in a continuing combination and conspiracy in restraint of trade and commerce in said gypsum products among the several States, in violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Antitrust Act. Defendants are monopolizing, and have monopolized for many years last past, trade and commerce in said gypsum products among the several States, in violation of Section 2 of the Sherman Antitrust Act. Defendants are, and have been for many years last past, attempting to monopolize trade and commerce in said gypsum products among the several States and are, and have been for many years last past, actively engaged in a continuing combination and conspiracy to monopolize trade and commerce in said gypsum products among the several States, in violation of Section 2 of the Sherman Antitrust Act. Defendants are, and have been for many years last past, parties to contracts in restraint of trade and commerce in said gypsum products between the States and the District of Columbia, in violation of Section 3 of the Sherman Antitrust Act. Defendants are, and have been for many years last past, actively engaged in a continuing combination and conspiracy in restraint of trade and commerce in said gypsum products between the States and the District of Columbia, in violation of Section 3 of the Sherman Antitrust Act. Said unlawful contracts, combination, conspiracy, monopoly, and attempt to monopolize will be referred to hereinafter as the combination.[14]

45. Said combination has been formed, has been carried out, and is being carried out by each of the defendant companies (acting, in part, through those of their officers and directors made defendants herein) and by other companies hereinafter referred to engaged in the manu-8730 facture of said gypsum products. Said companies have entered into, have carried out, and are carrying out said combination for the purpose, and with the effect, of restraining, dominating, and controlling the manufacture and distribution of said gypsum products in the Eastern area by:

14 For convenience the term "combination" will sometimes be used in this opinion, as it is in the complaint, to refer to the alleged unlawful contracts, combination, conspiracy, monopoly and attempt to monopolize.

(a) Concertedly raising and fixing at arbitrary and non-competitive levels the prices of gypsum board manufactured and sold by said companies in the Eastern area;

(b) concertedly standardizing gypsum board and its method of production by limiting the manufacture of board to uniform methods, and by producing only uniform kinds of board, for the purpose, and with the effect, of eliminating competition arising from variations in methods of production and in kinds of board manufactured and distributed in the Eastern area;

(c) concertedly raising, maintaining, and stabilizing the general level of prices for plaster and miscellaneous gypsum products manufactured and sold by said companies in the Eastern area;

(d) concertedly refraining from distributing gypsum board, plaster, and miscellaneous gypsum products manufactured by said companies through jobbers in the Eastern area, and concertedly refusing to sell said products to jobbers at prices below said companies' prices to dealers, for the purpose, and with the effect, of eliminating substantially all jobbers from the distribution of said gypsum products in the Eastern area;

(e) concertedly inducing and coercing manufacturing distributors to resell, at the prices raised and fixed by said companies as aforesaid, gypsum board purchased from said companies.

46. Said combination was entered into and has been, and is being, carried out by the defendant companies in part under the guise of numerous license agreements purporting to relate to the use of certain patents owned by the defendant U.S.G. in the manufacture of gypsum board. To give color of legality to said combination, the defendant companies, and other companies hereinafter named, concertedly agreed among themselves to enter into, and did enter into, said license agreements. Said license agreements are not bona fide patent license agreements reasonably designed to secure to U.S.G. the pecuniary reward for valid patent monopolies, but were entered into and executed for the illegal purposes described in paragraphs 44 and 45 hereof. The formation and operation of said combination is more fully set forth in paragraphs 47 to 120 hereof.

(a) Many of the patents mentioned and described in said license agreements by which the said combination has been, and is being carried out in part, are process or machine patents. The said patents mentioned and described in the said license agreements, even assuming they are valid, are not basic article or product patents and do not singly or all together cover completely the business of mining and selling gypsum, or cover completely gypsum board, which is one of the forms in which unpatented gypsum is sold by the defendants, but at most constitute minor additions to the established and unpatented art of making gypsum board and afford no legal justification for the said combination.

Paragraphs 47 to 120 of the complaint detail the generalized charges above set forth. It is not possible to state this detail within a reasonably limited space, but it will be of some aid to an understanding of the questions presented by the motions now before the court if these paragraphs are summarized. They allege that:

The combination was formed during the period between September, 1925, and early in the year 1930. The plan for stabilization of prices grew out of the efforts of the parties to the early patent infringement disputes to settle their differences. Avery as president of USG, Blagden as president of Beaver, and Griswold as vice-president of American decided to induce the industry to enter into license agreements containing price fixing provisions under USG's dominant Utzman closed-edge board patents, Blagden and Griswold agreeing to act as contact men with the industry. In negotiations in 1926 the industry responded favorably, but there was disagreement over the terms of the proposed licenses and only Beaver and Universal signed agreements in that year; but further efforts of the proponents of the plan resulted in the signing of the contracts in 1927 by Atlantic and Texas. Increasing competition in the industry, and declining prices for all gypsum products during 1927 and 1928, revived interest in price stabilization, and Holland as president of Universal agreed with Avery to promote the stabilization plan. From time to time in the latter part of 1928 and the early part of 1929 conferences and meetings were held by companies not yet licensed. The Utzman patent on closed-edge board was to expire, however, in August, 1929, and in view of that fact Avery for USG assured prospective licensees that, if the agreements proposed were signed, USG would look for an additional patent under the color of 8731 which prices could be controlled. In reliance upon this assurance Certain-teed, National, Ebsary, and Niagara signed the May 1929 contracts. But not all of the agreement between USG and these companies was put into formal writing. On the contrary, in addition to the signed license agreements, informal side agreements were made between USG and its licensees that they would discontinue making unpatented open-edge board and second-class closed-edge board; that they would dispose of inventories of such board at prices fixed by USG; that thereafter they would manufacture and sell a closed-edge board manufactured and bundled by the processes and methods used by USG; that USG would advance and stabilize the prices for board; that all companies would increase their prices for other gypsum products; and that USG would continue to control prices through the use of other patents after expiration of the Utzman product patent in August, 1929.

Immediately after the May 1929 license contracts were executed USG, pursuant to its argreement to find a patent under which to continue price control, offered additional licenses under the foam process. Universal then sought to induce USG to purchase the Hite and Haggerty starch patents by a claim that the use of farinaceous paste in the foam process infringed them. USG knew that this claim had no basis in fact, and knew also that there were other and non-infringing methods of reinforcing the bubbles in the foam, and had advised its licensees to that effect. Nevertheless, the sale by Universal to USG was agreed to and consummated and the November 1929 contracts were signed—all for the purpose of giving color of legality to price control by USG pending issuance of patents under the foam process. Again, in addition to the formal writings, there were side agreements to the effect that the use of adhesives in the manufacture of board to increase the bond between core and liners—there had been such use for many years prior to 1929 by the licensees other than Ebsary and Kelley—would be considered to fall within the scope of the Hite and Haggerty patents for the purpose of permitting price control by USG during the life of these patents; that Ebsary and Kelley would commence to use adhesives for the same purpose; and that the licensees, as soon as they could equip their plants, would manufacture and bundle by substantially the same processes as those employed by USG.

USG and certain of its licensees entered into separate patent license agreements relating to metallized board and perforated lath, for the purpose of extending and strengthening the operation of the basic license agreements.[15] At the time of the execution of the metallized board agreements, during 1934-1935, none of the licensees, except National, intended to manufacture such board, but, as USG well knew, to purchase it from USG or National for resale to dealers and consumer; USG, notwithstanding this, required the licensees to execute these agreements in order to be enabled to purchase metallized board for resale; USG fixed the minimum prices and terms and conditions of sale of metallized board with the knowledge and notwithstanding the fact that a substantial part thereof sold by the licensees, except National, was purchased from National and USG. USG, as an inducement to the licensees to sign the perforated lath contracts in 1936-1937, agreed to fix prices on such lath at a differential above plain lath; the agreements were signed in reliance upon this inducement and USG fixed the prices at a differential above the price of plain lath, and the licensees sold perforated lath at such prices. At the time of the execution and throughout the period of operation under the perforated lath contracts, USG, Certain-teed, and American were informed, sometimes by patent counsel, and believed, that the perforated lath patent was void; and the companies entered into these license agreements principally for the purpose of enabling USG to fix the prices of perforated lath sold by it and its licensees. These agreements were not bona fide license agreements, and the exercise of price control by USG under them was not reasonably adapted to protect the pecuniary rewards of a patentee under a lawful patent monopoly.

15 The licensees who executed contracts relating to metallized board and perforated lath have been named in the statement of facts above.

In paragraphs 121 to 123 of the complaint the alleged effect of the combination is stated. It is, in substance, charged that:

By means of the combination the defendants have controlled and dominated for more than ten years the manufacture and distribution of 100 percent of the gypsum board and 80 percent of the plaster and miscellaneous gypsum products manufactured and sold in the "Eastern area," and they will continue to do so, unless restrained, until 1954 when the last of the USG patents on the foam process expires. Since 1929 all gypsum board sold by all manufacturers and manufacturing distributors in the "Eastern area" has been sold at uniform and non-competitive prices dictated by USG, with resultant elimination of price competition in the distribution of gypsum board from manufacturers to dealers. For the purpose of maintaining these uniform and non-competitive prices, the defendants have standardized the manufacture of board, have limited its distribution to themselves and certain manufacturing distributors, and have eliminated wholesale dis-8732 tributors who might fail to maintain such prices.

The uniform and non-competitive prices have been, throughout the period of the operation of the combination, substantially higher than those prevailing at the time of its formation in 1929, and have failed to reflect substantial reductions in manufacturing costs. Each of the defendants has thereby realized substantial profits. The uniformity among the defendants in the distribution of gypsum board has reflected itself in uniformity in the distribution of plaster and miscellaneous gypsum products by the defendants. They now distribute certain products on the basis of many of the terms and conditions of sale prescribed by USG for gypsum board.

It will be seen that the charges above summarized reduce themselves in essence to the following: (1) That the license contracts entered into between the defendant USG, as licensor, and the other defendants, as licensees, are themselves illegal as in restraint of trade in view of the nature of the patents upon which the contracts are based, in view of the fact that USG and the plurality of defendant licensees manufacture all of the gypsum board in the "Eastern area," and in view of the terms and conditions of the contracts, including those providing for the establishment of minimum prices on patented gypsum board to be made and sold by the defendants. (2) That the license contracts, even if valid on their face, were not entered into as bona fide license agreements, reasonably designed to secure to USG the pecuniary reward for valid patent monopolies, but were executed by the defendants merely to give color of legality to a combination to restrain trade, by control of the prices and terms and conditions of the sale of gypsum board, plaster, and miscellaneous gypsum products throughout the gypsum industry. (3) That the defendants' operations were carried beyond the proper limits of a patent monopoly and licensing thereunder by raising and fixing at arbitrary and non-competitive levels the price of gypsum board made and sold by the defendants, by improper standardization of gypsum board and its method of production, by raising, maintaining and stabilizing the level of prices of unpatented materials—plaster and miscellaneous gypsum products—by effectuating improper restriction upon distribution of gypsum board, plaster and miscellaneous gypsum products, and by fixing the prices at which manufacturing distributors resold gypsum board.

The theory of the Government's charge, with respect to connecting the various defendants with the violations of law alleged, is that as each defendant became a party to a license agreement, either immediately or through acquisition of a company already licensed, it did so with knowledge of the existence and operation of the combination and thereby became a party thereto.

The defendants' answers to the charges made in the complaint cover 165 pages including 638 paragraphs. It is not possible in reasonable space to state the answers in detail. They may be generalized as follows:

The defendants admit the execution of the 1926-1927, May 1929, and November 1929, patent license agreements, and admit the fixing of prices thereunder by USG upon gypsum board and lath manufactured and sold under such contracts, by virtue of price bulletins sent out by 8733 USG from the date of execution of the several license agreements until July 8, 1941, except for the period from August 6, 1929, the date of expiration of the Utzman closed-edge board patent, No. 1,034,746, to the date of the execution of the November 1929 contracts, and except that Texas was sent no bulletins from August 6, 1929, to February 10, 1937, the date of execution of its second license contract. The defendants admit that they sold such gypsum board at the prices stated in the bulletins.

The defendants USG, National, Certain-teed, Ebsary, and Newark admit the execution of the metallized board contracts and admit that USG determined minimum prices for board manufactured and sold under such contracts from the date of their execution until the date of the filing of the complaint. The defendants USG, Certain-teed, Ebsary, and Newark admit the execution of the perforated lath contracts and admit that USG determined minimum prices for board manufactured and sold under those contracts from the date of their execution until May, 1938. But the defendants deny that they have violated Sections 1, 2, and 3 of the Sherman Act, or any of such sections, by being parties to contracts in restraint of trade and commerce, or by combining and conspiring to restrain trade and commerce, or by attempting to monopolize and monopolizing trade and commerce in gypsum board, plaster, and miscellaneous gypsum products, or in any manner charged in the complaint, or at all. They deny the allegations of paragraph 46 of the complaint to the effect that the license agreements were entered into by concerted action to give color of legality to the combination and that they were not bona fide license agreements, reasonably designed to give to USG the pecuniary reward for valid patent monopolies; they assert that on the contrary the license agreements were bona fide in both law and fact and were reasonably designed to secure to USG the pecuniary reward to which it was entitled for its valid patent monopolies. The defendants admit the setting up by USG in 1932 of the Board Survey Company as a wholly owned corporation whose function was to bring about compliance with the licenses, but they assert that the licensees had no part in the formation, management, or operation of this company. The defendants admit that from time to time the licensor met with the licensees for the purpose of explaining the provisions of the minimum price bulletins with respect to patented gypsum board and securing adherence to the minimum prices by the licensees; but they assert that all discussion at these meetings was limited to patented gypsum board, that the prices of plaster or unpatented products were never discussed, and that there was never any agreement reached among those in attendance as to what should or should not be done as to a particular matter. The defendants deny that any side agreements were entered into. The denials of the defendants with respect to monopoly do not include a denial that within the group of defendants there is manufactured and sold substantially all of the gypsum board produced and sold in the "Eastern area." The contention of the defendants in this respect is that to the extent that they have a "monopoly" upon the production and sale of gypsum board, the same is legitimatized by the patent license agreements. The defendants deny that the license agreements and the operations thereunder were applied to unpatented plaster and miscellaneous gypsum products, to purchased board, to standardization of products to the elimination of jobbers and non-conforming wholesalers, or to the fixing of resale prices of manufacturing distributors.

The answers will be further detailed as is necessary in the discussion to follow.

The instant proceeding was filed on August 15, 1940.[16] A three-judge court was constituted on September 15, 1942. Preliminary to trial the Government propounded to the defendants 361 interrogatories,[17] to many of which 8734 objections were filed. Hearings were had and rulings made on these objections. Thereafter the defendants, by virtue of amended answers containing pleas of res judicata based upon a disposition favorable to the defendants therein of the criminal case first described in the margin, filed motions for summary judgment. These motions were argued orally and briefs were submitted, and the motions were denied on August 10, 1943 (51 F. Supp. 613). Thereafter, the defendants moved to strike, or alternatively for partial judgment dismissing, paragraph 46 (a) of the Government's complaint as amended, which paragraph presented an issue as to the validity of certain 16 There have been two previous related proceedings. These were criminal indictments, both returned on June 28, 1940. One, United States v. United States Gypsum Co., et al., No. 66008, in the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, charged USG, National, Certain-teed, Ebsary, Newark, and numerous officers and employees of these companies and of The American Gypsum Company (acquired by Celotex), with conspiring illegally to fix prices on gypsum board and to eliminate jobbers from the gypsum board industry; the other indictment, United States v. Certain-teed Products Corp., et al., No. 66007, in the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, charged USG and Certain-teed with a conspiracy illegally to fix prices on perforated gypsum lath. The criminal case first described came on for trial in the fall of 1941, and on November 19, 1941, at the conclusion of the Government's case, a verdict was directed in favor of the defendants. A nolle prosequi was filed in the second case on September 17, 1942.

17 Fifty-one interrogatories were served upon USG, Avery, and Knode; 53 upon National and Baker; 56 upon Certain-teed and Hartley; 42 upon Celotex and Dahlberg; 53 upon Ebsary and Frederick G. Ebsary; 59 upon Newark and Tomkins; 47 upon Texas.

of the patents upon which the November 1929 license agreements were based. These motions were orally argued and briefs were submitted upon them, and an order was entered on November 15, 1943 (53 F. Supp. 889), dismissing all of the Government's claim contained in paragraph 46 (a) except the first and last sentences thereof.

The instant case came on for trial on November 15, 1943, and continued, with some intermissions, until the close of presentation of evidence by the Government on April 20, 1944. The testimony of 28 witnesses was heard and 641 exhibits, mostly of a documentary character, were received in evidence. Much of the testimony and most of the exhibits (448) were received in evidence subject to connection; 86 exhibits were offered but rejected. The record comprises since the commencement of the actual trial 7585 pages, exclusive of the exhibits. The latter comprise several thousand additional pages. At the close of the Government's case the defendants moved to strike from the record all of the exhibits and testimony received subject to connection, on the ground that no prima facie showing of any conspiracy had been made, that such exhibits and testimony had not been shown to be in furtherance or in execution of any conspiracy, and that such exhibits had not otherwise been connected. The defendants moved also to dismiss the complaint with prejudice under Rule 41 (b) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure on the ground that upon the facts and the law the plaintiff had shown no right to relief. Briefs were submitted in advance of oral argument in support of and in opposition to the motions. After oral argument the motions were submitted and taken under advisement on May 29, 1944. On June 6, 1944, additional briefs were filed, and on January 17, 1945, the court requested further briefs. The last of these was filed on March 14, 1945.

We proceed to discussion of the several questions of law and fact raised by the motions.

I

The Duty of the Court on Motions to Dismiss Under Rule 41 (b) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure

At the threshold there must be discussed the question of the duty of the court on motions to dismiss under Rule 41 (b). The rule provides, so far as here pertinent:

> * * * After the plaintiff has completed the presentation of his evidence, the defendant, without waiving his right to offer evidence in the event the motion is not granted, may move for a dismissal on the ground that upon the facts and the law the plaintiff has shown no right to relief. Unless the court in its order for dismissal otherwise specifies, a dismissal under this subdivision and any dismissal not provided for in this rule, other than a dismissal for lack of jurisdiction or for improper venue, operates as an adjudication upon the merits. [Italics supplied]

The defendants assert that under this rule it is the duty of the court to weigh the evidence, to draw inferences therefrom, and, if it finds the evidence insufficient to make out a case for the plaintiff, to render a decision for the defendant on the merits and make findings of fact and conclusions of law. To the contrary, the Government contends that "The sole question presented to the trial judge by such a motion is one of law, namely, whether the plaintiff's evidence and all the inferences fairly to be drawn from it, considered in the most favorable light, make out a prima facie case for relief. * * *"[18] This contention is, in effect, that the court should conduct itself under a motion to dismiss under Rule 41 (b) as would a court in a jury trial on a defendant's motion for a directed verdict at the close of the plaintiff's case. We think that this is not correct, but that the duty of the court is that asserted by the defendant as above stated.

The so-called prima facie case rule governing the action of judges in jury trials rests upon the established division of functions, in such proceedings, between jury and judge, whereby the jury tries the facts and the judge determines the law. The judge, before verdict, has no function as to the facts except in the limited sense of determining whether there is "a case for the jury." If there is substantial proof of the elements of the plaintiff's charge, the case must go to the jury, even if the judge, if he were the trier of the facts, would himself decide the case against the plaintiff. Putting it otherwise, a judge in a jury trial does not withdraw a case from the jury on a defendant's motion at the end of the plaintiff's case unless the judge can fairly say that no reasonable juryman could find for the plaintiff. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Chamberlain, 288 U.S. 333 (1933); Gunning v. Cooley, 281 U.S. 90 (1930); Baltimore & Ohio R. Co. v. Groeger, 266 U. S. 521 (1925); Slocum v. New York Life Ins. Co., 228 U.S. 364 (1913); 8736 Jackson v. Capital Transit Co., 69 App. D.C. 147, 99 F. (2d) 380 (1938), cert. denied, 306 U.S. 630 (1939); Hopkins v. Baltimore & Ohio R. Co., 65 App. D.C. 167, 81 F. (2d) 894 (1936).

---

18 The Government's contention is phrased in the language of Schad v. Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp., 136 F. (2d) 991, 993 (C. C. A. 3d, 1943). This case is discussed below.

But in an action tried without a jury the judge is the trier of both the facts and the law. This fundamental distinction between jury and non-jury trials should not be ignored; and if the reason for the jury trial practice does not exist in non-jury trials, where the judge is the trier of the facts, the jury trial practice ought not to be applied but should give way in favor of a practice consistent with the actual function of the judge in non-jury cases and consistent with the spirit of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. Rule 1 expressly provides that the rules "shall be construed to secure the just, speedy, and inexpensive determination of every action." Therefore, a court should dispose of a case at the first opportunity which is appropriate under the rules and in accord with the rights of the parties. When a court sitting without a jury has heard all of the plaintiff's evidence, it is appropriate that the court shall then determine whether or not the plaintiff has convincingly shown a right to relief. It is not reasonable to require a judge, on motion to dismiss under Rule 41 (b), to determine merely whether there is a prima facie case, such as in a jury trial should go to the jury, when there is no jury—to determine merely whether there is a prima facie case sufficient for the consideration of a trier of the facts when he is himself the trier of the facts. To apply the jury trial practice in non-jury proceedings would be to erect a requirement compelling a defendant to put on his case and the court to spend the time and incur the public expense of hearing it if the plaintiff had, according to jury trial concepts, made "a case for the jury," even though the judge had concluded that on the whole of the plaintiff's evidence the plaintiff ought not to prevail. A plaintiff who has had full opportunity to put on his own case and has failed to convince the judge, as trier of the facts, of a right to relief, has no legal right under the due process clause of the Constitution to hear the defendant's case, or to compel the court to hear it, merely because the plaintiff's case is a prima facie one in the jury trial sense of the term. Porter v. Wilson, 239 U.S. 170 (1915). In Lambuth v. Stetson & Post Mill Co., 14 Wash. 187, 44 Pac. 148 (1896), a lawsuit in which a jury had been waived, the defendant moved for a nonsuit and dismissal after the plaintiff had put in his evidence and rested. The motion was granted because in the view of the trial judge a fair preponderance of the proof established facts which prevented recovery by the plaintiff. On appeal the plaintiff claimed that the trial judge had no right to weigh the evidence. The Supreme Court of Washington rejected this contention and, in doing so, stated:

8737 But, where the entire trial is before the court which must finally pass upon the law and facts of the case, there is no good reason why it should not be allowed to determine the facts necessary to a proper application of the law at any time during the trial. It would be worse than useless for the court, after its attention had been called to the insufficiency of the evidence offered by the plaintiff to establish the facts necessary to enable him to recover, and after being satisfied that such was the nature of the evidence introduced by the plaintiff, to require the defendant to put in evidence to disprove that which had been already sufficiently disproved.

When the trial is before a jury, the court cannot weigh the testimony upon a motion for a non-suit, for the reason that it cannot weigh it at any time; but when the trial is without a jury, the court must eventually weigh the testimony for the purpose of determining where the preponderance is, and there is no reason why it should not so weigh it at the earliest possible time when the rights of the plaintiff will not be cut off by its so doing; and when the plaintiff has introduced all of his proof and rested, no right of his will be cut off if the court then determines what has been proven. It cannot be presumed that plaintiff's case will be strengthened by the evidence put in by the defendant. If, when plaintiff had submitted his evidence, the defendant had rested without putting in any proof, it is clear that the court would have had to determine the question of fact made by the pleadings upon a preponderance of the testimony. Hence, under the rule contended for by the appellant, the court might be put in the anomalous position of denying the motion for a non-suit, and immediately thereafter, upon the refusal of the defendant to put in any proof, deciding the case in his favor.

No good purpose could be subserved by refusing to a trial court the right to determine the law in the light of the evidence upon a motion for a non-suit, the same as upon final submission.

It was the right of the court, upon the motion for non-suit, to decide as to the preponderance of the evidence, and it having decided that such preponderance was with the defendant, and there having been testimony to support such findings, the judgment rendered thereon must be affirmed. [14 Wash. at 190-1, 44 Pac. at 149]

The Government attacks this reasoning upon the ground that it has no application to a conspiracy case such as the instant case where, according to the Government:

> * * * most of the plaintiff's evidence * * * has to come from hostile or quasi hostile witnesses. In such cases the plaintiff makes no effort to put in more than a prima facie case in the first instance, recognizing that when the defendants put on their witnesses many additional facts may be brought out * * *

No proper distinction can be drawn under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure between a plaintiff's burden in a conspiracy case and in other cases. The argument of the Government assumes that a plaintiff has some vested or due process interest in hearing the defendant's witnesses and seeing the defendant's documentary evidence, even though the plaintiff has not been able to establish his own case. This assumption has been rejected, as above pointed out, by the Supreme Court in Porter v. Wilson, supra. The argument is especially lacking in cogency in view of Rules 43 (b) and 26 to 37, inclusive, of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. These permit a party to call an adverse party and interrogate him by leading questions and contradict and impeach him, and also permit a party to call an officer, director, or managing agent of a public or private corporation, or of a partnership or association which is an adverse party, and cross examine and contradict and impeach him in all respects as if he had been called by the adverse party. These rules also permit depositions pending action, interrogatories to parties, discovery and production of documents and things for inspection, copying, or photographing, and requests for admission of facts and of genuineness of documents.

These rules were availed of in the instant case. 8738 Most of the Government's evidence came either from the lips of officers or employees of the defendants, or from documents obtained from the files of the defendants.

The Notes to the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure state, concerning Rule 41 (b):

> • • • This provides for the equivalent of a nonsuit on motion by the defendant after the completion of the presentation of evidence by the plaintiff. Also, for actions tried without a jury, it provides the equivalent of the directed verdict practice for jury actions which is regulated by Rule 50.

The Government, in arguing for the "prima facie case" construction of the rule, emphasizes the statement that a motion to dismiss under Rule 41 (b) is "the equivalent of the directed verdict practice for jury actions which is regulated by Rule 50." But this statement carries the "equivalence" of motions under the two rules unduly far, indeed begs the question which is under discussion. Rule 50 (a) provides:

> • • • A party who moves for a directed verdict at the close of the evidence offered by an opponent may offer evidence in the event that the motion is not granted, without having reserved the right so to do and to the same extent as if the motion had not been made • • •

Motions under Rule 41 (b) and (50) (a) are similar in that a motion under either rule leaves the defendant with a right to present his own case if the decision on his motion goes against him; and the motions under the two rules are similar in that both provide a defendant with a method of mid-trial attack upon the plaintiff's case, and a means of determining whether or not the defendant must present his evidence. But beyond these likenesses, motions under Rule 41 (b) and Rule 50 (a) should be assimilated only so far as is consonant with reason and with the spirit of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. To say that Rule 41 (b), applying to non-jury cases, provides the equivalent in all respects of motions for a directed verdict in jury trials under Rule 50 (a) is to ignore the difference between the functions of the judge in jury cases where the judge is not the trier of the facts and in non-jury cases where he is the trier of the facts.

The Government argues further that Rule 41 (b) should be interpreted to require only a jury trial method of viewing the evidence at the end of the plaintiff's case for the reason that as a matter of trial convenience this will save time; otherwise, urges the Government, a judge must "twice weigh the evidence," if (it is assumed the Government means) the defendants' motion to dismiss is denied. But this is an unavoidable incident of permitting a mid-trial motion. It is true that under the construction here put upon Rule 41 (b) the judge will have to evaluate the plaintiff's evidence, and if he concludes that it substantially supports the plaintiff's cause of action and therefore denies the motion and hears the defendant's case, the judge will then be required again to consider the plaintiff's evidence, in comparison with that of the 8739 defendant. But some such burden as this is unavoidable, even under the construction of Rule 41 (b) urged by the Government. For if at the close of the plaintiff's evidence the court on a defendant's motion to dismiss, determining merely whether there is such evidence as would warrant sending the case to a jury and finding that there is, denies the motion and puts the defendant to his proof, then at the close of the defendant's case the judge will have to weigh the plaintiff's evidence against that of the defendant; while the judge's first consideration of the plaintiff's evidence will not be technically a weighing of it, but more accurately speaking a survey, nevertheless the judge will have given consideration to the plaintiff's evidence twice.

There is no authority in this jurisdiction on the question under discussion. Elsewhere there is a division. Supporting the position taken here are the following: Gary Theatre Co. v. Columbia Pictures Corp., 120 F. (2d) 891 (C. C. A. 7th, 1941); Bach v. Friden Calculating Machine Co., 148 F. (2d) 407 (C. C. A. 6th, 1945); Young v. United States, 111 F. (2d) 823 (C. C. A. 9th, 1940); cf. United States v. Blauner Construction Co., 37 F. Supp. 968 (D. Mass. 1941).

The cases relied upon by the Government to support its contention concerning Rule 41 (b) are: Federal Deposit Ins. Corp. v. Mason, 115 F. (2d) 548 (C. C. A. 3d, 1940); Schad v. Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp., 136 F. (2d) 991 (C. C. A. 3d, 1943); Shaw v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 36 F. Supp. 651 (W. D. La. 1941), 39 F. Supp. 652 (W. D. La.

1941). See also Reich v. Vegex, 137 F. (2d) 647 (C. C. A. 3d, 1943). Of these cases it is necessary to discuss only Federal Deposit Ins. Corp. v. Mason and Schad v. Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp. The second of these is based in part upon the first, and the others mentioned proceed upon the same theory as do these two cases. The decision in Federal Deposit Ins. Corp. v. Mason was based solely upon the statement in the Notes to the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure that for actions tried without a jury Rule 41 (b) provides "the equivalent of the directed verdict practice for jury actions which is regulated by Rule 50." Schad v. Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp. was based in part upon the position just expressed, but in addition upon the view that if Rule 52 (a) concerning findings of fact applies to rulings on motions to dismiss under Rule 41 (b), it does not contemplate not making findings of fact in the event that a motion is denied. The court concluded from this that if a judge in a non-jury proceeding is to weigh the evidence on a motion to dismiss at the close of the plaintiff's case, he must, under Rule 52 (a), in the event of the denial of the motion, make findings of fact in the plaintiff's favor, and this before hearing the defendant's evidence, with the consequence, the court thought, of possible denial of due process to the defendant. In both of these cases the court fails to take account of the difference between a court's function in jury proceedings and in non-jury proceed-
8740 ings. Schad v. Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp. is, moreover, wrong in its view of the requirement of Rule 52 (a) concerning findings of fact. That rule provides, so far as here pertinent:

> • • • In all actions tried upon the facts without a jury, the court shall find the facts specially and state separately its conclusions of law thereon and direct the entry of the appropriate judgment • • •

When this is read in connection with Rule 41 (b), it is clear that findings of fact are not to be made upon denial of a motion to dismiss. Under Rule 41 (b) it is dismissal, not refusal to dismiss, that operates "as an adjudication upon the merits" and entitles a party to "entry of the appropriate judgment." If a motion to dismiss is denied, the mid-trial attack allowed the defendant has failed and the case is not complete. No final adjudication on the merits can be made, therefore, until the defendant's case has been heard and evaluated by the judge in comparison with the case of the plaintiff. It would, therefore, be useless to make findings of fact upon denial of a motion to dismiss. It may be noted, however, that even if Rule 52 (a), read in connection with Rule 41 (b), be construed as requiring findings of fact upon the denial of a motion to dismiss, there could hardly be denial of due process to the defendant in the making of such findings. Findings of fact under such circumstances would be merely interlocutory. It is not to be assumed that a trial judge is incapable, after hearing a plaintiff's case and determining from it alone that the plaintiff would be entitled to prevail, of holding his mind open to hear the defendant's evidence before reaching a final determination as to the rights of the two parties. We conclude that under Rule 41 (b) it is the duty of the court to weigh the evidence, to draw inferences therefrom and, if it finds the evidence insufficient to make out a case for the plaintiff, to render a decision for the defendant on the merits.

Once this view is taken it is clear that it becomes the duty of the court, on granting a motion to dismiss under Rule 41 (b), to make findings of fact. Rule 52 (a) requires findings of fact and conclusions of law "In all actions tried upon the facts without a jury." Obviously, if the defendant were to rest his case at the time he made his motion to dismiss, the court on granting the motion would be under a duty to make findings. Under Rule 50 (a) the defendant is not required to rest; he has a right to offer evidence in the event his motion to dismiss is denied. But the existence of this right is not persuasive that the court is not to make findings of fact if, under the view here taken of Rule 41 (b), the defendant, without resting, moves to dismiss and the court grants the motion. A case has been "tried upon the facts" when the plaintiff's evidence, weighed by the judge, has been found insufficient. A dismissal under Rule 41 (b) operates "as an adjudication upon the merits." Attention is called to the fact that in three of the cases (to wit, 8741 Gary Theatre Co. v. Columbia Pictures Corp., United States v. Blauner Construction Co., and Young v. United States) cited above as supporting the position here taken on the duty of the court on a motion to dismiss under Rule 41 (b), findings of fact were made under Rule 52 (a) on the granting of a motion to dismiss; and in the fourth case cited (Bach v. Friden Calculating Machine Co.), where the trial court failed to make findings of fact, the Circuit Court of Appeals required them to be made. The argument of the Government against making findings of fact hangs from its view, which we here reject, that on a motion to dismiss under Rule 41 (b) the court does not weigh the evidence but merely follows the jury trial practice of determining whether or not a prima facie case has been established. There would, of course, be little point in making findings of fact on the decision of the mere "question of law" whether a plaintiff, if his evidence and legitimate inferences to be drawn therefrom are looked at in the most favorable light, has made a case sufficient to present to a jury if the proceeding were a jury proceeding.

If the court decides on a motion to dismiss under Rule 41 (b) that upon the facts and the law the plaintiff has shown no right to relief, conclusions of law, as well as findings of fact, must be made under Rule 52 (a), and the court must direct the entry of the appropriate judgment, i.e., a judgment of dismissal on the merits.

We proceed to consider and weigh the evidence, pausing first, however, to determine a paramount question of law.

II

The Legality of the License Agreements

Are the patent license contracts described in the statement of facts at the outset of this opinion lawful: This question is to be answered in the light of the nature of the principal patents upon which the agreements were founded (the Utzman, Roos and Haggerty patents), in the light of the fact that the defendants make and sell substantially all of the gypsum board in the "Eastern area," and in the light of the terms and conditions of the license agreements, including especially the provisions for establishment and protection by USG of minimum prices on patented gypsum board manufactured and sold by the licensees. This question must be answered in the affirmative if no material distinction exists between the instant case and United States v. General Electric Company, 272 U. S. 476 (1926).

For purposes of comparison reference to the General Electric case must be made at some length. The case presented two questions. The first involved the legality under the Sherman Act of a system of distribution adopted by the General Electric Company (hereinafter referred to as General Electric) and used by the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company and the Westinghouse Lamp Company (both hereinafter referred to as Westinghouse, the Lamp Company being a wholly owned subsidiary and selling agent of the Electric and Manufacturing Com-8742 pany), whereby electric lamps were distributed direct to the consumer through a complex del credere agency arrangement. It was charged that this system of distribution was merely a device to enable General Electric to fix the resale price of lamps in the hands of purchasers—which it was asserted the "agents" were in fact. This first question did not turn on the rights of a patent owner, but some consideration of it is necessary to an understanding of the second question. The latter involved the validity under the Sherman Act of a license granted March 1, 1912, by General Electric to Westinghouse to make, use and sell lamps under patents owned by General Electric. It was charged that the license provided that Westinghouse would, with regard to lamps manufactured by it under the license, follow the prices and maintain the terms and conditions of sale observed by General Electric in the distribution of lamps which it made.

Prior to 1912 in a suit between the United States and the three defendants in the General Electric case and thirty-two other corporations, a consent decree was entered dissolving, as illegal, a combination charged with restraint of interstate commerce in electric lamps, and enjoining fixing of resale prices for purchasers, but permitting the owner of patents to fix the prices as which a licensee should sell lamps. In 1912, after the consent decree, a new plan was evolved by General Electric whereby through a comprehensive system lamps were distributed directly to the consumer. Recognizing that the plan was devised to enable General Electric "to deal directly with consumers and purchasers, and * * * to avoid selling the lamps owned by the [General Electric] company to jobbers or dealers, and prevent sale by these middle men to consumers at different and competing prices," the Court said that the question (in this first aspect of the case) is "whether, in view of the arrangements made by the company with those who ordinarily and usually would be merchants buying from the manufacturer and selling to the public,—such persons are to be treated as agents, or as owners of the lamps consigned to them under such contracts." (272 U. S. at 483-4) The Court reviewed the provisions of the contracts for distribution and held they were bona fide agency agreements and that they involved no sale to the agents and hence no resale price fixing. That the decision in this aspect of the case did not turn upon the fact that a patented article was involved was made clear by the statement of the Court that "there is nothing as a matter of principle, or in the authorities, which requires us to hold that genuine contracts of agency like those before us, however comprehensive as a mass or whole in their effect, are violations of the Anti-Trust Act. The owner of an article, patented or otherwise, is not violating the common law, or the Anti-Trust law, by seeking to dispose of his article directly to the consumer and fixing the price by which his agents transfer the title from him directly to such consumer." (272 U. S. at 488)

8743 The second question in the case arose out of the following facts. General Electric was the owner of three patents, the Just & Hanaman "basic" patent of 1912 for the use of tungsten filaments in the manufacture of electric lamps, the Coolidge patent of 1913 covering a process of manufacturing tungsten filaments by which their tensile strength and endurance were increased, and the Langmuir patent of 1916 for the use of gas in electric lamp bulbs to increase the intensity of the light. These three patents, so the Court stated, "cover completely the making of the modern electric lights with the tungsten filaments, and secure to the [General] Electric Company the monopoly of their making, using and vending." (272 U. S. at 481) The nature of these patents and their relation to the art are detailed later in this topic. The license, founded upon the foregoing patents (and others), granted by General Electric to Westinghouse on March 1, 1912, gave Westinghouse, in consideration of royalties to be paid, the right to manufacture, use and sell electric lamps having tungsten filaments, and contained certain restrictive provisions as to the prices, terms and conditions under which Westinghouse might sell the product made under the license. The detailed provisions of the license will also be discussed below. Additional licenses of non price fixing character but containing quantity restrictions were granted to persons other than Westinghouse; these licenses will be adverted to below. The Government contended that the license to Westinghouse not only obligated that company to follow the prices, terms and conditions of sale to be fixed from time to time by General Electric and observed by it, but also required Westinghouse to adopt the General Electric agency distribution plan. Westinghouse had, as a matter of fact, adopted the agency plan of distribution and had followed the same restrictions in the case of its own agents as those prescribed by General Electric, but it contended that it was not required to do so. The Court considered this point of dispute immaterial, saying: "It does not appear that this provision was express in the license, because no such plan was set out therein; but even if the construction urged by the Government is correct, we think the result must be the same." (272 U. S. at 489)

By unanimous decision the Court sustained the validity of the General Electric-Westinghouse license. It held that the restrictive provisions were not violative of the Sherman Act. In reaching this conclusion, the Court analyzed the rights of the owner of a patent, recognized that a patentee's right to acquire a profit by the price at which the product is sold is a substantive right, and held that the terms and conditions contained in the license were such as were reasonably adapted to secure to the owner of the patent the pecuniary reward to which he is entitled. The Court necessarily passed upon the validity of the restrictions in 8744 the license because they were a part of the license contract which was before the Court.[19] Further reference to the license agreement is made later. In discussing the rights of a patent owner, the Court said:

> The owner of a patent may assign it to another and convey, (1) the exclusive right to make, use and vend the invention throughout the United States, or, (2) an undivided part or share of that exclusive right, or (3) the exclusive right under the patent within and through a specific part of the United States. But any assignment or transfer short of one of these is a license, giving the licensee no title in the patent and no right to sue at law in his own name for an infringement. Waterman v. Mackenzie, 138 U. S. 252, 255; Gayler v. Wilder, 10 How. 477, 494, 495; Moore v. Marsh, 7 Wall. 515, and Crown Company v. Nye Tool Works, 261 U. S. 24, 30. Conveying less than title to the patent, or part of it, the patentee may grant a license to make, use and vend articles under the specifications of his patent for any royalty or upon any condition the performance of which is reasonably within the reward which the patentee by the grant of the patent is entitled to secure. It is well settled, as already said, that where a patentee makes the patented article and sells it, he can exercise no future control over what the purchaser may wish to do with the article after his purchase. It has passed beyond the scope of the patentee's rights. Adams v. Burke, 17 Wall. 453; Bloomer v. McQuewan, 14

19 The license agreement was Exhibit A to a stipulation of facts upon which the case was submitted.

How. 539; Mitchell v. Hawley, 16 Wall. 544; Hobbie v. Jennison, 149 U. S. 355; Keeler v. Standard Folding Bed Co., 157 U. S. 659. But the question is a different one which arises when we consider what a patentee who grants a license to one to make and vend the patented article may do in limiting the licensee in the exercise of the right to sell. The patentee may make and grant a license to another to make and use the patented articles, but withhold his right to sell them. The licensee in such a case acquires an interest in the articles made. He owns the material of them and may use them. But if he sells them, he infringes the right of the patentee, and may be held for damages and enjoined. If the patentee goes further, and licenses the selling of the articles, may he limit the selling by limiting the method of sale and the price? We think he may do so, provided the conditions of sale are normally and reasonably adapted to secure pecuniary reward for the patentee's monopoly. One of the valuable elements of the exclusive right of a patentee is to acquire profit by the price at which the article is sold. The higher the price, the greater the profit, unless it is prohibitory. When the patentee licenses another to make and vend, and retains the right to continue to make and vend on his own account, the price at which his licensee will sell will necessarily affect the price at which he can sell his own patented goods. It would seem entirely reasonable that he should say to the licensee, "Yes, you may make and sell articles under my patent, but not so as to destroy the profit that I wish to obtain by making them and selling them myself." He does not thereby sell outright to the licensee the articles the latter may make and sell, or vest absolute ownership in them. He restricts the property and interest the licensee has in the goods he makes and proposes to sell.

This question was considered by this Court in the case of Bement v. National Harrow Company, 186 U. S. 70. A combination of manufacturers owning a patent to make float spring tool harrows, licensed others to make and sell the products under the patent, on condition that they would not during the continuance of the license sell the products at a less price, or on more favorable terms of payment and delivery to purchasers, than were set forth in a schedule made part of the license. That was held to be a valid use of the patent rights of the owners of the patent. It was objected that this made for a monopoly. The Court, speaking by Mr. Justice Peckham, said (p. 91):

"The very object of these laws is monopoly, and the rule is, with few exceptions, that any conditions which are not in their very nature illegal with regard to this kind of property, imposed by the patentee and agreed to by the licensee for the right to manufacture or use or sell the article, will be upheld by the courts. The fact that the conditions in the contracts keep up the monopoly or fix prices does not render them illegal."

Speaking of the contract, he said (p. 93);

"The provision in regard to the price at which the licensee would sell the article manufactured under the license was also an appropriate and reasonable condition. It tended to keep up the price of the implements manufactured and sold, but that was only recognizing the nature of the property dealt in, and providing for its value so far as possible. This the parties were legally entitled to do. The owner of a patented article can, of course, charge such price as he may choose, and the owner of a patent may assign it or sell the right to manufacture and sell the article patented upon the condition that the assignee shall charge a certain amount for such article."

8745 The question which the Court had before it in that case came to it on a writ of error to the Court of Appeals of New York, and raised the federal issue whether a contract of license of this kind, having a wide operation in the sales of the harrows, was invalid because a violation of the Anti-Trust law. This Court held that it was not. [Italics supplied] [272 U. S. at 489-491]

The Court in the General Electric case held that Bement v. National Harrow Company, 186 U. S. 70 (1902), had not been overruled by Motion Picture Patents Co. v. Universal Film Co., 243 U. S. 502 (1917), in which it had held that the owner of a patented machine could not grant a license for its use conditioned upon the use in it of certain unpatented products.

The Court distinguished certain cases in which it had ruled that restrictions as to price of patented articles were invalid (Boston Store v. American Graphophone Co., 246 U. S. 8 (1918); Straus v. Victor Talking Machine Co., 243 U. S. 490 (1917); Bauer v. O'Donnell, 229 U. S. 1 (1913); Standard Sanitary Mfg. Co. v. United States, 226 U. S. 20 (1912); Bobbs-Merrill Co. v. Straus, 210 U. S. 339 (1908)), holding that those cases were but "instances of the application of the principle of Adams v. Burke, 17 Wall. 453, 456 . . . that a patentee may not attach to the article made by him, or with his consent, a condition running with the article in the hands of purchasers, limiting the price at which one who becomes its owner for full consideration shall part with it." (272 U. S. at 493-4) The Court said that these cases "do not consider or condemn a restriction put by a patentee upon his licensee as to the prices at which the latter shall sell articles which he makes and only can make legally under the license." (272 U. S. at 494)

The right of a patent owner to control the terms and conditions including the minimum price under which a licensee may make and sell the patented product as established in the Bement and General Electric cases has not been denied or qualified in later cases. On the contrary, the later cases reaffirm that right. In Carbice Corp. v. American Patents Development Corp., 283 U. S. 27 (1931), holding that a patent licensor cannot exact as a condition of a license that unpatented materials used in connection with the invention (a manufacture) shall be purchased from the licensor, the Supreme Court nevertheless recognized that a patent owner "can grant licenses upon terms consistent with the limited scope of the patent monopoly, United States v. General Electric Co., 272 U. S. 476, 489." (283 U. S. at 31) In General Talking Pictures Co. v. Western Electric Co., 304 U. S. 175 (1938), on rehearing, 305 U. S. 124 (1938), further rehearing denied, 305 U. S. 675 (1939), the Court upheld a license to manufacture amplifiers under the licensee's patent where the license was "to manufacture • • •, and to sell only for radio amateur reception, radio experimental reception and radio broadcast reception" (305 U. S. at 126), and held that sales by such a licensee for 8746 use in the commercial field constituted an infringement, i.e., a violation of the license. In holding that this restriction was valid, the Court said: "That a restrictive license is legal seems clear. Mitchell v. Hawley, 16 Wall. 544. As was said in United States v. General Electric Co., 272 U. S. 476, 489, the patentee may grant a license 'upon any condition the performance of which is reasonably within the reward which the patentee by the grant of the patent is entitled to secure.' The restriction here imposed is of that character." (305 U. S. at 127) This was upon rehearing. In the opinion written when the case was first heard, the Court said: "Unquestionably, the owner of a patent may grant licenses to manufacture, use or sell upon conditions not inconsistent with the scope of the monopoly." (304 U. S. at 181) In Interstate Circuit v. United States, 306

U. S. 208 (1939), the Court held that certain restrictions in motion picture distributors' licenses to exhibitors exceeded the scope of a copyright monopoly, but, expressly referring to the Bement and General Electric cases, recognized that "a patentee has power to control the price at which his licensee may sell the patented article * * * ." (306 U. S. at 228) In Ethyl Gasoline Corp. v. United States, 309 U. S. 436 (1940), wherein control of jobbers' resale prices was held illegal, a provision in patent licenses whereby licensee refining companies were required to sell the patented product—Ethyl gasoline—"at a certain fixed price differential above the average net sales price of the licensees' best non-premium grade of commercial gasoline" (309 U. S. at 448), was not questioned; and the General Electric case was referred to and its principle recognized. In United States v. Masonite Corp., 316 U. S. 265 (1942), rehearing denied, 316 U. S. 713 (1942), the Court disapproved an "agency" arrangement set up in the "hardboard" industry, but said that the case did not present "any question as to the validity of a license to manufacture and sell, since none of the 'agents' exercised its option to acquire such a license from Masonite. Hence we need not reach the problems presented by Bement v. National Harrow Co., 186 U. S. 70, and that part of the General Electric case which dealt with the license to Westinghouse Company." (316 U. S. at 277) In United States v. Univis Lens Co., 316 U. S. 241 (1942), the Court held that fixing the price of a patented article beyond the first sale constituted an improper extension of the scope of the patent monopoly, but said that in this view of the case there was no occasion for reconsideration of the General Electric case, and the Court in no way rejected the proposition announced by the lower court in United States v. Univis Lens Co., 41 F. Supp. 258 (S. D. N. Y. 1941): "Nor does the owner of a patent violate the Sherman Anti-Trust Law by fixing prices in license agreements under which articles may be manufactured and sold by the licensees. United States v. General Electric Co., 272 U. S. 476 * * * ; E. Bement & Sons v. National Harrow Co., 8747 supra * * * ." (41 F. Supp. at 264) In Mercoid Corp. v. Mid-Continent Investment Co., 320 U. S. 661 (1944), rehearing denied, 321 U. S. 802 (1944), and Mercoid Corp. v. Minneapolis-Honeywell Regulator Co., 320 U. S. 680 (1944), rehearing denied, 321 U. S. 802 (1944), cases dealing with combination patents covering installed heating systems, which neither the patent owner nor the licensees manufactured or installed, the Court held that the patent monopoly could not be extended to include the imposition of otherwise illegal restrictions on the sale of unpatented stoker switches used in the heating system, but the Court in no way discountenanced the Bement and General Electric cases. The Mercoid cases are referred to again below.

The General Electric case has been stated above in broad outline, and from the facts and questions presented in the case and the decision thereon and the language quoted from the opinion, it is seen that the primary propositions for which the case stands are that a patentee may divide his monopoly by licensing the right to make, use and vend the patented product, and that he may fix the terms and conditions, including the price, under which the patented product shall be sold, subject only to the limitation that such terms and conditions do not yield to the patentee more than the normal and reasonable reward of a patent monopoly. Additional propositions for which the case stands, corollary to these primary propositions, will be stated later.

The problem presented in such cases as the General Electric case and the instant case is that of determining whether or not the monopoly accorded to an inventor under the patent laws has been extended beyond its proper operation under those laws and into the field denounced by the Sherman Act. The patent laws and the Sherman Act exist side by side, each being entitled to full recognition and application by the courts.[20] The nature of a patent monopoly
8748 and of the rights thereunder and the relationship of a patent monopoly to the Sherman Act were discussed

---

20 In a Senate debate preceding the enactment of the Sherman Act, Senator Sherman, its proponent, stated:

"* * * It is the unlawful combination, tested by the rules of common law and human experience, that is aimed at by this bill, and not the lawful and useful combination. Unlawful combinations made by individuals are declared by the several states to be against public policy and void, and in proper cases they may be punished as criminals. If their business is lawful they can combine in any way and enjoy the advantage of their united skill and capital, provided they do not combine to prevent competition. A limited monopoly secured by a patent right is an admitted exception, for this is the only way by which an inventor can be paid for his invention." (21 Cong. Rec. 2457 (1890))

The use of the term "limited monopoly" by Senator Sherman makes it pertinent to comment that there is a distinction between a patent monopoly and other monopolies granted by the Government. A patent to land, either upon purchase from the Government or by virtue of satisfaction of the homestead or mining laws, grants to the patentee a right to land upon which, prior to the issuance of the patent, the applicant had no claim; on the contrary, it was wholly owned by the Government in trust for the people; such a patent moreover grants the land in perpetuity. A patent monopoly is not only limited in time to seventeen years but also it grants nothing that either the Government or anyone else has theretofore owned or possessed. It is the applicant's invention or discovery—as a result of his own energy and of his ingenuity beyond in an illuminating manner in United States v. Motion Picture Patents Co., 225 Fed. 800 (E. D. Pa. 1915), appeal dismissed per stipulation of counsel, 247 U. S. 524 (1918), hereinafter referred to as the Motion Picture Patents case. That case was not cited in the General Electric case, but it has been cited, and with approval, more recently by the Supreme Court. Standard Oil Co. v. United States, 283 U. S. 163, 174 (1931); cf. Hartford-Empire Co. v. United States, 323 U. S. 386, 415 (1945), rehearing denied, 324 U. S. 888 (1945). In the Motion Picture Patents case motion picture producers and importers, some of whom had patents upon articles such as positive films, cameras and projecting machines, formed a combination. They created a board to censor films, established exchanges and refused to sell films to operators of theaters who did not belong to the exchanges and who did not pay royalties on their machines to the combination, regardless of when or from whom the machines were purchased. It was attempted to justify the restrictions as a protection of the patent rights of the parties to the combination. The court held that the combination was invalid as a violation of the Sherman Act for the reason that the regulations imposed did not bear a normal relation to the protection of patent rights, but were on the contrary intended to accomplish the imposition upon the trade of undue and unreasonable restraints with the direct result of monopolizing trade in all the accessories of the motion picture art, and the further end, largely achieved, of domthe ordinary skill of the art—of "any new and useful art, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof" (Rev. Stat. §4886 (1875), as amended, 35 U. S. C. §31 (1940)) which is the basis for the issuance of a patent. An inventor is under no legal obligation to disclose or to use the fruit of his thought and labor. The patent laws, upon the theory that the public will benefit by disclosure and use of inventions, offer him, in consideration of disclosure, an exclusive right to make, use and vend for a period of seventeen years. It is true, as stated by Mr. Justice Story in Pennock & Sellers v. Dialogue, 2 Pet. 1 (U. S. 1829), that the promotion of the progress of science and the useful arts is the main objective of the patent laws and that the reward of inventors is secondary and merely a means to that end. It is true, also, as said by Mr. Justice Daniel in Kendall v. Winsor, 21 How. 322, 329 (U. S. 1858), that "Whilst the remuneration of genius and useful ingenuity is a duty incumbent upon the public, the rights and welfare of the community must be fairly dealt with and effectually guarded. Considerations of individual emolument can never be permitted to operate to the injury of these." And it is true, as said in United States v. Masonite Corp., supra, that this must be the point of departure for decision on the facts of antitrust cases involving patents "lest the limited patent privilege be enlarged by private agreements so as to by-pass the Sherman Act." (316 U. S. at 278.) But these statements do not narrow the ruling in the General Electric case. They but put in other words the limitation expressed in that case—that the terms and conditions of a patent license are not to yield to the patentee more than the normal and reasonable reward of a patent monopoly.

inating the motion picture business itself. District Judge Dickinson, who wrote the opinion, pointed out that the right to make, use and vend the subject matter of a patent is the natural right of an inventor and that what the patent law does is to withhold for a limited period of time 8749 from all others than the patentee or his assigns, the right to make, use or vend the patented article; he pointed out also that the monopoly recognized by the patent law is not the monopoly condemned by the Sherman Act. He said: "To hold otherwise would clearly be * * * a logical absurdity, because there can be no such thing as restraint in a trade which has no existence, and a monopoly created by law, in pursuance of a policy of the law, cannot be said to result from such restraint. To transfer a phrase from the opinion of Judge Cochran, in Patterson v. United States [222 Fed. 599, 620 (C. C. A. 6th, 1915), cert. denied, 238 U. S. 635 (1915)], which was directed to something else, but which is applicable here: 'There can be no monopolizing in the legal and accurate sense of the word where there can be no common occupation.'" (Italics supplied) (225 Fed. at 804-5) Judge Dickinson said also:

> We have, therefore, to determine the limits of a right and a wrong which seem to overlap each other. It is the right of a patentee, through having the exclusive sale of the patented article, to control, and in that sense, to monopolize, the trade in it. It is wrong by any illegal restraint of trade to monopolize it, or any part of it. On the one hand, it cannot have been intended to make it unlawful to acquire that the right to which the law has conferred. On the other hand (as already observed), it cannot be that the grant of a patent right confers a license to do that which the law condemns.
> The solution of the problem is to be sought by finding the special field of operation of each of these laws. There is a field of trade, the sole occupancy of which may be in a patentee. Here he is supreme, and the keeper of the gate of entrance. There is another field which is in the common occupancy of all. Where the law has given the whole field to a patentee, with the express right of exclusion of others, and the use of the power of the law to enforce the exclusion, it is unthinkable that such exclusion is an illegal restraint of trade. Where the field, however, is open to all, competition for trade is likened to a race in which all may enter, but in which there must be no unfair jostling or hampering of others. Each one is free to exert all his powers, and distance, if he can, all competitors, and win all the prizes; but he must run fairly and accord to others a like freedom. If he possesses a patented device which will aid him in the race, he may use it, as he may use any other form of property; but he must put it only to its proper use, and if he uses it as a weapon to disable a rival contestant, or to drive him from the field, he cannot justify such use, because of his patent right, except to the extent of protecting his exclusive right. We have, therefore, the principle, which is recognized in all the cases, that if the subject-matter of a contract, which otherwise would be illegal because of restraint of trade, is a patented article, this takes away the illegality only to the extent to which the field of the trade, controlled through the combination, is coextensive with the field within which exclusive control has been granted by the law. This is the doctrine of Henry v. Dick, 224 U. S. 1, 32 Sup. Ct. 364, 56 L. Ed. 645, Ann. Cas. 1913D, 880, Bement v. Harrow Co., 186 U. S. 70, 22 Sup. Ct. 747, 46 L. Ed. 1058, the Bath Tub case, 226 U. S. 20, 33 Sup. Ct. 9, 57 L. Ed. 107, and all the other kindred cases to which we have been referred.[21]

The difference between this private field and the common field of trade is, as a distinction, sufficiently clear; but there may be again an overlapping. The owner of a patented article has the right to enter upon this common field of trade. His patented article may be so superior, or of such less cost than anything else upon the market, as to supplant all others and give to him the whole trade as effectually as if his patented article has originally had the field to itself. Indeed, its ownership may be sought, for the reason that it has this possibility of power. Again, the patent may apply to only certain features of the article of trade, and yet enable the owner to reap the same advantage, and control a trade in what is beyond the exclusive rights given by the patent. The special circumstances affecting a particular contract or combination may make the principle difficult of application, and the line of legality or illegality hard to draw; but the principle remains the same. The legality of such a contract is determined by the judgment of whether, in its whole scope and legal intendment, it is fairly limited in its operation to the proper field of trade belonging to the patentee, and whether any further advantages which flow to him are fairly incidental, and are not the evil fruit of unfair practices employed to restrain the right of others to a share of the common trade. It is the legal intendment of the contract or combination which is to be found. The motives of the contracting parties, whether innocent or otherwise, do not determine the real character of their act; but it is determined through the judgment of the law. Motives and intentions, except as declared, or appearing from the character of the act, are too vague and difficult of ascertainment to be made the basis of the legal judgment called for in such cases. A conspiracy under this statute, as at common law, may have, as an element, the seeking of an unlawful end, or the employment of unlawful means.

21 Henry v. Dick was overruled in Motion Picture Patents Co. v. Universal Co., supra, upon the ground that the grant of a patent to a machine is of the exclusive right to use the mechanism and produce the result with any appropriate material, but that such material is no part of the patented machine or of the combination which produces the patented result, and that therefore the owner of the patent cannot restrict use of the machine to material supplied by him. In the General Electric case the Court stated that "The overruling of the Dick case and the disapproval of the Button-Fastener case by the Motion Picture Film case did not carry with it the overruling of Bement v. Harrow Company." (272 U. S. at 493.)

We learn from the opinion of the Keystone Watch Case Co. Case that the prohibited restraint of trade, beside being undue and unreasonable, must be the direct, and not a merely incidental, result of the contract or combination, before the latter will be condemned as illegal. If it is asked to be condemned, not because of the illegality of the means employed to accomplish its end, but because monopoly results as a consequence, the monopoly must be shown to be an unlawful monopoly, not the monopoly granted by the patent laws. A contract or agreement among business men, which had as its end to preserve to the owners of a patent the exclusive sale of the patented article, and as its means the exercise of due, reasonable, and fairly proper control over sales to be made, would not be condemned as void in itself, or justify any inference of guilt under the act of 1890. Where, however, by what was agreed to be done, the end indicated, in the sense of the result to be expected, was a monopolistic control of what was not the exclusive property of any one, or such a monopoly was the direct result of undue and unreasonable restraints of trade, to be employed as the means of carrying out what was to be done, the fact that anyone or more of the persons concerned owned patents would not prevent a finding of conspiracy. In the Bement, General Electric and Motion Picture Patents cases are found the principles and propositions which must be applied in cases such as the instant case, i.e., in cases where it is charged that patent license agreements and operations thereunder violate the Sherman Act.

The Government, however, urges that the General Electric case and the instant case are distinguishable. It is said first that in the General Electric case the patents completely covered the incandescent lamp, whereas in the instant case they do not completely cover the patented product. Second, it is asserted that in the General Electric case the licensing, so far as price fixing restrictions are concerned, extended only to Westinghouse, a single competitor of General Electric, and that the percentage of manufacturing and sale of patented electric lamps controlled by General Electric and Westinghouse was but 85% of the total business of this type; whereas, in the instant case, the licensing, all of which involved price fixing, extends to six competitors, and the licensor and licensees manufacture and sell 100% of the patented product in the "Eastern area." Third, it is contended that in the General Electric case the terms and conditions of the patent license related only to price fixing and were not unduly restrictive, whereas in the instant case the terms and conditions of the licenses go beyond mere 8751 price fixing and are unduly restrictive. In order to discuss these contentions, it is necessary somewhat further to detail the facts as shown by the opinion and by the record in the General Electric case. This will serve the purpose also of disclosing the corollary propositions, alluded to above, for which the General Electric case stands. The case was heard in the Supreme Court upon a record (of some 875 printed pages) which included a "stipulation by counsel for all parties which, together with the exhibits attached thereto and filed therewith, contains all the evidence upon which the case was tried in the District Court, and the said exhibits attached to said stipulation." (Record, United States v. General Electric Company, et al., No. 113, Supreme Court, October Term 1926, at 875. This record is hereinafter for convenience referred to as the G. E. Record.)

In respect of the nature of the patents in the General Electric case and in the instant case: The first incandescent electric lamp was invented in 1880 by Thomas Edison. The original patents for such lamps had expired long before the General Electric-Westinghouse license agreement was executed in 1912. The light giving element in the lamp of 1880 was a carbon filament. In 1904 an improved carbon filament known as "metallized carbon filament" was invented. Next a tantalum filament lamp was introduced. This reduced the consumption of current substantially as compared with the standard carbon filament lamp, but it was not a satisfactory lamp for use on alternating current. Thereafter a tungsten filament incandescent electric lamp was introduced and was developed to such an extent that it consumed only about one-third of the current consumed by the carbon filament lamp in its best form, and less than one-half of that consumed by the metallized carbon filament lamp was therefore superior to those containing carbon filaments or metallized carbon or tantalum filaments. But the patents covering the tungsten filament lamp was not "basic" in the sense that they covered a fundamentally new and basic invention covering completely an incandescent electric lamp. They were merely for improvements upon the original invention of Edison of 1880. The tungsten filament manufactured under the Just & Hanaman patent of 1912 was brittle and in consequence expensive to manufacture and easily broken in shipment and use. The Coolidge patent of 1913 covered improvements which merely increased the tensile strength and endurance of the tungsten filament. The Langmuir patent of 1916 further improved the incandescent electric lamp for the introduction of gas into the bulb, and this improvement came to be used in many but not all of the tungsten filament lamps made. It thus appears that the Just & Hanaman, Coolidge and Langmuir patents (the three patents specifically mentioned in the opinion of the Court in the General Electric case) covered various features of the incandescent lamp having a tungsten filament, which represented a further development in the incandescent lamp field over the lamps with carbon, metallized, or tantalum filaments. At the time the General Electric-Westinghouse license was executed in 1912 about 50% of the total number of lamps sold were of the ordinary carbon filament type. After nine years of operation under the license, the percentage of tungsten filament lamps increased, because of their superior quality, to some 97% of total production. The General Electric Company occupied a dominant position in the incandescent lamp industry by reason of its patent ownership. It had patents not only on the tungsten filament lamps but also on the carbon and tantalum filament lamps, and the latter were included in the General Electric-Westinghouse license and the licensor reserved the right to fix the price of lamps having metallized carbon or tantalum filaments the same as it did in respect of tungsten filament lamps. The Court in the General Electric case drew no distinction as to General Electric's rights as the owner of patents covering different types of lamps. The step by step progress in electric lamp production was founded upon the original basic work of Edison.[22]

The principal patents upon which the license agreements in the instant case were founded, to wit, the Utzman, Haggerty and Roos patents, typical claims of which have been set out in the statement of facts at the outset of this opinion, were product patents upon a building material called plasterboard or wallboard. The patents, as will be noted from the claims, were upon the entire product, not merely upon the edge of the board in the Utzman patent, or upon the starch in the Haggerty patent, or upon the bubbles or air cells in the Roos patents. As appears in the statement of facts, these patents covered important developments in the gypsum board manufacturing industry. The open-edge board which preceded the closed-edge board of the Utzman patent had defects in that there was in its manufacture wastage due to the necessary trimming of the board edge, the edge was weaker, and the core would sift out in handling and nailing. When the closed-edge board of the Utzman patent came into the market the open-edge board was 8753 largely displaced under the demand of the trade for the better product. The Haggerty patent, directed to the employment of starch or a cooked carbohydrate in the core of the board to insure a good bond between the core and the paper covering sheets, solved the "peeler" trouble in the gypsum board industry, and made possible the modern high speed production of gypsum board. The Roos patents, covering cellular core gypsum board produced by the employment of foam or a foaming agent in the core to produce innumerable cells or voids, thereby lightening the board and lending desirable nailing and other qualities thereto, supplanted the sawdust theretofore a necessary "aggregate" used in the core. Sawdust had be-

22 This was recognized in General Electric Co. v. Laco-Philips Co., 233 Fed. 96 (C. C. A. 2d, 1916), where the court, speaking of the Just & Hanaman patent, said: "I think the invention here in suit is of great merit, entitled to firm support, and second only to Edison's. Edison found a dim pathway and transformed it into an illuminated road. Just & Hanaman have broadened that road into a boulevard, alive with blazing lights." (233 Fed. at 105.)

In General Electric Co. v. Independent Lamp & Wire Co., 267 Fed. 824 (D. N. J. 1920), the court, speaking of the Coolidge patent, said: "The ductile tungsten filament has gone into general use, and has in large measure, if not entirely, supplanted all other filaments, including that of Just & Hanaman, for incandescent electric lamps. It is less expensive to produce, yet it has far greater durability and utility than the squirted filament. It is a commercially new product of great utility, having properties and characteristics unknown to the natural and normal tungsten, or, in fact, to any other material." (267 Fed. at 828-9.)

come difficult to obtain and was moreover unsatisfactory as an "aggregate" because of variation in quality and character, which produced manufacturing difficulties. The use of the foam of the Roos patents solved these difficulties and produced a superior product with reduced manufacturing costs. Thus while the gypsum board manufacturing industry and the electric lamp industry deal with different materials, both nevertheless important to the occupants of modern houses and buildings, there is a parallel between the development of the two industries in the step by step improvements in an important product—gypsum board as a building material and the incandescent electric lamp as a lighting medium.

We think no substantial distinction can properly be drawn between the instant case and the General Electric case in respect of the importance of the patented improvements within the respective industries, or in respect of the nature of the patents which underlie the license agreements in the two cases. The basic patents on gypsum board had expired, we assume (it is so asserted by the Government and not denied by the defendants), before the execution of the license agreements in the instant case. The Utzman patent itself was for an improvement and it expired August 6, 1929. Likewise in the General Electric case the basic Edison patents of 1880 had expired at the time of the General Electric-Westinghouse license of 1912, and the patents upon which that license was based were improvement patents. It is true that the gypsum and the paper in gypsum board are as such not patented; but that is equally true of the metal base and the glass of the General Electric tungsten filament lamps. The patents, although on different materials, are of similar character and bear a similar relationship to the respective industries and the development thereof. The patents principally involved in the instant case no less, and no more, cover completely the patented product than do those principally involved in the General Electric case.

The patents in the instant case and those in the General Electric case are distinguishable from those involved in Mercoid Corp. v. Mid-Continent Investment Co., supra, and Mercoid Corp. v. Minneapolis-Honeywell Regulator 8754 Co., supra. Those cases dealt with combination or "system" patents covering a domestic heating system comprising three main elements—a motor driven stoker for feeding fuel to the combustion chamber of a furnace, a room thermostat for controlling the feeding of fuel, and a combustion stoker switch to prevent extinguishment of the fire. The patents were upon the combination, not upon these constituent devices. Such patents are not comparable to a product patent, which covers the whole product, although no patent has been granted upon the constituent materials. The unpatented glass and metal base in an electric lamp and the unpatented calcined gypsum rock and paper in plasterboard are not to be compared with an unpatented constituent device in a combination patent.

In respect of the comparative number of (price fixing) licenses and the extent of manufacture and sale of the patented product in the General Electric case and the instant case: No material distinction can be drawn between the two cases because in the former there was but one (price fixing) competitor licensee whereas in the latter there are six. As appears from the opinions in the General Electric and Bement cases, the owner of a product patent may manufacture and sell the article himself alone if he sees fit and at such price as he may choose. Or he may "sell the right to manufacture and sell the article patented upon the condition that the assignee shall charge a certain amount for such article." (272 U. S. at 491, quoting from 186 U. S. at 93) In short the owner of a product patent may either exercise the monopoly thereof exclusively himself or he may divide its exercise. In the General Electric and Bement cases nothing indicates that the division of a patent monopoly is limited to the patentee and a single licensee. It can make no difference so far as the Sherman Act is concerned whether the patentee licenses no one, or licenses one, two, three, four, five or six or a dozen, others. Putting this otherwise, if the patent laws, despite the Sherman Act, do not legitimatize a monopoly in the manufacture and sale of a patented product by a patentee-licensor and several licensees, they cannot legitimatize a monopoly by the patentee-licensor and one licensee or by the patentee alone, because in each instance the exclusion of the public from manufacture, use or sale within the field marked out by the patent is exactly the same, i.e., complete. Once it is recognized that a patentee may divide his monopoly, no limit can reasonably be put upon the number of persons he may see fit to license, provided always the terms and conditions of the licenses do not go beyond those which normally and reasonably secure the rewards of a patent monopoly. If in the General Electric case the Court had held that the patent laws do not permit any division of his monopoly by a patentee and had therefore stricken down the Westinghouse license (and the additional non price fixing licenses), General Electric itself 8755 would then have been in control of all of the manufacturing, using and selling of the electric lamps covered by the patents. Although but one price fixing license happened to be involved in the General Electric case, it would be an irrational fixation to construe the decision of the Court as limiting licensing under price fixing restrictions to one competitor, since the public is equally excluded and equally subjected to the patentee's price whether there is no licensee, one licensee or many. Cf. United States v. Line Material Company, 64 F. Supp. 970 (E. D. Wis. 1946); Laurence I. Wood, Patents and Antitrust Law (C. C. H. 1942) 182-3.

No distinction, moreover, can be drawn between the General Electric case and the instant case because the percentage of manufacturing and sale of patented electric lamps controlled by General Electric and Westinghouse, the single price fixing licensee, was but 85% of the total lamp business, whereas in the instant case USG and its six competitor licensees manufacture and sell substantially all of the gypsum board in the "Eastern area." It is not possible to conclude that the General Electric case would have been differently decided if 100% of the trade in electric lamps had been within the control of the General Electric and Westinghouse companies. It is not necessary for violation of the Sherman Act that a restraint of trade shall be complete; it is sufficient if it is substantial. Paramount Famous Corp. v. United States, 282 U. S. 30 (1930); Fashion Guild v. Federal Trade Commission, 312 U. S. 457 (1941). The control of the electric lamp industry under the General Electric-Westinghouse license was substantial. The control was recognized as legitimate not because it was limited to 85%, so far as price fixing restrictions were concerned, but because it was by virtue of a patent, and under license terms and conditions which the Supreme Court thought were normally and reasonably adapted to securing the reward which the General Electric Company as patentee was by the grant of the patent entitled to secure. Indeed, the Court expressly recognized in the General Electric case that a patentee is entitled to a complete monopoly. It said:

But it is said that the system of distribution is so complicated and involves such a very large number of agents, distributed throughout the entire country, that the very size and comprehensiveness of the scheme brings it within the Anti-Trust law. We do not question that in a suit under the Anti-Trust Act the circumstance that the combination effected secures domination of so large a part of the business affected as to control prices is usually most important in proof of a monopoly violating the Act. But under the patent law the patentee is given by statute a monopoly of making, using and selling the patented article. The extent of his monopoly in the articles sold and in the territory of the United States where sold is not limited in the grant of his patent, and the comprehensiveness of his control of the business in the sale of the patented article is not necessarily an indication of illegality of his method. * * * [Italics supplied.] [272 U. S. at 485].

While it is not necessary to rest the conclusions above reached upon the following, it is of interest to note that it appears from the opinion of the Court in the General 8756 Electric case that in the year 1921 the relative percentages of business done by the companies in the electric lamp industry were: General Electric 69%, Westinghouse 16%, other licensees 8%, manufacturers not licensed 7%. While there were no price restrictions in the licenses of the other licensees, comprising 8%, the licenses granted by General Electric to Westinghouse and the other licensees contemplated a prorating of business between the licensor and all of its licensees, and also included type restrictions. The stipulation of facts discloses that "the amount of lamps licensed to be sold * * * is limited by the terms of each of such licenses." (G. E. Record, supra, at 92) Westinghouse was given a larger percentage (15% at first, later increased to 17.25%).[23] As to the restriction in respect of types of lamps, at the time the General Electric-Westinghouse license was executed General Electric wrote 23 The Westinghouse percentage was accomplished by a license provision that the royalty should be 2% of the sales price on that part of the Westinghouse production which amounted to no more than 15% (later 17.25%) of the combined General Electric and Westinghouse sales of the patented lamps, but that the royalty should be increased to 10% on any sales of Westinghouse in excess of that percentage. The license provided for a reduction of the 2% royalty to 1% after the total royalties paid by Westinghouse amounted to $800,000 (later increased to $945,000) or in any event at the end of 10 years; but it was specifically provided that under no circumstances should the 10% royalty on the excess sales of Westinghouse be decreased. It is to be inferred that General Electric did not regard it necessary to reserve the right to fix the price for the manufacturers given a small percentage to sell in a limited field, but that it thought that in the case of Westinghouse the percentage was sufficiently large to necessitate the reservation of the right to fix the Westinghouse price minimum in order to protect General Electric as licensor in its own market.

Westinghouse concerning the other licensees, or some of them:

> • • • it is understood that the arrangement with the Western Electric Company referred to will relate solely to lamps sold under the "Sunbeam" trademark.
> Also that the arrangement with the American Ever Ready Company referred to will relate solely to lamps of the miniature and decorative types.
> It is also understood that the General Electric Company will not sell lamps of its manufacture to either the Aetna, Capital, Liberty or Gilmore Company in excess of quantities which, added to the quantities manufactured by such Licensees, respectively, will equal the aggregate quantities which such Licensees are respectively licensed to manufacture under such licenses as may be granted to them respectively superseding the license dated April 1st, 1909.

Our understanding is that the acceptance of the Westinghouse Company of the License of March 1st, 1912, is conditional upon the foregoing. [G. E. Record, supra, at 113.] Absent the legitimization of a patent, a restriction upon the quantity of a product sold in interstate commerce is a violation of the Sherman Act. American Equipment Co. v. Tuthill, 69 F. (2d) 406 (C. C. A. 7th, 1934.)[24] A restriction upon type of product would seem equally to be a violation, in the absence of a legitimatizing patent.

8757 From the foregoing it appears that the restrictive provisions in the General Electric licenses involved 93% of the industry, with actual price fixing provisions applicable to 85%. It is true that the opinion, so far as the second question therein involved is concerned, discusses only the legality of the Westinghouse license from General Electric in which the latter company imposed the condition that Westinghouse sales should be at prices fixed by General Electric and subject to change according to its discretion. But it is not to be assumed that the decision of the Court was not reached in the light of the facts shown by the record with reference to the terms of all of the licenses.

24 A patent was involved in that case, but it was not upon the product (brick) on the output of which by licensees there was a quantity restriction. The patent was for a brick loading machine, and use of the patent as a foundation for the license agreements involved was, in a broad sense, subterfuge. This case is discussed in greater detail in topic VIII.

In respect of the terms and conditions of the license agreements and price bulletins in the instant case, as compared with the terms and conditions, including price provisions, of the General Electric-Westinghouse license: The terms and conditions of the license agreements and price bulletins in the instant case have been stated at the outset of this opinion; it is not necessary to restate them here. The provisions of the General Electric-Westinghouse license are summarized in the margin.[25] Comparison of the provisions in the two cases discloses no material distinction.
8758 In both cases the licenses were non-exclusive; there was to be no contest of the validity of the licensors'

25 Annexed to the stipulation of facts in the General Electric case and made a part of such stipulation were Exhibit A, the license agreement of March 1, 1912, and Exhibit B, the General Electric Company's del credere agency contracts, instructions and schedules, and purchase contracts. Annexed to the license agreement were a Schedule A, listing the patents on which the license agreement was founded, and a Schedule B, the contents of which will be referred to below. Comprised within Exhibit A, the license agreement, and Schedules A and B thereto, were the following provisions (which cover pages 111 to 180 of the Record of 875 printed pages in the General Electric case). It will be noted that, while not so segregated, they divide themselves into three general classes of provisions: general and miscellaneous provisions, including the provisions of the license agreement itself (Exhibit A) of some twenty numbered paragraphs; provisions for arriving at price; and provisions for protecting price.

The license agreement granted to the licensee a non-exclusive license under the patents listed in Schedule A, and under patents which the licensor might own or control, and under patents to be issued under patent applications owned by the licensor, for improvements on carbon filament, metallized filament, tungsten and tantalum filament lamps, and for improvements in machines, appliances or processes for the manufacture of such lamps. The license agreement impliedly forbade the licensee to contest, during the existence of the agreement, validity of the licensor's patents. The licensee agreed to pay royalties, and the licensor and licensee each agreed to keep books with reference to its manufacture, sales and shipments of all electric lamps, and to keep its books open to the inspection of the other. The license provided that it was granted on the express condition that the licenser should have the right to fix the licensee's prices, terms and conditions of sale of any tantalum, metallized carbon, or tungsten filament lamp which embodied any of the inventions of the patents included in the license. These terms and conditions were set forth in Schedule B. The licensee agreed that it would sell lamps only in accordance with Schedule B and under the licensor's form of contract and in compliance with general sales rules set out in Schedule B and at prices not lower and on terms and conditions no more favorable to the purchaser than those set out in the Schedule. The licensee agreed to make reports called for in the Schedule. The reports included: a report within ten days on all appointments of agents showing date of appointment and compensation allowed; an immediate report of each purchaser's contract entered into, with the amount on which discounts were based; an immediate report of all sales to purchasers for immediate delivery without contract; a report giving the net value of all lamps sold by each agent; a report giving the net value of all lamps delivered under purchasers' contracts; a monthly report of all allowances, replacements and other adjustments made on account of claims for defective lamps, or otherwise giving the amounts of such allowances; a report of the net value of incandescent lamps of each class sold and invoiced.

patents; there were provisions for royalties, records
8759 and reports. In both cases the licenses were granted upon the condition that the licensor should have the right to fix the minimum prices at which the licensee 8760 should sell the patented product, the prices to be charged by the licensor and licensee to be the same.

Schedule B included, in addition to the general sales rules referred to above, forms for the appointment of B agents and A agents, for the purchase of incandescent lamps, instructions to manufacturers' agents, sales instructions for A agents and for B agents, price schedules of extra charges for tipless lamps, colored lamps, changes in standard base of lamp, etching letters and special lamps. Schedule B also contained a list of prices of the different types of metallized carbon, tantalum and tungsten filament (Mazda) lamps, a discount table and instructions with respect to deliveries, freight charges and the like. The licensee expressly agreed to sell lamps under the licensor's (manufacturer's) form of contract for purchase of lamps. This contract form covered a purchaser's estimated requirements for a year and contemplated that purchases should in no event exceed the purchaser's requirement of lamps for its own use during the period of the contract; required the purchaser to agree to pay for lamps in accordance with the rate of discount specified, and to pay transportation charges in accordance with an attached delivery schedule; provided for terms of 30 days with 2% discount for payment within 10 days; reserved to the manufacturer the right to cancel if lamps sold thereunder were used on lighting circuits other than those supplied with current by the purchaser exclusively, or other than those located in the building or on the property occupied, owned or leased by the purchaser. (The licensee was thus restricted entirely to making sales to consumers.)

The license agreement prohibited the licensee from selling in the territory of the Chicago Edison Company or the Boston Edison Company except to those companies.

The general sales rules in Schedule B provided that lamps might be sold at contract prices only to purchasers who had executed the standard form of purchase contract, and to purchasers for immediate delivery without contract where the seller had definite knowledge that the lamps so sold were for the purchaser's own immediate use; required that all purchase contracts must be made on standard forms furnished or approved by the licensor; required each contract to be limited to one brand of lamp. The sales rules provided that prior to the acceptance of any contract information regarding the amount of purchases for which the contract might be made must be obtained from the licensor; provided that on lamps purchased, billed and delivered at standard package or higher prices within 30 days prior to the signing of a contract, contract prices might be allowed, but that lamps ordered before the expiration of a contract and not delivered and invoiced within 30 days after the expiration thereof, should not be included in the contract. The sales rules provided that the requirements of more than one customer could not be combined and covered by one contract except where the lamps were ordered for use in installations owned or controlled by one corporation, co-partnership or individual. The sales rules, as well as the contract form above, required that the terms of sale should be 2% 10 days, 30 days net; they provided that no bid for use both in foreign and domestic territory should offer any lower price on the lamps for foreign consumption than on those for domestic use (although the right to fix the price on lamps applied only to those sold for use in domestic territory). Under the sales rules no sales or quotations were to be submitted on lamps covered by attached schedules in connection with any other material or lamps not covered by such schedules where the award of such business was based upon the combined value of the scheduled lamps and other lamps and materials; no sample was to be supplied free of charge; no guarantee could be made on lamps except in accordance with the "standard specifications"; allow-

In both cases, in respect of prices, there were two classes of provisions, one class providing how price should be arrived at, the other intended to protect the price fixed, i.e., to prevent indirect price cutting. In both cases the provisions for arriving at price were drafted in view of the fact that the ultimate price at which a product is to be sold cannot be ances for burned out lamps or bases were forbidden and also allowances or payments made to cover the cost of inspecting or testing lamps, except that factory facilities might be given without charge for the purpose of initial inspection or test, but not for life test. (These provisions were obviously intended to prevent indirect price cutting by the furnishing of services or other things of value to the purchaser.)

Under the price lists and discount schedules included in Schedule B there was a variation in prices and discounts depending upon the quantities purchased during a period of a year, and according to whether or not the purchase was in standard package quantities or in broken package quantities. The applicable discount varied from 10% to 37% in standard package quantities and 0% to 27% on broken package quantities depending upon whether the purchaser was in a bracket for $150, $300, $600, $1200, $2500, $5000, $10,000, $20,000, $40,000, $80,000, or $150,000 in total purchases during the period of a year. The license agreement placed certain restrictions upon the time within which changes might be made in the discount schedules.

The delivery and freight schedule set out in Schedule B provided that all lamps might be sold or billed to purchasers f.o.b. point of shipment, with freight allowed on shipments consisting of not less than one standard package to all points on or east of the Mississippi River, to all points in the states of Minnesota, Iowa and Missouri, and to all points on the Missouri River south of Sioux City, Iowa; on deliveries of less than standard package quantities, it was required that the goods should be sold only f.o.b. the manufacturer's place of business or that of his agent, and no allowance was to be made for either freight or express; as to all points outside the areas above described freight was to be added to the billing price of lamps in accordance with additional charges shown on the schedule, which were apparently calculated by the licensor on an average freight cost basis.

The license agreement obligated the licensee not to allow its agents any greater compensation than that allowed by the licensor to its agents; and the licensor expressly reserved the right to approve or disapprove any agent which the licensee might seek to appoint. The provision in terms was this: "It is understood that the Licensor proposes to appoint as agents, for the sale of a portion of its metallized filament, tungsten filament and tantalum filament lamps, persons and companies who will sell the Licensor's said lamps to consumers through their own salesmen. And this license is granted only upon and is subject to the condition that the Licensee shall not interfere with such portion of the Licensor's business in such lamps carried on in this manner, by offering to allow or allowing the Licensee's agents greater compensation than that allowed by the Licensor to its agents, as specified in said Schedule B, or by appointing as agents persons or companies of whom the Licensor affirmatively disapproves as being irresponsible representatives for handling metallized filament, tungsten filament and tantalum filament incandescent lamps covered by this license." (G. E. Record, supra, at 122-3) (This is to be compared with the provisions in the USG license bulletins purposed to prevent rebating on the price of patented board by the splitting of salesmen's commissions with customers.)

The license agreement forbade the licensee's selling any parts of an incandescent lamp made under the license, as distinguished from a complete lamp, without the written consent of the licensor; the licensee was permitted to refill burned out lamps and to sell the same, but was required to guarantee that any such lamps sold by it would not be refilled.

arrived at merely by naming an amount, but that other factors which have economic relationship to price—such as terms of payment, cost of delivery to various areas, including freight charges, quantity sold, type of product sold, and the like, must also be stipulated. It was recognized by the Court in the General Electric case that terms of payment

It was provided in the license agreement that if arbitrators should find that the licensee had sold at lower prices or on terms and conditions more favorable to the purchaser than those prescribed by the licensor, the damages for such violation of the license, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, should be an amount equal to the total value at the prices established under the agreement of the lamps involved in each transaction. A similar provision existed in respect of damages assessed against the licensor for any sales made by it at prices lower or on terms and conditions more favorable to the purchaser than those prescribed for the licensee.

The foregoing summary of the provisions of the General Electric-Westinghouse license agreement shows the restrictions placed upon the licensee by the license itself. As has been pointed out above in the text, the Government contended in the General Electric case that the license agreement itself required Westinghouse to adopt General Electric's del credere agency method of distribution and therefore to be bound also by the same restrictions therein which General Electric placed upon its own agents, and the Court held that, assuming this to be correct, "the result must be the same." (272 U. S. at 489.) Therefore the restrictions of the del credere agency contracts, instructions to agents and agents' compensation schedules, may be considered as having been held to be proper restrictions upon a licensee, although not contained in the provisions of the license agreement itself in the General Electric case. The restrictions are contained in Exhibit B, above referred to, and may be summarized as follows:

The General Electric del credere agency system divided the trade into three classes: (1) Large consumers readily reached by General Electric and sold directly by its own salaried employees with deliveries being made from its own factories and warehouses; (2) large consumers under contracts with General Electric, negotiated by agents, the deliveries being made from stock in the custody of the agents; (3) general consumers who were sold by agents under similar contracts. The agents under the second class were called B agents and those under the third class A agents. There were some 400 B agents of General Electric operating under two contracts, which specified in detail the manner in which they were to handle and distribute the lamps consigned to them. These agents performed the functions formerly performed by jobbers in the industry. The B agents were to recommend to General Electric efficient and reliable distributors to act as A agents. There were some 21,000 A agents—usually retail electrical supply dealers in small places. (At the time the stipulation of facts in the General Electric case was entered into Westinghouse Lamp Company employed approximately 140 B agents and approximately 6100 A agents throughout the United States.) The A agents were authorized to make sales only to consumers for immediate delivery and to purchasers under written contract with the manufacturer. Lamps were consigned to the A and B agents and were sold through them in accordance with minute instructions and detailed requirements. Rules for eligibility for appointment as B and A agents were established and standard forms of contracts to be entered into with different classes of agents were specified. The restrictions and requirements with respect to agents and purchasers were complex. The price schedules, discount schedules, agents' compensation schedules, forms of contracts for various types of purchasers and agents, and accompanying instructions in effect by January, 1925, cover 614 pages (pp. 180-794) of the printed record in the General Electric case.

and delivery affect price.[26] The provisions in the General Electric-Westinghouse license and in the licenses in the instant case in respect of indirect price cutting, i.e., the price protective provisions, including those which relate to commission salesmen, are of similar character. This is commented upon further in footnote 25. If there is any difference between the provisions of the licenses in the General Electric case and in the instant case, it is in the greater stringency and complexity of those in the former.

The foregoing comparison of the patents involved in the General Electric case and in the instant case and of their relation to the respective industries, and the comparison of the amount of trade controlled by the parties to the license agreements in each of the two cases, and of the terms and conditions of the license agreements, and the conclusion reached above that no material distinction exists between the two cases, require that the question stated at the outset of this topic II be answered in the affirmative. That is to say, the license agreements described in the statement of facts at the outset of this opinion, examined in the light of the nature of the principal patents upon which they were founded, in the light of the fact that the defendants make and sell substantially all of the gypsum board in the "Eastern area," and in the light of the terms and conditions 8761 of the agreements, including those relating to price, are lawful. The decision in the General Electric case must be taken as sanctioning division of a patent monopoly by the granting of one or more licenses based on improvement patents, of control by a patentee through licenses of the price of either a major portion or all of a product made and sold in an industry, and of such stringent terms and conditions of patent licenses, including both price fixing and price protective provisions, as are shown by the record in that case. Since the facts in the instant case are substantially parallel to those in the General Electric case in the respects mentioned, the license agreements in the instant case must be considered valid.

26 As pointed out earlier in this topic II, the Court in the General Electric case said, in respect of the Bement case: "A combination of manufacturers owning a patent to make float spring tool harrows, licensed others to make and sell the products under the patent, on condition that they would not during the continuance of the license sell the products at a less price, or on more favorable terms of payment and delivery to purchasers, than were set forth in a schedule made part of the license. That was held to be a valid use of the patent rights of the owners of the patent. * * *" (Italics supplied.) (272 U. S. at 490-1)

It is stated in the stipulation of facts in the record in the General Electric case that Westinghouse in negotiating its license dealt with General Electric "at arm's length," and it is suggested by the Government that on that account the two cases are distinguishable.[27] If by the suggested distinction the Government means to imply that there was coercion by USG in obtaining execution of the license agreements in the instant case, it is to be answered that there is no charge of coercion in the complaint and that the suggestion is therefore irrelevant to any issue defined by the pleadings. If by the suggestion is meant that the license agreements in the instant case were not executed in good faith, that is an issue which is discussed below.

It was said above that in addition to the primary propositions for which the General Electric case stands (that a patentee may divide his monopoly by licensing the right to make, use and vend the patented product, and that he may fix the terms and conditions, including the price, under which the patented product may be sold by the licensee, subject only to the limitation that such terms and conditions do not yield to the patentee more than the normal reward of a patent monopoly), the decision stands for certain further propositions, corollary to its primary holdings. These corollary propositions appear as follows:

The General Electric case demonstrably involves on its facts negotiation and discussion resulting in a "contract in restraint of trade," a "combination and conspiracy in restraint of trade," a "monopoly," "price stabilization," substantial elimination of manufacture and sale of inferior materials, i.e., "standardization," and elimination of 8762 an element (jobbers) in the distributive system, i.e., "control of distribution." All of this, except for the legitimatizing patents upon which the General Electric-Westinghouse license agreement was founded, except for the fact that the terms and conditions of the license did not, in the view of the Supreme Court, yield to General Electric more than the normal reward of its patent monopoly, and except for the fact that the price stabilization, standardiza-

27 "* * * The Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company in negotiating and executing said license acted in entire good faith, and witnesses called on its behalf would testify (and this shall be regarded as testimony given in this case) that in the negotiation of said contract it dealt with the General Electric Company at arm's length and secured the most favorable terms that it was able to negotiate after protracted discussions covering a period of many months, and believed and still believes that the license finally obtained was reasonable and fair and entirely lawful in every respect." (G. E. Record, supra, at 105)

tion of materials, and control of distribution were but the normal and incidental fruits of a patent monopoly and licensing thereunder, would have been a violation of the Sherman Act. As a matter of course the complicated General Electric-Westinghouse license was not entered into without preliminary negotiation and discussion. This is shown in footnote 27, and further in the following from the stipulation of facts:

At the time of the aforesaid decree the General Electric Company was the owner of the patent rights relating to the tungsten filament lamp, upon which applications had then been filed and under which the above mentioned Just & Hanaman patent No. 1018502 and Coolidge patent No. 1082933 were subsequently issued. Because of the superiority of the tungsten filament over the carbon filament, the exclusive right to make, use and vend lamps manufactured with tungsten filaments under the aforesaid patents, if valid and lawfully acquired by the General Electric Company, and of the scope indicated by their claims, vested in their owner, the General Electric Company, what has since become a practical monopoly of the manufacture and sale of incandescent electric lamps. The Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company because of this situation entered into negotiations with the General Electric Company, for a license to manufacture under said patents, which negotiations resulted in the arrangement now in existence, as set forth in the above mentioned agreement, dated March 1, 1912, between the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company and the General Electric Company. * * * [Italics supplied.] [G. E. Record, supra, at 104.]

The record in the General Electric case also shows that General Electric, in entering into the license agreement with Westinghouse, discussed with Westinghouse the terms of the licenses with the other licensees. This appears from that portion of the record above quoted as demonstrating quantity and type limitations upon the other licensees. The license agreement between Westinghouse and General Electric was, of course, a "contract." In performing the obligations of the license agreement, Westinghouse and General Electric constituted a "combination and conspiracy" as did General Electric and each of the other licensees in performing the obligations of the several other licenses which, although they did not subject the other licensees to price control, did impose quantity and type limitations upon them. The General Electric-Westinghouse license controlled a sufficient amount of trade in electric lamps, 85%, to constitute a "monopoly" which, in the absence of a patent, would have been a violation of the Sherman Act. Since General Electric and Westinghouse were both to sell the patented product at the same price, there was "price stabilization" as between them, and hence in the electric lamp industry, since they controlled 85% of it; and the price was set, presumably, at a profitable level. The increase in tungsten filament lamps to 97% of total production, be-8763 cause of their superior quality, with the consequent substantial elimination of sale of lamps of the ordinary carbon filament type, accomplished "standardization" of the patented product. The arrangements for selling direct to consumers with consequent elimination of jobbers under the General Electric agency distribution plan adopted by Westinghouse constituted "control of distribution."[28] Finally, it is obvious in the General Electric case that the very purpose of the negotiation, discussion, execution of the license, and conducting of operations thereunder, was, on the part of the General Electric Company, that of exploiting its patent monopoly through collection of royalties, and at the same time, by means of price control, protecting its own profit in the making and selling of the tungsten filament lamps; and, on the part of Westinghouse, that of acquiring the right to make, use and sell the superior patented article and thereby making profit. And both must have expected, since both were to sell at the same price, that this "price stabilization" between them would cause stabilization in the industry; and both must have hoped and expected that their making and sale of the superior lamps would lessen the making and selling of inferior products by them and by others; and both clearly purposed the "control of distribution" through the elimination of jobbers. Yet the Supreme Court regarded none of this, in either purpose or accomplishment, as illegal. It looked upon the negotiation, discussion, license agreement and operations thereunder as the accomplishment of a lawful end by lawful means.

It follows from the foregoing that the terms "contract in restraint of trade," "combination and conspiracy," "monop-

28 It has been pointed out earlier in this topic that the General Electric plan of distribution which, had it been a requirement of the General Electric-Westinghouse license, would not, the Court said, have changed the result in the case, "was of course devised for the purpose of enabling the company to deal directly with consumers and purchasers, and doubtless was intended to avoid selling the lamps owned by the company to jobbers or dealers, and prevent sale by these middle men to consumers at different and competing prices. * * * " (272 U. S. at 483)

oly," "price fixing," "price stabilization," "standardization," and "control of distribution" do not necessarily carry an illegal connotation. Confusion is avoided if this is borne in mind. Showing, without more, in a case brought under the Sherman Act, but involving a patent license, that there have been relationships, operations and accomplishments, which, grossly, are within the terms quoted, is not enough. The question in such a case is not merely whether there has been a "contract," a "combination," a "monopoly," "price fixing," "price stabilization," "standardization," "control of distribution," and a purpose to accomplish and a partnership in accomplishing such actual restraints of trade—for the patent laws, within their limits, permit all of the foregoing; the question in such a case is whether the purposes and accomplishments of the parties to the license contract went beyond the lawful limits of a patent monopoly and into 8764 the field of purposes and acts denounced by the Sherman Act. Were the "restraints of trade" illegal, i.e., of Sherman Act quality and extent, or were they such as the patent laws permit—is the question.

The General Electric case illustrates that the law, whether in the form of a statute, or of principles arising out of judicial application of a statute (in this instance the statute authorizing the granting of patents and the principles arising out of judicial application thereof to patent licensing arrangements and operations) cannot legitimatize such arrangements and operations and at the same time stigmatize as unlawful the purpose to bring them about, the necessary means of bringing them about and carrying them on, or the consequences that normally flow from them. The General Electric case establishes that a patent license agreement granting the right to make, use and vend a patented product, under terms and conditions, including prices, fixed by the licensor, is lawful. Such a license agreement ordinarily, and, when the prices are (as in the General Electric case) a part of the license contract, necessarily, involves negotiation and discussion between the licensor and the licensee and agreement upon the terms and conditions, a purpose to execute and carry out the agreement, combined action in signing the agreement and in performing the obligations thereof, with knowledge that it will result in a stabilized and presumably profitable price for the patented product as between the parties and in the industry (since the parties are, by virtue of the patent, the only ones having a right to make, use and sell the superior patented product) and with knowledge that it will result in a monopoly (i.e., a divided patent monopoly), in probable discontinuance of manufacture and sale by the licensee of inferior materials (the licensee's incentive to take a license is the right to make the superior product), and in control of distribution. What a lawful patent license agreement normally involves cannot be unlawful. Additionally, since a patent owner may lawfully divide his patent monopoly with a plurality of licensees, there will in the usual course be with each of such licensees the same negotiation and discussion, agreement upon terms, purpose to execute and carry out a license contract and to accomplish its normal results, and combined action in so doing, as in the case of a single licensee. And each licensee will be informed of and discuss with the licensor the terms and conditions of the proposed licenses; otherwise no more than a single license could be executed. A patent owner would not be able to license competing manufacturers upon different price terms; no one such would be willing to suffer competitive disadvantages; no one such would be willing to sign in the dark as to the terms to be extended to the others; ordinarily, moreover, there will be discussion at large, i.e., with the trade, of the advantages 8765 and disadvantages of the licenses proposed by the patent owner. Each of a plurality of licensees will, moreover, have the same purpose to take a license and to secure its resulting advantages. The licensor and each licensee of such a plurality constitute a "combination" to effectuate the purposes of their license. Since a plurality of licenses is lawful, all of this must be lawful. Further, if in practical effect the licensor and the plurality of licensees are a "combination" to the same end, such a "combination" is not stigmatized by the law—provided in purpose and effect it does not secure to the patent owner more than the normal reward of a patent monopoly, nor to any of the licensees with whom that monopoly is divided more than the advantages which naturally result to a licensee, as well as to a licensor, from patent licensing. All of this necessarily follows from the General Electric case. Compare the words of the court quoted from the Motion Picture Patents case, supra.

In the course of the oral arguments upon the motions now under consideration in the instant case, the presiding judge put to the Government the following questions:

Justice Stephens: Since your argument is being interrupted by these questions and since you are going to discuss the General Electric case in greater detail, I should like to put to you * * * some problems which arise in my mind on what seems to be your opinion, from the briefs and your statement this morning, with respect to the General Electric case, not with the expectation you will answer them now but so that you can think them over and answer them later.

I have read the General Electric case very carefully and given considerable thought to your position as announced in your briefs that it really is not a case which controls the instant case. My thinking takes me back first, on the subject of the General Electric case, to what is the nature of a patent or of a so-called patent monopoly. It is not, as I understand it, quite like a monopoly such as the Government gives to one to whom it grants Blackacre—which the Government, as the representative of the people, originally owned entire and now passes over upon some consideration to a grantee in perpetuity or in fee simple. It is not that kind of monopoly because the Government never did have the process or product or design or machine which becomes the subject of a patent. The invention was originally in the mind of the inventor. What the Government gives him, what we call a patent monopoly, is an exclusive right to make, use and vend over a period of years and theory of that is, as I have always understood it, that that will be an inducement to him to disclose the results of his inventive activity to the public for the benefit of the public and to the development of industry.

As I understand the theory of the General Electric case, since a patentee does have an exclusive right to make, use and vend over a period of time, he may make a choice between keeping that himself, keeping his patent monopoly exclusively in him over the period of the patent and licensing the right to make, use and vend to someone else and he may, under the theory of the General Electric case, fix reasonable terms and conditions, including prices, on the first sale by his licensee, in protection of his patent monopoly.

Let's assume for the moment that the General Electric case means that he can only have one licensee. He cannot enter into an agreement with that licensee without discussion of terms and conditions and prices; so that far, at least, the discussion cannot be illegal. The getting together of the parties cannot be said to be the kind of a conspiracy which is illegal under the Sherman Act because the Sherman Act and the patent laws stand together.

I have difficulty in seeing, taking the next step, how it can be said that the General Electric case confines a patentee to licensing one licensee—because what difference can it make, if he has a right to retain the whole patent monopoly in himself if he wishes to, whether he divides it with one or divides it with ten or with a hundred? It is still a patent monopoly. The public is excluded except to the extent that he gives it the benefit of the invention by using it himself or by dividing it with licensees. If it then follows from the General Electric case that a patentee can have more than one licensee, again how can it be illegal for the group 8766 of licensees or the several licensees to discuss either with him or with each other the terms of the license arrangements? In short, how can the law both give and take away with the same hand? It gives the right to enter into either one or a group of patent-license agreements. Does it not necessarily also give the right to do the things that are normally necessary to constitute such agreements—talk about them and discuss the terms? Must a patentee go by stealth and by night to each licensee separately to make out the license agreement and avoid any discussion with the group?

Moreover, if the suggestions I have made concerning the General Electric case are sound, if it is lawful to enter into a license agreement containing price-fixing terms and conditions in reasonable protection of the patent monopoly with either one or a series or a group of licensees, how can it be illegal to accomplish the inevitable economic consequences of that, which you phrase as blanketing an industry or stabilizing prices, or even producing uniformity in products because the patented product is more likely to sell because of its merit; and if it is not illegal to accomplish the normal economic consequences of licensing, how can it be illegal to talk about them and arrange for them in entering into license agreements? [Tr. 7259-7262.]

These questions were not satisfactorily answered by the Government either in the course of the further oral argument or in the written briefs submitted on the motions.

The principles and propositions stated and the conclusions reached in this topic H leave for determination two issues of fact. There is no dispute about the nature of the principal patents upon which the license agreements were founded, or about the extent of manufacture and sale by the defendants of gypsum board in the "Eastern area," or about the signing of the agreements, or about the terms and conditions thereof, including those for the establishment and protection of minimum prices on patented board made and sold by the defendants. It has been determined that the license agreements, looked at in the light of the nature of the patents, of the fact that the defendants make and sell substantially all of the gypsum board in the "Eastern area," and in the light of the terms and conditions of the agreements, are lawful. But it has been assumed in this topic that the license agreements are bona fide agreements; whereas it is charged by the Government that they are not such but are sham and were entered into for illegal purposes. It has also been assumed in this topic that the agreements were carried out according to their terms, which have been held valid; whereas it is charged that the operations of the defendants actually went beyond the proper limits of a patent monopoly and licensing thereunder.

These two questions of fact are therefore left for decision: One, were the license agreements not entered into as bona fide agreements, but merely to give color of legality to a combination to restrain trade in violation of the Sherman Act; the other, were the actual operations of the defendants carried beyond the proper limits of a patent monopoly and licensing thereunder, i.e., beyond the activities contemplated by the agreements as written and into the field denounced by the Sherman Act. But before determination of these two issues of fact can be made, a question relating 8767 to the burden of proof must be answered, comment must be made upon certain pertinent principles of proof, and the rule concerning the admissibility of declarations of alleged co-conspirators must be stated. And, preliminary to consideration of the two issues of fact, there must be determined, under the motions to strike declarations admitted in evidence subject to connection, whether there is evidence outside the declarations of the existence of the conspiracy charged and of the defendants' participation therein.

III

The Burden of Proof; Principles of Proof; the Rule Concerning Admissibility of Declarations of Alleged Co-Conspirators

The burden of proof: As has been stated at the outset of this opinion, the Government's complaint in paragraph 44 charges, in the language of the statute, violations of Sections 1, 2 and 3 of the Sherman Act; and in paragraph 45 these charges are amplified by allegations that the defendants have combined to fix arbitrary and non-competitive prices for the sale of gypsum products both patented and unpatented, to standardize the products which they manufactured, to control distribution of such products, and to require manufacturing distributors, upon resale of products purchased from the defendants, to conform to arbitrary and non-competitive prices. The complaint then alleges in paragraph 46 that the combination was entered into and carried out by the defendants in part under the guise of license agreements purporting to relate to the use of patents owned by the defendant USG in the manufacture of gypsum board; that to give color of legality to the combination, the defendant companies and other companies agreed among themselves to enter into, and did enter into, these license agreements; that such agreements are not bona fide patent license agreements reasonably designed to secure to USG the pecuniary reward for valid patent monopolies, but were entered into and executed for the illegal purposes described in paragraphs 44 and 45 of the complaint. Paragraphs 44, 45 and 46 of the complaint are set out verbatim in the description of the charges at the outset of this opinion.

The defendants USG, Avery and Knode, in paragraph 35 of their answer, respond to paragraph 46 of the complaint by denying each and all of the averments thereof. Then, "further answering," they aver that USG developed improvements in the manufacture of gypsum products and that it owns numerous patents covering its inventions; that it acquired a legal monopoly in the manufacture, use and sale of products embodying the inventions of its patents, and that it determined to share that monopoly and to grant licenses to the end that the gypsum industry and the public might benefit; and that as a condition in said licenses, USG reserved the right to establish minimum prices. The 8768 right so reserved to USG was, so it is further averred, designed to and did protect its patent rights and was a lawful restriction under the patent laws and the decisions of the Supreme Court; the license agreements, it is alleged, involved basic patents and were in law and in fact bona fide agreements reasonably designed to secure to USG the pecuniary reward for its valid patent monopolies to which it was entitled. The full text of this paragraph 35 of the answer of USG, Avery and Knode is set forth in the margin.[29] The answers of National and Baker, of Ebsary

29 "35. Deny each and all of the averments contained in Paragraph 46 of the Complaint and, further answering, these defendants aver that through extensive research work carried on by the expenditure each year of substantial sums of money, the defendant, United States Gypsum Company, developed extensive improvements in the art of manufacturing gypsum products and in the character and quality of such products and acquired and now owns numerand Fred Ebsary, and of Newark and Tomkins deny the allegations of paragraph 46 of the complaint. The defendants Certain-teed and Hartley deny the allegations of paragraph 46, except that these defendants admit that the licenses referred to in paragraphs 76, 85, 113 and 117 of the complaint were executed between USG and Certain-teed;[30] they deny that the license agreements were made for any purpose described in paragraphs 44, 45 and 46 of the complaint, and aver that each agreement was voluntarily made for the lawful purpose of enabling Certain-teed to make, sell and distribute gypsum products covered by USG patents. The defendants Celotex and Dahlberg deny the allegations of paragraph 46 of the complaint; further answering, these defendants aver that Celotex was organized in 1935 and did not until 1937 engage in the gypsum business directly or indirectly, that in 1937 and 1938 it acquired a minority stock interest in Certain-teed and thereafter began selling gypsum products manufactured in plants of Certain-8769 teed, that in 1939 Celotex acquired the assets of American, including the license agreement between USG and American, and that upon advice of counsel Celotex assumed the obligations of that license agreement and has ever since observed its terms. Texas denies the allega-ous United States Letters Patent covering its inventions and improvements embodied in said gypsum products and in their manufacture, particularly with regard to gypsum board. Further answering, these defendants aver that, in accordance with the patent laws of the United States, the defendant, United States Gypsum Company, acquired a legal monopoly in the manufacture, sale and use of such gypsum products embodying the inventions and improvements set forth and claimed in its said patents and that, after due deliberation, said defendant determined to share its said monopoly with other manufacturers of gypsum board through the granting of licenses to manufacture and sell gypsum board embodying the inventions and improvements set forth and claimed in said defendant's patents, to the end that the gypsum industry and the public generally might benefit through the production and enjoyment of a superior product they could not otherwise have produced or had, and, as a condition in said licenses and for the reasonable and appropriate protection of the patent rights which it had acquired, the defendant, United States Gypsum Company, reserved the right to establish the minimum prices at which its licensees might sell the patented products so manufactured by them, pursuant to the terms of the license agreement. These defendants further aver that the right so reserved to defendant, United States Gypsum Company, was designed to and did protect said defendant's patent rights and was an entirely proper and legal restriction within the purview of the patent laws and the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States; that the said license agreements involved basic patents in the manufacture of gypsum board and were, in law and in fact, bona fide license agreements, reasonably designed to secure to the defendant, United States Gypsum Company, the pecuniary reward for its valid patent monopolies to which it was entitled."

---

30 These are the paragraphs of the complaint which allege the execution by USG and Certain-teed of the May 1929, November 1929, metallized board, and perforated lath license agreements.

tions of paragraph 46 of the complaint; further answering, Texas alleges that it made license agreements with USG in good faith and in the belief that USG had basic patents, that all of the agreements were made in due course of business and for legal purposes, and in order to permit Texas to make gypsum products, and that, relying upon the validity of the patents and the legality of the agreements, Texas expended large sums in plant equipment.

It is the contention of the Government that in this state of the pleadings the burden is upon the defendants, by way of confession and avoidance, to justify under the patent licenses the restraints of trade described in the complaint. The Government relies, in this contention, so far as the effect of the pleadings is concerned, upon the Motion Picture Patents case, stated in another connection in topic II of this opinion; and, so far as the bearing of the substantive law is concerned, upon the Masonite case, also referred to in topic II, United States v. Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., 310 U. S. 150 (1940), rehearing denied, 310 U. S. 658 (1940), and United States v. Bausch & Lomb Co., 321 U. S. 707 (1944). The defendants assert that the burden of proving lack of bona fides in the license agreements is upon the Government.

The foregoing is, however, for the purpose of consideration of the contentions concerning burden of proof, an insufficient description of the pleadings of the Government in respect of the patent license agreements. Not only has the Government in paragraph 46 of the complaint set up the execution of such agreements and charged them not to be bona fide, but also in subsequent paragraphs of the complaint it has in detail alleged the circumstances leading up to the execution of the license agreements, and has set forth in detail the manner in which it claims that they were carried beyond the normal limits of a patent monopoly. These allegations have been outlined at the outset of this opinion. Particular reference may here be made, however, to the following paragraphs of the complaint: Paragraph 77 charges that at the time of the execution of the May 1929 licenses USG and its licensees, among other things, mutually agreed that they would immediately discontinue the manufacture of unpatented open-edge board and dispose of inventories of the same at prices to be fixed by USG, agreed that USG would immediately furnish and stabilize prices for board, agreed that as prices for board were raised all companies would increase their prices for plaster and miscellaneous gypsum products, and agreed that the prices for board manufactured by the licensees would be 8770 controlled, through the use of other patents, by USG after the expiration of the Utzman patent in August 1929. Paragraph 86 alleges that for many years prior to 1929 the licensees, except Ebsary and Kelley, had been using adhesives in the manufacture of board to increase adhesion between the core and liners, and that the licensees, in addition to the agreements contained in the licenses of November 1929, mutually agreed among themselves and with USG to consider such use of adhesives as falling within the scope of the Hite and Haggerty patents for the purpose of permitting price control by USG during the life of said patents; and that Ebsary and Kelley agreed to commence using adhesives for the same purpose. Paragraph 93 alleges that USG and its licensees have by concerted action sought to standardize the manufacture of gypsum board and have refrained from manufacturing and marketing open-edge board and other board not within the agreed upon scope of the patents involved in the license agreements, and that National was induced, by USG and the other licensees, in 1934 and 1935, to refrain from marketing a new light weight board until the other licensees were equipped to make and market a similar board. Paragraph 95 alleges that USG and its licensees, for the purpose of eliminating distribution of gypsum products through jobbers, agreed among themselves to sell gypsum board to jobbers at no less than the minimum prices set by USG for sale of board to dealers and to sell plaster and miscellaneous gypsum products to jobbers at no less than the prevailing minimum prices to dealers for such products, and that this agreement was carried into effect. Paragraphs 96-102 charge that the licenses were used to fix the price of unpatented board in that prices were fixed on unpatented open-edge board, on closed-edge board manufactured and sold during the period from August 6 to November 5, 1929, when USG owned no patents covering such board, that prices were fixed under the Haggerty and Hite starch patents from November 1929 to October 1935, although none of the licensees, except Universal, was manufacturing board under those patents, and that prices were fixed after October 1935 under the Roos foam patents notwithstanding that a substantial part of the board produced by various of the licensees was not covered by the patents issued upon the foam process. Paragraph 103 asserts that beginning in May 1929 USG and its licensees concertedly raised and stabilized the prices of plaster and miscellaneous gypsum products and agreed to sell, and have sold, such products on the basis of various of the terms and conditions prescribed by USG for the sale of gypsum board. Paragraph 108 alleges that since 1929 USG and its licensees have by concerted action induced and coerced manufacturing distributors purchasing gypsum board from them to resell such board to dealers and consumers at bulletin prices determined and fixed by USG for sales of board by its licensees to such trade. All of these paragraphs of the 8771 complaint are in aid of the allegations of paragraph 46 as well as of paragraphs 44 and 45.

In this condition of the pleadings, it would be extraordinary to place the burden of proof in respect of the bona fides of, and the propriety of operations under, the patent license agreements upon the defendants, in the absence of some clear requirement of adjective or substantive law. To place the burden as urged by the Government would be, in effect, to strip the Government's complaint of all of its allegations in respect of the patent license agreements, to eliminate from the complaint paragraph 46, and the other paragraphs which supplement the same, alleging the execution and the manner of applying the license agreements. All of these allegations would thus be treated as surplusage and the Government's case would be left resting in the large upon the contents of paragraphs 44 and 45. Where the Government has pitched its case as carefully and elaborately as it has upon violation of the Sherman Act through the execution of patent license agreements not bona fide, and not designed to secure to USG the pecuniary reward for valid patent monopolies, but executed only for illegal purposes, and where the Government has set forth in such detail as it has the manner of accomplishment, through misuse of patent license agreements, of these illegal purposes, it ought to be required to prove the case it has thus alleged unless, as said, there is some clear rule of adjective or substantive law which relieves it of this burden.

None of the cases relied upon by the Government, Motion Picture Patents, Masonite, Socony-Vacuum and Bausch & Lomb, supports its contention concerning the burden of proof on the issue in question. In the Motion Picture Patents case the court introduced its discussion of the effect of the patents there involved by saying: "The next branch of the defense which presents itself for analysis and discussion is that based upon the patent rights of the Motion Picture Patents Company. The plea is, in legal effect and in practical acknowledgment, one in confession and avoidance, for there is, as already stated, a substantial (although not formal) admission that, with this patent right ownership out of the case, plaintiff should have the relief prayed." (225 Fed. at 803.) But the pleadings are not set out in the opinion of the court; therefore, it cannot be determined whether or not the complaint, as in the instant case, charged that the restraints of trade alleged were accomplished through the misuse of patent license agreements. For all that appears on the face of the opinion, there may have been no mention of patents in the complaint; the defendants may without contest have assumed the burden of justifying their acts under patents. It does not appear that any question was raised as to the burden of proof in respect of patent rights. The case is, therefore, inconclusive. There is, moreover, conclusive authority to the contrary: Where an in-8772 dictment under the Sherman Act charges a conspiracy in restraint of trade, and monopolization, by a company, its officers and agents, and alleges patents covering products manufactured and sold, the indictment must also negative that the trade and commerce was covered by the patents. Patterson v. United States, 222 Fed. 599 (C. C. A. 6th, 1915), cert. denied, 238 U. S. 635 (1915). Demurrers to three counts of the indictment in that case were overruled by the trial judge. On appeal after trial and conviction the Circuit Court of Appeals found certain errors in exclusion of evidence and in instructions to the jury in respect of the first count, and held that demurrers should have been sustained as to the second and third counts. With respect to the third count, the court said:

"* * * The indictment, having thus charged that the National [Cash Register] Company had patents covering the cash registers made and sold by it, should have negatived that the trade and commerce which it so secured and held onto was covered by those patents. In the first count it is alleged that defendants' conduct therein complained of was not "justified or warranted by any letters patent"; but it was not meant thereby to charge that the trade and commerce affected by the conspiracy complained of therein was not covered by the National Company's patents, for it is the position of the government that the defendants were not justified or warranted by those patents in protecting the rights so secured in that way. It is charged in the first count that at the beginning of the 20 years the National Company did 80 per cent. of the manufacturing of cash registers. This of itself was a practical monopoly. It is not alleged that it had been secured by wrongful acts. Presumably it was entitled to it under its patents. It is true that it is alleged that long before the 3 years preceding the finding of the indictment most of the basic patents and many of the improvements had expired. But this concedes that some of the basic patents were then still unexpired at the beginning of the 3 years, and it is consistent with the fact that such was the case as to a great number of improvement patents. Everything, therefore, which the count alleges, may be true, and yet the National Company have been entitled to hold onto the business which it had so secured, in which case its conduct in so doing could not have been monopolizing. [222 Fed. at 625.]

It would follow from this ruling that the burden of proof, upon an allegation negativing that the trade and commerce charged to have been restrained was covered by the patents, must have been upon the Government, since it is elementary that a pleader must prove those allegations which are essential to his complaint. In Dickson v. Uhlmann Grain Co., 288 U. S. 188 (1933), the Grain Company, a broker, sued Dickson, a customer, for commissions and advances on contracts for purchases and sales of grain. Dickson answered that the contracts did not contemplate that any grain should actually be bought and sold or delivered in his behalf and were in consequence in violation of the Missouri Bucket Shop Law, having been executed in that state. This defense, like the assertion of the Government concerning the license agreements in the instant case, was, in effect, an allegation that the contracts were fictitious, i.e., not bona fide contracts for purchases and sales. It was contended by the Grain Company that the burden was upon Dickson, who made this allegation, to prove it. The Court so held.

So far as the substantive law is concerned, the contention of the Government is that an agreement to fix prices on products in interstate commerce is per se a violation of the Sherman Act; and the Government appears to urge 8773 therefore that a complaint charging price fixing, as in paragraph 45 of the complaint in the instant case, states a cause of action; hence it is sufficient for the Government to prove the allegations of that cause, leaving the burden of justification under patents to the defendants. It is true that it is held in United States v. Masonite Corp., United States v. Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., and United States v. Bausch & Lomb Co., cited by the Government, that price fixing, reasonable or unreasonable, is unlawful per se. But in the Masonite case, although the "hardwood" involved was covered by patents owned by Masonite, the options of the other defendants to take patent licenses from Masonite were not exercised; the case therefore does not involve price fixing alleged to have resulted from the misuse of patent license agreements. Neither United States v. Socony-Vacuum Oil Co. nor United States v. Bausch & Lomb Co. involved patents at all. The Bement and General Electric cases, as has been demonstrated in topic II, hold that price fixing under patent license agreements is not an illegal restraint of trade, but a valid exercise of a patent monopoly so long as the terms and conditions of the agreements and the practice thereunder are limited to reasonably securing to the patentee the reward to which by virtue of the grant of the patent he is entitled. From these cases it is to be inferred that a complaint under the Sherman Act, alleging price fixing under patent license agreements, without more, would not state a cause of action. It would follow that proof of such allegations alone would not carry a plaintiff's case beyond a motion to dismiss. In view of the holding in the Bement and General Electric cases, it must be alleged, and therefore shown, in order to make out a case of violation of the Sherman Act, either that the patent license agreements were not bona fide, or that even if not sham agreements as executed, the operations under them were carried beyond the proper limits of a patent monopoly. The Bement and General Electric cases were decided upon the assumption that the license agreements were bona fide. The contention in those cases was that even under bona fide patent license contracts price fixing is not lawful, and the Court rejected that view. But obviously a case of unlawful price fixing would be made out under the Sherman Act if it were alleged and shown that the patent license agreements providing for price fixing were not bona fide, but were entered into only to give color of legality to the conduct of the parties. Patents would not sustain price fixing if not honestly used. Equity would regard the substance, not the form. It is clear that it is upon this theory that the Government's complaint was drawn. Having pitched its battle upon this ground, the Government ought to be required to fight it there. There is no clear requirement of law, in any of the cases cited by the Government, placing upon the defendants the burden of proving bona fides in execution and practice under the patent license agreements. The cases which 8774 directly pass upon such or similar questions are, as above demonstrated, to the contrary.

Authoritative texts lend no support to the contentions of the Government concerning burden of proof on the issue of bona fides in the license agreements. Stephen, Digest of the Law of Evidence (12th ed. 1936) Art. 100, under the sub-topic "He who asserts must prove," states that "Whoever in the course of a judicial proceeding first asserts that a fact exists or does not exist, must prove the existence or non-existence of such fact." (Italics supplied.) In Article 104, under the sub-topic "Burden of proof as to particular fact," it is said: "The burden of proof as to any particular fact lies on that person who wishes the Court to believe in its existence, unless it is provided by any law that the burden of proving the fact shall lie on any particular person; but the burden may in the course of a case be shifted from one side to the other, and in considering the amount of evidence necessary to shift the burden of proof the Court has regard to the opportunities of knowledge with respect to the fact to be proved which may be possessed by the parties respectively." In 9 Wigmore, Evidence (3d ed. 1940) §§2485-6, the author points out that the determination of the propositions of persuasion which are assigned to a particular party in litigation as a prerequisite to the action of a court is made "first and broadly, by the substantive law, which fixes the groups of data that enter into legal relations and constitute rights and duties, and, secondly and more in detail, by the laws of pleading and procedure, which further group and subdivide these larger groups of data, and assign one or another sub-group to this or that party as prerequisites of the tribunal's action in his favor." Of course, as further pointed out by the author, "the groupings defined by the substantive law and the further subdivision by the law of pleading do not necessarily end the process of apportionment by law. It arises again after trial begun and during the stage of adducing evidence. Even within a single pleading there are instances in which the burden of proof (in the sense of a risk of non-persuasion) may be taken from the pleader desiring action and placed upon the opponent." Wigmore further points out that "The characteristic * * * of this burden of proof (in the sense of a risk of non-persuasion) in legal controversies is that the law divides the process into stages, and apportions definitely to each party the specific facts which will in turn fall to him as the prerequisites of obtaining action in his favor by the tribunal." There is no single principle or rule, according to Wigmore, which will solve all cases and afford a general test for ascertaining the incidence of the risk of non-persuasion:

8775 It is often said that the burden is upon the party having in form the affirmative allegation. But this is not an invariable test, nor even always a significant circumstance; the burden is often on one who has a negative assertion to prove; a common instance is that of a promisee alleging non-performance of a contract. [Italics supplied.]

It is sometimes said that it is upon the party to whose case the fact is essential. This is correct enough, but it merely advances the inquiry one step; we must then ask whether there is any general principle which determines to what party's case a fact is essential.

Still another consideration has often been advanced as a special test for solving a limited class of cases, i.e. the burden of proving a fact is said to be put on the party who presumably has peculiar means of knowledge enabling him to prove its falsity if it is false. This principle has received frequent application in modern statutes making it an offense to pursue a certain occupation without a State license or forbidding a certain act unless in personal circumstances justifying an exception.

But this consideration furnishes no universal working rule; if it did, then the plaintiff in an action for defamation charging him to be living in adultery should be required to prove that he is lawfully married. This consideration, after all, merely takes its place among other considerations of fairness and experience as a most important one to be kept in mind in apportioning the burden of proof in a specific case.

The truth is that there is not and cannot be any one general solvent for all cases. It is merely a question of policy and fairness based on experience in the different situations. Thus, in most actions of tort there are many possible justifying circumstances—self-defence, leave and license, 'volenti non fit injuria,' and the like; but it would be both unfair and contrary to experience to assume that one of them was probably present, and to require the plaintiff to disprove the existence of each one of them; so that the plaintiff is put to prove merely the nature of his harm, and the defendant's share in causing it; and the other circumstances, which would if they existed leave him without a claim, are put upon the defendant to prove. Nevertheless, in malicious prosecution, on the one hand, the facts as to the defendant's good faith and probable cause, which might otherwise have been set down for the defendant to show in excuse (as the analogous facts in an action for defamation are reserved for a plea of privilege), are here put upon the plaintiff, who is required to prove their non-existence; because as a matter of experience and fairness this seems to be the wiser apportionment. So, on the other hand, in an action for defamation ("false words," in the old nomenclature), it might have been supposed on other analogies that to the plaintiff it would fall to prove the falsity of the defendant's utterance; yet as a matter of fairness, it has in fact been put upon the defendant to prove the truth of his utterance. • • •

There is, then, no one principle, or set of harmonious principles, which afford a sure and universal test for the solution of a given class of cases. The logic of the situation does not demand such a test; it would be useless to attempt to discover or to invent one; and the state of the law does not justify us in saying that it has accepted any. There are merely specific rules for specific classes of cases, resting for their ultimate basis upon broad reasons of experience and fairness. [9 Wigmore, Evidence, §2486.]

In 1 Jones, Evidence in Civil Cases (4th ed. 1938) § 180, it is stated:

• • • Some early text writers declared the burden of proof to be on the party who asserts the affirmative of the issue or question in dispute. "Ei incumbit probatio qui dicit, non qui negat." (The burden of proof lies upon him who affirms, not him who denies.) However, later writers have questioned the accuracy of the rule, urging that the burden of proof does not depend upon the form of the proposition, but that the burden of proving any given claim or defense rests upon him who asserts it. To some extent, recognition is seemingly given to the former test in a few of the recent cases.

The authorities hold that whoever asserts a claim or defense which is negative in form or depends upon a negative has the burden of establishing the truth of the allegation. But this seems to be only another way of saying that he who affirms must prove; and in cases involving negative propositions the courts seem not to have regarded the form of the issue as material.[31]

31 Dickson v. Uhlmann Grain Co., discussed above, is here cited.

The allegations of paragraph 46 of the Government's complaint concerning bona fides in the execution and use of the license agreements are in the form of a negative. This, as noted, will not necessarily relieve the pleader from the burden of proof. The Government does not specifically urge that the facts relating to the issue of bona fides are so 8776 peculiarly within the knowledge of the defendants as to require, as a matter of convenience and fairness, that they be produced by them. The Government could hardly urge this in the instant case, in view of the fact that it, as pointed out in topic I of this opinion, fully availed itself of Rules 43 (b) and 26 to 37 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. As said, most of the Government's evidence came either from the lips of officers or employees of the defendants, or from documents obtained from their files. The officers and employees who testified gave no indication of reluctance to disclose any matters relevant under the issues.

In the course of its contentions with respect to burden of proof, the Government does assert that the burden is upon the defendants to show that in fact the board made by them and controlled by the license agreements was covered by the patents. This, however, is but a subsidiary aspect of the issue of bona fides advanced in paragraph 46, and the Government is not confronted with any undue obstacle, and has not claimed to be, in obtaining evidence on this subject from the defendants' files or officers or employees.

So far as the affirmative allegations of the answers of the defendants USG, Avery and Knode, Certain-teed and Hartley, Celotex and Dahlberg, and Texas are concerned, if the burden of proof on the issue of the bona fides of the patents is properly on the Government, as is herein held, these allegations may be treated as surplusage, or as denials in affirmative form, or as assertions in aid of the denials, which were expressed in the answers of each of these defendants, of the allegations of paragraph 46. "An allegation of fact that is material only as an indirect negative of something to be proved by the other party does not shift the burden of proof. Starratt v. Mullen, 148 Massachusetts, 570." Per Mr. Justice Holmes in Javierre v. Central Altagracia, 217 U. S. 502, 508 (1910).[32]

32 In aid of a more generalized argument on burden of proof the Government cites United States v. Eastman Kodak Co., 226 Fed. 62 (W. D. N. Y. 1915), appeal dismissed, 255 U. S. 578 (1921), and United States v. United States Steel Corp., 223 Fed. 55 (D. N. J. 1915), affirmed, 251 U. S. 417 (1920). In the first of those cases it was undisputed that the Eastman Kodak Company controlled from 75 to 80% of the entire interstate trade in cameras, film,

8777 The basis for injunctive relief under Section 4 of the Sherman Act must be definitely and satisfactorily proved by the Government. United States v. Aluminum Co. of America, 44 F. Supp. 97, 215 (S. D. N. Y. 1941), reversed on other grounds, 148 F. (2d) 416 (C. C. A. 2d, 1945). It has been repeatedly held in suits brought under this statute that there must be a definite factual showing of illegality in the conspiracy, combination, or monopoly charged. Appalachian Coals, Inc. v. United States, 288 U. S. 344 (1933); Standard Oil Co. v. United States, 283 U. S. 163, 179 (1931); Chicago Board of Trade v. United States, 246 U. S. 231, 238 (1918). We hold that this properly includes, in the instant case, the duty of proof, by the Government, of the allegations of paragraph 46 of the complaint as well as of all other allegations of the complaint which are in aid of said paragraph.

Principles of proof: In determining questions of fact a trier of facts (whether jury, court or commission) properly takes two steps: One, determination, from consideration of the evidence, of the underlying or subsidiary (sometimes referred to as the basic) facts; the other, determination from plates and photographic paper, and had accordingly secured a monopoly. District Judge Hazel held that under these circumstances the burden rested upon the defendants to prove that this was accomplished by lawful methods—normal processes of growth, mere acquisition of property, or superior merit of products. In United States v. United States Steel Corp., Circuit Judge Buffington, speaking for the District Court, ruled that the vast size of the Steel Corporation, the influence and control incident to such size, and the seeming power of the Corporation to crush and its ability to absorb business through its systemized organization, were all factors so associated with monopoly to restrain trade and crush out competition "that we may say that, standing alone as a mere isolated fact, this great company gives one such an impression of monopoly that we feel we may in this inquiry place the burden upon it and its formers to satisfy us by affirmative proof that monopoly was not the purpose for which it was formed, but that it was the normal, regular, and natural outcome of the improvement in steel making, and its concentrated powers were only such as were deemed to be necessary to successful producing and marketing its product." (223 Fed. at 121.) But when the Steel Corporation case reached the United States Supreme Court, that tribunal ruled that "we must adhere to the law and the law does not make mere size an offense or the existence of unexerted power an offense." (251 U. S. at 451) In United States v. International Harvester Co., 274 U. S. 693, 708 (1927), the Supreme Court ruled that "The law, however, does not make the mere size of a corporation, however impressive, or the existence of unexerted power on its part, an offense, when unaccompanied by unlawful conduct in the exercise of its powers. United States v. Steel Corporation, 251 U. S. 417, 451." Again in United States v. Swift & Co., 286 U. S. 106, 116 (1932), the Court said "Mere size, according to the holding of this court, is not an offense against the Sherman Act unless magnified to the point at which it amounts to a monopoly (United States v. United States Steel Corp., 251 U. S. 417; United States v. International Harvester Co., 274 U. S. 693, 708), but size carries with it an opportunity for abuse that is not to be ignored when the opportunity is proved to have been utilized in the past."

such facts of the question whether the ultimate facts alleged have been established. And, under the system of law guaranteed by the Constitution, the subsidiary facts must be reached from the evidence and the ultimate facts from the subsidiary facts, not arbitrarily or by assumption or conjecture, or by a process contrary to reason, but according to reason. Inferences must be reasoned inferences, otherwise a case is not decided according to law. Certain principles have been recognized by the courts with reference to the dependability of inferences. They safeguard the integrity of ultimate facts arrived at by inference. These principles, authoritative guides to every trier of fact, whether jury, court or commission, are the following:

(1) An inference to be reasonable must be warranted from all the evidence, otherwise a fact reasonably inferable from a single fact or group of facts might be inconsistent with the totality of proven or conceded subsidiary facts. As said in National Labor Relations Board v. Union Pacific Stages, 99 F. (2d) 153, 177 (C. C. A. 9th, 1938), where the court interpreted the meaning of Section 10 (e) of 8778 the National Labor Relations Act, providing that "the findings of the Board as to the facts, if supported by evidence, shall be conclusive": "But the courts have not construed this language as compelling the acceptance of findings arrived at by accepting part of the evidence and totally disregarding other convincing evidence." In short, a trier of fact may not ignore a part of the evidence. National Labor Relations Board v. Thompson Products, 97 F. (2d) 13, 15 (C. C. A. 6th, 1938), the court said in respect of Section 10 (e) of the Act: "It means that the one weighing the evidence takes into consideration all the facts presented to him and all reasonable inferences, deductions and conclusions to be drawn therefrom and, considering them in their entirety and relation to each other, arrives at a fixed conviction. • • • Testimony is the raw material out of which we construct truth and, unless all of it is weighed in its totality, errors will result and great injustices be wrought."

(2) If two equally probable but inconsistent inferences may be drawn from the same facts, a finding of fact cannot reasonably be based upon either of them; in such a situation the evidence is equivocal. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Chamberlain, cited in topic I of this opinion. In that case the Court said: "We, therefore, have a case belonging to that class of cases where proven facts give equal support to each of two inconsistent inferences; in which event, neither of them being established, judgment, as a matter of law, must go against the party upon whom rests the necessity of sustaining one of these inferences as against the other, before he is entitled to recover. [Citing authorities.]" (288 U. S. at 339) Cf. Cupples Co. Manufacturers v. National Labor Relations Board, 106 F. (2d) 100 (C. C. A. 8th, 1939).

(3) Where two different inferences may be drawn from undisputed facts, that which is the more probable is the one which must be drawn. National Labor Relations Board v. Sands Mfg. Co., 306 U. S. 332 (1939); Appalachian Electric Power Co. v. National Labor Relations Board, 93 F. (2d) 985 (C. C. A. 4th, 1938).

(4) A fact may not be inferred from a proven fact or facts where unimpeached and uncontradicted testimony consistent with such proven fact or facts but inconsistent with the fact sought to be inferred, is in the record. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Chamberlain; Cupples Co. Manufacturers v. National Labor Relations Board; Foote Bros. Gear & Mach. Corp. v. National Labor Relations Board, 114 F. (2d) 611 (C. C. A. 7th, 1940), reversed per curiam on other grounds, 311 U. S. 620 (1940). This proposition was phrased as follows in the Pennsylvania Railroad case: "And the desired inference is precluded for the further reason that respondent's right of recovery depends upon the existence of a particular fact which must be inferred from proven facts, and this is not per-
8779 missible in the face of the positive and otherwise uncontradicted testimony of unimpeached witnesses consistent with the facts actually proved, from which testimony it affirmatively appears that the fact sought to be inferred did not exist. * * * A rebuttable inference of fact, as said by the court in the Wabash Railroad case [141 Fed. 932, 935 (C. C. A. 8th, 1905)], 'must necessarily yield to credible evidence of the actual occurrence.' And, as stated by the court in George v. Missouri Pac. R. Co. * * * [213 Mo. App. 668, 674, 251 S. W. 729, 732 (1923)], 'It is well settled that where plaintiff's case is based upon an inference or inferences, * * * the case must fail upon proof of undisputed facts inconsistent with such inferences.'" (288 U. S. at 340-1.) In the Cupples Co. Manufacturers case the court stated: "evidence which merely furnishes grounds for suspicion and conjecture proves nothing, and * * * the Board, like a jury, may not disregard the uncontradicted testimony of unimpeached and credible witnesses." (106 F. (2d) 105.) In the Foote Bros. Gear & Mach. Corp. case the court said: "In reaching our conclusion we wish to make it clear that * * * (c) A statement which alone may afford substantial support for a fact finding may lose its weight entirely in the face of uncontradicted facts inconsistent with it." (114 F. (2d) at 622.)

In short the rules of logic and reasoning which are necessary to the accomplishment of the type of adjudication guaranteed under our system of law must be applied by every trier of fact in reaching findings. Consolidated Edison Co. v. National Labor Relations Board, 305 U. S. 197 (1938); National Labor Relations Board v. A. S. Abell Co., 97 F. (2d) 951 (C. C. A. 4th, 1938); National Labor Relations Board v. Bell Oil & Gas Co., 98 F. (2d) 406 (C. C. A. 5th, 1938), rehearing denied, 98 F. (2d) 870 (1938); Cupples Co. Manufacturers v. National Labor Relations Board; Magnolia Petroleum Co. v. National Labor Relations Board, 112 F. (2d) 545 (C. C. A. 5th, 1940).

By substantial evidence is meant more than a mere scintilla; it must do more than create a suspicion of the existence of the fact to be established. It means such relevant evidence as a reasonable mind might accept as adequate to support a conclusion. National Labor Relations Board v. Columbian Co., 306 U. S. 292, 300 (1939); Consolidated Edison Co. v. National Labor Relations Board, 305 U. S. 197, 229 (1938); Gunning v. Cooley, 281 U. S. 90, 94 (1930); Appalachian Electric Power Co. v. National Labor Relations Board, 93 F. (2d) 985, 989 (C. C. A. 4th, 1938). In the Federal courts substantial evidence rather than a mere scintilla is necessary to support a judgment. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Chamberlain, supra; Jackson v. Capital Transit Co. and Hopkins v. Baltimore & Ohio R. Co., both cited in topic I of this opinion.

The evidence offered by the Government in the instant case is mostly circumstantial and the subsidiary facts in the case are largely not in dispute; it is in respect of 8780 the meaning of these facts, of the inferences to be drawn from them, that the parties are in contest. Hence the principles above stated are to be borne in mind in considering and determining the issues of fact in the case.

Certain other principles relating to proof of such charges as are involved in the instant case should be stated: A conspiracy is a partnership in the accomplishment of an unlawful thing, or of a lawful thing by unlawful means. Duplex Co. v. Deering, 254 U. S. 443, 465 (1921); United States v. Kissel, 218 U. S. 601, 608 (1910); Patterson v. United States, 222 Fed. 599, 630-1 (C. C. A. 6th, 1915), cert. denied, 283 U. S. 635 (1915). Under the Sherman Act a conspiracy need not involve an overt act, although the commission of such an act or acts may tend to characterize a conspiracy in respect of time and place. The "Sherman Act punishes the conspiracies at which it is aimed on the common law footing—that is to say, it does not make the doing of any act other than the act of conspiring a condition of liability." Nash v. United States, 229 U. S. 373, 378 (1913). Cf. United States v. Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., 310 U. S. 150, 224-6 (1940), rehearing denied, 310 U. S. 658 (1940). A conspiracy may be proved by circumstantial evidence. Eastern States Lumber Ass'n v. United States, 234 U. S. 600, 612 (1914); Baush Machine Tool Co. v. Aluminum Co. of America, 72 F. (2d) 236, 241 (C. C. A. 2d, 1934), cert. denied, 293 U. S. 589 (1934). As stated in the latter case "Conspiracies are seldom capable of proof by direct testimony and may be inferred from the things actually done and from the circumstances." Evidence as to conspiracy is, of course, to be considered as a whole—not piecemeal. Although separate acts of alleged conspirators may, when viewed alone, seem innocent, they may, when looked at as parts of a general scheme, take on an illegal aspect. United States v. Reading Co., 226 U. S. 324, 357 (1912), modification, not affecting this holding, 228 U. S. 158 (1913); United States v. Patten, 226 U. S. 525, 544 (1913).

The rule concerning admissibility of declarations of alleged co-conspirators: Much of the testimony introduced by the Government in this case, and most of the exhibits, consist of declarations of alleged co-conspirators. It is necessary therefore to bear in mind the rules concerning admissibility of such declarations. Ordinarily the law holds a person liable only by reason of his own acts or utterances. But where two or more persons act in concert, with a common purpose, the acts and declarations of one during the existence, and in pursuance, of the conspiracy, are held in law to be the acts and utterances of the others. As said in Connecticut Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Hillmon, 188 U. S. 208, 218 (1903), "'every act and declaration of each member of the conspiracy, in pursuance of the original concerted plan, and with reference to the common object, is, in contemplation of law, the act and declaration of them all, and is 8781 therefore original evidence against each of them."

But upon the application of this rule there are definite limitations which flow from its foundation, to wit, one person may be held liable for the acts and utterances of another if the two are acting in concert and to a common purpose. In order to render admissible as against one member of an alleged conspiracy the acts or declarations of another, the existence of the conspiracy charged and the connection of the conspirators with it must be shown independently. It is also necessary that the acts and declarations shall have some relation to the execution of the common purpose; declarations must be more than mere narratives. In Winchester & Partridge Mfg. Co. v. Creary, 116 U. S. 161, 166 (1885), a common purpose to defraud other creditors of a vendor by a sale of property was charged against the vendor and a vendee-creditor. The jury was permitted to consider, as against the vendee, declarations of the vendor, made after the sale, as to its true character. The Supreme Court held this error, saying: "it is sufficient to say that such declarations are not admissible against the vendee, unless the alleged common purpose to defraud is first established by independent evidence, and unless they have such relation to the execution of that purpose that they fairly constitute a part of the res gestae." In Thomas v. United States, 57 F. (2d) 1039, 1041-2 (C. C. A. 10th, 1932), the limitations were described thus:

To render evidence of the acts or declarations of an alleged conspirator admissible against an alleged co-conspirator, the existence of the conspiracy must be shown and the connection of the latter therewith established. Pope v. United States (C. C. A. 3) 289 F. 312, 315; Kelton v. United States (C. C. A. 3) 294 F. 491, 495; Isenhouer v. United States (C. C. A. 8) 256 F. 842; United States v. Goldberg, 7 Biss. 175, Fed. Cas. No. 15,223; United States v. McKee, 3 Dill. 551, Fed. Cas. No. 15,686; Burns v. United States (C. C. A. 8) 279 F. 982, 986; Dolan v. United States (C. C. A. 9) 123 F. 52; Stager v. United States (C. C. A.) 233 F. 510.

Declarations made by one conspirator to another are not competent evidence to establish the connection of a third person with the conspiracy. Kuhn v. United States (C. C. A. 9) 26 F. (2d) 463; United States v. McKee, supra.

The existence of the conspiracy charged cannot be established against an alleged conspirator by evidence of the acts or declarations of his alleged co-conspirator done or made in his absence. Hauger v. United States (C. C. A. 4) 173 F. 54, 57; United States v. Richards (D. C. Neb.) 149

F. 443; United States v. Goldberg, supra; United States v. McKee, supra.

In Stager v. United States, 233 Fed. 510, 513 (C. C. A. 2d, 1916), the court said:

"* * * When a conspiracy is once established acts and admissions of any one of the conspirators in pursuance of the conspiracy, and while it continues, are admissible against the others, upon the theory that the conspirators are agents for one another in the common enterprise. Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Co. v. Hillmon, 188 U. S. at page 218, 23 Sup. Ct. 294, 47 L. Ed. 446. But the preliminary question whether sufficient evidence of a conspiracy has been adduced must always be answered by the court in the affirmative or the general rule of evidence excluding hearsay will render an admission of one of the conspirators inadmissible against the others. * * *

In Mayola v. United States, 71 F. (2d) 65, 67 (C. C. A. 9th, 1934), the court ruled that the declarations of one coconspirator to another are not competent to establish the connection of a third person with the conspiracy. It quoted from Nibbelink v. United States, 66 F. (2d) 178, 179
8782 (C. C. A. 6th, 1933), as follows: "'* * * Before the declarations of coconspirators can be received in evidence against one charged with participating in the conspiracy, it must be shown by independent evidence that the conspiracy existed and that the accused was a party to it at the time the declarations were made.'" To the same effect see United States v. Renda, 56 F. (2d) 601 (C. C. A. 2d, 1932). In Logan v. United States, 144 U. S. 263, 309 (1892), the Supreme Court expressly ruled against the use of declarations concerning past events, saying that "the defendants on trial could not be affected by the admissions made by others of the alleged conspirators after the conspiracy had ended" since such declarations "were not in execution or furtherance of the conspiracy, but were mere narratives of a past fact." See also Harrington v. United States, 267 Fed. 97 (C. C. A. 8th, 1920); Oras v. United States, 67 F. (2d) 463 (C. C. A. 9th, 1933).

Declarations are, strictly, hearsay, being made out of court and without the sanction of an oath, but are received in evidence as in the nature of admissions of a party. They may, of course, in some instances be verbal parts of an act which is itself material and relevant in a case, and in such event admissible as original evidence. Hughes, Evidence (1907) Ch. XVII, §6. "If a declaration has its force by itself, as an abstract statement, detached from any particular fact in question, depending for its effect on the credit of the person making it, it is not admissible in evidence. * * * But when the act of a party may be given in evidence, his declarations made at the time, and calculated to elucidate and explain the character and quality of the act, and so connected with it as to constitute one transaction, and so as to derive credit from the act itself, are admissible in evidence. * * * Such a declaration derives credit and importance as forming a part of the transaction itself." The quotation is from Justice Fletcher, in Lund v. Tyngsborough, 9 Cush. 36, 42 (Mass. 1851). But the acts and explanatory declarations of one alleged co-conspirator would be admissible as against others only subject to the limitations above expressed.

State v. Trocchio, 121 Me. 368, 117 Atl. 460 (1922), is urged by the Government as rejecting the limitation that declarations of one alleged co-conspirator are not admissible against others until there has been independently proved the existence of the conspiracy and the participation of the others therein. In that case, involving a conspiracy to kill, exceptions were taken to the admission as against one defendant (Philomena Trocchio) of letters and confessions of others. The court said:

* * "The defendant, Philomena, however, strongly protests that the letters and confessions were not admissible as tending to prove participation in the conspiracy on her part, inasmuch as a conspiracy must first be established before the acts or words of alleged co-conspirators can become admissible.

8783 We do not understand the rule of the admission of testimony, in proof of a conspiracy, to be as limited as above stated and claimed. We think the true rule, as shown by ample authority is, that the acts and words of all parties alleged to be participants in the conspiracy, as well as all other testimony, are admissible in the discretion of the court, for the purpose of proving the fact of a conspiracy, but are not to be taken into consideration against any one of the parties concerned, until, from the evidence thus admitted, the fact of a conspiracy is proved; after which the acts and words of each co-conspirator, whenever done or whenever said, in furtherance of the common purpose are admissible against all the alleged conspirators, upon the ground that the act of one is the act of all. [121 Me. at 375, 117 Atl. at 462.]

Reading of the entire opinion in that case, however, indicates that what was really in the mind of the court in its ruling was the order of evidence. The court states, for example, that it is claimed by the defendant Philomena Trocchio that none of the evidence disclosed by the letters between her daughter Elizabeth and Nick Vetrano (the other defendant), or their confessions, were admissible against her until a conspiracy in which she was a participant was proved. In respect of this the court said: "Such is the general rule, but the exceptions are so numerous that in nearly all the jurisdictions of this country the order of introducing all testimony upon conspiracy charges, is left to the discretion of the presiding Justice." (Italics supplied.) (121 Me. at 378, 117 Atl. at 463-4) Spies v. The People, 122 Ill. 1, 238-9, 12 N. E. 865, 980, 17 N. E. 898 (1887), petition for writ of error dismissed, 123 U. S. 131 (1887), cited by the Government also relates to the order in which evidence is received, within the discretion of a trial court, in a conspiracy case. It is, of course, true that a trial judge may in his discretion receive evidence concerning declarations of alleged co-conspirators prior to proof of the existence of the conspiracy and of the participation of the other defendants therein, subject to a promise, by the party offering the declarations, of ultimate independent proof of the conspiracy and the connection of the defendants therewith. Such order of proof was permitted in the instant case.

The Government asserts that the law requires slight evidence only of connection of an alleged conspirator with the conspiracy, citing Galatas v. United States, 80 F. (2d) 15 (C. C. A. 8th, 1935), cert. denied, 297 U. S. 711 (1936); Van Riper v. United States, 13 F. (2d) 961, 967 (C. C. A. 2d, 1926), cert. denied sub nom. Ackerson v. United States, 273 U. S. 702 (1926); Roberts v. United States, 248 Fed. 873, 880 (C. C. A. 9th, 1918), cert. denied, 247 U. S. 522 (1918); and Gernert v. United States, 240 Fed. 403 (C. C. A. 9th, 1917). In the Gernert case the evidence was not slight. In the Van Riper case it is held that there is no requirement that each of several co-conspirators be shown to have had an equal part in forming and carrying out the conspiracy. It is added that if it be shown that he subsequently adopted the conspiracy with knowledge of its design and purpose, declarations may be admissible against a conspirator, even though he had nothing to do with the conspiracy at its inception. This is the ruling in the Roberts case, the 8784 court there making the qualification, however, that the adoption of the conspiracy must be in its original design and purpose. In Galatas v. United States, it is said that where a conspiracy is established "but slight evidence connecting a defendant therewith may still be substantial, and if so, sufficient." (80 F. (2d) at 224.) But none of these cases indicates that the "slight evidence" which may be sufficient to connect a defendant with a conspiracy, or to show that he adopted it, can be insubstantial. Wilson v. United States, 190 Fed. 427, 438 (C. C. A. 2d, 1911), affirmed, 221 U. S. 361 (1911), is cited as holding that a party may be connected with a conspiracy by evidence which if standing alone would be insufficient to establish the existence of the conspiracy. But the case does not hold that the connecting evidence may itself be insubstantial.[33]

The Government also relies upon Cummings v. United States, 15 F. (2d) 168 (C. C. A. 9th, 1926). That case involved a conspiracy to violate the National Prohibition Act. The defendants relied upon the proposition that the formation of a conspiracy could not be established "by declarations of the defendants." The court said that it was true that a declaration by a single defendant would not be competent as against the others or sufficient in itself to prove the conspiracy, but that if the defendants "each and all, though separately, admitted or declared the existence of the alleged conspiracy, such declarations would be competent, and, taken together with the conduct of the parties and other circumstances, might very well constitute the most convincing evidence." (15 F. (2d) at 169.) This case is cited in Hoeppel v. United States, 66 App. D. C. 71, 76, 85

33 The Van Riper case, above cited, contains a good statement of the rule concerning the admissibility of declarations in conspiracy cases: "Such declarations are admitted upon no doctrine of the law of evidence, but of the substantive law of crime. When men enter into an agreement for an unlawful end, they become ad hoc agents for one another, and have made 'a partnership in crime.' What one does pursuant to their common purpose, all do, and, as declarations may be such acts, they are competent against all. Hitchman C. & C. Co. v. Mitchell, 245 U. S. 229, 249, 38 S. Ct. 65, 62 L. Ed. 260, L. R. A. 1918C, 497, Ann. Cas. 1918B, 461; Conn. Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Hillmon, 188 U. S. 208, 23 S. Ct. 294, 47 L. Ed. 446. For this reason, merely narrative declarations are not competent. But it is also a part of the law of joint crimes that, when a party joins an existing group already so engaged, he assumes responsibility for all that has been done theretofore. Anonymous, 6 Mod. 43; People v. Mather, 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 229, 258, 259, 260, 21 Am. Dec. 122; Comm. v. Rogers, 181 Mass. 184, 194, 63 N. E. 421; 1 Russell on Crimes (8th Ed.) 190; 1 Bishop, New Criminal Law, §642. For this reason all that was done before he entered may be used against him, but obviously not what was done after he left, Logan v. U. S., 144 U. S. 263, 309, 12 S. Ct. 617, 36 L. Ed. 429; Brown v. U. S., 150 U. S. 93, 14 S. Ct. 37, 37 L. Ed. 1010." (13 F. (2d) at 967.)

F. (2d) 237, 242 (1936), cert. denied, 299 U. S. 557 (1936), rehearing denied, 299 U. S. 622 (1936). But neither the latter case nor Cummings v. United States alters the general rule with respect to the admissibility of declarations. In the Cummings case, a criminal case, the declarations were apparently separate confessions, not merely admissions of a party in the usual sense of those words in civil cases.

The Government cites Hitchman Coal & Coke Co.
8785 v. Mitchell, 245 U. S. 229, 249 (1917), wherein the Court says: "In order that the declarations and conduct of third parties may be admissible in such a [conspiracy] case, it is necessary to show by independent evidence that there was a combination between them and defendants, but it is not necessary to show by independent evidence that the combination was criminal or otherwise unlawful. The element of illegality may be shown by the declarations themselves." Cited also are Van Riper v. United States, supra; Boyle v. United States, 259 Fed. 803, 808 (C. C. A. 7th, 1919); United States v. American Column & Lumber Co., 263 Fed. 147, 152 (W. D. Tenn. 1920), affirmed, 257 U. S. 377 (1921); but none of these cases discusses this aspect of the declarations rule. There is, moreover, a limitation upon the independent evidence requirement which the statement in the Hitchman case is not to be read as negating. The independent evidence which must be introduced by the Government before declarations of one co-conspirator can be used to bind another must prove the very combination charged. Declarations cannot be used to prove the common purpose, or to enlarge the scope of any common purpose which has been proved. Without this limitation, one person might be bound by the declarations of another disclosing an illegal undertaking quite different from an innocent transaction in which the two had been jointly engaged. This limitation is recognized in United States v. Food and Grocery Bureau, 43 F. Supp. 966 (S. D. Cal. 1942). That was a criminal prosecution for violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Act against the Food and Grocery Bureau and others, charging a conspiracy to stabilize retail prices of food and grocery products. The testimony for the Government showed that what started as an effort on the part of persons engaged in the food and grocery business to secure the enforcement of the Unfair Trade Practices Act of California gradually developed into a price fixing and stabilization scheme. Thus, the starting point of the conspiracy dealt with a legal venture, i.e., the association of various persons to assist in the enforcement of a law. Evidence consisting of declarations showed that the association departed from the original object and started illegally to fix prices. At the conclusion of the Government's case it moved to apply to all of the defendants evidence which had been received subject to later connection as to certain defendants. In denying this motion in respect of several defendants who were not shown, by independent proof, to have been parties to the unlawful part of the plan, the court said:

But unless the passage from the legal to this illegal object is brought home individually to the various defendants, mere membership in the Bureau, mere contributions toward its support, or the collection of the tax on milk by wholesalers from retailers for the use of the Bureau, are not sufficient to charge the individual members—be they persons or groups—with these acts.

Nor, assuming that the Secretary of the Bureau, the Bureau as a corporate entity, and the directors, who participated in its deliberations, knew of the activities, can this illegal object be charged to the organizations of which some of the directors were also members, unless it appear that the organization, as such, knew and sanc-8786 tioned the acts of their representatives. Any other attitude would result in grave injustice. Some of the defendant organizations are co-operatives—groups consisting of hundreds of petty tradesmen. It would be wholly unfair to charge this group with the actions of some of their officers in attempting to bind them to an illegal act, unless it be shown that the matter was brought up and explained at some meeting and that the nature of the activity was clearly understood by the membership. Our law abhors crime by association. To say that a hundred grocers, bound together in a cooperative, should be found guilty of the violation of a statute of the United States because one or two of their officers or directors were also on the Board of the Bureau, would be applying to criminal law the civil law of agency. This cannot and should not be done.

* * * * *

I am of the view that the evidence does not show that any of these individual or group defendants, as to whom the motion is denied, engaged in any scheme of price-fixing or joined others in carrying out an intention to fix retail prices in obstruction of interstate commerce.

To amplify this further would require a repetition or application to each of these defendants of the legal norms discussed. This is unnecessary. I believe that the application of the principles to each of them is obvious. Either their part was insignificant, or there is no evidence of any knowledge on their part that anyone was doing aught but engage in a legal activity. There is no evidence that they participated in any act of an illegal nature, such as coercion, threats, intimidation, and the like, in carrying out the objects for which they may have associated themselves with the Food and Grocery Bureau, at its inception. You cannot ground a conspiracy upon the doing of a lawful act, unless the means are unlawful. The effort to support the Unfair Practices Act was not accomplished by any unlawful means, so far as these particular defendants are concerned. [Italics supplied.] [43 F. Supp. at 973.]

An effort to bind one party by the declarations of another merely because they had a contract which itself did not involve any common or joint undertaking was rejected in Winchester & Partridge Mfg. Co. v. Creary, supra.

IV

Evidence of Conspiracy Outside the Declarations

Under the limitation stated in topic III, unless there is evidence, outside the declarations, of the conspiracy charged, the declarations are binding only upon the declarant, not upon other members of the alleged conspiracy. The conspiracy charged in the complaint is a conspiracy to accomplish the restraints of trade alleged in paragraph 45 (viz., the fixing of prices on gypsum board made and sold by the defendants, improper standardization of board, fixing of prices on unpatented materials, improper control of distribution of gypsum products, and fixing of the prices at which manufacturing distributors would resell gypsum board) by the execution, as alleged in paragraph 46, of patent license agreements which are not bona fide agreements intended to secure to USG the pecuniary reward of its patent monopoly, but which were entered into only to give color of legality to a combination to restrain trade as alleged.

The Government asserts that the conspiracy is proved by evidence, outside the declarations, to the effect that: (1) In 1927-1929 there was a price war in the gypsum industry; due to litigation and competition from open-edge board prices in some localities were as low as cost, and for some manufacturers business was no longer profitable. (2) On May 21, 22 and 23, 1929, Avery, Henning and MacLeish (counsel), of USG; Reeb, of Niagara; Baker, of National; Kelley, of Kelley; Neale and Channing, of Atlantic; C. O. Brown and Whittemore, of Certain-teed; Holland, of Universal; and Ebsary, Lenci and Rippey (counsel), of Ebsary, met by previous arrangement in Chicago in relation to the possible settlement of the USG 8787 patent litigation and the issuance of licenses by USG.[34] Avery and MacLeish stated to the others present that the General Electric decision sanctioned 8788 the granting of patent licenses containing provision for sale of the patented product at minimum prices to be fixed by the licensor, and explained the terms of the proposed licenses. Certain-teed, Ebsary and Niagara at this time signed their May 1929 licenses under the Utzman and other patents. National had signed its license on May 16. The first price bulletin under these licenses was then issued. Thereafter Avery explained the advantages of the Roos foam invention and suggested the taking of additional licenses under the patent for this. There were further representations during the summer of 1929 as to the advantages of the Roos foam invention, and of the Haggerty and Hite starch patents which were owned by Universal but were to be sold to USG. As evidence, outside the declarations, of the conspiracy charged, the Government relies also upon (3) the fact of execution of the 1926-1927, May 1929, November 1929, metallized board and perforated lath license agreements; and upon (4) the terms and provisions of these licenses. These terms are outlined in the statement of facts at the outset of this opinion and need not be repeated here.

These items do not prove the conspiracy charged because they do not show that the licenses were not bona fide or that they were executed to accomplish restraints outside the proper limits of a patent monopoly. The low prices in 1927-1929 may have been an inducement to the execution of licenses under which prices on patented board would be fixed by the licensor at presumably profitable levels, since the licensor was also a manufacturer; non constat that it was an inducement to execute non-bona fide licenses with intent to accomplish unlawful restraints of trade. The meeting, representations and negotiations mentioned prove nothing as to the alleged non-bona fide character of the licenses or as to the alleged illegal objectives thereof; nor does the fact of execution of the licenses, unless it be assumed, contrary to the holding in topic II, that a plurality of patent licenses is unlawful. The provisions of the licenses evidence nothing as to alleged non-bona fides of the licenses or as to their asserted illegality of purpose. As is shown in topic II similar provisions were approved in the General Electric case. That the fixing by USG of the minimum prices to be charged in sales of patented board by the licensees was provided for in the licenses is no evidence of wrongful purpose unless it is otherwise shown that the licenses were sham. The Government emphasizes the provisions for recognition of the validity of USG's patents, for the marking of seconds, for the payment of royalty on all board sold whether patented or not, and the "most favored nation" clause. Recognition of the validity of the patents is no evidence that the licenses were not executed bona fide; indeed, without more, it is evidence that they were. The provisions for marking seconds and for royalty are no 8789 evidence that the licenses were sham or that they were executed for the accomplishment of illegal objectives; the one was to avoid confusion between first grade and defective board; the other was a means of measuring the amount to be paid for the right of the licensees to use the patents. The "most favored nation" clause is no evidence that the licenses were not executed in good faith. Given a right to execute a plurality of licenses, a patentee may properly draft them with uniform terms and with such a provision against future discrimination by the licensor between the licensees.

The Government contends further that the actual operations of the defendants after the licenses were signed were carried beyond the proper limits of the patent monopoly, and that this shows that the licenses were executed with a wrongful intent—since it may be taken for granted that the manufacturing and sales activities were designed. But there is no evidence to support this contention. It is demonstrated in topic VI of this opinion that the evidence fails to establish that there was resale price fixing, improper control of distribution, fixing of prices on unpatented products, or improper standardization of gypsum board. The discussion of those topics will not be duplicated here. That USG did fix, by the issuance from time to time of bulletins, the minimum prices at which patented board should be sold, and that in the large the licensees conformed to these prices, is not in dispute. But to infer from this that the licenses were executed with a wrongful purpose is either to assume, rather than to prove, that they were sham, or to reason from a false premise, that is to say, from a premise that the fixing by a licensor under bona fide licenses of the minimum price on sales of the patented product is illegal. The General Electric decision holds that this is not illegal.

In considering the question whether there is evidence, outside the declarations, of the conspiracy charged, the court has taken into account the contention of the Government that the declarations may themselves be considered, as admissions, under the theory of Cummings v. United States, referred to in topic III. But, as pointed out there, the so-called separate "admissions" in that case were really confessions which admitted and declared the existence of the conspiracy. None of the declarations in the instant case constitutes a confession of the conspiracy charged.

It is concluded that there is no evidence, outside the declarations, of the conspiracy charged. The court now proceeds to consider, on the merits, the two principal questions of fact in the case, and in examining the evidence will regard the declarations as binding only upon the declarant.

V

The Bona Fides of the Patent License Agreements

The first of the two questions of fact in the case is, as stated at the close of topic II: Were the license agreements entered into by the defendants not as bona fide patent license agreements but to give color of legality to a combination to restrain trade in violation of the Sherman Act? The execution of the license agreements, their terms, and the litigation out of which, in the large, they grew, have been described at the outset of this opinion. But further facts connected with the execution and operation of the contracts must be alluded to in order that the conflicting contentions of the parties in respect of the questions of fact may be understood and resolved. It is to be borne in mind that although there are conflicting contentions, this is not a case of conflicting evidence in the usual sense of those words. All of the evidence before the court was introduced by the Government, none by the defendants. There was, of course, cross-examination by the defendants, and items of evidence thus elicited are in some part relied upon by the defendants; but those items are out of the mouths of the Government's witnesses, and their credibility is not assailed by either the Government or the defendants, except in the instance of one witness the dependability of whose testimony, in connection with the second issue of fact, is questioned by the defendants. Since many of the witnesses were officers of the defendant companies, the Government was free, under Rule 43 (b) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, to interrogate them by leading questions, and it did so. Under the same rule the Government was free to contradict or impeach such witnesses. This it did not do. The conflicting contentions of the parties on the issues of fact in the case are not as to what the evidence is, or as to what are the basic facts shown by the evidence; the dispute is as to the inferences to be drawn from the basic facts and, therefore, as to what the ultimate facts are. Cf. Saginaw Broadcasting Co. v. Federal Communications Commission, 68 App. D. C. 282, 287, 96 F. (2d) 554, 559 (1938); cert. denied; sub. nom. Grass v. Saginaw Broadcasting Co., 305 U. S. 613 (1938).[35] Accordingly the principles set forth in topic III in respect of the drawing of inferences are to be regarded.

8791 It is to be noted that the first question of fact—were the license agreements entered into by the defendants not as bona fide license agreements but to give color of legality to a combination to restrain trade in violation of the Sherman Act—has two aspects: One, were the agreements executed as bona fide agreements, intended to 35 In that case it is pointed out that the process which a court or a commission properly follows in reaching a decision on the facts includes four parts: (1) Evidence must be taken and weighed both as to its accuracy and as to its credibility; (2) from consideration of this evidence a determination of facts of a basic or underlying nature must be reached; (3) from these basic facts the ultimate facts, usually in the language of an applicable statute or principle of law, are to be inferred, or not, as the case may be; (4) from this finding the decision will follow on the application of the statutory or judicially enunciated criterion.

bind each party to the premises made therein, or were they intended by the parties only as sham agreements to disguise illegal purposes; the other, were the agreements executed with intent to gain more than appears on their face—to gain objectives beyond the proper limits of a patent monopoly? Each of these two aspects of the question merges into the other. If the license agreements were intended not as binding, but only as sham, agreements, then in equity they would be contracts in form only, not in substance, and the parties to them would be without patent protection so far as price fixing is concerned, i.e., USG would have no warrant to fix prices on sales of board by the licensees, or they to abide by prices so fixed; and if the agreements, even though executed as binding instruments and in that sense bona fide, were intended to gain more than appears on their face, to gain objectives beyond the proper limits of a patent monopoly, then they would, in a broad sense, not be bona fide; and if so intended, even if not so applied, the agreements would be illegal—because a Sherman Act conspiracy need not involve an overt act. Although the two aspects of the first question of fact do, as said, merge into each other, they will, for convenience, be discussed separately.

Were the license agreements executed as bona fide agreements intended to bind each party, or were they intended only as sham agreements to disguise illegal purposes? The evidence introduced by the Government fails to prove that the agreements were intended only as sham agreements to disguise illegal purposes; on the contrary it shows that they were executed bona fide.

All of the license agreements, except that of July 29, 1926, between USG and Beaver, and that of September 17, 1926, between USG and Universal, were executed after the decision in the General Electric case on November 23, 1926; and Bement v. National Harrow Company had long been decided (May 19, 1902) before the Beaver and Univeral agreements were signed. The terms and conditions of the licenses in the instant case are similar to those in the General Electric-Westinghouse license. This has been shown in topic II of this opinion. It thus appears that the license agreements in the instant case, except those executed in 1926 by Universal and Beaver, were patterned upon the General Electric decision and the license agreements which in that case were sanctioned by the Supreme Court; and the Universal and Beaver licenses were apparently executed upon the faith of the Bement decision. Both that case and the General Electric decision, as pointed out in topic II, sanction price fixing by a patentee 8792 on a product manufactured and sold under patent licenses granted by him. The licensees in the instant case had been advised that license agreements giving price control to the licensor were proper and that they had a right to enter into them under the patent laws. Griswold of American testified in this respect that in 1926 he understood that the law granted to USG the right to fix prices under its (Utzman) patent. Specifically, he said that his attorneys had advised him that he had a right to enter into a license agreement under the patent laws, and that if Avery saw his way clear to grant a license, he had a right to do so and to tell his licensees the price at which they should sell the patented product. Griswold said that there was no secret about that—that everybody seemed to know it at that time. He testified similarly in reference to the Birdsey partially closed-edge patent. Lenci of Ebsary testified that at the Palmer House in Chicago in May, 1929, when representatives of his company, National, Certain-teed and Niagara signed the May 1929 agreements, Avery stated that under the General Electric decision USG had a right to offer the licenses; and Lenci said further that Rippey, counsel for Ebsary, advised that it was lawful under the General Electric decision to take out a license under which USG would fix the prices of the patented product. It is implied in the testimony of George M. Brown of Certain-teed that he understood that price fixing by a patent licensor was lawful. It may properly be inferred that Holland was of the view that the USG license to Universal was lawful, since the sale transaction of the Haggerty and Hite patents by Universal to USG, of which the license was a part, was approved by the seven United States District Courts in which the Universal receiverships were pending. All of this evidences good faith in the execution of the licenses.

All of the license agreements subjected the licensees to the payment of substantial royalties; and many of them were entered into, as appears from the statement of facts at the outset of this opinion, in settlement of infringement litigation and in consideration of the payment of substantial damages. This affirmatively evidences good faith and negatives sham and subterfuge. It is not reasonably to be thought that licensees would agree to pay, and actually pay, substantial sums of money in royalties and damages if the agreements were entered into only as a cloak to disguise illegal conduct. If the agreements had been sham, the royalties would have been sham. Some such device as royalty rebates would have been provided for, as in the Standard Sanitary case, referred to in topic II, where the royalties were based not upon selling price but upon a flat figure per unit, 80% of which was returnable to the licensee if he abided by all of the provisions of his license. This case is discussed in greater detail in topic VIII.

8793 Commencing as early as 1926, when the Beaver license was negotiated, USG offered terms of settlement of infringement claims and a license to the various board manufacturers, and throughout all of its negotiations with the various companies USG insisted upon these same terms which were: payment of damages for infringement, acknowledgment of the validity of USG's patents, payment of royalties, and the right in USG to fix prices upon board made and sold under its patents. American attempted to get better terms but Avery remained firm that American should either pay in full for past infringement and for future use of the patents, or go without the benefit of using them. On May 18, 1929, shortly prior to the execution in Chicago, on or about May 22, of the license agreements with Ebsary, Certain-teed and Niagara (National had signed its agreement on May 16), Avery wired to Ebsary of Ebsary, George M. Brown of Certain-teed, Baker of National, Holland of Universal, and Gloyd of Texas, that Kling of American had sent in a contract with material changes unacceptable to USG, and that unless each of the other companies was willing to sign its proposed license without American the meeting with Avery in Chicago was futile. If Avery, as arch conspirator in an arrangement to use patent licenses as a "coverup" for illegal purposes and acts, was interested only in such purposes and acts, including price fixing, his insistence upon the execution of licenses, each of which called for payment of damages and royalties and recognition of patent validity, as well as the right in USG to fix prices of sale by the licensees of the patented product, is not understandable. In a sham transaction there would hardly be bargaining over terms, or rigid insistence by the licensor upon the same terms for all settlements and licenses. Avery's conduct in insisting upon the same terms to all licensees might be consistent with misinformation as to his right to license USG's competitors and fix the price of board made and sold by them and as to the right of the competitors to take licenses and to submit to price control, but it is inconsistent with an intention by Avery and USG and the manufacturers who took licenses to execute them as a blind or "coverup" for illegal purposes and conduct.

There was nothing furtive in the action of the parties. There was open negotiation and discussion between USG and the other companies in the industry of the proposed licenses, and there was open discussion among the companies other than USG of their mutual problems arising out of USG's ownership and insistence upon enforcement of dominant patent rights in the gypsum board field. This is consistent only with good faith in the execution of the licenses.

The conduct of USG and the licensees in respect of the enforcement of the license provisions, especially the price protective provisions, after the licenses were signed, affirmatively evidences good faith. As pointed out in 8794 the statement of facts at the outset of this opinion, USG, in 1932, set up a wholly owned corporation called the Board Survey Company to receive complaints of license violations, investigate the facts, and call them to the attention of the licensee involved, and upon occasion to the attention of the licensor—this for the purpose of bringing about compliance by all of the licensees with the minimum price provisions relating to board made and sold under the licenses. The Government urges this as improper "policing" of the industry, but it appears more reasonable to characterize it as insistence by the licensor and the licensees who lodged complaints upon obedience to the terms of the licenses. From time to time, as also pointed out in the statement of facts, a representative of USG as licensor met with representatives of the licensees to explain to them the provisions of the minimum price bulletins, and for the purpose of securing adherence to these bulletins by the licensees. These meetings were held from as early as June 6, 1929, to March, 1937. Lenci of Ebsary described such meetings held on October 17, November 15, and December 13, 1932, and April 27, 1933. Apparently the only licensee which never attended such a meeting was Texas. The formation by USG of Board Survey, its activity, the lodging by the several licensees with Board Survey of complaints concerning license violations, and the holding of the licensee meetings—all for the purpose of enforcing the licenses, evidence that the licensor and licensees regarded the license agreements as valid and binding. Their conduct in these respects is inconsistent with sham or subterfuge in the execution of the agreements.

The evidence introduced by the Government shows that the companies which became licensees did so because they desired to settle, or avoid, litigation, and to obtain the right to make the closed-edge board, considering it a business necessity to be able to do so; several of the licensees had made the closed-edge board before they acquired the right to do so from USG, for which infringement of the Utzman patents they paid substantial damages, as described in the statement of facts at the outset of this opinion. Also some of the licensees had manufactured board containing starch which was covered by the Haggerty patent. Numerous other patents included in the licenses were essential to the manufacturing of modern gypsum board. Blagden of Beaver, in describing that company's reasons for taking a license, testified:

Q. And what were your reasons for urging your company to take and finally taking a license as it did in 1926?

A. Well, we had lost the patent suit on two occasions, that is, we had lost our case with the United States Gypsum Company on two occasions, and after studying the situation deeply I felt that we would lose in a higher court, and if we could possibly get together and settle the matter it would be best to do so.

Q. Did you also consider, Mr. Blagden, that it was very important to your company to get the right to make this closed-edge product in order to satisfy the demands of your customers?

A. We had definitely proven that the closed-edge board was the cheapest board to manufacture, and we had tried every other way, and even though we had to pay a royalty we thought it would save us money in the long run.

8795 Q. And what about the demand of your customers for this type of closed-edge board as opposed to open-edge?

A. They were emphatic about that.

Q. They wanted it, that is?

A. They wanted the closed-edge.

Q. And the fact is, of course, that ever since you came with the company, and indeed ever since the Beaver Company had been in existence, the only type of board it had made was a closed-edge?

A. We made for a while a semi-closed edge.

Q. Yes, but some type of closed edge?

A. That is right.

Q. And were you concerned, and was it a reason for your decision to take a license, about the contingent liability which was constantly hanging over the company's head by way of liability for damages?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that a reason why you wanted to take a license?

A. That was a great big reason.

Q. And is it true to say, Mr. Blagden, that you were one of those business men who had a natural dislike for litigation?

A. Yes, sir. I tried to see if we couldn't settle it out of court as soon as I found out the true situation, after becoming president of the company. [Tr. 1673-5.]

Whittemore of Certain-teed testified:

Q. What was the attitude of your company and yourself toward whether or not you desired to manufacture the Utzman closed-edge board?

A. We wanted to make it.

Q. Will you tell the Court the reasons why you wanted to make it?

A. Well, there were a number of reasons. The board was a better board than the open-edge board; it was less subject to damage in transit because of the edge coverage by paper; it was easier to manufacture; and it was decidedly more salable.

Q. Now when you say that it was "decidedly more salable", do you include in that answer the fact that as of this time, at least, there was a strong customer demand in the trade for closed-edge board?

A. Yes. If you will let me answer that question in my own way, I think I can get at what you want to develop.

Q. I wish you would.

A. The Certain-teed Products Corporation made an open-edge board. At the same time, the Beaver Products were making a closed-edge board; when we took over the Beaver Products we immediately discontinued the manufacture of closed-edge board in the Beaver plant, and went to an open-edge board. We found that the customer demand precluded our selling an open-edge board at the same price as the closed-edge board, and prices declined, declined and declined.

Q. Then would you say that the primary reason for your taking this license from USG was to get the right to manufacture the product covered by the closed-edge patent?

A. That was one reason, and also to get rid of the possibility of future litigation. You referred to the Utzman patent. The Utzman patent was only one of some fifty to one hundred patents that we were licensed to use. Some of those patents were vital in the production of closed-edge board, and had we not had a blanket license to use all of the patents of USG, we would have been subject to possible litigation, and we wanted to avoid that—we had had plenty. [Tr. 2663-4.]

Chism of Texas said that the reasons which caused Gloyd to take the license of April 1927 were that before that time the company had been making an open-edge board which proved very unsatisfactory to the trade and caused the company to lose business, that the cost of manufacture was high due to loss from bad board, i.e., "peelers" and broken edges, which made it almost prohibitive. The company had decided in some way to make a better board. The trade preferred the closed-edge board and the company had to do something "pretty quick" to protect its business. Chism knew that the closed-edge board was a patented product and he and the officers of Texas knew that USG owned patents on the machine necessary to make the closed-edge board, and he understood also that USG had other patents, such 8796 as those for the recessed edge and the tongue and groove, which he concluded would be useful in the manufacture of gypsum board. The primary reason for the Texas company's taking the license was that it wanted to get the right to manufacture board under patents which USG owned. Chism indicated also that the license of February 10, 1937, was taken by Texas in order to obtain the advantages of making the light weight bubble board. He testified as follows:

Q. And what about the attitude of your trade in 1927, as to whether they preferred the closed-edge or the open-edge type of board?

* * * * * *

The Witness: The attitude of the trade was that they preferred the closed-edge board, and we had to do something pretty quick to protect our business. The open-edge board just wasn't proving satisfactory.

* * * * * *

Q. And open-edge board was getting increasingly difficult to sell to the trade, wasn't it?

A. That is right.

Q. Now, wasn't it your understanding, also, that USG owned patents on the machine necessary to make the closed-edge board?

A. I think I knew that at the time. I am sure that the officers of the company did.

Q. And wasn't it your understanding, also, that USG had other patents which you concluded would be useful in the manufacture of gypsum board, such as the recessed edge, for instance?

A. Yes, sir, I remember that.

Q. And the tongue and groove patent?

A. Yes, that is true.

Q. Therefore, wasn't the primary reason of the Texas Cement Plaster Company for taking the license, the reason that it wanted to get the right to manufacture board under patents which you understood the United States Gypsum Company owned?

A. Yes, it was.

Q. And as soon as you took out the license, or shortly thereafter, did you commence to make the closed-edge board at your plant?

A. Yes, sir, we did.

Q. And have you made the closed-edge board at all times from that time down to the present time?

A. Yes, we have.

Q. And after you took your license of February 10, 1937, did you commence to make this so-called light-weight or foam-bubble board?

A. Just as soon as we could change our machinery or equipment.

Q. And have you continued the manufacture of that foam or bubble board down to the present time?

* * * * * *

The Witness: Yes, we have.

* * * * * *

Q. And since February 10, 1937, have you used starch to obtain bond between the paper and the core of your board?

* * * * * *

The Witness: Yes, we have.

Q. And isn't it the fact that after you took your license of February 10, 1937, USG sent engineers down there and instructed you how to manufacture this foam or lightweight board?

A. They did, immediately after signing the agreement.

Q. And they showed you the patents, and they gave you drawings and blueprints, and supervised the installation of the new machinery and taught you how to use it, didn't they?

A. They did.

Q. And they gave you information with respect to the use of such patents as the recessed edge patent, didn't they?

A. Yes, they did. [Tr. 5994-6000]

It appears also that, although there was discussion among the prospective licensees and with USG of the terms of the proposed licenses and of the advantages of signing them, nevertheless the decision to take a license was reached by each of the companies independently. Whittemore testified 8797 that the decision which Certain-teed made before going out to the Chicago meeting in May, 1929, to settle with USG and take a license had nothing to do with any other company in the business, that his company would have taken the license if it could have gotten it without regard to what any other company did or did not do. This was confirmed by George M. Brown, who said that Certain-teed had determined to go ahead with the license without regard to what other companies did about it. Nelson of Certain-teed said that he had reached the conclusion that the best thing for his company was to take out a license, and that it made no difference to Certain-teed whether other companies did or not. Lenci likewise testified that before he left to go to the Chicago meeting in May, 1929, Ebsary and the rest of the responsible officers and directors of the Ebsary company had determined to take a license from USG, Ebsary's reason for taking the license being its desire and need to manufacture a closed-edge type of board. Griswold testified, in respect of American, National, Ebsary and Niagara, that there was no agreement among these companies to get together and take out a license. He said also that he had nothing to do with Atlantic's taking out a license (the reference is to Atlantic's first license, i.e., the 1927 license) except to answer Atlantic's questions with respect to the process of manufacture of wallboard, advising that if Atlantic was going into the board business it was best to make the closed-edge board if Atlantic could reach an agreement with Avery, and sending Atlantic a copy of the USG license; that further than recommending it, he was not responsible for the taking out of a license by Texas, which company went ahead on its own accord. Griswold also testified categorically that he did not act as agent or emissary of Avery in obtaining the license agreements, and that Avery did not tell him to go out and act for him in inducing other companies to take out a license. As pointed out in the statement of facts at the outset of this opinion, Blagden for Beaver and Avery for USG negotiated the Beaver 1926 license. But Blagden stated definitely that he had nothing to do with the taking by Universal, Atlantic and Texas of their 1926-1927 licenses except to answer questions that individuals may have asked him from time to time. Black of American testified that American signed its license without regard to what other board manufacturers "did or would not do"; that at a meeting in Ebsary's room in New York in October, 1928, there was no understanding or agreement reached that no one would sign unless all signed, and no such understanding or agreement at a subsequent meeting in the Certain-teed office.

The foregoing circumstances—execution of the licenses on the faith of the Bement and General Electric cases, payment of royalties and damages by the licensees, insistence by USG upon the same terms for all, open negotiation and enforcement, signing by the licensees to avoid litigation and to make the better, closed-edge board, and upon independent decisions by the several licensees—all established by the Government's own witnesses, whose testimony 8798 was frank and convincing—strongly evidenced good faith in the execution of the license agreements.

In the face of the foregoing the Government must rely, in the large, upon the following: In a memorandum of June 6, 1929, by C. O. Brown, sales manager of Certain-teed, which was attached to an intra-company memorandum of June 11 from Whittemore, vice-president, to Van Hagan of the production department (the two memoranda, declarations binding only upon Certain-teed, constitute Government Exhibit 227[36]), reference is made to the interference situation in which the patent applications covering the bubble board invention are involved. Brown mentions that price control on plasterboard under Certain-teed's May 1929 license expires in August, but suggests that this control may be extended if a satisfactory arrangement can be made with the bubble board patent. He states that for 36 Since the only exhibits in evidence are Government exhibits they will for convenience be referred to hereafter merely as Exhibit —, rather than as Government Exhibit —.

legal reasons the bubble patent "should not be considered from the standpoint of price control but should be gone into by each manufacturer from the standpoint of economy and benefit. Price control would naturally follow such a move." Brown then suggests that Van Hagan see Knode of USG in respect of estimated savings in manufacturing costs under the bubble patent, refers to receipt of a proposed form of license agreement, states that USG is making the bubble board and therefore knows from experience that it is practical, and then concludes that "The lawyers are very emphatic that there is a much less chance of being accused of using the patent as a subterfuge to control price —first being, it is gone into before expiration of the Basic patent on plaster board and second, it is gone into from the standpoint of economy in cost." Brown states also that the lawyers pronounce the patent a very strong one if and when issued. Whittemore, in his memorandum, refers to Brown's attached memorandum as indicating possible advantages in the bubble board, and requests Van Hagan to investigate with Knode the possible savings in the use of the invention. Certain-teed did in fact, according to the evidence, investigate the bubble board invention and concluded, about July 3, 1929, that it had merit and that a license should be taken. This is evidenced by Exhibit 228 (a declaration binding only upon Certain-teed), an intra-company memorandum of July 3, 1929, written by C. O. Brown, and by his testimony. Certain-teed was apparently not motivated by a desire for price-fixing when it determined to take this license, for George M. Brown testified that the company would always have opposed price fixing if it could have done so; that he finally agreed to submit to a price fixing provision because it was the only basis on which Certain-teed could get a license from USG; that the company had concluded that it was desirable and beneficial to have the right to use the Haggerty starch and the Roos bubble board 8799 patents, as well as others. In respect of his memorandum to Van Hagan, Whittemore testified that when he said therein "you can easily see the possibilities in this bubble patent," he was referring to the possibility of making under that patent "as cheap a product and just as good a one." He testified further that he had the final decision in respect of Certain-teed's taking out the bubble board and starch patent licenses. He said that the primary reason motivating Certain-teed was that the method of manufacturing covered by these patents was decidedly cheaper, and that the product could be made much lighter with resultant savings in transportation costs not only to Certain-teed but also to board users, i.e., that this made the freight charge paid by the purchaser less. Whittemore testified also that Certain-teed made a careful investigation of the merits of the foam invention before signing the license. It had experimented with thermocrete, an effervescent material which created bubbles in the core of board, in an effort to find something to replace sawdust as an aggregate, but thermocrete proved not adaptable in the manufacture of light weight board. Whittemore recollected that Van Hagan saw the bubble board process in operation at one of USG's plants before the license was signed. The reliance of the Government is upon the statements of C. O. Brown above quoted. They are asserted to evidence consciousness of guilt on the part of the officials of Certain-teed. With equal reason there might be inferred a purpose not to take the bubble board license unless there were economic reasons for doing so, and no illegality either in fact or appearance. When Exhibit 227 is viewed in the light of all of the evidence above set forth in respect of it, it cannot reasonably be inferred that Certain-teed was not acting in good faith. The mention by C. O. Brown that price control on board may be extended after August if a satisfactory arrangement can be made with the bubble board patent is not evidence of bad faith in taking out the November license. It could be no less lawful to take out a license extending or renewing price control than to take out the original license providing for price control. Both were legitimatized by the General Electric decision.

In an intra-company memorandum of August 9, 1929, from C. O. Brown of Certain-teed to George M. Brown reference is made to a recent meeting of gypsum board manufacturers in Chicago in respect of licenses and royalties on gypsum board patents, to the proposed purchase by USG from Universal of the starch patents and the proposal of USG to grant licenses to its own licensees to use both the starch and foam inventions in board manufacture. The memorandum states that it would be the plan to write one contract covering all patents involved, the machine patent on closed-edge board, the bubble patent, the starch patent and the bundling patent, and that the attorneys feel that such a contract would be exceptionally strong and 8800 that price control could be maintained during its life without difficulty. There is an attached memorandum of July 30, 1929, also by C. O. Brown (the two memoranda, declarations binding only upon Certain-teed, constitute Exhibit 231), in reference to a meeting in Chicago a fortnight earlier, attended by National, Atlantic and Ebsary, with their lawyers, and by C. O. Brown for Certain-teed. This memorandum refers to proposed bubble and starch patent license arrangements and to the reluctance of National to sign a license until the starch patent litigation is settled; it suggests that Universal's not signing—put by Universal upon the grounds that it has not assured itself that the bubble process is more economical than the starch process, and that Universal is in the hands of receivers and therefore could not bind itself for a period beyond the receivership—is in the nature of a "holdup" to force a sale of the starch patent. The memorandum states that USG advises that it has nothing to fear from the starch patent, refers to the anxiety of Universal, being in receivership, to capitalize on the starch patent for its maximum value, and asserts that in the view of Atlantic and National the starch patent could have been bought until recently for $200,000 or less, whereas if the entire industry paid a royalty under licenses, at present price levels, until 1938, the total might be several million dollars. This memorandum of July 30 refers also to Avery's refusal to discuss what the arrangements between USG and Universal would be. It goes on to say that there is some doubt as to the strength of the starch patent and that all of the companies with the exception of National would be free to contest its validity if they did use it (that is, in the absence of a license); but that in the interest of harmony USG has been making tests to see if there was value in combining the starch and bubble processes and advises that experiments indicate that there would be benefit in using starch in a limited degree with the bubble process. The memorandum also states that it would be advantageous to combine the two patents since the starch patent has issued, whereas the bubble patent is in an application status, so that a combination of the two would give a patent to work under at once in the manufacture and sale of gypsum board, whereas under the bubble process alone there would be an interim between August 6 and the date of issuance of the bubble patent when there would be no patent control—that there is considerable benefit in having patent control continue without a break. Whittemore testified that during the negotiations for the bubble license Certain-teed had learned that USG had purchased the Haggerty and Hite starch patents, that Certain-teed had already investigated the starch situation and thought that it might be subject, on account of its own use of starch, to a claim of infringement of the Haggerty patent. He said that as a result, when the opportunity to relieve itself 8801 of such a claim was presented, Certain-teed was glad to take advantage of it. Starch was important in the manufacture of marketable gypsum board; it secured firm adhesion between the paper and the core and prevented "peelers." Whittemore denied that there was any understanding that the starch and bubble patents would be used merely as a vehicle to obtain price control. It is not apparent how the foregoing intra-company discussion evidences bad faith in taking the November license by Certain-teed, even though price control by USG was one of the objectives. It was not unlawful for USG to grant the license subject to a right to fix prices; it could not therefore be unlawful for Certain-teed to accept such a license with all of its advantages, including price control by USG, in mind. In view of the possibility of an infringement claim, and in view of the importance of starch in the manufacture of marketable gypsum board and the study made by Certain-teed of the advantages of the starch and bubble patents, it cannot fairly be concluded that the license was taken by this company only as a sham. C. O. Brown's statement that the attorneys feel that a license contract covering the machine patent on closed-edge board, and the bubble, starch and bundling patents, would be exceptionally strong, and that price control could be maintained during its life without difficulty, evidences that the attorneys were of the view that price control by USG under its patents, acquired or to be acquired, would be lawful.

As recited in the statement of facts at the outset of this opinion, Certain-teed acquired the assets of Beaver on January 20, 1928, but refused to assume the obligations of the USG-Beaver settlement agreement and license, whereupon on or about February 21, 1928, USG brought suit in the District Court of the United States in Illinois against Certain-teed and Beaver seeking an injunction against the distribution to the Beaver stockholders of the proceeds of the sale, and asserting that Certain-teed should be required to assume the liabilities of Beaver to USG. In a Certain-teed intra-company memorandum dated March 1, 1928 (Exhibit 212, a declaration binding only upon Certain-teed), apparently written by George M. Brown, this suit is referred to and the statement made that the action should be defended and an answer filed alleging that the suit was commenced "not in the interests of royalties but for the sole purpose of trade domination and monopoly and price control." On March 14, 1928, Certain-teed, by its counsel, filed in this suit an unverified answer (Exhibit 324, received in evidence only as a possible admission on the part of Certain-teed and not as binding upon any other defendant), containing allegations again to the effect that the purpose of the suit was not to collect the royalties to which USG claimed it was entitled, but to enable USG "to continue to dominate and monopolize the industry and to restrain competition 8802 by this defendant." As has also been stated in the statement of facts at the outset of this opinion, Certain-teed on May 22, 1929, settled this suit with USG and signed a patent license agreement. It is contended by the Government that Certain-teed's taking this license agreement in the face of the statements in Exhibits 212 and 324 evidences bad faith; that is to say, that if Certain-teed knew or believed that USG was attempting to dominate and monopolize the gypsum board industry and to restrain competition by Certain-teed, that company must have intended to join in such an illegal purpose when it took the license. But it can with at least equal, if indeed not greater, reasonableness be inferred that Certain-teed had before signing the license reached the conclusion that its statement concerning USG's purpose in bringing the suit was erroneous, and that Certain-teed therefore felt free to accept the license agreement. The exhibits are therefore equivocal in meaning and constitute no substantial evidence of bad faith.

As appears from the statement of facts, the perforated lath license contracts were signed by Certain-teed, American, Ebsary and Kelley on June 8, 1936, July 10, 1936, February 2, 1937, and June 23, 1937, respectively. These contracts were based upon the Roos perforated lath patent No. 1,938,354. It is asserted by the Government that these licenses were not taken in good faith. The principal reliance of the Government in respect of this charge is upon two letters, one of December 27, 1933, and one of March 4, 1936 (Exhibits 602 and 601 respectively, declarations binding only upon Certain-teed). Both were written to Certain-teed by Spencer, a patent lawyer. In each Spencer states that in his view the perforated lath patent is not valid. The Government contends that since Certain-teed took the perforated lath license in the face of this statement it must be said to have acted in bad faith, to have taken the license only as a subterfuge and cover for illegal purposes.

The evidence shows that building codes contain varying requirements in respect of the fire resistant qualities of building materials. In many localities there is a requirement in the case of plaster bases that a wall structure (the base, plus the applied coat of plaster) must stand a one hour fire test. Ordinary gypsum lath does not pass this test because upon the application of great heat the applied coat of plaster calcines and drops off the lath and the structure collapses. USG, to meet this difficulty, developed the perforated gypsum lath covered by the Roos patent. This lath contained perforations of such size and spacing as to permit a wall structure composed of it to withstand the one hour test. It appears that when plaster is applied to this type of lath some of it passes through the perforations and forms a mechanical key which, because of the size and spac-8803 ing of the holes, supports the coat of plaster with the result that it will resist fire for an hour. Ingberg, an expert from the Bureau of Standards, testified that the only perforated lath which ever passed the one hour test was of the type covered by the Roos perforated lath patent, having at least ¾ inch holes, one to each sixteen square inches of surface; that in many tests performed at the Bureau no perforated lath with a hole less than ¾ inch in size successfully passed the test, and that no perforated lath passed it that did not have the holes arranged at least one to every sixteen square inches. Ingberg further testified that USG's perforated lath was submitted to the Bureau and that it passed the one hour fire test and received the Bureau's one hour fire rating; that this was the first lath ever to pass this test. Whittemore of Certain-teed testified that since USG was proposing to bring out perforated lath, it was necessary for Certain-teed to obtain a supply of the product in order to be competitive, or as he put it "to protect our mixed car business." He said that if his company had tried itself to make the lath, it would have been obliged to have it tested by the Bureau of Standards to see whether or not it would stand the one hour fire test under which the Roos patent had qualified. Certain-teed thought that the volume of business in perforated lath would be small—although in this respect the company turned out to be mistaken, as the demand in the trade became considerable. Nevertheless, not wanting itself to spend money attempting to make a fire resistant board, Certain-teed thought that the simple and easy thing to do was to take a license. Whittemore said, "We also realized that the statement that no patent is so strong that it can't be broken, and so weak that it can't be sustained, was pretty nearly true," and that "We * * * realized that in litigated matters the attorneys are always 50 percent wrong." He reiterated that Certain-teed, not desiring itself to build up an expense account in respect of development of the lath and not wishing to risk possible liability in future litigation, decided that the best thing to do was to take a license. In explaining this he referred to an episode in Certain-teed's past manufacturing experience wherein a competitor, after contesting certain patents for several years, had been subjected to three-quarters of a million dollars infringement damages and half a million in expense for attorneys' fees and costs, when his own company escaped by paying $25,000 for a license under the same patents. This, he testified, had been a lesson to Certain-teed to be careful in respect of building up possible patent infringement litigation.

Spencer, the writer of Exhibits 601 and 602, was called to the witness stand. He testified that, in advising Certain-teed that in his opinion the Roos perforated lath patent was not valid, he nevertheless also pointed out in the 8804 same letters that his opinion might be wrong, that the patent, having been issued by the Patent Office, was valid on its face, and that validity litigation which might ensue upon ignoring it might be expensive and the damages high. In Exhibit 602, the letter of December 27, 1933, he recognized the possibility that a district court might hold the patent valid and that such a decision might be affirmed by the circuit court of appeals. He admitted that in Exhibit 601, the letter of March 4, 1936, he suggested methods of avoiding the Roos patent, and told Certain-teed that it was his judgment that it would be unwise completely to ignore it. In answer to the question whether or not he meant to suggest that Certain-teed did not act in good faith in taking the perforated lath license, he replied that he thought Certain-teed's action was consistent with his opinion.

It would not be reasonable to conclude, in view of the foregoing, that Certain-teed was not acting in good faith in taking the perforated lath license. In view of the qualifications put by Spencer upon his opinions, of the experience of Certain-teed in respect of contests of the validity of patents, and in view of the need of Certain-teed for the perforated lath and the demonstrated competency of the USG product to meet building code fire tests, it appears that the company was acting providently and honestly, rather than in bad faith, in taking the perforated lath license.

In respect of Newark, Tomkins testified that his company took the perforated lath license because it desired to be competitive with the other licensees who had signed a similar agreement; that Newark found it necessary to sell perforated lath; that he felt that the company had to be in a position to produce it and that he wished to be able to do so lawfully.[37] There appears to be nothing in the record directly relating to the question of the good faith of American or Ebsary in respect of their taking perforated lath licenses.

It cannot be concluded from the evidence that the perforated lath licenses were not executed in good faith.

Substantiation of the Government's charge, set forth in the statement of facts at the outset of this opinion, that the metallized board licenses were signed by the various licensees, except National, without any expectation that they would manufacture such board, but with the intention that they would purchase it from USG or National and then resell it at prices and under conditions fixed by USG, would evidence lack of good faith in the execution of these licenses. But this charge is not proved; on the contrary there is substantial evidence refuting it. The metallized
8805 board licenses were, as appears from the statement of facts, signed by National, Kelley, Certain-teed, Atlantic, American, Universal and Ebsary on October 5, 1934, October 12, 1934, November 2, 1934, November 30, 1934, December 4, 1934, April 4, 1935, and August 14, 1935, respectively. C. O. Brown testified that when Certain-teed executed the metallized board license it intended to manufacture such board; that Certain-teed had no agreement or understanding as to the price at which it would resell metallized board purchased from other companies; that he knew that the price bulletins sent out by USG did not apply to metallized board purchased from others, but only to such board manufactured by Certain-teed. Whittemore, of the same company, stated that price control applied only to patented products manufactured by Certain-teed, and that he understood that USG had no right to control any price except that of the manufactured product at its first sale by Certain-teed to a third party; that the amount of metal-

37 On May 1, 1937, Newark purchased the stock of Kelley. On June 23, 1937, Kelley executed its perforated lath license agreement with USG. On January 3, 1939, Newark merged with Kelley. On the same date USG granted Newark a perforated lath license, at the same time canceling the previous perforated lath license granted Kelley.

lized board which Certain-teed purchased from other manufacturers was so small that "you could wheel it out in a wheelbarrow." Neale of Atlantic testified that he talked with Fuller of that company about the desirability of executing a metallized board license and that he (Neale) favored such a license, since there was an increasing demand for that type of board. A memorandum of September 6, 1934, from Fuller to Neale (Exhibit 289, a declaration binding only upon Atlantic) states that Atlantic, realizing that much work would have to be done and much money spent to get the new type of product accepted in volume, "would rather see U. S. G. and National bear the brunt of this work, and hop on when the bus is running." Neale testified further that when Atlantic took the license it intended to manufacture metallized board, and that early in 1935 the company was taking steps to get into manufacturing immediately in the metallized board field. Neale said also that he knew that under this license the only price that could be fixed by USG was that upon such board as was manufactured by Atlantic under the patent. Black of American testified that Henning of USG thought that the board manufacturers should get behind this new insulating product, and that he (Black) agreed with this, that insulation board had developed into a strong competitor of gypsum boaid and that he felt that it would be a good thing for the manufacturers to enter the metallized board field. He testified further that American took the metallized board license with the expectation of manufacturing the product, and that it did manufacture the same after taking the license. Black testified also that it was his understanding at all times that the only price fixed by USG was that of board manufactured by American under the patents licensed by USG. In respect of Kelley and Newark, Tomkins stated that both of those companies manufactured metallized board.

Lenci of Ebsary said that that company took the 8806 metallized board license because it desired to manufacture the product; that he felt it was a matter of some importance to board manufacturers to be able to make a board and a lath with insulating qualities; that Ebsary started to make this product early in 1936. He testified further that Ebsary did not receive price bulletins on metallized board until the license had been signed, and may not have received them until it commenced manufacturing; that whatever the fact was as to this, he understood that the bulletin provisions applied only to such board as Ebsary itself made and sold. Lenci said also that there was no understanding or arrangement or agreement with USG that metallized board bulletin prices should be observed prior to the time Ebsary got into production. The testimony of these witnesses establishes the contrary of the Government's charge so far as the companies they represent is concerned. There appears to be no testimony on this subject directly relating to National and Universal.

It has been pointed out in the statement of facts at the outset of this opinion that the royalty payable for the privilege of manufacturing, using and selling gypsum board under the patents was an amount equivalent to a designated percentage of the selling price of the licensees on all gypsum board manufactured by them, whether patented or not. It is apparently urged by the Government that this evidences that the license agreements were not executed in good faith. This royalty provision is in effect a provision for a percentage of gross sales, and as such is but a convenient means of measuring the amount to be paid for the privilege of using the patents. It might with equal propriety have been a lump sum. Especially in view of the fact that it was unlikely for economic reasons that open-edge board would be manufactured after the licensees were authorized to make the superior product—a subject discussed in sub-topic (2) of this topic V—this provision in the license agreements can hardly be looked upon as an attempt to impose a royalty upon an unpatented product. For the same reason it cannot be said to have been intended to drive open-edge board off the market. In the absence of some such purpose in the royalty provision it is not seen how it can evidence bad faith in the execution of the licenses.

It is contended by the Government that the board manufactured and sold by the defendants was not covered by the patents on which the license agreements were based. If this charge were substantiated it would tend to prove bad faith in the execution of the agreements. But as pointed out in topic III the burden of proof on this aspect of the issue of bona fides, as well as upon the whole of that issue, is upon the Government. No evidence has been introduced by the Government proving or tending to prove that the board made and sold by the defendants was not made under the patents.

8807 It is charged by the Government that not all of the agreement between USG and the licensee companies was put into formal writing; that on the contrary, in addition to the signed license agreements, informal side agreements were made between USG and its licensees that they would discontinue making open-edge board and seconds of closed-edge board, that USG would advance and stabilize the prices for board, that all companies would increase their prices for other gypsum products, and that USG would continue to control prices through the use of other patents after expiration of the Utzman product patent in August, 1929. If there were evidence that such side agreements were entered into, that would tend to prove that the license agreements themselves were not executed in good faith. But there is no evidence that such side agreements were executed, and there is affirmative evidence to the effect that they were not. Griswold of American testified that he had no understanding with Avery or anyone else that price control would be extended under some other patent after expiration of the Utzman patent. C. O. Brown of Certain-teed recalled no understanding that USG would find some other patent to continue price control beyond August 6, 1929, the date of expiration of the Utzman patent. Whittemore had no recollection of any agreement or understanding between Certain-teed and USG or anyone else that USG would find a patent to continue price control upon expiration of the Utzman patent. George M. Brown testified that he never had any agreement or understanding with Avery or anyone in USG outside of those understandings which were contained in the written license agreements between Certain-teed and USG. Holland of Universal testified similarly that he never had any understanding with USG in addition to the provisions contained in Universal's license. Lenci of Ebsary testified that at the time the first price bulletins were supplied under the May 1929 licenses, he knew that the price control could only last until August 6, and had no reason to believe that it would continue beyond that date, that he was not sufficiently familiar with USG's patents to know whether or not USG had others which would take the place of the Utzman patent. The testimony establishing the absence of side agreements on the other subjects concerning which, as above set forth, such agreements were alleged to have been made, is discussed later in this topic V.

We conclude in respect of the first aspect of the charge of lack of bona fides that the evidence introduced by the Government shows that the license agreements were executed as bona fide agreements intended to bind each party to the promises made therein, not as sham agreements to disguise illegal purposes.

8808 Were the license agreements non-bona fide because executed with intent to accomplish restraints of trade beyond the proper limits of the patent monopoly, specifically (1) to raise and fix at arbitrary and non-competitive levels the price of gypsum board; (2) to accomplish improper standardization of gypsum board and its method of production; (3) to raise, maintain and stabilize the level of prices of unpatented materials—plaster and miscellaneous gypsum products; (4) to effectuate improper restriction upon distribution of gypsum board, plaster and miscellaneous gypsum products; or (5) to fix the prices at which manufacturing distributors resell gypsum board?

(1) Intent to raise the price of gypsum board: The charge in the complaint is that the defendants raised and fixed at arbitrary and non-competitive levels the price of gypsum board made and sold by them. It is to be borne in mind that within the ruling of the Supreme Court in the General Electric and Bement cases it is the right of a patentee to fix the price of his product at such level as he chooses and to require his licensees to sell at the price thus fixed. The patent law does not assume to regulate the reasonableness of the price of a patented product. Therefore, the price may lawfully be "arbitrary" in the sense that it is whatever the patentee within his discretion decides to fix, rather than a price determined by economic law. And since the licensor and licensee both lawfully sell at the price fixed by the former, that price is "non-competitive" as between them; and where there is a plurality of licensees the price will be "arbitrary" and "non-competitive" as between all of them and the licensor. All of this has been demonstrated in the discussion of the General Electric and Bement cases in topic II of this opinion. The charge of the Government, therefore, in the exact terms in which it is put, charges nothing illegal where bona fide patent licensing is involved. Nevertheless, if patent license agreements were executed with an intent by the parties that prices should be fixed at high levels, that might tend to prove that the agreements were not bona fide but were rather a disguise.

But the evidence fails to prove that the licenses were executed with an intent to fix prices at high levels, or at any given levels. The Government's witnesses testified that there was at no time any understanding or agreement, or even discussion, as to what the prices of gypsum board would be upon the execution of the licenses. Griswold of American testified that Avery did not discuss what prices the licensor might establish for gypsum board, that Avery told him on several occasions that the right to fix prices must be exercised by USG alone; and Griswold said that he did not have any discussion with anyone else as to what board prices would be. Blagden testified that Beaver had no understanding or even discussion with Avery as 8809 to what prices USG would fix under the Beaver license. Holland stated that there was no agreement between Universal and USG in respect of what prices would be on board. C. O. Brown of Certain-teed testified that he did not at any time have any knowledge or receive any information from USG as to what it would do in the future with regard to establishing minimum prices under the licenses; that he had never heard Avery or anyone else state what prices would or would not be fixed; that he was given to understand by USG at all times that the fixing of prices was entirely in its discretion. George M. Brown testified similarly that there was not at any time, either prior or subsequent to taking the licenses, any understanding with Avery or with anyone else that gypsum board prices would be raised; that he never had any discussion with Avery as to what Avery would or would not do with regard to prices on gypsum board; and that Certain-teed had nothing to do with fixing prices. Nelson said that at no time in his conversation with officers and representatives of Certain-teed did he ever hear of any agreement or understanding as to what USG would do about board prices if Certain-teed took a license, and that he never heard of any commitment on the part of USG that it would raise prices. Whittemore also testified on this subject. He stated that USG never made any commitment of any kind as to any figure at which it might fix the price of board after Certain-teed took the license, and that USG never made any statement with respect to what it intended to do concerning fixing prices. He said further that Certain-teed did not enter into its license agreement with USG "for the purpose of rigging up a price-fixing scheme." With respect to Ebsary, Lenci testified that he had no knowledge at any time during the conferences at Chicago on May 21 and 22, 1929, as to what board prices would be until after the licenses were signed and the first of the price bulletins handed to the licensees. He said, further, that Ebsary had no understanding or agreement that if it took a license USG would raise or stabilize prices on patented board, that he never had any discussion at any time with Avery, or with anyone else, as to what prices Avery would establish after execution of the licenses. Lenci recognized that if USG were to fix the price of board that would naturally have the effect of establishing a uniform price for the industry at a given time, but he stated that he did not understand that there was anything in the license contract which provided that USG should raise or stabilize the price of board. In a telegram to Gloyd of Texas of May 17, 1929 (Exhibit 720, received as binding upon USG only), Avery said: "There has been much discussion of infringement settlement and license on board. Nothing has yet developed although I think it safe to say the outlook is favorable. If license were generally closed it would be desirable to discuss a reasonable market price for the licensed product. Will keep you informed in hope 8810 that you may participate if outcome favorable." But there is no evidence that the suggested discussion of a reasonable market price ever took place.

It is to be noted that discussion of prices between the patentee and the prospective licensees would not have been illegal. In the General Electric case the prices established on the patented product were a part of the license agreement itself, and must therefore have been discussed by the parties in determining their contractual obligations. Since a patentee has a right to grant a license and to fix thereunder the price of the patented product and the licensee a duty to abide by such price, the patentee is not bound to refrain from discussing with a prospective licensee what the price is to be. Nevertheless, in the instant case the evidence affirmatively shows that neither before nor after the execution of the licenses were there any discussions between the licensor and the licensees on the subject of the minimum prices at which the patented products were to be sold. Apparently the various companies taking licenses were content to abide whatever action the licensor took with respect to prices, anticipating that the same would be reasonably profitable.

It is true that the evidence shows that the gypsum industry in the "Eastern area" was in a demoralized condition in the years 1927-1929. There was litigation, bad feeling, price cutting. The prices of board had fallen so low that for some manufacturers business was no longer profitable. In this situation it was important to the companies making board that prices reach a profitable level—and in signing the agreements with USG the several licensees were no doubt in part motivated not only by the desire to make closed-edge board and to settle or avoid litigation, but also by the expectation that the exercise of its price fixing right by USG as licensor would result in a price advance. Prices could not go down and business continue; any change would, as a matter of economic necessity, be upward. Indeed, it is not in dispute that it was the hope and expectation of the several prospective licensees that board prices would advance, and that they would be stabilized—in the sense that each licensee together with the licensor would be selling, at a given time, at the minimum prices fixed by the licensor. Lenci of Ebsary and Whittemore of Certain-teed both testified to the demoralized condition of the industry. Whittemore said, in reference to what he expected would happen to board prices when the May 1929 agreements were signed, that prices "couldn't decline any more. If they went any way they would have to advance." Lenci testified that at the time USG's first price bulletin was supplied to the licensees after the May 1929 licenses were executed in Chicago, someone remarked that he hoped they would get $30 wallboard. Lenci said that the price of board could not go lower than it was and his company stay in business, 8811 that all of the licensees were human enough to hope that prices were going to be stabilized and raised and that they were not disappointed. In the memorandum of July 3, 1929 (Exhibit 228), referred to above in the discussion of the first aspect of the bona fides question, C. O. Brown said: "Taking these things [outlined advantages of signing the bundling and bubble board licenses] into consideration, plus other advantages in working under the patent, we feel justified in taking a license and paying the royalty set by the Licensor"; and he explained that the "other advantages" he had in mind were "a stabilized market on gypsum lath," that is to say "price control." Exhibit 200 (a declaration binding only upon National), the minutes of a directors' meeting of National on July 23, 1929, recites that under the license agreements (the starch and bubble board agreements of November 1929) submitted to each of the wallboard manufacturers "the prices of wall board would be fixed for the whole industry for the term of approximately seventeen years"; and a concluding resolution authorizes the entering of a license agreement "provided that the United States Gypsum Company, by virtue of the agreement with this Corporation and with other manufacturers of gypsum wall board, shall control the price of wall board sold in the United States and its possessions." The minutes of August 27, 1929 (Exhibit 201), a declaration binding only upon National), authorized the signing of a license by the president if in his judgment such action "will result in legal stabilization of the markets." (Italics supplied.)

But evidence that it was expected by the licensees that the price fixing right in USG when exercised would result in the same minimum price of board at a given time for the licensor and for all the licensees who took licenses, and evidence that it was believed that as a matter of economic necessity any prices fixed by USG would be better than the demoralized prices of 1927-1929 and would be profitable prices, falls short of establishing an infent to fix prices at high levels and therefore short of showing lack of bona fides in the execution of the licenses.

Indeed, such evidence fails to prove any illegal intent in respect of price fixing. It is not illegal for parties negotiating a patent license agreement to hope, expect, or intend that the normal economic consequences of patent licensing will follow execution of the license. As said in topic II, a patent license agreement granting the right to make, use and vend the patented product under terms and conditions, including prices, fixed by the licensor, necessarily involves knowledge that a stabilized and presumably profitable price for the patented product will result as between the parties and therefore in the industry. The law cannot legitimatize patent licensing arrangements and at the same time 8812 stigmatize the normal consequences thereof. To conclude that the parties to a patent license agreement, providing for sale of the patented product at a price to be fixed by the licensor, may not lawfully at the time of executing the same anticipate that such prices as are from time to time thus fixed will be profitable and the same for both licensor and licensee, i.e., stabilized as between the parties, would be to conclude that the law forbids the execution of patent licenses with a price fixing provision. The General Electric case demonstrates that that is not the law. The foregoing applies as well to a plurality of patent licenses as to a single license.

(2) Intent to accomplish such standardization of gypsum board and its method of production (specifically, by elimination of the manufacture and sale of open-edge board, sec- onds and No. 2 board, and by the restrictive provision of the May 1929 licenses concerning the use of the bundling process) as is beyond the proper limits of the patent monopoly:

Open-edge board: Only Texas, Certain-teed and Ebsary are concerned in respect of the open-edge board issue unless a conspiracy is shown and the other defendant-licensees proved parties thereto, since only those companies had made open-edge board before signing their licenses. Beaver, Universal, National, Niagara and American had made only closed-edge or partially closed-edge board. Atlantic's commencement of manufacturing any board was coincidental with its taking a license.

The evidence establishes that there was no agreement to discontinue the manufacture and sale of open-edge board so far as Certain-teed and Ebsary are concerned. Nothing in the license agreements forbids making and selling it. Whittemore testified that Certain-teed had no agreement with USG not to make open-edge board, that according to his understanding Certain-teed was free to make any board, patented or unpatented, although it did not desire to make the open-edge variety because it could not sell it. C. O. Brown also said that Cerain-teed never had any understanding or agreement that the manufacture of open-edge board would be discontinued after the license was signed, and that there was no discussion of such a thing at the licensee meetings. Nelson testified to similar effect. Lenei of Ebsary stated that there was no understanding or agreement reached in the meetings at Chicago not expressed in the license contracts themselves, one of which he signed for Ebsary, and no agreement that the licensees would no longer make the open-edge board—that there was no agreement inside or outside the licenses that the licensees could not make such board if they desired. There is no evidence that Texas agreed not to make the open-edge board.

It may be taken for granted that those companies which had not manufactured open-edge board had no expectation of commencing its manufacture when they took the 8813 licenses granting them the right to make the closed-edge product. Likewise it is not disputed that each of the companies—Texas, Certain-teed and Ebsary—which had made the open-edge board took its license primarily to obtain the right to make the closed-edge type because this was demanded by the trade and the open-edge was not wanted. Therefore it may be inferred that such licensees did not expect, once they had secured the right to make the closed-edge board, to go forward further with the manufacture and sale of the inferior article. Lenci of Ebsary testified in this connection that when his company commenced to make board in 1928 it made the open-edge variety, "raw all the way around," and found it unsatisfactory because expensive and wasteful. After fabrication, a portion of such board had to be trimmed off by revolving saws, with resulting piles of raw edges and waste. It was extremely hard to sell the open-edge board—the dealer trade demanded the closed-edge variety at that time (1928-1929) being made by certain of Ebsary's competitors. Ebsary's primary reason for taking a license was its desire and need to make the closed-edge board, and once it got the license for this, the company was anxious to go over to closed-edge production, and independently, through Lenci and the other company officers, determined to do so. C. O. Brown testified similarly that Certain-teed took its license in order to make the less expensive and better board and could see no reason for making the inferior type—that the trade did not want it. Chism of Texas likewise said that prior to taking its April 1927 license Texas was making an open-edge board, which proved unsatisfactory to the trade and caused loss of business; that the cost of manufacture was high due to "peelers" and broken edges, and that the open-edge product was getting increasingly difficult to sell. Texas took the license because it wanted to get the right to make board under USG's patents, and immediately after taking the license commenced the manufacture of the closed-edge board and has made that type of product ever since. In short, the primary intention of these three companies in taking the licenses was to obtain the right to make closed-edge board, and this is what they did make thereafter. But they had no agreement either with USG or with one another not to make the open-edge variety, and were legally free to make and sell it. Their expectation, incidental to the taking of the licenses for the primary purpose of making the superior board, not thereafter to manufacture and sell the open-edge variety, was not illegal. The primary purpose being lawful, the incidental expectation cannot be unlawful. Those who have been making, outside of a license, an inferior product, are not bound by the Sherman Act to intend to continue its manufacture and sale in the event they take a license to make a superior product. The discontinuance of making and selling the inferior article will be the normal economic consequence, or accompaniment, of the manufacture and sale of the superior one. As stated 8814 in topic II, the law cannot legitimatize patent licensing arrangements and operations and at the same time stigmatize as unlawful the purpose to bring them about, the necessary means of bringing them about and carrying them on, or the consequences which normally flow from them. It was there pointed out also that a license to make, use and vend a superior patented product involves probable discontinuance of manufacture and sale of inferior products.

The Government appears to rely upon Exhibits 226 and 332 as evidence of an improper intent not to make and sell open-edge board. The first of these is a memorandum of June 4, 1929, by George M. Brown (a declaration binding only upon Certain-teed), referring to the benefits anticipated in stabilizing the industry by the making of a uniform product. But if it was not illegal to take a license and to make and sell thereunder the closed-edge board, it was not illegal to anticipate the benefits normally flowing from such a course. Exhibit 332 is USG's Report to Stockholders for the fiscal year ending December 31, 1929 (a declaration admitted as binding only upon USG). This report refers to the correction of infringement conditions by damage payments and licenses under royalty, and then states that the returns, while substantial, are relatively of a minor amount —that the major benefits are relief from legal contention and "increased consumption of wallboard products which should follow the quality improvements that a full and uniform use of the patented methods and products should assure." It was lawful for USG to offer to the several board manufacturers, and for them to accept, the closed-edge board license. Since all of the manufacturers took such licenses and made and sold such board there was bound to be full and uniform use thereof. That was a benefit which the patentee had a legal right to anticipate.

The Government appears to construe the provision of the licenses providing for payment as royalty of "an amount • • • equivalent to [a stated percentage] of the selling price of the Licensee of all plasterboard or gypsum wallboard of every kind, whether patented or unpatented, manufactured and sold by Licensee," as an agreement to make the patented product and no other—notwithstanding that this provision on its face impliedly recognizes the right of the licensees to make open-edge board.[38] It may be assumed, and there is support for the assumption in the testimony of 8815 Lenci, that with royalty thus measurable by all board produced, whether patented or not, and with open-edge board more expensive to make than the closed-edge type, it would have been a business impossibility to continue making the open-edge board as well as the closed-edge variety. Theoretically, it may be said that such a provision in the licenses must either be intended as an indirect application of the royalty to unpatented board or an attempt to eliminate the manufacture of the latter. But under the circumstances of this case as shown by the evidence it can hardly be said to be either, since it was unlikely economically that the open-edge board would be manufactured once the right to make the closed-edge board was acquired. In view of the attitude of the trade the open-edge board would not have been marketed even if the royalty had not been measurable in part by its sale, since it was inferior board and not desired in comparison with the closed-edge type.

The fifth and sixth "whereas clauses" in the Ebsary agreement of May 22, 1929, Exhibit 5, read as follows:

Whereas, Licensor has been unwilling to grant a license except upon the express condition that Licensee will manufacture plasterboard or gypsum wallboard only with a folded or protected edge similar to that manufactured by Licensor, so that Licensor may be protected in its own business of manufacturing and selling said patented products and realize to the fullest extent the benefits under said patents from the manufacture by said Licensee; and

Whereas, Licensor has agreed to waive the express condition aforesaid and grant the said License in considera-

38 The provision in full is: "2. The Licensee further agrees to pay to the Licensor for the right, license and privilege of manufacturing, using and/or selling plasterboard or gypsum wallboard, and for the privilege of using the processes and making and using the machines and/or inventions embodying the inventions set forth and claimed in said Utzman Patents and in any and all of said patents and applications for letters patent described in Exhibit A, an amount (hereinafter for convenience referred to as a license fee or royalty) equivalent to five per cent (5%) of the selling price of the Licensee of all plasterboard or gypsum wallboard of every kind, whether patented or unpatented, manufactured and sold by Licensee between the date hereof and August 6, 1929, the date of the expiration of said Utzman Patent Number 1,034,746, and thereafter an amount equivalent to one and one half per cent (1 1/2%) of the selling price of the Licensee of all such plasterboard or gypsum wallboard from August 6, 1929, until February 10, 1937, the date of the expiration of said Patent Number 1,330,413."

This is the language of the Ebsary license of May 22, 1929, Exhibit 5. The provisions of the Texas license of April 11, 1927, Exhibit 599, and of the Certain-teed license of May 22, 1929, Exhibit 4, are similar.

tion of the agreement of Licensee to pay to it for the license to use the processes and make and use the machines and/or inventions set forth and claimed in all of said patents and applications for letters patent the amounts hereinafter stated and upon the terms and conditions hereinafter set forth * * *

The Government contends that the language of the sixth "whereas clause" is only a "purported waiver of such condition" referred to in the fifth, and asserts that the fact is that by tacit agreement all of the companies understood in May, 1929, that the open-edge board was to be discontinued. The Government refers to the testimony of Lenci who, on being shown on direct examination only the fifth "whereas clause," said that it was the understanding of everybody who took out a license that the making of open-edge board was to be discontinued. But on cross-examination, when his attention was called to the sixth "whereas clause," Lenci corrected this statement as follows:

Q. Now, in the light of that paragraph, isn't it clear to you that there was no understanding whatsoever on the part of anybody that the licensees would discontinue the making of open-edge board?

A. Yes, that is right.

Q. There was no such understanding, was there?

8816 A. No.

Q. And there was no understanding that the licensees could not make open-edge board outside of this agreement, was there?

A. No.

Q. So that, your testimony is now, isn't it, that there was no agreement or understanding, either in the license or outside of the license, that the licensees could not make open-edge board if they wanted to?

A. That is correct. [Tr. 5234.]

The testimony thus given after both "whereas clauses" had been shown to the witness is accepted as correctly reflecting the facts.[39]

We conclude that there is no substantial evidence that the license agreements were executed with an unlawful intent to eliminate open-edge board, and therefore no substantial evidence that the agreements were in such respect not bona fide. Each of the parties to the license agreements was, as said above, free to make and sell open-edge board. Any expectation not to do so was the normal consequence, or accompaniment, of the purpose to make and sell the superior closed-edge product. To hold that the licensees were required to continue to make and sell the inferior article, or that they could not lawfully have an expectation, or even a definite intent, not to do so would be in effect to rule that they could not take the licenses to make the superior board. The law does not at one and the same time sanction an act and penalize the normal economic consequences thereof.

39 In the record the "whereas clauses" above mentioned were incorrectly referred to as the third and fourth rather than the fifth and sixth. This was because what was shown the witness during the examination was page 48 of the complaint on which four "whereas clauses" appeared. But there were two previous "whereas clauses" on page 47. The Ebsary agreement of May 22, 1929, is printed in the complaint at pages 47-57 inclusive.

Seconds and No. 2 board: A "second," in the parlance of the trade, is a defective board produced unintentionally in the process of manufacturing standard board. A "No. 2 board" is a board made of lower grade material than that used in the manufacturing of the standard board. Unlike open-edge board, both seconds and No. 2 board are, by definition, board made under the patents. The uncontradicted evidence is that there was no agreement or understanding that seconds and No. 2 board would not be manufactured, but on the contrary that the licensees were free at all times to make and sell such board. C. O. Brown of Certain-teed, Neale of Atlantic, and Black of Celotex were the witnesses examined on this subject. Brown testified that Certain-teed never had any agreement or understanding that the manufacture of second grade board would be discontinued after it received its license. Neale testified, referring to a letter of May 24, 1927 (Exhibit 279),[40] written by Fuller to Avery of USG, that at all times from that date forward
8817 Atlantic sold, without restriction, such seconds as resulted from its production and that he did not recall any agreement or understanding with Avery, USG, or anyone else with respect to whether Atlantic should sell seconds. Black testified that it was his understanding that there was no provision in the licenses which prohibited Celotex from selling seconds if it wanted to, and no agreement between Celotex and USG by which Celotex agreed not to market seconds.

40 This letter (a declaration binding only upon Atlantic) refers to the undesirability of selling seconds in certain markets, to the restriction of sales of seconds to such territory as might absorb them with the least disturbance to the trade in general, and to the policy of Atlantic to sell as few seconds anywhere as possible. The letter refers also to the need of each wallboard manufacturer for some outlet for No. 2 board, stating that this is logical in territory fairly near the plant since this reduced price commodity cannot bear much freight.

It is contended by the Government that the provision of the license agreements requiring seconds to be marked as such evidences an intention to accomplish their elimination.[41] On the contrary it indicates that it was expected that seconds would be made—as they inevitably are, according to the testimony—otherwise why require them to be marked. If there were to be no seconds, the marking provision would be superfluous. It is reasonably inferable that the real purpose of this provision was to prevent harming the reputation of the standard board by the confusion of seconds with it. Such a precaution was not improper.

We think there is no warrant in the evidence for a conclusion that the license agreements were executed with an intent to eliminate seconds and No. 2 board, and no warrant, therefore, for a conclusion that they were in this respect not bona fide.

The bundling process: USG's Birdsey patent No. 1,696,877, of December 25, 1928, covered a method of binding seven or eight pieces of gypsum board or lath together with a gummed tape which ran lengthwise along the edges of the board or lath. The May 1929 license agreements, except that with Certain-teed, granted rights under this patent and required that the licensees use this bundling process and no other.[42] As is explained in the statement of facts at the outset of this opinion, Certain-teed was first granted license rights under the bundling patent by a supplemental license agreement executed July 3, 1929. This contained the restrictive provision. The November 1929 agreements did not contain the restrictive provision.

It appears from the evidence that there is no satisfactory way of bundling gypsum board or lath except by means of the Birdsey process. C. O. Brown testified that Cer-8818 tain-teed wanted to bundle its lath and knew of no better or more economical way than the process cov-

41 The license provision was as follows: "9. The Licensee and the Licensor each expressly covenants and agrees that all of said patented product sold by it and commonly known in the trade as 'seconds' shall be plainly invoiced as seconds and shall be plainly marked with a visible red stamp or label firmly fixed on each of said board showing the word 'seconds' in letters at least three inches in height." (Exhibit 3, paragraph 9.)

42 The restrictive provision was: "It is expressly understood that licensee in its business of manufacturing and selling plasterboard and/or gypsum wallboard will use only said bundle set forth and claimed in said Patent Number 1,696,877 and will not use any other bundle or method of bundling plasterboard during the term of said license." This is the language of the Ebsary agreement of May 22, 1929 (Exhibit 5).

ered by the bundle patent. Chism said that prior to its license of February 10, 1937, Texas did not bundle wallboard at all, and that lath was tied with wire, baling wire or a little heavier, wrapped around the bundle at both ends—about the same method as that used in baling hay; that this was not satisfactory because it caused too much breakage, and because the wire would slip and cut the lath; that after Texas took the license it used the Birdsey patent system of bundling by the use of paper strips on both board and lath—that it has used that invention ever since and is still using it.

It is inferable that the restrictive provision of the May 1929 licenses (and of Certain-teed's July 3, 1929, supplemental license) was put into the contracts for two purposes: to exploit the bundling patent and to accomplish packaging and delivery of board and lath by the licensees in a manner which would preserve quality, i.e., without breakage. Delivery of board by the licensees in broken condition would tend to devalue the product and thus lessen the pecuniary reward of the patentee's monopoly. Within the principle of the General Electric decision, it would be a not improper license term to require packaging of a patent product in such manner as would sustain its quality and therefore the price. Quaere: Can the owner of a product patent who is also owner of a process patent covering packaging of the product insure proper packaging by requiring use of the patented process only? Is such a restriction illegal as involving a purpose beyond the proper scope of either or both such patent monopolies?

It is urged that if the effect of such a restrictive provision is to drive off the market a competing process, whether patented or not, the provision would be illegal under the principle of the Motion Picture Patents case, discussed in topics II and III, because not the incidental consequence of the proper use in its own field of the patent monopoly, but its use in restraint of trade in a field where the rights to compete are common. The ruling in National Lockwasher Co. v. George K. Garrett Co., 137 F. (2d) 255 (C. C. A. 3d, 1943), rehearing denied, id., is also urged as rendering such a provision illegal. In that case the plaintiff sought damages for infringement of a patent for a compression spring washer. The defendant opposed recovery upon the ground that the plaintiff had issued licenses to various manufacturers of metal washers under a form of agreement by which as licensees they undertook that they would not make or sell any form of "non-tangling" spring washers not covered by the plaintiff's patent. The court held, in view of this restriction, that the plaintiff was using its patent to suppress competition by unpatented articles, and it accordingly denied recovery. It is to be noted that this case did not involve the use of a process patent in aid of a product patent. It 8819 is contended, moreover, that even in the absence of a competing process or product such a restrictive provision would be illegal, since it would tend to stifle the use of another process or product, if such should be devised, and to discourage invention.

It is pointed out in topic VI.(2) of this opinion that it is neither necessary nor proper to rule upon the question of the legality of the restrictive bundling provision in the May 1929 licenses and the Certain-teed supplemental license of July 3, 1929, for the reason that the question is moot, the provision having been eliminated in the November 1929 licenses. Assuming for the purpose of the present discussion, however, that the restriction in the May licenses and the Certain-teed July license was illegal, it would follow technically that there was in this respect an improper purpose involved in their execution and that they were in this respect, therefore, not bona fide. But since this purpose was abandoned when the November licenses were executed with the restrictive provision omitted, the provision and its purpose cannot be held to support the charge of an intent to accomplish improper industry standardization. While the earlier licenses and the negotiations concerning them and the operations under them are relevant to the purposes of the November licenses, it is the latter which are now outstanding, and under attack in this suit. An abandoned purpose, even if it was illegal while it existed, in the previous licenses, cannot be held to vitiate the present licenses.

In the May 1929 licenses and the Certain-teed July license each licensee agreed to pay the licensor for the right to use the bundling process "a license fee or royalty of ten cents (10¢) per thousand square feet of plasterboard and/or gypsum wallboard which is sold by it in bundles of any kind." [43] In the November 1929 contracts the provision was for "an amount (hereinafter referred to as a license fee or royalty) equivalent to ten cents (10¢) per one thousand (1,000) square feet of plasterboard and/or gypsum wallboard which is sold by Licensee in bundles of any kind, whether or not the bundles shall be made according to the claims set forth and claimed in said patents * * *. The term 'bundle' shall not include unbundled material wired or strapped for purpose of transportation or unbundled material shipped for export or coastwise trade in fiber, wooden or other crates." [44] It is urged by the Government that these provisions evidence an attempt to standardize by eliminating other methods of packaging. But in view of the fact, shown by the evidence, that no other process was available (except, for lath, the common and uneconomic method of tying with wire), this cannot be concluded.

43 This is the language of the Ebsary agreement of May 22, 1929 (Exhibit 5).

8820 (3) Intent to raise, maintain and stabilize the level of prices of unpatented materials—plaster and miscellaneous gypsum products:[45] All of the witnesses examined upon this subject testified convincingly that there was at no time any understanding or agreement that prices would be raised or fixed upon plaster or any unpatented gypsum product. Griswold of American testified that there was no discussion between him and Avery of the price of gypsum block and plaster, and no agreement with USG or with any of the other licensees about plaster, block, or tile prices; that it was understood that such an agreement would be illegal. Blagden said that the Beaver license had nothing to do with the price of plaster or miscellaneous gypsum products, and that he had no understanding with Avery, or with anyone else, as to the price of plaster or any other unpatented material. Holland testified that when he became president of Universal, he had no understanding with USG, or anyone else, with respect to the prices of plaster or other unpatented products. With respect to Certain-teed, C. O. Brown stated that he had no understanding that the license agreements of either May or November 1929 would be used to raise or fix the prices of plaster or other unpatented gypsum products; that so far as he knew there was never at any time any agreement or understanding reached regarding the fixing of prices of such materials; that he knew that price fixing under the licenses was applicable only to the patented articles made by Certain-teed, and that Certain-teed was free to sell unpatented products at such prices and on such terms as it chose. George M. Brown testified similarly that Certain-

44 This is the language of the Ebsary agreement of October 18, 1929 (Exhibit 11).

45 The miscellaneous gypsum products referred to in the complaint, as specified by the bill of particulars, are gypsum block, gypsum tile, and Keene's cement.

teed never had any understanding with anyone about the prices it should charge for plaster, gypsum block, gypsum tile, or Keene's cement. Nelson of the same company, testifying concerning the May 1929 license, said that he had never heard of any agreement or understanding that the price control provided for therein should extend to unpatented articles such as plaster, Keene's cement, tile, or block. Whittemore also, referring to the May 1929 license, said that there was never any understanding or agreement with anyone that the prices of plaster or unpatented gypsum products would be raised or fixed; that the only prices which USG could fix under the license agreement were those of patented articles made by Certain-teed.

Lenci of Ebsary testified that he never had any understanding or agreement with anyone with respect to plaster prices other than what was contained in the license agreement or bulletins; that there was nothing in the license agreement concerning plaster; and that the only thing in the bulletins was the protective provision against violation of the minimum price requirements through the 8821 device, among others, of giving away plaster or other products in connection with the sale of board, or the sale of plaster or other products, in connection with the sale of board, at a price unduly below the prevailing market price of such products. Lenci testified further that there was nothing that kept Ebsary from free competition in plaster, and that in his experience such competition was extremely free during the last ten or fifteen years. Black said that Celotex never had any agreement or understanding with USG, or with any other licensee, to raise or fix the prices of plaster or other unpatented gypsum products; that he knew that the license agreements which his company had related only to patented board so far as the price fixing provisions were concerned. Tomkins of Newark stated that he at all times felt perfectly free to charge any price for plaster that he wanted to; that the only effect that the bulletins had was to prevent his making a fake or false price for plaster in order to give a rebate to a board purchaser; that Newark never had any agreement or understanding of any kind with respect to white plaster or any other gypsum product than board. Chism of Texas testified that he understood at all times that the price fixing provisions in the two licenses which Texas signed applied only to patented board manufactured and sold by Texas under the licenses, and that Texas had no agreement or understanding in respect of plaster prices or the prices of miscellaneous gypsum products. In this state of the evidence, a finding that the licenses were executed with the intention of raising and stabilizing the prices of unpatented materials, and that they were therefore not bona fide, would not be warranted.

It may be assumed, indeed the evidence shows, that the parties to the license agreements were aware that settlement of the litigation, by the signing of the licenses, and the ending of the price war which had demoralized the industry, and the fixing of prices by USG at levels which would presumably be profitable, would as a matter of normal economic consequence improve general conditions in the industry and therefore result in better prices for all products. In a letter written to McCrady of American on April 12, 1928, by Griswold of the same company (Exhibit 141, a declaration binding only upon American), Griswold says: "There is no question but that if the Wall Board market were fixed up the Wall Plaster market would automatically be affected at the same time." Griswold testified, when asked whether he had discussed with Avery whether a stable price for board would have an effect upon plaster or tile prices, that "we probably exchanged views on the possibility of that being the case, because that naturally would follow, that if prices on one of the principal products of a company were at a fairly remunerative basis, and had been changed to that basis, and another article they sold was sold below the cost of manufacture, it was natural to figure that it would influence to a certain extent 8822 the lower prices, that a man wouldn't be trying to make all of his money on one product he was selling, and giving the other one away." Lenci stated frankly that, since under the price protective provisions a licensee would not be free to give away plaster or to sell it at an extraordinarily low price in order to influence the sale of board, that might have the effect of stabilizing plaster prices as compared with their condition prior to the execution of the licenses. It is, indeed, conceded by the defendants that although after the signing of the May 1929 licenses the bulletins established board prices at the levels which USG had been following just prior to the licenses, subsequently, until August 6, 1929, and (except for Texas) after the execution of the November 1929 agreements, the prices on patented gypsum board were advanced over what they had been during the price war, and that the prices of other gypsum products improved during the same period over their condition during the price war. This is discussed more particularly in topic VI (1) and (3) of this opinion. But these considerations evidence no improper intent disclosing bad faith in the execution of the license agreements. The primary purpose of USG in granting the licenses was the settlement of litigation, the collection of damages for infringement, the obtaining of royalties, the fixing of a profitable price on patented board, and the securing of the various advantages which would normally flow from the general manufacture and sale of the superior product. The primary purpose of the licensees in signing the licenses was the obtaining of the right to make the superior product and the settlement or avoidance of litigation. The granting and accepting of the licenses with these primary purposes and with the normal expectation also, by the licensees, or some of them, that USG would fix a reasonably profitable price on board was, as has been demonstrated, lawful. That being true, the fact that the parties knew that as a matter of economic consequence the price of plaster and miscellaneous gypsum products would also improve cannot taint with bad faith the execution of the license agreements. A contrary view would make unlawful the incidental consequences of lawful patent licensing.

4. Intent to effectuate improper restriction upon the distribution of gypsum board, plaster and miscellaneous gypsum products; specifically, to "eliminate" jobbers through the discontinuance of a sales discount:

In the theoretical economic sense a jobber is a functionary in the wholesaling process. He buys from the manufacturer, or from another wholesaler who has bought from the manufacturer, and sells to the dealer. The jobber's service is that of relieving the manufacturer, or in some instances the wholesaler, from the necessity of direct contact with the dealer—this being accomplished by the jobber's sales force.

As explained in the statement of facts at the outset
8823 of this opinion, in the gypsum industry USG and the several licensees are the manufacturers of gypsum products, and the dealers in such products are largely retailers of building materials and mason supplies.

The price bulletin issued by USG on May 23, 1929 (Exhibit 404, a declaration binding only upon USG), immediately after the execution of the May 1929 licenses, had fixed the minimum list price at which the licensees might sell patented board made by them to dealers. On May 24, by a further bulletin (Exhibit 408, a declaration binding only upon USG), USG authorized the sale of such board to jobbers at a 10% discount from the dealer price. On August 8, 1930, USG by a bulletin (Exhibit 430, a declaration binding only upon USG) withdrew this discount. This bulletin stated: "Effective this date the price to jobbers and distributors is the same as the price to the regular dealer trade, as per our letters * * * [of various dates]" establishing prices to dealers. The reason for the withdrawal of the discount will be discussed in topic VI (4) of this opinion.

The evidence introduced by the Government fails to establish that the license agreements were executed with an intent to eliminate jobbers through this withdrawal of discount and that they were on that account not bona fide. The witnesses examined on this subject all testified that there was no agreement or understanding whereby jobbers would be eliminated from the gypsum board distributive system, and no understanding or agreement that a jobber discount would be discontinued and the price to jobbers made the same as the dealer price. Thus Lenci of Ebsary testified that he did not enter into or know of any agreement or understanding that jobbers would be eliminated from the distributive system. He stated further that it was not his understanding that there was anything in the license agreement executed by Ebsary, or in the bulletins, which prohibited the selling of Ebsary's goods to jobbers. He testified also that at the May meetings in Chicago, when the Certain-teed, Niagara and Ebsary licenses were signed, there was no agreement to eliminate jobbers. George M. Brown of Certain-teed stated that the only agreements he had with Avery or anyone in USG were those contained in the written licenses. Black testified that it was his understanding that there was no prohibition in the USG-American license (of November 25, 1929) against American's selling to jobbers. The issuance, immediately upon execution of the May 1929 licenses, of the bulletin of May 24 (Exhibit 408) providing for a discount to jobbers evidences that at that time it was intended that sales to jobbers should be made.

The Government refers to a letter of November 12, 1929 (Exhibit 181, a declaration binding only upon American), written by Kling to Avery before the signing of the November 24, 1929, agreement between American and 8824 USG. Kling asks Avery, among other things, for "Your approval of our (4) Jobbers—the Fairmount [sic] W. P. Co., the Toledo P. P. Co., the Cleveland Gypsum Co., and Abbey Co." To this Avery responded under date of November 16, 1929 (Exhibit 182, a declaration binding only upon USG):

> • • • You ask for our approval of your jobbers. Under paragraph 9 of the contract you have the right to sell jobbers (being those who do not manufacture but buy and sell plasterboard or gypsum wallboard in straight cars or in mixed cars with other building material and who do not sell at retail) without any approval from us. If the jobbers you name are regular jobbers as above stated, then you would have the right to sell the patented product to them. • • •

The letter from Kling evidences that American was selling to jobbers and desired to continue doing so. Neither that letter nor the one from Avery is any evidence of an intent to "eliminate" them or withdraw the discount. On the contrary these letters indicate an intent to continue to deal with jobbers.

In the bulletin of May 24, 1929 (Exhibit 408), whereby the discount to jobbers was established, Henning of USG said: "You will please send us a list of the jobbers to whom you are selling patented board." Lenci of Ebsary testified that at a licensee meeting on June 6, 1929, Henning discussed the question of jobbers in the industry and asked the licensees to send him the names of those to whom they were selling as jobbers. The Government refers to this as a move to eliminate jobbers gotten under way as soon as the industry was once organized under the license agreements. But this request for the names of jobbers and the (undefined) discussion of the question of jobbers in the industry are equivocal in respect of any intent to eliminate them or withdraw the discount. What Henning's purpose was in obtaining the names is speculative. He may have desired them in order to satisfy himself by investigation that the persons named as jobbers were really jobbers, rather than dealers.

Although the charge in the complaint of improper restriction upon distribution includes plaster and miscellaneous gypsum products, i.e., unpatented materials, as well as gypsum board, there is no evidence concerning any dealings by USG or the licensees with jobbers in respect of plaster and miscellaneous gypsum products.

It cannot be concluded that the license agreements were executed with intent to "eliminate" jobbers, and that they were for that reason not bona fide.

(5) Intent to fix the prices at which manufacturing distributors resell gypsum board: The term manufacturing distributors is applicable to companies which manufacture and sell gypsum plaster but which do not, for lack of investment in the large amount of plant equipment necessary in the making of gypsum board, manufacture board. In order to be able to market a full line of products, the manufacturing distributors purchase gypsum board from USG or one or more of its licensees. The purchases are made at a discount, and the sales of the board are 8825 made to the same dealer trade as that to which USG and its licensees sell their board, and therefore are made in competition with USG and its licensees. As pointed out in the statement of facts at the outset of this opinion, both the May and the November 1929 license agreements provided that a licensee might not sell patented gypsum board to manufacturing distributors without the written consent of USG. The manufacturing distributors referred to in the evidence are the Structural Gypsum Corporation, of Linden, New Jersey; the Connecticut Adamant Plaster Company, of New Haven, Connecticut; and the Oakfield Gypsum Products Corporation, of Oakfield, New York, hereinafter referred to as Structural, Connecticut Adamant, and Oakfield, respectively.[46]

There is no substantial evidence that the license agreements were executed with intent to fix the prices at which manufacturing distributors resell gypsum board. All the witnesses examined on the subject testified that there was no understanding or agreement of any kind that the resale prices of such distributors should be regulated or controlled. Neale of Atlantic stated that neither he nor his company was ever a party to any understanding or agreement to control resale prices of manufacturing distributors. Whittemore of Certain-teed stated that he fully understood that the only prices which USG could fix under the license agreement (his reference was to the May 1929 agreement) were the prices of patented articles made by his company, that USG had no right to control any price on board except the price at the first sale made by Certain-teed, and that he understood that USG's right to fix prices did not extend to resales by either dealers or manufacturing distributors. Lenci of Ebsary said that while he at one time thought that the ownership of a patent carried with it the right to control resale prices, this misapprehension had been acquired from something he had read and was not the result of anything that had been said or done at any licensee meeting or of any understanding or agreement with USG or anyone else, and that his erroneous impression was corrected by MacLeish, USG's attorney, at one of the licensee meetings in 1932. He testified, further, that notwithstanding his impression up to that time, at no time had it been his purpose or that of Ebsary to control the prices or practices of manufacturing distributors, and that they at no time had any understanding or arrangement or agreement with anyone to the effect that Ebsary would control or attempt to control the resale prices at which manufacturing dis-8826 tributors or any of them sold board purchased from Ebsary. Stromquist testified that Universal never at any time had any agreement or understanding as to what resale prices should be charged by the manufacturing distributor to which it sold, to wit, Oakfield.

46 The bill of particulars lists as manufacturing distributors, in addition to those named in the text, the American Cyanamid & Chemical Corporation, of New York, N. Y.; The Calvin Tomkins Company, of New York, N. Y.; the Grand Rapids Plaster Company, of Grand Rapids, Michigan; the Michigan Gypsum Company, of Grand Rapids, Michigan; The Alabastine Company, of Grand Rapids, Michigan; and the Wasem Plaster Company, of Fort Dodge, Iowa. No evidence was introduced concerning those companies.

The clause of the licenses forbidding sales to manufacturing distributors without the written consent of USG does not, looked at by itself, constitute evidence of an intention to control the prices of such distributors. It is equivocal on that issue. How this clause was applied in practice will be commented upon in topic VI (5) of this opinion.

Nothing in the record warrants the conclusion that the license agreements were executed with intent to fix the prices at which manufacturing distributors resell gypsum board, and that they were on that account not bona fide.

We conclude in respect of the second aspect of the first question of fact in the case that the evidence fails to show that the license agreements were executed with intent to gain objectives beyond the proper limits of a patent monopoly in any of the respects charged.

It is, therefore, concluded, in respect of the whole of the first issue of fact, that the evidence fails to establish that the license agreements were entered into by the defendants not as bona fide license agreements but to give color of legality to a combination to restrain trade in violation of the Sherman Act.

VI

The Operations of the Defendants and the Limits of the Patent Monopoly

Notwithstanding the conclusions reached in respect of the first issue of fact, it still remains to determine whether or not the actual operations of the defendants were carried beyond the proper limits of the patent monopoly and licensing thereunder, i.e., beyond the activities contemplated by the agreements as written and into the field denounced by the Sherman Act. This is the second issue of fact in the case. It is charged (1) that the price of gypsum board was raised and fixed at arbitrary and non-competitive levels; (2) that improper standardization of gypsum board and its method of production was accomplished; (3) that the level of prices of unpatented materials—plaster and miscellaneous gypsum products—was raised, maintained and stabilized; (4) that improper restriction upon distribution of gypsum board, plaster and miscellaneous gypsum products was effectuated; and (5) that the prices at which manufacturing distributors resold gypsum board were fixed.

8827 (1) Raising the price of gypsum board: It is pointed out in topic V (1) of this opinion that the charge in the complaint that the defendants raised and fixed the prices of gypsum board at arbitrary and non-competitive levels, alleges nothing illegal where bona fide patent licensing is involved, for the reason that under the patent law it is the right of a patentee to fix the price of the patented product at such levels as he chooses and to require his licensees to sell at the price thus fixed. The question whether or not at the time of the execution of the license agreements there was an intent by the parties that the price of gypsum board should be raised to high levels has been discussed only because of its possible bearing upon the question of the bona fides of the agreements. It has been concluded that no such intent is shown. It is therefore not necessary to determine whether or not the price of gypsum board was actually raised to high levels. But it may be noted that the evidence is as follows: After the signing of the May 1929 licenses by National, Certain-teed, Ebsary and Niagara, the USG bulletins established board prices at the levels at which USG had been selling board just prior to the execution of these licenses. For example, the price bulletin of May 23, 1929 (Exhibit 404, a declaration binding only upon USG), set 3/8" standard board at $20 per M square feet on the Oakfield, New York-Grand Rapids, Michigan, etc. mill base. On the New Brighton, New York, mill base the figure was $22.60; on the Charlestown, Massachusetts, mill base, $23.65; on the Buffalo, New York, Loveland, Colorado (mixed car shipments), and Philadelphia mill bases, $22.73, $30 and $22.60; respectively. These were the first prices announced after the signing of the May licenses. Lenci of Ebsary testified that these prices were about what USG was getting for its board at the time, and higher than Ebsary had been getting. Subsequently, until August 6, 1929, and (except for Texas) after the execution of the November licenses, the prices were advanced over what they had been during the price war. This is admitted by the defendants—reference being made to Exhibits 410, 413, 414, 416 and 33 (declarations binding only upon USG), the last bringing the prices down to February 12, 1940. But it is not in dispute that these prices did not exceed those which prevailed prior to the first license (the Beaver license) and the price war. Since 1935 the prices have been lowered so that for the past several years wallboard has sold for $23 per M square feet and lath for $13, as compared with $30 and $15-$16, respectively, before the first license. This is attested by Exhibit 33 and Exhibit 34 (a declaration binding only upon USG) and by the testimony of Griswold of American.

While the charge of the Government, as stated in the complaint, is that the price of gypsum board was raised and fixed at arbitrary and non-competitive levels, the essence of the Government's contention on this subject, as made 8828 in the Government's briefs, is that it was illegal for USG to fix, and for the licensees to abide by, the board prices at all. Its reliance is upon the ruling in United States v. Socony-Vacuum Oil Co. and United States v. Bausch & Lomb Co., referred to in topic III of this opinion, to the effect that price fixing, reasonable or unreasonable, is unlawful per se. But, as pointed out in topic III, neither of these cases involved patents. And neither of them purports to overrule the General Electric case which, as demonstrated in topic II, legitimatizes price fixing under patent license agreements and therefore permits the establishment of prices at "arbitrary" and "non-competitive" levels.

(2) Was there such standardization of gypsum board and its method of production (specifically, by the elimination of the manufacture and sale of open-edge board, seconds and No. 2 board, and by the restrictive provision of the May 1929 licenses concerning the use of the bundling process) as is beyond the proper limits of the patent monopoly?

Open-edge board: It is not in dispute that Texas, Certain-teed and Ebsary, the only companies which prior to their licenses had made open-edge board, discontinued its manufacture and sale once they had acquired the right to make closed-edge board. It may be assumed that the other licensees, who had not manufactured the open-edge board, did not commence its manufacture. But it was pointed out in topic V (2) that according to the evidence the open-edge board was wasteful and not desired by the trade, that the primary purpose of Texas, Certain-teed and Ebsary in taking their licenses was to acquire the right to make and sell the superior closed-edge board, and that a concomitant expectation that the open-edge board would be discontinued was not beyond the proper limits of the patent monopoly and licensing thereunder. It follows that the actual discontinuance of manufacture and sale of open-edge board by Texas, Certain-teed and Ebsary, and the non-manufacture and sale of such board by the other licensees, was not illegal. Since it was lawful to take the licenses to make the superior board, it was not unlawful not to make and sell the uneconomic open-edge variety. The normal economic consequence of what is lawful cannot be unlawful. As pointed out in topic II, at the time the General Electric-Westinghouse license was executed in 1912, about 50% of the total number of lamps sold were of the ordinary carbon filament type, but after nine years of operation under the license the percentage of tungsten filament lamps increased, because of their superior quality, to some 97% of total production, that is to say, the carbon filament lamps substantially disappeared from the market. It was not concluded in the General Electric case that on this account the operations of the parties under the General Electric-Westinghouse license had been carried beyond the proper limits of the patent monopoly.

8829 Seconds and No. 2 board: The Government asserts that in 1929 USG issued bulletins under which the minimum prices at which seconds and No. 2 board could be sold were raised until they were the same as that for standard board, and that since this occurred there has been no sale of seconds and No. 2 board. The prices fixed by the bulletins are set forth in the margin.[47] It appears not to be disputed by the defendants that the effect of the bulletins was to set the minimum price of seconds and No. 2 board at the same figure as that for standard board, and in the comments to follow this will be assumed, although, as will be noted from the bulletin prices set forth in the margin, No. 2 board stood on the Oakfield, New York, basing point at the same price as No. 1 only from June 26 to July 9, 1929, and seconds at no time reached the same figure as the standard board; also on the New Brighton, New York, basing point No. 2 board stood at the same price as No. 1 only from June 26 to July 9, 1929, and the seconds at no time reached the same price as the standard board.

The evidence fails to show that there was a complete elimination of either seconds or No. 2 board. C. O. Brown of Certain-teed testified that on December 3, 1929 (he was referring to Exhibit 236, a memorandum from Henley of Certain-teed to Coffin of the same company[48]), Certain-teed was making seconds and that every company unavoidably 47 The bulletins referred to are Exhibits 404 of May 23, 1929; 410 of June 7, 1929; 411 of June 19, 1929; 413 of June 26, 1929; and 414 of July 9, 1929. (The exhibits are declarations binding only upon USG.) These bulletins show that: On May 23, 1929 (Exhibit 404), the price of 3/8" #1 Grade (standard) wallboard f.o.b. Oakfield, New York; Gypsum, Ohio; Plasterco, Virginia; Grand Rapids, Michigan; Ft. Dodge, Iowa; Southard, Oklahoma; Sweetwater, Texas; and Acme, Texas, was $20 per M sq. ft.; of #2 Grade wallboard of the same dimension, $17.50 per M sq. ft.; and of seconds of the same dimension $15 per M sq. ft. On June 7, 1929 (Exhibit 410), the price of #2 board for the same dimension and basing points was raised to $18.75, and the price of seconds to $16.25, per M sq. ft., no change being made in the price of standard board. These same prices were continued by the bulletin of June 19, 1929 (Exhibit 411). On June 26, 1929 (Exhibit 413), #2 board was priced at $20, the same as the standard board; and seconds were priced at $17.50. On July 9, 1929 (Exhibit 414), standard board went to $22.50, seconds remained at $20, and no mention was made of #2 board, the same remaining therefore at the previous figure of $20 per M sq. ft.

On May 23, 1929 (Exhibit 404), the price of 3/8" #1 Grade (standard) wallboard, based on New Brighton, New York, was $22.60 per M sq. ft.; of #2 Grade of the same dimension, $20.10 per M sq. ft.; and of seconds of the same dimension, $17.60 per M sq. ft. On June 7, 1929 (Exhibit 410), the #2 board was raised to $21.35 per M sq. ft.; the seconds to $18.85; and, no change being made in the standard board price, it thus remained at $22.60. On June 19, 1929 (Exhibit 411), no price change was made for the New Brighton, New York, basing point, and prices therefore remained the same on standard, #2 board, and seconds. On June 26, 1929 (Exhibit 413), the New Brighton price for 3/8" #2 board was changed from $21.35 per M sq. ft. to $22.60; and the seconds from $18.85 to $20.10; no change was indicated in the standard board. On July 9, 1929 (Exhibit 414), the 3/8" standard board based on New Brighton was priced at $25.10 per M sq. ft., the seconds at $22.60; no change in price of #2 board being indicated, that remained at $22.60.

The foregoing figures are given as illustrative. The bulletins refer also to prices f.o.b. other basing points.

48 This memorandum (a declaration binding only upon Certain-teed) states that the writer is endeavoring to work out a seconds policy with USG.

does. Neale of Atlantic testified that as his company
8830 improved in the art of board manufacturing naturally fewer and fewer seconds were made. Fuller, in a letter of May 24, 1927 (Exhibit 279, a declaration binding only upon Atlantic), referred to in topic V (2), mentioned the policy of Atlantic to sell as few seconds anywhere as possible, and pointed out that seconds will run into a much higher percentage during the period of getting a new wallboard plant running smoothly than they should later on. In the same letter he referred to Atlantic's hope of disposing of the necessary output of seconds with as little damage to established markets as possible. This is the only evidence on the subject and it shows a diminution rather than an elimination of seconds. It shows nothing concerning No. 2 board. Assuming, however, that seconds and No. 2 board went wholly off the market as a result of the bulletins, there would be no illegality.

As explained in topic V (2), a second was a defective board, and No. 2 board was made of inferior material and accordingly its sale would be harmful to the reputation of the first quality product. C. O. Brown testified that the selling of seconds is harmful to the reputation of the perfect grade of any manufactured product. Protection by a patentee manufacturer of the quality of his product is important commercially, for if quality and reputation for quality descend so will demand and price. It would have been lawful for USG as patentee, if it so desired, to refrain from making and selling No. 2 board and, to the extent that they were made in the normal process of manufacturing standard board, to refrain from selling seconds. Similarly, it would have been lawful for USG directly to require this of its licensees in order that their sale of inferior products would not damage the reputation of the board produced by USG. Since the No. 2 board and seconds were, as stated in topic V (2), by definition board made under the patents, it was lawful for USG to fix the minimum price at which they were sold. Accordingly, it could fix the price of all patented board products at the same figure. And if the purpose of this was indirectly to accomplish a diminution or elimination of the sale by the licensees of the inferior products, this was lawful. In the General Electric-Westinghouse license there was a restriction against selling second grade material in the form of refilled burned out lamps. If such a direct prohibition is lawful, the same end may be reached indirectly by pricing all patented products, whether inferior, defective, or standard, at the same figure.

In the instant case, if the licensees desired to try to sell defective or inferior patented products at the price established for the standard board, they were free to do so, although this would have been difficult economically.

The Government refers to Standard Sanitary Mfg. Co. v. United States, referred to in topic II, as supporting its contentions concerning the elimination of seconds. That case is reviewed below in topic VIII in the course of discussion of authorities especially relied upon by the Government. It is sufficient to point out here that the "seconds" which 8831 it was purposed to eliminate from the market in that case were not patented products.

The bundling process: It has been pointed out in topic V (2) that the May 1929 license agreements and the Certain-teed supplemental license of July 3, 1929, granted rights under the Birdsey patent No. 1,696,877 and required that the licensees use this bundling process and no other, but that the November 1929 licenses did not contain this restrictive provision. Since the bundling patent covered merely a process of packaging, it obviously could accomplish no standardization of board as such. There is no evidence that during the period from May to November, when the restrictive provision was in the licenses, it drove off the market any other process of packaging, or that there was any other process (except for lath, the common and uneconomic method of tying with wire); and the evidence shows that use of the bundling process, since execution of the November 1929 licenses, has been on its merit, for lack of a better one. There is no evidence that the restrictive provision will be reintroduced into the presently outstanding licenses; its absence from November, 1929, until August 15, 1940, the date this action was filed, indicates that its reintroduction is unlikely. There is no evidence that the elimination of this provision in November, 1929, was in anticipation of the instant action, or of any other antitrust proceeding. Under these circumstances, the question of the legality of the restrictive provision has become moot, and its presence in the May licenses is not a foundation for equitable restraint. In Standard Oil Co. v. United States, cited in topics II and III, it appeared that certain patent license provisions the legality of which was questioned were voluntarily cancelled prior to the entry of a decree below in respect of other issues. The Supreme Court held that since the relief sought was an injunction and hence related only to the future, the question of the validity of such provisions had become moot. In Industrial Ass'n v. United States, 268 U. S. 64, 84 (1925), the Court said concerning injunctive relief sought in respect of allegedly unlawful interference with freedom of sale and purchase of building supplies:

> • • • whatever may have been the original situation, the practice was abandoned long before the present suit was instituted, and nothing appears by way of threat or otherwise to indicate the probability of its ever being resumed. Under these circumstances, there is no basis for present relief by injunction. United States v. U. S. Steel Corp., 251 U. S. 417, 444-445.

Cf. United States v. Hamburg-American Co., 239 U. S. 466, 475-8 (1916).

(3) Was the level of prices of unpatented materials—plaster and miscellaneous gypsum products—raised, maintained and stabilized: As pointed out in topic V. (3), it is admitted by the defendants that during the period of price improvement upon patented gypsum board after the signing of the licenses, the prices of other gypsum prod-
8832 ucts increased over their condition in the 1927-1929 price war. If this increase was but the incidental economic result of the general industry betterment and the improvement in the prices of patented board, themselves consequent upon the settlement of the litigation and the execution of the licenses, it was not beyond the proper limits of the patent monopoly because the settlement of the litigation and the execution of the licenses were lawful. If, however, the increased price of unpatented materials was the result of some device adopted or action taken to bring about such an increase, rather than of the operation of economic law, then it was unlawful as beyond the proper limits of the patent monopoly.

The Government relies upon the bulletin provision set forth in the statement of facts at the outset of this opinion that "Any sale of patented products, though ostensibly made at or above the minimum price established by licensor, will nevertheless be considered a violation of the provisions of the license if licensee directly or indirectly reduces the actual price charged by licensee below such minimum price • • • by reducing the price of other products" • • •" (Exhibit 37, a declaration binding only upon USG, a bulletin of February 6, 1939, page 2) This, it will have been noted, is but part of a larger provision concerning rebates and allowances—a price protective provision. The Government contends that the portion quoted was but a device to raise, maintain and stabilize the price of plaster and miscellaneous gypsum products, and that it was effectively applied by the defendants to that end. To the contrary the defendants assert that the provision in question is a proper price protective measure and that it was not abused. That such a price protective provision is proper in a patent license has already been concluded in topic II of this opinion, where the terms and conditions of the licenses in the instant case were compared with those in the General Electric case. And the evidence in the instant case fails to establish that in operation this provision was used illegitimately, i.e., to raise, maintain and stabilize the price of unpatented materials.

The Government introduced numerous exhibits in support of its contention that the bulletin provision was improperly applied. Those discussed below are typical. Exhibit 489 (a declaration binding only upon USG) is a letter of March 31, 1933, from Board Survey to Ebsary which advised of a complaint that Ebsary had violated the minimum price on patented gypsum board through the device of rebating by giving away plaster to a dealer, Wallace & Herring, of Alexandria, Virginia, in connection with a sale of patented board. The letter sought advice in detail as to > the sales of board to Wallace & Herring and specific > 8833 advice also as to any donations or credits made in > conjunction with such sales.[49]

Exhibit 490 (a declaration binding only upon Ebsary) is an intra-company letter of April 10, 1933, from Diegel, general sales manager of Ebsary, to Lenci, its secretary, stating that in the sales to Wallace & Herring inquired about by Board Survey, Ebsary secured "regular prices on the board and regular prices on the plaster." Exhibit 491 (a declaration binding only upon Ebsary) is Ebsary's reply of April 12, 1933,

49. The body of this letter reads as follows:

"We are advised that your company has recently sold wallboard and/or plasterboard embodying the claims and inventions of the patents under which you are licensed to Wallace & Herring, Alexandria, Virginia at prices below the licensor's minimum price to you for such board in such market.

"Specifically, that you did sell this firm a mixed carload of plaster and patented board and did not invoice or charge to this firm a certain amount of plaster, and this was also handled so as to reflect to the said Wallace & Herring, Alexandria, Virginia a rebate on the patented board they purchased from you.

"Please advise in detail as to your sales of patented board to this firm, and specifically advise us of any donations or credits made in conjunction with your sales of said board."

written by Lenci in answer to the Board Survey charge of March 31, 1933. In this letter Lenci advised that Ebsary has secured from Wallace & Herring in every case the full bulletin prices for wallboard or plasterboard under the license agreement, and that no special price was made to induce board business.[50] Following this, on April 14, 1933, by Exhibit 492 (a declaration binding only upon USG), Board Survey wrote Ebsary, complained that the letter of April 12, 1933, was not a full answer to the March 31 charge, and sought advice as to whether or not Ebsary had donated plaster to Wallace & Herring so as to reflect to it a rebate on purchases of the patented board. To this Ebsary replied on April 20, 1933, by Exhibit 493 (a declaration binding only upon Ebsary), "we wish to state definitely that we have made no donation of plaster to these people. Furthermore, that we did not make them any special price on plasterboard in order to induce an order for board." Exhibi. 494, a letter of June 15, 1933 (a declaration binding only upon USG), involves a similar complaint against Ebsary in respect of sales of board to the Waltham Lime Company, of Waltham, Massachusetts. This letter stated that the Waltham Company had recently sold plasterboard manufactured by Ebsary at a price which would seem not possible if Ebsary's sales of board to this dealer had been made at the minimum fixed by the licensor, and that it is alleged that Ebsary's sales of plaster had been at less than the market price in order to reflect a lower price than the licensor's minimum.

In reply to this Ebsary, under date of June 20, 1933 8834 (Exhibit 495, a declaration binding only upon Ebsary), asserted that its sales of board to the Waltham Company were strictly in accordance with the bulletins issued under the license agreement, and that sales of plaster to this dealer were made on the same basis as the prevailing prices made by Ebsary's competitors for similar business, and not with the intent to influence board sales. A letter of June 15, 1933, to Ebsary by Board Survey, Exhibit 497 (a declaration binding only upon USG), advised of an alleged sale of plaster by Ebsary to the "Liberty Coal

50 The body of this letter reads thus:

"Referring to your letter of March 31st with reference to Wallace & Herring, Alexandria, Virginia, we wish to advise that we have secured from them in every case the full Bulletin price for wallboard or plasterboard under the License Agreement.

"Whatever sales of plasterboard have been made to this firm have been made at the prevailing price and no special price made to induce board business."

Company, Chelsea, Massachusetts," at less than the market price in order to reflect to this customer on its purchases of patented board a price lower than the licensor's minimum. By a letter of June 20, 1933, to Board Survey, Exhibit 498 (a declaration binding only upon Ebsary), Ebsary repudiated this charge, stating that sales of board to the "Liberty Coal & Cement Company" had been strictly in accordance with the bulletins issued under the license agreement, and that the sales of plaster had been made on the same basis as the prevailing prices charged by competitors, and not with the intent to influence board sales. Again, a letter of April 24, 1934, from Board Survey to Ebsary, Exhibit 500 (a declaration binding only upon USG), advised of an alleged violation of minimum prices on sales of plasterboard to Service Masons Supply Company, of New York, by allowances on other commodities. In Exhibit 501 (a declaration binding only upon Ebsary), under date of May 3, 1934, Ebsary denied this and specified only one carload shipment of board to Service Masons Supply Company during the preceding six months, quoted the prices, and stated that this carload was charged and paid for at the proper bulletin price and that sales of other materials were paid for at the prices prevailing in the New York market, and that no special prices or concessions of any kind were made to influence the sale of this car of board.

Lenci testified that all of these letters had to do with charges that Ebsary was rebating on its board prices through the device of cutting plaster prices in combination sales. He stated that he fully understood that USG was not attempting to fix or control Ebsary's plaster prices, and that Ebsary felt free to sell plaster at any price it saw fit provided it did not attempt to cut the price of board through the means of giving away plaster, or through charging an abnormally low price for it in a combination sale. Concerning Exhibit 500, Lenci said that it was a letter from Board Survey referring to an asserted reduction in the price of board by granting allowances in purchases of other commodities, including plaster; that Ebsary had no published price list at any time in selling plaster; that its instructions to salesmen were to sell at certain prices, but that it always felt free at any time to meet a quotation which it found existing in any territory in which it was selling. He said that to a certain extent there was such a thing as a pre-8835 vailing price or general price in Ebsary's territory, but that this was always flexible; that the two largest companies operating in Ebsary's area were USG and National, and that Ebsary would naturally know about the prices those companies were selling at since its salesmen were in contact with customers at all times and kept the company well informed. Lenci stated that that influenced Ebsary in its instructions to its salesmen as to what prices they should get, since it wanted to get as much for its product as it could—that the company would have to be influenced by the USG price on plaster in determining what it (Ebsary) could get—"it would be the condition of the market. We couldn't get more, and we naturally wouldn't want to sell for any less."

Other exhibits introduced by the Government relate to asserted violations by other companies, specifically Certain-teed and National, of the minimum price on patented gypsum board by means of gifts of, or rebates upon, plaster. The exhibits relating to Certain-teed are Nos. 727, 729-738, and 746-749. Those relating to National are Nos. 758 and 759. (Each of these exhibits was received in evidence as binding only upon USG.) None of the asserted violations referred to in these exhibits relates to gypsum block, gypsum tile or Keene's cement. The Government introduced additional exhibits which concern alleged violations of the minimum price on patented gypsum board by means of gifts of, or rebates upon, roofing products, paints, insulation board, building paper and fibre board, and by means of such devices as free painting of signs, sales of company stock below the market price, donations to a ball club and receiving payments for board in certificates of deposit, rather than in legal tender. But these are not embraced within the charge of the complaint for this confines itself to plaster and miscellaneous gypsum products, which, as specified in the bill of particulars, include only gypsum block, gypsum tile and Keene's cement. It is therefore unnecessary to discuss these additional exhibits.

There is no substantial evidence in any of the foregoing exhibits that the price protective provision quoted at the outset of this sub-topic was used by the defendants as a device to raise, maintain and stabilize the price of plaster. What the evidence relied upon by the Government does show is merely this: One of the licensees would hear that patented board purchased by a dealer from another licensee was being resold at such a price as would indicate that the vendor-licensee had granted the dealer a concession below the minimum price on board: A report of this would be made to Board Survey as a probable violation of the bulletins. Board Survey would make inquiry of the vendor-licensee and receive an explanation. Putting this otherwise, various licensees were insisting that USG through Board Survey require obedience to the bulletin provisions 8836 in respect of prices on patented board. But they were not seeking to sustain the price of plaster, except in the sense that they were complaining against what were believed to be fake or false sales of plaster or sales at such gross diminution below the prevailing plaster price as constituted a means of rebating from the bulletin price on board. USG, on being informed of alleged rebating, was requiring the accused licensees to explain or desist. If the effect of this was to keep the price of plaster at or about the prevailing rate in the industry, this was only the incidental result of the exercise of the right of the licensor to insist upon obedience to the bulletins so far as patented board was concerned and was therefore not illegal.

We conclude that there is no substantial evidence that the conceded advance in the price of plaster after the signing of the licenses was the result of a device adopted, or action taken, by the defendants, or the result of anything other than the rise in board prices and the general industry betterment occasioned by the settlement of the litigation and the signing of the licenses.

(4) Was improper restriction effectuated upon the distribution of gypsum board, plaster and miscellaneous gypsum products, by "elimination" of jobbers through the discontinuance of a sales discount: As explained in topic V (4), jobbers in their proper function serve a useful purpose in the wholesaling process, buying from the manufacturer and selling to the dealer. Upon the execution of the May 1929 licenses, USG, by a bulletin of May 24, 1929 (Exhibit 408, a declaration binding only upon USG), applicable by its terms to patented board made by the licensees, authorized the sale of such board to jobbers at a discount of 10% below the minimum list price fixed for licensees' sales to dealers.

It appears, however, that jobbers in the gypsum industry occupy a somewhat ambiguous position. Higgins, at one time a division sales manager of National, testified that the terms "wholesaler," "jobber" and "distributor" have been "footballed and kicked around" and vary with different industries, and that there are no jobbers in the gypsum industry in the sense of persons who buy from manufacturers, sell to dealers, bill the dealers, carry the accounts and pay the manufacturers. Lenci of Ebsary said that in the gypsum board business it was difficult to know whether or not a given person was a jobber. During his direct examination Spease, of the Fairmont Wall Plaster Company, named a number of persons or firms as jobbers; but on cross-examination it appeared that his statements were somewhat reckless, that he knew little of the activities of such persons or firms in recent years. Lenci testified that Ebsary largely sold direct to dealers; that it was not particularly interested in selling to jobbers, partly because it had its own sales force and therefore jobbers had little to offer in the 8837 way of service, but also because jobbers, buying at a jobber discount, would set up an unfair artificial competition. He explained that some of them who purchased board on the representation that they were acting in their proper function as jobbers, i.e., as intermediaries between the manufacturer and dealers, were in fact themselves acting as dealers, reselling to contractors and ultimate consumers, and that in so doing they could undersell the regular dealer, who received no discount, with resultant bad feeling on his part toward Ebsary. Lenci explained also that some jobbers in selling to dealers would divide the discount with them, and to that extent undersell Ebsary with its own dealer-customers.

In this situation USG, on August 8, 1930, by a further bulletin (Exhibit 430, a declaration binding only upon USG), withdrew the jobber discount—that is, made the minimum price at which licensees could sell to jobbers the same as the minimum price to the regular dealer trade. As this was put by Lenci, there came a time in 1930 when Ebsary received a bulletin which "leveled off the price to dealers and jobbers." While thereafter a jobber who purchased board from either USG or one of the licensees was obliged to pay the same price as a dealer, the discontinuance of the discount did not have the effect of forbidding sales of board to jobbers if they were willing to buy at the dealer price. The evidence shows that many jobbers continued to buy board and were nevertheless able to perform a proper jobber's function. There were small dealers who, for financial reasons or lack of warehouse space, were not able to buy or store board in the minimum quantities in which the licensees were required by the bulletins to sell it. A jobber financially able to purchase a substantial amount of board and having adequate warehouse space could, though he purchased at the dealer price, resell in small lots to such dealers at an advance, because of the service he thus rendered them. The Government asserts that the withdrawal of the discount had the effect of completely eliminating jobbers from the gypsum industry. But the record does not support this statement; there is no evidence that any jobber was put out of business altogether. On the contrary, according to Lenci's testimony, jobbers are still in business and doing a good business.

The question for determination is whether or not USG's withdrawal of the discount was lawful. Under the ruling in the General Electric case the answer is in the affirmative. The Court there said that it was reasonable that a patentee who manufactures and vends the patented goods on his own account should say to his licensee, "you may make and sell articles under my patent, but not so as to destroy the profit that I wish to obtain by making them and selling them myself." (272 U. S. at 490.) There was adequate reason for the establishment of one minimum price on patented board to all classes of trade—except manufacturing distributors, whose discount, allowed for a different reason, is discussed in sub-topic (5) (a) of this topic VI. 8838

USG as patentee had a legitimate interest in maintaining the price of the patented product by refusing to permit it to be sold to so-called jobbers at a discount with consequent disturbance of the minimum price structure by the artificial competition set up as above described. It is noteworthy, also, that, as pointed out in topic II, the General Electric plan of distribution, which was adopted by Westinghouse, was devised to enable General Electric "to deal directly with consumers and purchasers, and * * * to avoid selling the lamps owned by the [General Electric] company to jobbers or dealers, and prevent sale by these middle men to consumers at different and competing prices." (272 U. S. at 483.) Both jobbers and retailers were thus "eliminated." The Supreme Court found nothing illegal in this.

The Government asserts that the discontinuance of the jobber discount was by agreement between USG and its licensees and that this made it unlawful. Such an agreement would not be unlawful. As is pointed out in topic V (1), in the General Electric case the prices established on the patented product were a part of the license agreement itself. The authorization of the jobber discount was but a fixing of the licensee price on board to a certain class of trade; and the discontinuance of the discount was but a refixing of the price. But there is no substantial evidence in the instant case that USG and the licensees did agree upon discontinuance of the discount. Lenci of Ebsary testified that he did not enter into or know of any agreement or understanding that jobbers would be eliminated from the distributive system of gypsum board; that Ebsary had no understanding or agreement with anyone that at some time after 1929 the jobber price would be raised to the amount of the dealer price. He said that it was not his understanding that there was anything in Ebsary's license agreement or in the bulletins which prohibited Ebsary's selling its goods to jobbers. He stated that Ebsary had no part in making up the bulletin of August 8, 1930; that "It came as an order, as a direction in the form of a bulletin."

The Government urges that Exhibits 438, 471 and 502 evidence concerted action. Exhibit 438 (a declaration binding only upon Ebsary), a letter of May 6, 1932, from Ebsary to the Board Survey Company, refers "to the recent bulletin of the United States Gypsum Company advising the licensees that selling through jobbers had been eliminated. We would advise that Daniel Duskis, Inc., Glendale, L. I. is still buying Certain-teed board through Orin F. Perry, New York." Exhibit 471 (a declaration binding only upon Ebsary) is a letter written by Ebsary on November 28, 1932, to Board Survey, again concerning a purchase by Duskis from Perry; this is referred to as in violation of the bulletin "eliminating sales of licensed board 8839 through jobbers and commission men." In his testimony concerning Exhibit 438, Lenci explained the phrasing of these letters, saying that he knew when he wrote the first quoted sentence of Exhibit 438 that all that the bulletin had done was to level off the price as between jobbers and dealers, and that the letter should have read "Referring to the recent bulletin * * * advising the licensees that selling through jobbers at a discount had been eliminated." He said that he and everyone else understood that all that had been eliminated was the right of a manufacturer to sell a jobber at a discount. Lenci explained the second sentence of the exhibit as meaning that Duskis, a Long Island dealer, was buying Certain-teed board through Perry, and that he would not do so if Perry were paying Certain-teed the dealers' prices, "which would indicate to me that Perry was still getting a jobber's discount from Certain-teed." Lenci stated that he was complaining to Board Survey about a price cut by Certain-teed, specifically, that in view of the evidence of what Duskis was doing, Ebsary felt that Certain-teed was giving Perry a discount prohibited by the USG bulletin then in effect. Lenci testified similarly concerning Exhibit 502 (a declaration binding only upon Ebsary), a telegram from Ebsary to Henning of USG, dated November 8, 1934, in which it was said "Lee Story must be eliminated immediately as a jobber."[51] Lenci explained that this was intended only as a complaint against Kelley; that he (in sending this telegram) meant that Kelley must cease giving Lee Story a jobber's discount, and that the wire should have read "Kelley must cease giving Lee Story a jobber's discount," rather than that Lee Story should "be eliminated." Lenci testified that the telegram would be thus understood by both Ebsary and the recipient. His testimony was frank and convincing, and makes clear that the correspondence above described was in the nature of complaints that particular licensees had made arrangements with jobbers or dealers to give discounts or lower prices on patented board in violation of the minimum price bulletins. His explanation is consistent with his testimony that there was no elimination of jobbers but merely an elimination of their discount, and, in view of his explanation, the correspondence is not in conflict with his testimony that there was no agreement to eliminate the discount.

The Government relies upon Eastern States Lumber Ass'n v. United States, cited in topic III, and Binderup v. Pathe Exchange, 263 U. S. 291 (1923), both decided under the Sherman Act. The first of these cases involved a 8840 combination of associations of retailers of lumber whose members agreed not to buy from wholesalers who themselves, in competition with the retailers, sold directly to the consumer, thus undermining the retailer's trade. The Supreme Court held that a retailer had the right, individually, to stop dealing with a wholesaler, but could not lawfully do so in combination and agreement with others. In Binderup v. Pathe Exchange the defendants, who controlled the distribution of motion picture films, acted in concert in canceling exhibition contracts, and in refusing to deal in the future, with the plaintiff. The Court ruled that, acting separately, each of the distributors could have refused to furnish films to the exhibitor without becoming amenable to the provisions of the statute, but that conspiracy and combination of all to prevent any from dealing with the exhibitor was illegal. These cases are not in point. They involve an agreement forbidden by the Sherman Act and not legitimatized by any other law. In the instant case, 51 The full text of the telegram is: "Lee Story and Companys man in Brooklyn is quoting on Kelly [sic] board up to two dollars per thousand below license bulletin prices to lumber dealers in New York City You must investigate and correct this immediately as we look to you for protection under our contract Lee Story must be eliminated immediately as a jobber. Wire us full information at once tonight."

as above demonstrated, in view of the patent law and the General Electric decision not only was withdrawal of the discount legitimate but also its withdrawal by agreement, had there been such an agreement, would not have been unlawful.

No evidence was introduced in support of the charge that the defendants effectuated improper restriction upon distribution of plaster and miscellaneous gypsum products through jobbers. Both the bulletin establishing the jobber discount and the bulletin withdrawing it applied in terms only to patented board.

It is concluded that there is no evidence that the operations of the defendants went beyond the proper limits of the patent monopoly by improper restriction upon distribution of gypsum board, plaster and miscellaneous gypsum products, and this whether the charge of the complaint means elimination of the jobber discount or of jobbers or of jobbing.

(5) Were the prices at which manufacturing distributors resold gypsum board fixed by the defendants: As stated in topic V (5), the manufacturing distributors referred to in the evidence, Connecticut Adamant, Oakfield and Structural, are engaged in making and selling gypsum plaster, but purchase the gypsum board which they sell from other manufacturers, i.e., from USG or one or more of the licensees. A discount off the bulletin price to dealers was allowed them. The Government urges that control of resale prices is evidenced by (a) the use of USG of the provision in the May and November 1929 licenses requiring USG's written consent to the sale by licensees of patented board to manufacturing distributors; (b) the supplying to manufacturing distributors by their licensee-sellers of the bulletin dealer prices on board; (c) the policing of manufacturing distributors' sales of board; and (d) the limiting of the manufacturing distributors' discount to approximately the cost of handling the board.

8841 (a) Use of the consent to sell clause: The testimony is uniformly to the effect that USG freely, and without conditions attached, granted consents to the licensees to sell board to manufacturing distributors. Tomkins of Newark, Kelley and The Calvin Tomkins Company (a wholly owned subsidiary of Newark which conducted Newark's sales business), testified that USG never refused a request by any of his companies for permission to sell a manufacturing distributor, that no consent once granted was ever withdrawn, that no conditions, oral or written, were ever attached to the consents except that they were revocable, and that USG never threatened to withdraw a consent once granted. Lenci testified that the only occasion when USG ever refused a request by Ebsary to sell a manufacturing distributor was in the case of the Cardiff Gypsum Company; that all other requests had been granted by USG, and that there were never any conditions, written or oral, attached to the granting of such consents.[52] Lenci testified, further, that there was never with respect to these consents any arrangement, understanding, or agreement with USG or anyone else that Ebsary would police, supervise, or seek to control manufacturing distributors' resale prices or practices. He said that there never was an instance in which a consent issued by USG to Ebsary was withdrawn, or where USG or anyone connected with it threatened to withdraw a consent once issued; that no statement was ever made to him by anyone connected with USG that if Ebsary did not control or seek to control the resale prices of manufacturing distributors to whom Ebsary sold under the consents, they would be withdrawn.

Similarly, the manufacturing distributors themselves testified that they never understood that the consents to sell which had been issued by USG to their respective suppliers would be withdrawn in the event that the distributors did not resell gypsum board at given prices. Thus Hansen stated that he never had any knowledge that any conditions had been attached by USG, or anyone else, to the consents given by USG to Oakfield's suppliers. McCormack could recall no threat by anyone at any time that USG's consent to Ebsary or Kelley to sell Structural would be withdrawn. Asked whether he was ever told that any conditions had been attached by USG to any consent which it had granted Ebsary or Kelley to sell Structural at a discount, McCormack replied that he did not know "until quite late in this picture that we ever were selling under a consent." Kellogg of Connecticut Adamant testified that no one from USG or any other board manufacturer ever threatened to cease to sell his company on account of prices it charged on resales of board.

52 The Government asserts that the evidence shows that the reason for USG's refusal to give its consent to Ebsary to sell the Cardiff Gypsum Company was that Cardiff was known as a price-cutter on plaster. But the evidence concerning refusal to grant the Ebsary request was received solely on the issue of whether the defendants were attempting to control the prices of plaster.

8842 (b) Supplying to manufacturing distributors USG's minimum dealer prices on board: It is not denied by the defendants that when the licensee-manufacturers sold gypsum board and lath to manufacturing distributors they from time to time furnished the latter with information concerning the prices fixed by the bulletins for sale of these products by the licensees to dealers. The Government urges this circumstance as evidencing either a contractual or a coercive arrangement whereby the manufacturing distributors were themselves obliged to sell to dealers at the bulletin prices. The witnesses, however, gave a different explanation. The discount allowed to manufacturing distributors was 12½% on lath and 15% on board off the bulletin price to dealers. Tomkins, testifying in respect of the sending by Kelley and The Calvin Tomkins Company of price lists to Oakfield, Structural and Connecticut Adamant, explained that in quoting a manufacturing distributor on gypsum board a licensee did not, as a matter of practice, deduct the allowed discount from the bulletin price to dealers and then quote the resultant net price. The licensee advised the manufacturing distributor of the price it was to pay by sending it the bulletin price to dealers; this enabled the distributor to arrive at the price it must pay by deducting the discount from the bulletin dealer price for any particular sales destination. Therefore, the manufacturing distributor was informed promptly by the licensee-supplier of any change in the bulletin price to dealers on board because this would affect the manufacturing distributor's cost. Kellogg of Connecticut Adamant, which as a manufacturing distributor had purchased board from USG for about ten years and prior to that had bought from Ebsary and Kelley, testified in respect of purchases from USG that his policy was to sell to Connecticut Adamant's customers at the prices he obtained from USG—the market price—and that for that reason, as well as in order to know what Connecticut Adamant had to pay for the board, he would ask USG what the delivered price to a dealer at a particular point of delivery was. He said that he always wanted to know the dealer price, because that was what the board cost Connecticut Adamant—the dealer price less the applicable discount. McCormack said that he had never at any time received a

USG licensee bulletin, but that it was necessary at all times during the relationship of Structural with USG, Ebsary and Kelley, from whom it purchased, to know in advance through price lists the supplier's dealer price for patented board, because that was the price on which Structural's discount was figured. Structural had to know what the board was going to cost before it made contracts for its resale. Hansen testified that Oakfield always bought board at a discount. Asked what its prices were and what relationship, if any, they bore to the prices of Kelley, its supplier, he responded that the price which Kelley charged Oakfield was the price Kelley charged its dealers less dis-8843 count. Therefore, in order to know prior to selling to its own customers what the board was to cost it, Oakfield had to know Kelley's dealer price.

The manufacturing distributors themselves testified that they had no agreement with their suppliers to resell board at any particular prices. Thus Hansen stated that Oakfield had no arrangement, agreement, or understanding with Universal, Kelley, or any other supplier of board, as to the prices Oakfield should charge its dealer-customers when it resold the board. McCormack said that he could not honestly testify that Structural had any arrangement with any of its suppliers, Ebsary, USG, or Kelley, with respect to its resale price, that it was Structural's policy to resell the board at as near the supplier's price as was possible, that that was just a matter of business prudence; that Structural could not undersell its sources of supply and expect them to continue furnishing it board with which to undersell them. Kellogg testified that while he wanted to know the supplier's prices, not only to determine what the board cost Connecticut Adamant but also in order to know at what price to sell it, he nevertheless at no time had any arrangement, understanding, or agreement with anybody as to the prices Connecticut Adamant would charge for board and lath in resales; that this policy (of selling at the market price, i.e., the licensee price to dealers) was determined without relation to any understanding with anybody, and was not the result of any arrangement with anyone in the gypsum business; that Connecticut Adamant had always been free to sell its products at whatever price it desired. He said, further, that no one from the gypsum manufacturing companies had ever come to him to investigate any price, and no one from Board Survey; and that no one from USG or any other board manufacturer had ever threatened to stop selling board to Connecticut Adamant on account of prices it charged on resales.

That there were no contractual or coercive arrangements by which manufacturing distributors were compelled to resell board at prices fixed by USG is confirmed by the licensees. Lenci testified that Ebsary at no time had any understanding or arrangement with anyone to the effect that it would control or attempt to control the resale prices at which the manufacturing distributors, or any of them, sold board purchased from Ebsary. Tomkins said that his companies, Kelley and Newark, never had any agreement with any of the manufacturing distributors to whom price lists were sent that such distributors would resell board at the prices in such lists or at any other prices. Stromquist stated that he at no time had any agreement, understanding, or arrangement of any kind with Oakfield as to what resale prices that company would charge on board purchased from Universal. Griswold of American testified that Avery of USG did not at any time say anything to him to the effect that control of prices by USG through the license 8844 agreement with American would extend to anything but the first sale of the patented article. Neale of Atlantic said that he recalled no effort by himself or by his company to become a party to any understanding or agreement, at licensee meetings or otherwise, to control the resale prices of distributors.

It is apparent from the foregoing that the manufacturing distributors were kept informed by their suppliers of the minimum prices fixed by the USG bulletins for sales of board by licensees to dealers in order that the distributors might figure their own cost, since that was determined by a discount off the dealer price. It is apparent also that the distributors desired to know the dealer prices in order that they might be in a position to compete. They would not be able to sell above, and on the small margin allowed by the discount (a subject discussed in sub-topic (5) (d) of this topic VI), would not be able to sell much below, the prevailing market price. But there is no evidence that they were either contractually bound or in any way coerced to resell board purchased from the licensees at either the dealer price fixed in the bulletins or any other given price. It is obvious that the prevailing market price, at which the manufacturing distributors would for business reasons desire to sell, would normally be the USG bulletin price to dealers. This was the price at which USG and each of the licensees would, under the license contracts, be obliged to sell; and since they manufactured substantially all of the gypsum board in the "Eastern area," their sale price would be the prevailing market price.

(c) Policing of manufacturing distributors' sales of board: The Government has introduced evidence which it asserts proves such investigation and regulation of the resale prices of manufacturing distributors on gypsum board as was tantamount to control.

In respect of Connecticut Adamant: In Exhibit 463 (a declaration binding only upon USG), a letter of May 8, 1933, from Board Survey by Miller, to Ebsary, Board Survey states that it is advised that Connecticut Adamant is offering patented board, manufactured and sold by Ebsary, to the New Haven Reserve Supply Company, of New Haven, Connecticut, and other New Haven dealers, f.o.b. their warehouse in any quantity, at the licensor's minimum price to Ebsary for minimum carload lots of board, delivered at New Haven. Board Survey asks Ebsary to "Please advise." This the Government apparently relies upon as evidencing policing by Board Survey for USG of Connecticut Adamant's resale price on board. But by Exhibit 467 (a declaration binding only upon Ebsary), a letter of June 13, 1933, Ebsary replied that its customer, Connecticut Adamant, had made no sales of board to New Haven Reserve Supply Company. Lenci testified that this was a complaint by Board Survey against Ebsary; that although it 8845 involved Connecticut Adamant also and though the allegation was not spelled out in the letter, Ebsary nevertheless understood that it was a complaint not against what Connecticut Adamant was said to be doing, but against what Ebsary was alleged to be doing in respect of its price to Connecticut Adamant. He said that anyone in the industry would so construe the letter, including Miller, its writer. In Exhibit 464, a letter of May 11, 1933, from Board Survey to Ebsary (a declaration binding only upon USG), Board Survey informs Ebsary that it is advised that Connecticut Adamant sold gypsum board to the Southbury Lumber Company, of Southbury, Connecticut, at the licensor's minimum price to Ebsary and that "This would hardly seem possible if your sales * * * to * * * Connecticut Adamant * * * had been made at the licensor's minimum * * *" This the Government apparently also relies upon as evidencing policing by Board Survey for USG of the resale price of Connecticut Adamant. But by Exhibit 468 (a declaration binding only upon Ebsary), a letter of June 13, 1933, Ebsary replied that Connecticut Adamant is rated as a manufacturer, and that the discount which Ebsary is accordingly permitted as a licensee to allow it on sales of board enables Connecticut Adamant itself to resell at the bulletin price. Lenci explained that the Board Survey complaint was not against Connecticut Adamant but against Ebsary upon the theory that, in view of Connecticut Adamant's resale price, Ebsary must have been violating the bulletin minimum for licensee sales to dealers; Board Survey had apparently forgotten the manufacturing distributor status of Connecticut Adamant.

It is clear from the foregoing that the "policing" was not of Connecticut Adamant's resale price but of Ebsary's price to Connecticut Adamant.

In respect of Oakfield: In a letter from Lenci of Ebsary to Henning of USG written March 28, 1936, Exhibit 512 (a declaration binding only upon Ebsary), and in Exhibit 513A, a complaint against Kelley addressed to Board Survey by Ebsary (a declaration binding only upon Ebsary) naming Oakfield as Kelley's customer, Ebsary alleged that the Delaware Clay Products Company, of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, was selling "Oakleaf Gypsum Board" to dealers at the "regular" price, and suggested that Kelley must have arrangements with Oakfield making this possible. Board Survey investigated the complaint. Kelley, on May 1, 1936, in Exhibit 514 (a declaration binding only on Kelley), stated that its sales to Oakfield were made at the scheduled (bulletin) price and that Delaware Clay Products, to whom Oakfield sold, sells board without compensation.[53] Lenci explained this situation and demon-
8846 strated that the complaint was against the licensee Kelley rather than against the manufacturing distributor Oakfield, as follows: Oakfield bought the board from Kelley at a discount and then sold it to Delaware Clay Products, which in turn offered the same board for sale at the dealer price. The margin out of which the two companies, Oakfield and Delaware Clay Products, had to make their selling expenses was small—15% on board, 12½% on lath, i.e., this was the discount to manufacturing distributors allowed by the USG price bulletins. Presuming both Oakfield and Delaware Clay Products to pay expenses and make some profit, it appeared that if Delaware Clay Products was selling at the dealer price, Kelley must have been allowing Oakfield more than the discount permitted by the bulletins, thereby violating the license agreement. Thus it appears that the situation was again one in which a complaining licensee, in this instance Ebsary itself, inferred from the activities of the accused licensee's customer, the manufacturing distributor, that the accused licensee was violating the license bulletins. Again the investigation was not of the resale price of the manufacturing distributor, but of the discount allowed by the seller-licensee.

53 Kelley's explanation, although it names Oakfield as the customer involved, is made in terms of Paragon Plaster & Supply Co. The evidence shows that that company, the Paragon Plaster Company, and the American Hardwall Plaster Company were the sole owners of Oakfield, that Oakfield was the plaster producing company for them, and that it stocked plasterboard and lath for mixed car shipments for those companies.

In respect of Structural: In a letter of May 6, 1932, Exhibit 438 (a declaration binding only upon Ebsary), Ebsary, first referring to a USG bulletin establishing a two dollar differential between board shipped in mixed carloads and board shipped in full carloads from metropolitan New York, complained to Board Survey that the Tisdale Lumber Company, of Flushing, New York, had purchased from Structural a mixed carload of miscellaneous plaster and board at carload prices. On its face this appears to be a complaint in respect of Structural's resale price. But Lenci explained that the licensees were required by the bulletin provision to charge $2 more per thousand feet on board shipped in mixed carloads than upon board shipped in full carloads (in a mixed carload there are other products and therefore less board than in a full carload) and that since the Tisdale Company had bought less than a full carload quantity of board at the full carload price, i.e., the lesser price, it would appear that Kelley had not charged Structural the $2 differential. The Tisdale Company was a prospective customer of Ebsary, and Kelley's apparently cut price to Structural resulted in the latter's being able to prevent Ebsary from getting the Tisdale business. Thus Ebsary was complaining of an apparent license violation by Kelley, and not of the resale price by Structural.

The Government relies also upon Exhibits 443 and 444 (declarations binding only upon Ebsary and USG, respectively) as evidencing policing of the resale prices of Structural. These exhibits appear to be part of a series of complaints by Ebsary and replies by USG or Board Survey.

Neither of these two exhibits mentions Structural or 8847 the subject of resale prices. The other exhibits in this series comprise Exhibits 436, 437, 438, 447, 439, 440, 449, 441, 442, 445 and 446 (each of which is a declaration binding only upon Ebsary) and Exhibit 450 (a declaration binding only upon USG).[54] These exhibits, except for the replies by USG or Board Survey, appear on their face to be complaints by Ebsary concerning sales of gypsum board by Structural in small quantities. Lenci testified concerning this that by selling in small quantities Structural was giving a service to its dealer-customers which Ebsary as a licensee could not supply, because the USG bulletins required Ebsary to charge for similar deliveries a higher price than Structural was getting. Lenci had concluded from what Structural was doing that Kelley, Structural's licensee-supplier, had made a special arrangement to give Structural an excessive discount which enabled it to cut prices and indulge in the practices which rendered Ebsary non-competitive. His complaints, so Lenci testified, were based upon lack of confidence in the good faith of Kelley in selling to Structural. Lenci said that Ebsary knew that Structural had no license and no obligation with respect to maintenance of prices or other conditions binding upon the licensees. He made clear that in these complaints he was not protesting against Structural or its prices or practices but against Kelley.

It is apparent from the foregoing that when the evidence concerning the alleged control by the defendants of the resale prices on board of manufacturing distributors by "policing" such resale prices is considered as a whole, it fails to establish such control or any attempt thereat. What it does establish is that one licensee was insisting to USG that a competitor-licensee was apparently violating, and should be required to abide by, the minimum price provisions of the bulletins. As pointed out in the statement of facts at the outset of this opinion, there was a "most favored nation" clause in each of the licenses. If one licensee was permitted by USG to sell board on more favorable terms than another the license of the former was in effect being rewritten. The protest of the complaining licensee was therefore natural and one stemming from the provisions of its license agreement.

54 The exhibits are listed in chronological, rather than numerical, order.

(d) Limitation of the manufacturing distributors' discount: USG fixed the price at which the licensees might sell board and lath (sometimes in this sub-topic referred to as board) to manufacturing distributors at, as above stated, 15% and 12½%, respectively, off the minimum price to dealers. The Government asserts that this was with the purpose of preventing the manufacturing distributors from doing more than barely staying in the board business or that, as the Government otherwise phrased it, the discount was set at a figure which would not permit the manufacturing distributors as a business matter to cut prices
8848 on their resales of board. The Government says that as a result they resold to their dealer customers at approximately the bulletin price at which USG and the licensees sold to dealers. This, as pointed out earlier in this topic, would normally be the prevailing market price, since USG and the licensees manufactured substantially all of the board and lath in the "Eastern area" and were the principal sellers. The Government contends that in effect, therefore, USG was controlling the resale price and that this was illegal.

Hansen of Oakfield testified that the discount at which the board manufacturers sold to manufacturing distributors gave Oakfield a very small margin of gross profit in reselling; further, that Oakfield could not get more for its board from its dealer-customers than the amount at which the latter could buy the same board from Oakfield's supplier, Kelley, and that Oakfield did not want to take any less than it could obtain. McCormack said that the only reason Structural sold board was to aid its plaster sales; that it was an accommodation to Structural to get the board from the suppliers because Structural needed it to round out its sales to dealers; that Structural, he thought, did not ever make any great profit out of the board business, although no cost study was ever made to determine that definitely. He would not say that Structural was not in the business of buying and reselling board because of the profit involved, as the company evidently made a small profit, but it was not much since a good part of the discount would have to be charged off to selling expense, handling and warehousing. He admitted, however, that, although the margin of profit was very low, Structural sometimes split its discount on board with jobbers. Lenci of Ebsary testified that generally speaking the 15% margin on board would be used up by a manufacturing distributor in overhead and handling charges; that the basic reason for the discount was to enable the manufacturing distributors to avail themselves of the accommodation of being able to offer board in mixed carloads to their dealer-customers; that it was never designed to permit the distributors to make a profit, but to give them board which they could ship to their customers along with their other products.

Since Hansen said nothing as to net profit and McCormack said that there was a profit, though small, and Lenci's testimony, although to the effect that the discount was designed not for profit but for accommodation, indicates nothing as to the actuality of profit or loss in manufacturing distributors' resales, it cannot be concluded that there was no profit whatever. And while the testimony shows that it was an advantage to the distributors to stock the board for resale along with their plaster products, there is no evidence that it was necessary for them to have board to remain in business, none that they were threatened that board would be withheld unless they resold at the dealer price, and none that they were parties to any contract to resell at the dealer price. They were legally free to resell at 8849 any price they chose, although economically it would have been difficult for them to resell at more than the market price, other conditions being equal, and they would probably not wish to sell at less if that would entail a loss. It may be assumed that as a normal economic consequence of the setting of the discount at a figure approximating the cost of handling the board, the manufacturing distributors ordinarily resold at approximately the price, if not, indeed, at the exact price, at which USG and the licensees sold direct to dealers, i.e., the prevailing market price; and it may be assumed that USG contemplated that this would occur and had in mind the protection of its minimum price structure.

But the Sherman Act does not condemn the normal economic consequences of acts which are themselves legitimate under the patent laws. Therefore the contention of the Government that USG is guilty of illegal control of the resale prices of manufacturing distributors necessarily rests upon the premise that it was unlawful for USG to fix the discount on an approximate cost of handling basis, rather than on one which would allow the distributors a substantial profit and thereby enable them to resell at less than the market price. This premise cannot be sustained. As a patent owner USG, under the doctrine of the General Electric case, had a right to license the making, using and vending of the patented product upon any condition the performance of which was reasonably within the reward which the patent owner by the grant of the patent is entitled to secure. One of such rewards is extended marketing of the product. This will be promoted by additional outlets. USG might therefore properly give a discount incentive to manufacturing distributors to buy board from USG or the licensees and thereby the advantage of handling it in connection with their plaster products. But a patent franchise does not constitute the patentee a public utility whose product must be sold at the same, regulated, price to all who offer to buy. USG was not obligated under either the patent laws or the Sherman Act to sell board or to permit its licensees to sell board to manufacturing distributors. As has been noted in sub-topic (4) of this topic VI, the decision in the General Electric case sanctioned patent licensing arrangements whereunder all sales of the patented product were to be made to consumers only and not to jobbers or dealers. And USG was under no duty, if it did make or permit sales to manufacturing distributors, to set a licensee price which would assure the distributors a profitable margin for resales; it could set such price as it chose.

The Government's contention that USG exercised illegal control over the resale prices of manufacturing distributors on board and lath cannot be sustained. There is no evidence of contractual or coercive control. Reselling by the 8850 manufacturing distributors at or about the dealer price was but the normal economic consequence of limitation of the discount to an approximate cost of handling margin. This limitation was lawful; the normal economic result cannot be unlawful.

It is concluded that there is no substantial evidence that the defendants either by use of the consent clause, by supplying the manufacturing distributors with information as to dealer prices on board, by policing manufacturing distributors' sales, by limiting the discount to approximately the cost of handling, or in any manner, fixed the prices at which manufacturing distributors resold gypsum board.

It is therefore concluded, in respect of the whole of the second issue of fact, that the evidence fails to establish that the operations of the defendants were carried beyond the proper limits of the patent monopoly and licensing thereunder, i.e., beyond the activities contemplated by the agreements as written and into the field denounced by the Sherman Act.

VII

Significance of the Evidence, Assuming the Declarations Connected; the Asserted Plan to Blanket the Industry Under Patent Licenses

Significance of the evidence, assuming the declarations connected: In topics V and VI of this opinion we have been at pains, in examining the evidence which the Government appears to reply upon as proving the combination and conspiracy charged in the complaint, to consider as binding only upon the declarant the declarations which were received in evidence subject to connection. This was our duty, the limitations upon the declarations rule having been invoked by the defendants and the Government having failed, as shown in topic IV, to prove by evidence outside the declarations the existence of the conspiracy charged. But in view of the importance of this case and the consequent probability that it will reach a higher tribunal, we think it desirable also to state our views as to the meaning of the evidence when the declarations are considered as binding not merely upon the declarant but also upon all of the alleged co-conspirators. We have considered the evidence in this light, and we think the Government still has not proved that the license agreements were executed not as bona fide license agreements reasonably designed to secure to USG the pecuniary rewards of its patent monopoly but only as sham agreements to give color of legality to the illegal purposes alleged in the complaint, and has not proved that the operations of the defendants were carried beyond the proper limits of the USG patent monopoly, and therefore has not proved the combination and conspiracy charged. The evidence discussed in topics V and VI
8851 no more proves lack of bona fides in the execution
½ of the license agreements, or operations beyond the limits of the patent monopoly, when the declarations are regarded as binding upon all of the alleged co-conspirators, than it does when such declarations are considered as binding only upon the declarant. This is necessarily so—in the view we take of the significance of the declarations. Since, as demonstrated in topics V and VI, they fail to convict the declarants themselves of lack of bona fides in the execution of the licenses, or of operations beyond the proper limits of the USG patent monopoly, they cannot convict others thereof.

There is, however, in the record additional evidence, including declarations, not heretofore alluded to because aggregated and relied upon by the Government as relevant to a special contention to be discussed below. This evidence consists in the large of intra and inter-company correspondence relating to the terms upon which USG was offering to settle litigation and extend licenses, and the advantages and disadvantages of taking licenses; included is testimony explanatory of this correspondence. The following items sufficiently illustrate the character of this evidence:[55]

(a) Exhibit 185, a memorandum sent by Blagden of Beaver to Avery of USG in December, 1925. This suggests, as an alternative to possible reversal of the USG-Bestwall-Beaver decision of July 21, 1925, a settlement and license enabling USG to maintain "a lawful price control" through the "legitimate means of patent licenses," Blagden to endeavor to induce other manufacturers to accept licenses and permit USG to take a "dominating position."

(b) Testimony by Blagden that, after the Beaver-USG license was signed in July, 1926, in conversations from time to time with some of the other members of the industry, upon their inquiring about the Beaver license, he advised them to "join up."

(c) Exhibit 189, a letter of October 1, 1926, from Blagden to Avery in which Blagden said that "the 'entente cordial' that has started between our companies is only a beginner and * * * if we play the game right, it should bring about big things."

(d) Testimony of Blagden that he advised George M. Brown of Certain-teed that he could not afford to make board without the superior folded edge and advised him to take a license for his own best interests and get "with the others" the benefit of price stabilization, i.e., "the benefit of the license price, which would be the same price" to all.

(e) Exhibit 123, a letter of October 15, 1926, in which Griswold of American wrote Avery that a committee from American expected "to meet with all other Manufacturers of board who have not yet signed the License Agreement. * * * with the object in view of getting united action * * *."

(f) Exhibit 124, a letter of October 19, 1926, in which Avery replied expressing appreciation for Griswold's in-

55 This evidence is discussed on pages 9 to 46 in the Government's Memorandum filed May 5, 1944, in opposition to the motions now under consideration.

terest and for the "broad-visioned manner with which you [Griswold] have proceeded with this important subject" and said that he would be interested in hearing from Griswold after the meeting.

(g) Exhibit 132, a letter of January 3, 1927, in which Griswold wrote Avery that he had started out "to deliver 100 per cent of the manufacturers of board that would be willing to sign up on a license agreement with your company * * *."

8852 (h) Exhibit 136b, a letter of March 24, 1927, from Griswold to Williams of National in which Griswold reported that Texas had recently decided to take a USG license and since that decision had "reached the decision to join in our proposition so they will become one of the group which we are merging," and that Atlantic signed and that if Certain-teed which was considering it "comes in" and National, that "will make it 100% with all manufacturers who will be operating under the license agreement and will do away with the legal complications which have existed in the past and which are so unpleasant as well as expensive."

(i) Exhibit 104, a letter of May 12, 1926, by Griswold to McCrady of American stating that Blagden had had interviews with Avery in respect of settlement of disputes and litigation between the wallboard manufacturers by a licensing arrangement and that (according to Griswold) the outlook is favorable and "According to the plans we have we figure that there is a possibility of us holding the price steady on wall board for the next fourteen or fifteen years which means much to the industry."

(j) Testimony of Holland of Universal that he suggested to Griswold in September, 1928, that American ought to take a USG license like Universal's—so that the industry might make the better board since the open-edge board was giving wallboard generally "a black eye."

(k) Exhibit 204, a letter of January 7, 1929, in which Holland wrote Haggerty of National that an effort should be made to hold another meeting of those interested in the board situation; that American cannot hope to gain by delaying the settlement because this will demoralize prices throughout 1929.

(l) Exhibit 206, a letter of January 12, 1929, wherein Holland tells Haggerty that he thinks that the matter of future prices after the Utzman patent ran out was not keeping American out because Avery had other patents, and that "it is my opinion that if you and the others interested in the settlement of the wallboard controversy bring enough pressure to bear on the American crowd * * * something can be done."

(m) Testimony of Holland that he "kept trying to talk these people [other manufacturers] into taking out a [closed-edge] license."

(n) Testimony of Griswold that in a conversation in April, 1928, with George M. Brown, Griswold discussed with him the advisability of Certain-teed's taking a license and making closed-edge instead of open-edge board which was then selling at a rather low price, and that Brown said that if all the other manufacturers took out a license, or certain of them, he might consider it, but that he felt that Certain-teed's competitors, especially Ebsary, since it was a "pretty hot" competitor of Certain-teed's "in that territory," should also be licensed.

(o) The fact that Texas signed its 1927 license after Griswold in Exhibit 157, a letter of April 9, 1927, receipt of which Gloyd of Texas acknowledged in Exhibit 158 (dated April 11), advised that Certain-teed was willing to take a license and that Avery, who had been opposed, had yielded to the persuasion of Blagden and himself and would consider Certain-teed's application, and that National would file application and that with American that "will make the matter one hundred percent."

(p) Exhibit 198, minutes of a May 14, 1929, directors' meeting of National reciting a statement by the chairman that he had been "informed that all other manufacturers of gypsum products * * * except * * * American * * * had agreed to sign the license contract in substantially the form as submitted to this Board," and setting forth a resolution authorizing the proper officers to execute a license agreement with USG in the form submitted.

(q) Exhibit 716, a telegram of May 17, 1929, from Baker of National to Avery in which Baker advised that National was "working with Ebsary with hope of everybody being set by Saturday to justify your calling meeting all board makers Monday if you like," and that Reeb of Niagara was ready.

(r) Exhibit 205, a letter of January 9, 1929, in which Haggerty wrote Holland that it was a question in his mind "whether or not the other four board makers, who are outside the license agreement, feel that it would be advantageous to go in without the American Gypsum Company," and that "the chief value in a meeting would be to discuss that point," and that "If this price control feature was discontinued in August, as is the case in the present form of the agreement, how could we expect the cooperation of the United States Gypsum Company in anything bearing upon a discussion of price"; that USG's position would then "be exactly what it is now, and rightly so," i.e., unwillingness to discuss price before a license agreement with the price control feature is signed.

8853 (s) The admission in Ebsary's answer that "prior to May, 1929 Ebsary had conferred with others concerning the contemplated license" and that in May, 1929, prior to the meeting of the 22nd, "there was a meeting or conference between these defendants and U. S. G. and others, at which there was discussed the granting by U. S. G. to the defendant Ebsary and others of a license * * *."

(t) Testimony of Lenci that he went to Chicago for the May, 1929, meeting pursuant to a previous arrangement.

(u) The fact that Channing attended the May, 1929, meeting in Chicago, notwithstanding that Atlantic was already a licensee, having executed its license in March, 1927.

This evidence, even when silhouetted, i.e., looked at out of context with the other evidence in the record which has been reviewed in topics IV, V and VI, and considering the declarations as binding upon all, does not prove the conspiracy charged for there is nothing in it, as inspection of the foregoing illustrative items will show, indicating that the licenses which USG was willing to grant were to be, or that when executed they were, sham licenses signed to give color of legality to illegal purposes, or that the operations of the defendants were carried beyond the proper limits of the USG patent monopoly. Indeed, Exhibit 185 (item (a)), especially emphasized by the Government, refers to "a lawful price control" but USG through the "legitimate means of patent licenses"; and the very openness of the intra and inter-company discussions and suggestions with respect to the advantages and disadvantages of taking USG licenses bespeaks good faith in the execution of the licenses. There is nothing at all in this evidence to indicate that there was to be improper standardization, price fixing upon unpatented materials, improper restriction upon distribution of gypsum products through jobbers, or control of resale prices of manufacturing distributors. The references to price stabilization are no evidence of illegal purpose in the absence of a showing of lack of good faith in the execution of the license agreements, for under the Bement and General Electric cases price control by a patent owner is lawful; hence it could not be unlawful for USG as patent owner or the (prospective) licensees to desire and anticipate its results.

If the evidence above referred to does not, when looked at by itself, prove the elements of lack of bona fides in the license agreements and intent to accomplish objectives beyond the proper limits of the USG patent monopoly necessary to establish the conspiracy charged, a fortiori it does not do so when looked at in context with the other evidence in the case, even though the declarations in this and the other evidence are considered, in disregard of the limitations upon the declarations rule, as binding upon all of the alleged co-conspirators.[56]

8854 The asserted plan to blanket the industry under patent licenses: What the Government especially contends that this additional evidence proves is that the defendants "have * * * associated themselves together in a common plan or enterprise to blanket the gypsum industry under * * * license agreements" and "stabilize prices." But assuming, arguendo, that this evidence does show a common plan under which the defendants and their predecessors in the "Eastern area" were to take patent licenses from USG with price restrictions and consequent price stabilization,

56 It is, indeed, doubtful that the Government even contends that this additional evidence proves lack of bona fides in the licenses or operations beyond the proper limits of the patent monopoly. Throughout the introduction of evidence and the oral argument, in which emphasis was placed by the Government on the charge of lack of bona fides in the licenses, they were variously referred to as "sham," "subterfuge," "coverup," "not bona fide." In the Government's briefs filed in opposition to the present motions there is little on this subject or in these terms, and in that part of the memorandum which aggregates the additional evidence now under discussion (pages 9 to 46 of the Government's Memorandum of May 5, 1944) there is nothing; and nothing concerning operations beyond the proper limits of the patent monopoly.

this, in the absence of sham licenses and an intent to accomplish objectives beyond the proper limits of the patent monopoly, would not be illegal. It is not unlawful to agree to do what is not unlawful when done. It has been demonstrated in topic II that the parties to a patent license agreement containing a price control provision have in the negotiation and execution of the same "conspired" and "combined" to restrain trade actually, but not unlawfully because the patent laws permit this so long as the license is bona fide and not intended to accomplish objectives beyond the proper limits of the patent monopoly. Under such a license there is actual restraint of trade, but no illegal restraint. If two such licenses (a plurality of licenses) were severally executed, each bona fide and without objectives beyond the proper limits of the patent monopoly, the totality thereunder of actual restraint of trade in the patented product would be the sum of the actual restraints under each, and the totality of illegal restraint none. And if in the case of two such licenses (a plurality), the two (prospective) licensees and the patent owner were in advance to agree with each other (associate themselves together in a common plan that the two licenses should be executed, and if they were executed, still the totality of actual restraint under such licenses would be no more than if they had been executed without prearrangement; and the totality of illegal restraint would, again, be none—for each license when executed would in itself be lawful. Into howsoever large a plurality this be carried, the result is the same, i.e., the totality of actual restraint of trade in the patent product is the sum of the actual restraints under each of the license agreements, and no more; and the totality of illegal restraint is none. If A, B, C, D, E and F agree in advance with each other and with P, a patent owner, that each shall sign a bona fide patent license to be granted by P, with control of the price of the patented product in P, the only additional restraint, as compared with the totality of restraint 8855 if the same licenses were executed severally, i.e., without prior agreement, would be the disablement of A, B, C, D, E and F, in view of their contract to take licenses from P, to take them from X, i.e., some other patent owner. But the instant case does not, under the complaint, concern itself with interstate trade in patent licenses; it has to do only with interstate trade in gypsum products.

In short, the contention of the Government that the additional evidence referred to in this topic VII proves that the defendants associated themselves together in a common plan "to blanket" the gypsum industry under patent licenses and stabilize prices, and that this is unlawful, fails for want of support in law in view of the Bement and General Electric cases, even if proved in fact—unless the licenses were to be sham and the objectives under them beyond the proper limits of the USG patent monopoly. Given a right under the patent law to grant a plurality of bona fide licenses with price control provisions but no objectives beyond the proper limits of a patent monopoly, it can make no difference in either totality of actual restraint, or in law, whether the several licenses are executed with, or without, prearrangement between the patentee and the prospective licensees as a group. The vice in the Government's contention in this respect is that it assumes that agreement or action in concert by competitors in industry is under all circumstances inherently and necessarily unlawful, when the fact is that it is not unlawful unless it has an unlawful end or contemplates unlawful means.[57]

We have assumed above, arguendo, that there is proof of the contention that the defendants associated in a common plan "to blanket" the gypsum industry under patent licenses and stabilize prices. But though it may be said that the evidence especially aggregated by the Government in proof of this contention tends to support it if looked at alone, it cannot be looked at alone. As said in topic III under the sub-topic "Principles of Proof," an inference to be reasonable must be warranted from all the evidence, otherwise a fact reasonably inferable from a single fact, or group of facts, might be inconsistent with the totality of proven or conceded subsidiary facts. National Labor Relations Board v. Union Pacific Stages, 99 F. (2d) 153, 177 (C. C. A. 9th, 1938). "Testimony is the raw material out of which we construct truth and, unless all of it is weighed in its totality, errors will result and great injustices be wrought." National Labor Relations Board v. Thompson Products, 97 F. (2d) 13, 15 (C. C. A. 6th, 1938).

When the evidence referred to above in this topic VII is considered in connection with other related items, it fails to prove that the defendants associated in a plan to blanket the industry under the patent licenses and stabilize prices:

57 It is common knowledge that there are numerous national trade associations which agree upon and carry out plans for industry betterment without coming within the condemnation of the Sherman Act.
